"Medicare, like so many other government programs, is an effort in political balancing — an attempt to balance the freedom of doctors to manage their own professional activities, which is essential or we will run out of doctors, against the social responsibility of any truly civilized country to provide equal medical treatment to all its citizens."

The fight for equal opportunity "is a good one and it is not going to be abandoned because it may at times ride roughshod over some old ideas or even the farmer smoked back and found "all the houses had been blown up, including mine."

Villages Near Armistice Line Said Being Razed by Israelis

AMMAN Jordan (AP)—Palestinian refugees charged today that Israeli troops occupying the Jordan River's west bank are systematically deporting inhabitants of villages along the 1949 armistice line between Jordan and Israel.

Refugees, interviewed in their temporary quarters in an Amman school building, claimed villagers are being removed by force, intimidation and trickery.

Several refugees said they were threatened with death if they tried to return to their homes.

They said at least two villages on the western edge of the Israeli - occupied west bank region have been levelled by Israeli demolition crews and bulldozers.

Other villages were partly destroyed and some of their young men taken away by the Israeli troops, the refugees said.

Thousands of refugees have crossed into east Jordan since the ceasefire.

The villages affected are Qalqilya, an agricultural community of 12,000 about 32 miles northwest of Jerusalem, and Jnwara, a village of 3,000 twelve miles west of Jerusalem.

An Israeli spokesman in Tel Aviv has denied charges that Israeli forces had evacuated Qualqilya and demolished the town. He admitted the town was badly damaged, but said this resulted from the fighting.

The spokesman also denied that Palestinian refugees were being herded across the Jordan River by Israeli soldiers.

A 75 - year - old farmer and landowner from Inwara said the Israelis bricked him and his family into leaving the village by saying they were being taken to the nearby town of Rammalah for two hours. They were not permitted to return; the farmer sneaked back and found "all the houses had been blown up, including mine."

Rain Puts Damper On Naval Assembly

HALIFAX (CP) — Residents got a chance today to have a close look at some of the 40 warships assembled here this week for the centennial naval display.

The ships, which have been shrouded in fog, will come alongside jetties and piers and will be open to the public. Most of the ships sail Sunday.

Rain and cool temperatures put a damper on ceremonies held Friday.

Rain greeted Gov.-Gen. Michener and his party when he arrived at nearby Shearwater Naval Station. Later, under cloudy skies, he reviewed the assembly from 13 countries from the bridge of the minesweeper Chaleur.

The Chaleur made a stately progress through the three rows of vessels stretching 1½ miles from the Angus L. Macdonald bridge to George's Island.

ISMAILIA, Egypt (Reuters) Hundreds of refugees, clad only in tattered strips of cloth and exhausted from the long trek across the Sinai Desert, are straggering daily into this town on the west bank of the Suez Canal.

About 700 arrived Friday from the Gaza Strip.

Egypt recently complained to the United Nations that Israeli forces were forcing Arab refugees to leave the Gaza Strip, about 150 miles from here.

THE GOLDEN YEARS

Most Retirement Worries 'Personal Financial Matters'

By THOMAS COLLINS

You are in your early 60s. You have started thinking seriously about retirement.

You wonder if your friends, who are couples of about your same age, have the concerns you have, if they worry about the things that worry you. You'd like to know because retirement is something you never tried before and there are no schools to teach you what to do with it.

Here, in the words of a wife, is a couple probably about like your friends. Maybe they can give you reassurance that your worrying is in the right channel.

"I am confused by it all," the wife says. "And there is really nowhere to get advice. Retirement is so much a personal financial matter that one doesn't choose to discuss it with friends.

"My husband will be 62 in December. He can retire then if he chooses with pensions totalling $375 a month. We would have about $10,000 in savings, and $15,000 in life insurance.

"He has a good job, and an interesting one. But over the last two years he has not felt too well in the winters. And in the meantime his job pressures have grown. He thinks he would like to retire in December.

"We have thought this over a great deal, and tried to consider it from every angle. His job has required him to travel a lot, and I have frequently gone with him. We have looked for retirement spots outside the winter belt and have decided we would want California, South Texas, or Florida. . ."

But her husband thinks he will not want to retire completely. He thinks $375 a month won't be enough to live on. The wife, who is 54, has been working part-time in a doctor's office. They reason that one or the other of them will be able to get a job to supplement the pension.

"My husband wants to go into hotel work," the wife continues. "Or even resort work would be fine if the job gave him contact with the public."

This couple has no particular sentiment about leaving the home town. The wife has more sentiment than the husband about moving so far away from their children.

Nobody could tell this couple they should, or should not, retire in December — no two couples are alike. But there are a few pertinent observations about the couple that may help you if your thinking is going down their same alley.

— A man beginning to bog down in the winters probably has a medical problem, not a geography problem, and ought to talk to a doctor.

— Retirement at 62 can be about 10 years earlier than 65, most men have 10 years' more spirit and energy.

— An income of $375 a month is ample for retirement. Many people are living well on less in the three areas the couple likes . . . but not with color TV sets. Savings of $10,000 isn't much money. A nestegg for an emergency, or about $35 extra income per month if it's invested.

— The three areas the couple likes are all retirement country. Good for playing, not so good for retired people seeking a job (California would be best of the three).

— Hotel or resort jobs are often available to retired people in retirement country. But usually only night jobs since the pretty people take the day shifts. Pleasant work? Maybe.

— If these people have enough friends now, they'll win with enough where they go. If their children aren't a major concern now, they won't be then. The biggest problem is what will happen if the husband dies in two years. The wife, still too young for old age pension, and maybe too old for any kind of job, might turn into a charity case. The $15,000 in life insurance wouldn't be enough to matter for long.

One final observation: Whether or not a job at age 62 can be one of the grand adventures of life. And there is only one life per person. There are ways to master most of the problems cited here. Retired couples, perhaps, should set about mastering them as best they can, and then gamble a bit on the future and live a little before they're too old to care.

Masons Outline Events

FRANKFORD — The first half of Canada's centennial year has been active for Masons of Franck Lodge No. 427 with the installation of Wor. Bro. Stanley Bird, who was chief overseer and master builder of the Masonic Temple, 1958-60.

Fifty year lapel buttons were presented to Bros. J. E. Finnegan, Arthur Scott, Raymond Preston and Kenneth Faul.

On the occasion of the fraternal visit to Franck Lodge by United Lodge No. 29, Brighton, June 19, Franck Lodge conferred honorary membership on one of Prince Edward District's most highly esteemed masons, Rt. Wor. Bro. George Little, a life member of United Lodge and a past District Deputy Grand Master of Prince Edward District.

Radio Club To Take Part In Contest

Members of the Quinte Amateur Radio Club will operate three short-wave radio stations from Presqu'ile Provincial Park this weekend. In competition with more than 13,000 other members of the American Radio Relay League, they will begin at 5 p.m. EST Saturday and operate continuously for a period of 24 hours.

The purpose of the contest is to provide amateur radio operators with experience in operating under conditions simulating disaster. All stations are provided with electric power from gasoline motor generator sets. In last year's competition the local club made 1,300 two-way contacts using the call sign VE3SQQ.

The world's most brilliant shotmaker, the huge pot o' gold at the end of the rainbow lied in with ideal weather could soar the $250,000 Canadian Open at Montreal to an attendance record - shattering high.

The third and fourth rounds of the tournament are scheduled for July 1st and 2nd with a holiday Expo crowd in the city the promoters could not be far wrong in estimating the "bleachers" at 100,000.

Larry O'Brien, House of Seagram tournament co-ordinator, told a Montreal press conference that the Open touched a new mark at Toronto Mississauga in 1965. The tournament that year drew approximately 30,000. The count at Vancouver last year in the coast's first Open since Montreal's Pat Fletcher won it in 1954.

O'Brien told the newsmen "Naturally, weather is the big factor and big name players are still major factors after the first two rounds Friday and Saturday and there's no limit to the possibilities 'patronage-wise.'"

Vern DeGeer, of the Montreal Gazette, points out the big name factors should not pressure any front office worries. The richest of all Canadian Opens has lined the most formidable field in history. It includes 28 top money winners at all time between 1957 and 1967; a wide distribution in performance records in which 16 shotmakers have divided spoils in the big 23 tournaments played this year.

O'Brien said the turning point in the Canadian Open's rise to world prominence came in 1964 at Montreal's Pine Grove. The field was outstanding, the course was in excellent shape. Parking facilities were good, Artistically and financially this was Canada's greatest period in major golf.

DeGeer points out there are many facets to this Expo Canadian Open golf classic as a major sporting upset from sports car rally to subway - bus - taxi - private car show within a drive from the heart of metropolitan Montreal. It's a locale unmatched in modern times of fat purses and big crowds. What's more, he says, it isn't going to be any pitch-and-putt parade for the world's leading club wielders.

George Knudson said recently of the Municipal Course where the Open is being played: "It's kind of a course where the player can make use of every club."

And Jake Tatkill, the PGA tournament director who guards over 42 major tournaments in North America, says: "This isn't any rinky-dink layout, usually associated with municipal courses. I figure six under par 278 can win it."

A Montreal player may not win the Open but the golfing fraternity of the eastern metropolis will benefit greatly.

When, two years ago, the idea was borne to hold the Open as an Expo sports attraction many factors were involved. The purses were increased from $200,000 to $250,000. Then the House of Seagram, the RCGA, the PGA and others finalized other arrangements. They remodelled the course and erected a small but compact clubhouse. Now for years to come, Montreal's golfers will have the use of fine facilities on a pay-as-you-play basis.

According to Mr. DeGeer, there are parking facilities for 8,000 to 10,000 cars in the east end section across the street from the Municipal golf course. It is an area frequently considered as a site for a huge sports arena including stadium, rinks and playgrounds. The many stadium plans were never realized.

While preliminaries are only secondary, thousands will watch the practice rounds on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. A special feature Wednesday will be a team featuring Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer sponsored by Nicklaus for a home-town project. This pair alone should bring out the galleries.

Ryun Sets New Mark

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP) — Amazing Jim Ryun, without collaborators, wrote another lustrous chapter in his continuing series of world mile records with a 3:51.1 in the National AAU track and field championships.

Ryun had to set his own pace Friday night but it was the 20-year-old running star's blistering 53.5 on the first lap that enabled him to break the 3:51.3 he ran last July in Berkeley, Calif.

Chance Blanks Chisox

Cards Win - Over And Out - Roger

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Dean Chance pitched a brilliant three-hitter and Vernon Killebrew provided the game's only run with his 22nd homer of the year as Minnesota Twins nipped Chicago White Sox 1-0 Friday night.

It was a change of pace for Cal Ermer, the Twins' new manager. In 15 previous games, his staff had managed but three complete games and had allowed four or more runs 10 times.

Chance's effort was the top individual pitching job in the American League where California Angels blanked Kansas City Athletics 2-0, New York Yankees dropped Detroit Tigers 2-1, Washington Senators nipped Baltimore Orioles 3-2 and Cleveland Red Sox battered Cleveland Indians 9-4.

DEAN CHANCE

The victory ended a three-game losing string for Chance and made him the American League's first 10-game winner at 10-3.

Killebrew's .375 - foot shot in the seventh inning gave him the major loop home run lead over Baltimore's Frank Robinson, who has 21.

DENNY McLAIN ...

Ricbey Clark and Minnie Rojas teamed up for California's three - hitter over Kansas City. Rojas belted Clark out of an eighth - inning jam and then drove in an insurance run with a ninth-inning single.

Al Downing pitched a six-hitter for the Yankees and batted one of three homers that accounted for all of New York's runs against Detroit's Denny McLain.

Steve Whitaker and Tom Satriano provided the other Yankee homers.

Casanova's shot followed single by Frank Howard and Ces Peterson after Barber had retired the first 11 Senators in order.

Joe Foy hammered two triples and two singles as the Red Sox clawed the Indians. Foy scored three runs and drove in three with the 13-hit Boston attack against four Cleveland pitchers.

Tony Conigliaro drove in two runs with a homer and a single and Carl Yastrzemski also stroked a pair of hits. Lee Stange went the distance for the victory, losing his shutout in the last two innings after the Red Sox had run up an 8-0 lead.

Wilf Homeniuk

Putted With Two-Iron

TORONTO (CP) — Wilf Homeniuk, a diminutive 30-year-old professional golfer, stood hunched over a borrowed putter on the practice green. He had just finished the 18th hole in Thursday's round of the 54-hole Millar Topby golf tournament.

"My Lord. Don't print that," he said. "I'd never live that down."

Wilf Homeniuk had just been reminded of his fleeting loss of composure on the 18th when he missed a two-foot putt and broke his putter over his knee. Homeniuk then had to play the remaining two holes, putting with his two iron.

Homeniuk said it was his putting that suffered in this third round. He three-putted seven greens for a round total of 35 putts.

He hunched over the borrowed putter again, and experimented with a back-hand style to try and break through his putting slump.

Homeniuk, from Winnipeg, comes from a family of six brothers, three of them pros.

"Stan is the oldest," said Homeniuk when the putting topic had died down. "He's my he's the best in the family. He's a pro in Winnipeg too. I guess I'm the second best amongst my brothers."

For all his troubles Thursday, Homeniuk came in with a 75 for a round total of 148 and a share of seventh place. When reminded of hitting a three iron out of 38 when it counted, Homeniuk smiled and looked up from his putting.

Homeniuk, back on his putting problems, said the greens were tough with many treacherous and hidden rolls.

He said he'd have to sharpen up if he wanted to get anywhere in Saturday's final round.

Amateur Staff

Courses Beat Golfers

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Golf courses in nine centres were the big winners Friday when a flock of golfers took to the fairways hoping to qualify for the Ontario amateur championships at London July 26-28.

Few of the hopefuls managed to shoot par or under at Aurora, Ridgetown, Pontiac, Kingston, Sarnia, Sudbury, Peterborough, Barrie and Kitchener courses.

Gus Blair fired a par 72 at Westview Golf Club in Aurora to top a list of 25 Toronto area golfers who qualified for the amateur championships.

Tied for second spot, three shots back of Blair, were Jim Short, Hel Bolhuis, Jr., O'Leary and George Hevenor Jr.

Nick Sazavan of Kingsville shot a one-under-par 69 at the Ridgetown Golf Club to lead a seven-man field in the London tournament.

Other qualifiers at Ridgetown were Russ Hunter, Chatham, 71, John Watson, Windsor, 72, and Jim Evans, Windsor, 72.

Ron Brown of Kingston and Michael Mansur of Port Credit paced a sparse field of six golfers at Kingston's Rideau Glen Lawrence Golf and Country Club with 72's.

Don Galloway of St. Marys led a field of 36 with a one-under par 70 at the Sarnia Golf and Curling Club. A total of 17 golfers qualified with scores of 77 or better.

Roger Maris socked an eighth - inning homer Friday that lifted St. Louis' streaking Cardinals past Philadelphia Phillies 3-2 Friday night and stretched their National League lead to three games.

The Cardinals struggled to

their sixth straight victory on the strength of Maris' tie-breaking shot and the four-hit pitching of rookie Dick Hughes.

In other NL action, Pittsburgh Pirates scored three runs in the ninth inning for a 4-3 victory over second place Cincinnati, Atlanta Braves ran its winning streak to four games by trouncing New York Mets 12-4, San Francisco Giants smacked Los Angeles Dodgers 7-1 and Chicago Cubs nipped Houston Astros 9-8.

It was Maris's fifth homer of the season.

After Maris's homer snapped a 2-2 in the eighth, the Phillies loaded the bases in the ninth before Hughes struck out pinch-hitter Doug Clemens, completing his seventh victory against two setbacks.

The Pirates broke loose in the ninth inning at Cincinnati after Jim Coker's eighth - inning homer gave the Reds a 2-1 edge. Pinch-hitter Maury Wills delivered the tying run with a single and reliever Bob Lee wild-pitched another across.

Mack Jones drove in three runs with two singles and a double and Felipe Alou had three hits and scored two runs as the Braves belted the Mets under a 13-hit barrage.

Left-hander Mike McCormick scattered nine hits and topped a two-run homer as the Giants trimmed the Dodgers for the sixth time in seven meetings this year. Willie Mays also homered for San Francisco.

Leo Thomas' pinch-hit single in the ninth drove in the winning run for the Cubs, who tied the score at 8-8 with a two-run rally in the eighth. Billy Williams and Ernie Banks each hit his 18th homer for Chicago while Houston's Jim Wynn walloped No. 18.

Go Home, Yankee

Daddy Was Sweet!

By ROBERT ENEFJELLA

Another large wrestling crowd enjoyed an exciting card as the arena has come to be the favorites pounded the villains into submission in every instance.

Yankee, who carries over 300 pounds on a huge frame, pummelled Sweet Daddy with his after kick in the early going. The scrapping up understandably put Daddy in a slump, and Yankee took the opportunity to hoist the hero on his shoulders and inflict the back-breaker. Siki cried "uncle."

Sweet Daddy took the initiative to win the next fall. He sent the Yankee reeling with a series of coco-butts and dived on the prostrate villain for the count.

Late in the bout, with both contestants disqualified, referee Tiger Tasker, tired of the tactics used by Number Three and disqualified him, giving Daddy the match.

In the semi-final, Whipper Watson Junior and his big teammate Mighty Atom were pitted against two antis, the Masked Manager and his wrestler sidekick, Frenchie Leclair. The two two-fall ended in favor of the former pair, as clean virtuous tactics won the day.

In the preliminary bout the Italian Sensation, Lorenzo Parisi show Tommy Dubois Dubois. The exciting, bruising battle ended in a maze of arms and legs, as Parisi's greater wrestling skill overcame the punches of Dubois.

Ontario School For Deaf

Honor Boy Athletes

The proud athletes of the Ontario School for the Deaf were honored at the school's annual Boys' Sports Awards Banquet this past week.

The school's recreational program is organized to insure maximum participation of the students and each year, about 75 to 80 per cent of the pupils win awards varying from sports tabs to trophies.

Present at the recent awards banquet were a number of special guests, including Mayor Jack Ellis; W. K. Clarke, administrator of Schools for the Deaf and Blind; Dr. John Boyd, inspector audiological services; Miss Sandercock, M.P.P. of Hastings West; Jack Simon, of Quinte, S.S., representing the Bay of Quinte C.O.S.S.A. as secretary-treasurer; William McGovern, president of the Federation of Blind Sports of Canada; Lou Scarfe, coach of the Belleville Juvenile hockey; Father Boyle, of St. Michael's; and staff members of the Ontario School for the Deaf.

Special awards were presented to Bob Gregory, for hockey, by Lou Searfe; to Clyde Jourdin by William McGovern, for track; to Wayne Wilson, by Jack Simon, for football; and to Werner Zahrlaker, a promising young athlete, by Mayor Ellis, for track.

Bill Gregory presented Mr. George Flynn with a plaque in appreciation of his services in athletics during the past five years at O.S.D. Mr. Flynn will be teaching in Toronto next year.

Mr. Hyatte Bryant, supervising teacher of physical education, presented Mr. G. R. Lockie, with a plaque on behalf of the physical education staff, students and students, for his continued assistance in the athletic program of the school. Mr. Lockie has accepted a position as inspector, in Kingston, beginning in August.

Mr. J. N. Rickaby, academic teacher at the school, assisted in the speeches of the evening by interpreting the spoken words with signs so that the significance of the speeches would be fully understood by the boys.

Car Racing

Rule Raps Americans

DETROIT (AP) — A ruling cutting down the size of prototype sports cars racing from the manufacturers championship may well knock the United States out of long distance racing," Carroll Shelby said today.

Shelby, who's Ford - powered Cobras won the World Manufacturers Championship in 1965, said:

"As far as I'm concerned it's kind of a kick in the face for America."

The International Sporting Commission, which sets the rules for the car competition, announced the decision was made ...

Seven - litre Fords finished 1-2-3 at Le Mans in 1966.

A spokesman for the International Automobile Federation, the sporting commission's parent group, said the Prengh Government was concerned about the speeds—more than 214 miles an hour—reached by the Fords on the long straights.

Starting next year, engine sizes will be limited to three litres, or 183 cubic inches. Ford and Chaparral—the other major American entry — have been powered with seven - litre engines, 427 cubic inches.

Shelby said he and Dan Gurney, one of the drivers in the winning Ford at Le Mans, have a company called All-American Racers which has a three-litre engine designed from the ground up. With such an engine, Gurney won the Belgian Grand Prix race at Spa last week.

SAVING FOR SCHOOL

CALGARY (CP) — Alberta members of the Catholic Youth Organization are raising $10,000 as a contestant for a scholarship in Ile, Peru. The coastal fishing town's population jumped to 25,000 from 5,000 when a copper smelter was built and boating and education are in short supply.

Rides Pine Point

Gomez Eyes Fourth Plate Win!

TORONTO (CP) — Veteran trainer Art Warner says he once knew a man who had an unbeatable system for betting the Queen's Plate.

"He used to bet an owner that his two-year-old, eligible wouldn't get to the starting gate on Plate Day the following year," Warner said Friday.

"It was an unbeatable system, providing he bet with the owners of the couple of hundred eligibles each year because not too many of them finally make it."

Warner's point is that any horse that gets to the starting gate for the Queen's Plate has a good chance of winning the 114 mile classic for Canadian - foaled three-year-old thoroughbreds.

Fourteen of the country's top three - year - olds will leave the starting gate in the 108th running of the annual event at 5:12 p.m. EDT today.

The race will be run on the turf course at Woodbine racetrack and is to be televised by the CBC national network.

The event, the oldest continuously - run horse race in North America, will be attached by Gov.-Gen. and Mrs. Michener.

The experts have narrowed the field to five favorites, providing the track is hard and fast, but there are at least two horses considered top choices if the track is wet.

"But you can't ignore any of these in this race," said Warner, who trains two of the starters—Come by Chance and Mr. Sweet Dreams.

The favorites and their early odds are Betamight 3 to 1, Pine Point 5 to 2, Rattling 4 to 1, Come by Chance 5 to 1 and Courant d'Air 10 to 1.

Courant d'Air's long odds are due to his bad habits at the gate as a two-year-old and the fact that he has drawn the No. 12 starting position. The horse is owned by J. Louis Levesque of Montreal.

Pine Point, owned by Saul Wagman of Toronto and the winner of Monday's Plate Trial over 1¼ miles drew the No. 3 starting position. He will be ridden by Avelino Gomez, who is hoping to become the first jockey to ride four Queen's Plate winners.

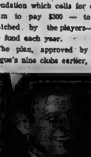
Betamight, owned by E. P. Taylor of Toronto, will start from the No. 1 spot. The seven son of Nearctic is coupled with another Taylor horse, Blenheim Park, on the same pari-mutuel ticket.

Betamight will be ridden by Hugo Dhufach, and a rider for Blenheim Park will be named just before race time.

Betamight, bought by Noel Hickey of Montreal for $53,000 earlier this season, will be ridden by Ron Turcotte, the Grand Falls, N.B., native campaigning on U.S. circuits.

Ron's brother, Noel, will also be riding today, aboard More of Mert owned by Tom Hays of Oakville, Ont., More of Mert drew the No. 8 starting position and shared early odds of 15 to 1.

More of Mert will run as an entry with Fila de Nord, owned by F. H. Sherman of Hamilton.



Gary Schreider Re-elected President

TORONTO (CP)—Players in the Canadian Football League voted acceptance Friday of a 17-point pension plan recommendation which calls for each team to pay $300 — to be matched by the players—into the fund each year.

The plan, approved by the league's nine clubs earlier, now goes to a firm of consultants to be put into proper order as bids for the pension contract may be called for.

Gary Schreider, retired defensive halfback who played with Ottawa, British Colombia and Hamilton, said the plan should be in operation this year.

Schreider, at the CFL players' association annual meeting Friday, was re-elected president. Norm Fleidgate of B.C. Lions was named vice-president and Oscar Kruger, former Edmonton Eskimo, treasurer.

GARY SCHREIDER

With The Trotters

LONDON, Ont (CP)—Ginger Hill won the seventh race at Western Fair Raceway Friday night, returning $20.10 and paying the way for a $117.80 exacta for when Cinda C. Gratias came in second.

Tops The Tops

There's A Will--And A Wayne

CLEVELAND (AP) — Armed with a new set of clubs and wielding a precision putter, modest Wayne Yates has a lot to crow about.

The 25-year-old Georgian carried a two-stroke lead into today's third round of the $103,000 Cleveland Open golf tournament, with veterans Gardner Dickinson and Arnold Palmer in hot pursuit.

Yates, who admitted Friday after shooting his second straight 68 that "the pressure is pretty good," was likely to feel it a little more today.

He was to play in the same threesome with Palmer, the game's all-time leading money-winner.

The rangy Yates had a 36-hole total of 132, two strokes better than Gardner Dickinson and three ahead of Palmer, who fired a 68 Friday.

Still in contention at 136 were Bob Charles, Alias Hoosing, Homero Blancas and Jerry Weaver. Blancas and Weaver dispermann both fired 65s Friday to tie the course record.

Seventy - five pro guns survived the cut for the last two rounds, but a major casualty was R. H. Sikes, last year's winner.

Millar Trophy

Gary Bowerman; Second Place

TORONTO (CP)—Dave Clayton fired a brilliant five-under-par 67 Friday to take a two-stroke lead into today's final round of the 54-hole Millar Trophy Golf Tournament.

The 26-year-old Toronto pro turned in a string of six birdies to nearby Richmond Hill for a two-stroke lead over favorite Gary Bowerman of Clifford, Ont., who fired a par 72 at Brampton, and Gary Bowerman of Toronto.

The Millar is being played on two courses this year to accommodate a field of 250 amateurs and professionals.

Ken Fulton of Winnipeg was one of many out-of-Ontario golfers who made a fine showing with his 73 for a 147 and a two-way tie for ninth place.

Wml. Homenick of Winnipeg scored 69-79—148; Jean-Guy Perlard, Montreal, 76 for 149; Vrughan Trapp, Vancouver, 73 for 150; Phil Gilmore, Montreal 76 for 150; Flim Sorenson, Edmonton, 76 for 52 and Doug Webb, Vancouver, who just made the cut-off with a 79 for 155.

The Millar is one of eight provincial elimination tournaments which will qualify an amateur pro, along with George Knudson who already qualifies on the basis of this year's tournament play, and one amateur, for the World Open tournament at Woodbridge, Ont., in September.

Says Roberta Picco

'Nice Meeting You, Abby'

SASKATOON (CP) — Roberta Picco of Toronto set a Canadian record in the women's 1,500-metre event Friday, and it's a lucky, history won't repeat.

Miss Picco broke middle-distance star Abby Hoffman's 1965 800-metre event today in the Pan - American Games Trials in a startling parallel to events of a year ago.

Then, at the British Empire Games Trials in Edmonton, Miss Picco went all-out to set a record in the mile. The mark of four minutes, 35.3 seconds still stands.

But the mile is not on the list of women's events for the B.E.G. and her performance did not win her a place on the team.

Friday, Miss Picco reeled off a time of 4:34.4 in the 1,500 metres, but that event isn't on the Pan-Am calendar. The 800 metres is, and Miss Picco has a date with a frush Miss Hoffman again.

Miss Picco's 1,500-metre time bettered the old mark of 4:35.3 set by Pat Hall of Birkenfield B.C. Miss Hills finished third in 4:54.5. Sheryl Somers, a 15-year-old Mississauga, was second in 4:47.5.

All are entered against Miss Hoffman today, and on that race rests a Pan-Am team berth.

A team of about 60 athletes will be chosen from the Trials. Meet officials say performance level is the only as a guide to the selectors, so absent athletes can still be chosen.

This means such absentees as Harry Jerome of Vancouver, Bob Yard and Gerry Moro of Trak, B.C., and Bill Gairdner of Toronto can still make the team, if missed the trials because of injuries.

CARY BOWERMAN

to eighth place as he shot a 77 and 146 total.

Bob Rose, Ken Girard and Bob Breen, all 6d Toronto, have a total of 145. Girard covered Brampton in 69, seven strokes

St. Joseph's Holds Field Day

St. Joseph's Separate School of Belleville held a field day recently, in which seven different events were participated in.

Bob Crawford won the trophy for best performance in the boys' 6-8 years class, while Peter Crawford and Stephen Jones took top honors in the 9-10 and 11-13 classes respectively.

The girls were also busy in all events, with Dianne Jones winning the over-all trophy for 6-8 years. Susan Ross is the 9-10 and Margaret Buckley in the 11-13.

The students had their energies maintained by refreshments served by the PTA and supervised by school principal Sister Mary Noreen.

Europe Behind Cassius

ROME (AP)—The European Boxing Union supports the stand of the British Boxing Board of Control in recognizing Cassius Clay as heavyweight champion.

"The EBU will continue to recognize Clay as champion until his case is finally settled," Piero Pini, secretary-general of the EBU, said Friday.

Clay is appealing a conviction for refusing induction into military service.

The world Boxing Association in the U.S. and the New York State Athletic Commission stripped Clay of title recognition when he first refused induction.

Leafs Win, Red Wings Slipping

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Rochester Red Wings, who started the season as though they owned the International League, have started a downward slide.

A 5-4 loss Friday to Jacksonville Jets left the Wings with only a 4½-game edge atop the standings ahead of Toronto Maple Leafs, who clipped Toledo Mud Hens 8-5 for their fifth victory in six meetings with Toledo.

The third game of four scheduled had Columbus Jets battering Buffalo Bisons 10-5.

The Tracks

It was the first consecutive victory in the race since Tactician won in 1914 and 1915.

Owned by John Smallman of London, Ont., and ridden by Avelino Gomez, the son of Bobbe came from just off the pace and then out-bought his stable mate, George Gardiner's Candeel, through the stretch to win by a neck. Golden West Farms' Cambridge finished third.

The daily double of Pheasant Bar and Sabe Schon paid $264.80. Rhythm Sal and Landwind in the fourth set up an exactor of $102.30 while Shining Wings and Willow Twig in the sixth combined to pay $27.80.

The Dean Martin Summer Show Brimming With Young Talent

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—There's no substitute for experience.

Though brimming with bright young talent, its payest moments came in a Tonight-style interview with George Jessel, 80.

"I've been in show business long enough to be present at the California 15 times," Jessel said. He recalled his reply when told he must be in his late 50s: "I've got the older than that."

Regular brighteners on the 15-week variety series include Singer Cyndi Lawrence and song belter Gail Martin, Dean's 21 - year - old daughter. Joining Dean and Damone on the opener were the team of Clair and McMahon, in a screaming-comedy bit, and the Curtain Calls, a talented, hard-working song-and-dance trio.

Conclusion on the two editions we've had of the Steve Allen Comedy Hour: The short stretches are funny; the long ones sag. This Wednesday Steve's wife Jayne Meadows, wearing curls like all the showtags in the carpenter shop, tried to sustain a mistress of ceremonies a spotty, tedious parody of a male beauty contest.

But the quickies — Steve emerging from a 100 - year freeze, Steve as a magician creating a banana through reversed film—were a delight.

Rylstone Personals

RYLSTONE — The County Fair at the opening of Bacman Memorial Park Saturday was a success.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Spencer accompanied their son and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Mumby of Springbrook to Huntsville recently, where they visited Mrs. Mumby's brother, James Lane, and Mrs. Lane.

All the youth groups from the three churches, Stanwood, Rylstone and Springbrook took part in the evening service at Springbrook United Church Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Murray Sweet and Joyce of Dunsville spent the weekend with his father, Harry Sweet.

Mrs. Chester Mellelejohn has returned from Campbellford Memorial Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Lennie, Wayne and David of Renfrew, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Spencer and other relatives.

Mrs. William Gray, her son James and his wife were guests at a silver wedding celebration in honor of Mr. and Mrs. John Tredwell, Fenwood, Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Turner, Toronto, who are holidaying at Hardley Bay, visited her sister and brother - in - law, Mr. and Mrs. Austin Dunk.

To Your Good Health

Almost Anything Can Become A Habit

Dear Dr. Molner: I have been taking ——— as an aid to sleep. It claims not to be habit-forming.

I have been taking two a night for about three months and so far it has helped. Is it safe? — Mrs. E. Z. S.

Once I knew a man who always went to bed down at the table, moved all his silverware about an eighth of an inch. No matter how it was placed, he still had to move it a little bit.

It drove his wife wild—just one of those harmless little habits that can grate on someone's nerves. Yet he had the very dickens of a time trying to stop doing it. Why? It was a habit!

So saying that anything is not "habit-forming" is risky.

Anything can become a habit. Some of these same folks, if given some completely impotent sugar pill or aspirin, still go to sleep if they believe it is a "sleeping pill." A great deal of it is in the mind. If you believe you can do something, you usually can. If you believe that you need a pill, then you have to have it.

Government regulations seek to make sure that the common drug-store sleeping pills including the ones you mention, are safe to use if you follow directions. They do not contain narcotics which are addicting — addiction being something quite different from a habit.

Now I don't like to tell people they shouldn't take a mild pill to help them get to sleep when they are edgy. When it gets to be a nightly occurrence, every night for months on end, then I start to take another look at the question — or at least know that the person has discussed it with a physician.

There are elderly folks, who drowse a good deal during the day and have trouble relaxing and getting to sleep at bedtime, and for them a mild medication can make things much more comfortable.

When it's a younger person, then it seems much more to the point to find out why medicine is needed. What's bothering the person? Is some persistent worry being allowed to continue rather than trying to solve the matter, or to decide it might better be forgotten?

Furthermore, it is usually far better to take such pills only when needed, not every night. Taking a pill once in a week or two weeks on a restless night is one thing. Taking them every night is another matter.

Can these mild pills be habit-forming? They certainly can. After three months, the habit is pretty well established, I would think.

Unless you are prepared to keep on using them for the rest of your life (and perhaps stronger) I think it's time to begin breaking the pattern, the habit. Unless something is wrong, I can't see the need for them so regularly.

Maybe it's just "nerves." But, if so, it's time to start taming your nerves, because that much tension isn't good for you, anyway.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have had nasal polyps removed every 18 months or so for the last 25 years. I am now 63, and although it is not a painful operation it becomes more of an ordeal each time.

Is there any known method of removal besides the wire snare my doctor uses, and which will result in a permanent cure? — L. S.

Sir, you must hold some sort of a record for polyp trouble, although the pesky things often do have a tendency to recur.

The snare is the simplest and most effective method I know, and there is nothing that promises to prevent new ones from growing, except that in many cases an allergy appears to be a factor. If you can identify the allergy, you may be able to ease the situation.

Note to Mrs. C. J. B.: No, birth control pills do not cause a woman to become sterile, even after long use.

Signs of Winter Already!

It's the fourth day of summer but already some thoughts are turning to winter. Like the fuel company at Belleville docks which was being stocked this week by Imperial Collingwood tanker. The ship, say harbor authorities, unloaded about 800,000 gallons of fuel oil.

Belleville Ambulances To Service Napanee

NAPANEE — Town Council voted Thursday night to draw up an agreement with a Belleville firm for ambulance service for the community. Belleville City Ambulance Service offered slightly better terms than Napanee Central Ambulance Service, both of which applied for a subsidy.

Since the four county ambulance districtsound their services when new regulations came into effect, Napanee and the area have been serviced by the Napanee Central Ambulance Service. It applied recently for subsidy from County Council and a committee was set up to investigate.

At the same time the Belleville and the Napanee firms were offering their services to Napanee Town Council. At the Thursday meeting representatives from the townships of North Fredericksburgh and Richmond and from the village of Newburgh were in attendance.

Napanee Central Ambulance Service will continue to give service until the agreement drawn up Thursday night is signed. Should the county decide to subsidize an ambulance service, the separate agreement with Napanee will terminate.

Terms offered by the two ambulances services were not disclosed, but it is understood that both were on a per capita basis.

Police Constable Hired

NAPANEE — Napanee Town Council met in special session Thursday evening to deal with two vacancies in the police department.

Peter Cruji, a Napanee native who moved recently to Deseronto, was hired as probationary constable at a salary of $4,400 to replace John Henderson, who resigned after having been on the force for ten years.

Advertisements will be placed in newspapers requesting applications for a replacement for Police Chief C. L. Boyer, who took up his duties here December 1. He resigned to accept a position as chief of police for the Wabasseon 24-man police department at a salary $2,500 more than he received in Napanee.

Council is offering $6,500 annually with an annual increment of $200 for three years. Applications close July 5.

Thomasburg

THOMASBURG — Mr. and Mrs. Lorne H. Thompson of Ottawa and Mr. and Mrs. Guy W. Thompson of Peterborough were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Thompson. Guy has been appointed principal of Keewatin Heights Public School in Peterborough.

Mr. and Mrs. Carman Davidson of Roslin were guests of honor at a party in the IOOF Hall, Thomasburg Saturday evening on the occasion of their silver wedding anniversary. Mrs. Davidson is the former Olive Carleton of Thomasburg, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Carleton.

July 1 Holiday

NAPANEE — Napanee Council has proclaimed July 1 as Dominion Day, despite a request from the Chamber of Commerce to proclaim July 3 as a holiday.

Rural Churches Close

NAPANEE — Sunday saw the last service in the churches which formerly made up the Bay charge. Choir leaders were five small churches for the one minister: Sand Hill, Bethany, Bay Bay all of which closed earlier, and Grotna and Anderson, which have been open until mid-month.

Orrald Day has been the student minister for the past four years. Mr. Day graduated from Queen's University Theological College in May, and was ordained May 17. He and his family are now going to Saskatchewan.

The last service was held in Anderson Church June 11 and in Grotna June 18. The membership roll of both churches is being handed over to Trinity United Church, Napanee. But individual members may attend the church of their choice.

Sunday's service in Grotna was a communion service, a baptismal service, and saw the admission of ten communicants to membership, two from Anderson and eight from Grotna. Mr. Day's last Sunday in his charge saw him performing these rites for the first time as an ordained minister.

Cindy Maurese, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lyall Rankin was baptized by Mr. Day. Received into membership in the United Church were Carmen Lennox and Gail Wannamaker of the Anderson church, and Brian Allanwood, Paul Allanbrack, Vernon Amey, Marsha Clark, Glenn Goodman, James Oliver, Sharon Oliver and Debbie Rombough of Grotna.

Canada: Suddenly Grown Up Country with Sex-appeal

LONDON (CP) — Canada is suddenly a grownup country with sex-appeal and international glamor, says the weekly Observer in its weekend color magazine.

Taking a searching look at Canada before the Queen's visit, the Observer attacks recent Canadian newspaper articles' rehearsing all the clichés" about the country's alleged tedium and lack of identity.

"But the Canadian reaction, at least, was new," writes Patrick O'Donovan, who is chief BBC radio and television broadcast in his circle tionist.

They were affronted. They reacted like a nation and a new one with all the assurance of an arrivated people. The reporting was bad. The reaction was healthy. Canada now exists not merely as a fact, but as an idea and an ideal."

In an edition devoted mostly to Canada, O'Donovan's article says that although old tensions exist and could still be dangerous "it would be hard to exaggerate the extent of the change in Canada."

"The outward sign of this vast change, of this coming of age, is the year's Centennial celebration.

"Its supreme expression is the Expo at Montreal and Canadians have awakened to the fact that they have done it twice as well and in half the time as the city of New York.

Throughout life history Canada has had to contend with its neighbors, its friends and its own good nature. Today, it appears to have won its own soul and the old cliches about that country will not do any more.

"It will not be an ugly and grievance-ridden nationalism. Instead, it will be a calm identity that can only be of help to mankind."

Dancing Program Presented

An estimated 80 youngsters danced their way through 300 years of Canadian history Thursday night when the Centennial School of Dancing Tremm presented its centennial project at the high school auditorium.

The program, which features the school's Kindergarten and high school-aged performers, is so marked the finale of the evening's time teaching year.

Just about everybody got into the act, whether as Indian warriors, Irish step dancers, or leggy barroom girls.

The recital was arranged by the school's instructors Kaye Cunliffe, Rhoda Bain and Carol Brown.

Regular classes will resume in September.

Joanne McNevin Top Rider at Horse Show

Joanne McNevin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don McNevin, Thurlow township, and her quarter horse, King's Crystal, is anticipating a wide swath in the various events being held around the Province. Over the past weekend she made a trip to the Fifty Dale Ranch at South Marsh near Ottawa and came home with a load of prizes.

Miss McNevin won first prize in the barrel race, second in the flag race and third in the pickup race. Another big feature she was chosen the 1967 Queen of Fifty Dale Ranch and received a lovely trophy and a gift certificate to purchase some more tack for her horse. For her achievement during the day Mis McNevin earned top points.

Today Expo Belongs to Quebec

MONTREAL (CP)—Expo 67 goes wildly French - Canadian today as residents of the big fair's host province celebrate the feast of St. Jean Baptiste, their patron saint.

With Quebec political leaders pushing the cause of their province as a force in world affairs, the massive international exhibition is staging special events in Quebec's honor.

As Premier Daniel Johnson watches the blue-and-white provincial flag raised in Expo's Place des Nations, thousands of his fellow Quebecers are set to perform in everything from gala concerts to ball - hooking.

Expo is regarded by many Quebecers as a gratifying boost to their province's prestige on the world stage. The celebrations reaching a crescendo today have been accompanied by urgings on the part of top men in the Union Nationale government that Quebec be allowed the right to negotiate international agreements.

Holiday sunny weather was predicted for today at Expo's St. Lawrence River site. With many Quebecers enjoying a long weekend, total attendance at the fair is expected to pass 13,000,000 by Sunday night.

A false fire alarm at the site's hitch-it art gallery, which contains works with a total value of about $35,000,000, triggered an evacuation of the sleek building Friday.

The fire alarm went off when a visitor fell or brushed against it, officials said.

Ignorance Should Be Excuse

OTTAWA (CP)—Ignorance of the law should be an excuse in the area of bi-lingual government, Wallace Nesbitt (PC—Oxford) told the Commons Friday.

The 48-year-old lawyer made a humorous but effective defence of the little man's problems in even becoming aware of legislation, let alone complying with it.

"How can the general public be expected to know about obscure regulations published in the Canada Gazette?" he asked.

"Who reads the Canada Gazette anyway?"

The old axiom that "ignorance of the law is no excuse" might have been applicable in the days of few laws.

Nowadays, with government intruding into every aspect of life, it was completely unreasonable.

Laws and regulations should be posted and advertised in every newspaper in the land "so the public has some opportunity of knowing what it is up against," Mr. Nesbitt said.

Mr. Nesbitt fell into his speech by calling for a revision of the Unemployment Insurance Act.

He said it is poorly understood by the public and is often unfairly enforced.

As an example, he gave "the reign of terror carried on at times by inspectors in this country."

Enforcement officers had broadened too many days' waiting into unemployment Insurance claims. They "clearly were never intended to do."

The alternative for the shop owner is to go to court and fight the government. Many considered it an unequal contest, he said.

"There are a lot of people paying it because they are frightened to, or they don't think they shouldn't be paying it at all," Mr. Nesbitt contended.

Sometimes they weren't clear about the law and they felt uncertain in fighting the government.

LOOSER ENFORCEMENT?

He suggested to Labor Minister Nicholson that the law be enforced with a little less enthusiasm.

If every one of the thousands of regulations at various government levels was rigidly enforced, every MP would have a long record of infractions by now and some would be in jail.

Active Strikers

With the Pan-American Games scheduled to start in a month, about 75 of Winnipeg's 300 striking carpenters went back to work without pay Thursday to complete work on stands. The decision to break picket line was made when the men said there wasn't time to discuss payment if the job was to be completed in time. (CP Photo)

Johnson Demands Pact-making Right

MONTREAL (CP)—Premier Daniel Johnson said today Quebec must have the freedom to negotiate international agreements as a condition of equality and culture survival.

Mr. Johnson was speaking at Quebec Day ceremonies at Expo 67, coinciding with the province's National holiday, St. Jean Baptiste Day.

He said equality is not possible in the French - speaking community in Canada "if Quebec cannot negotiate freely the agreements necessary for conservation of its particular heritage."

Mr. Johnson's reference to such agreements follows by two days a speech by a Quebec cabinet minister who said Quebec wants international treaty-making power.

Marcel Masse, minister without portfolio, told the St. Jean Baptiste Society in Montreal Thursday this power should be written into the Canadian constitution.

Only the federal state can make international treaties under the British North America Act.

Quebec has a cultural and education agreement with France, but this was signed under the authority of an umbrella agreement negotiated by the French and Canadian governments.

Mr. Johnson said international agreements would help Quebec protect the French-Canadian culture through links with other French - speaking communities.

Western Oil Index Is Pushed To Record by Scurry Rainbow

By LARRY DWORKIN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Prospects of a major mineral finding touched off a hectic buying spree in Scurry-Rainbow this week that trading in the stock was suspended.

Trading in Scurry halted early in Thursday's session on orders from the Toronto Stock Exchange. It is not to resume until a technical report is made public on the company's exploration of nickel, copper and cobalt find in northeastern Saskatchewan.

Elsewhere on Canada's major stock exchanges trading was dull and indecisive with only a handful of issues scoring solid gains.

At Toronto the industrial index, which measures the price movements of key stocks, edged up .11 to 168.38. At Montreal, it advanced .25 to 185.79.

Scurry-Rainbow jumped 11¼ to 42¾ on 382,000 shares from Tuesday's opening to the time it was suspended. It could have been bought at 21¼ a month ago.

Trading in the stock was delayed last Friday at the request of the company until information of the find could be provided.

Details were announced late on Monday's session, but the exchange withheld trading until Tuesday to give the financial community time to digest the news.

Because Scurry is a Calgary-based oil producer, it helped push the western oil index to a yearly high. The index climbed 11.36 to 183.54 after touching a high of 183.91.

At Toronto, other western oil stocks continued to strengthen on speculation that Canada will be able to increase its exports of oil to the U.S. as a result of the Middle East crisis.

However analysts say this is a long-term outlook as the industry must first meet the needs of Quebec and the Maritimes, especially if Middle East supplies are cut off from these areas for more than a few weeks.

Hudson's Bay rose 4¼ to 39, Canadian Superior 2¾ to 44¾ and Great Plains 2 to 14.

Trans - Canada Pipe Lines, which touched a high of 25¼ earlier in the week, closed with a gain of ¼ to 25¼. The company asked Parliament to allow it to more than double its capitalization of common shares and increase its preferred shares by five times.

The stock rose sharply Tuesday after the U.S. Federal Power Commission approved its application to build a 26-inch pipeline south of the Great Lakes. The line will go from Emerson, Man., through Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan to Sarnia, Ont.

The approval means Trans-Canada can go ahead with plans to pipe more badly-needed natural as from fields in western Canada to the East.

Home Oil, which owns about 17 per cent of Trans-Canada's shares, moved up. The A stock gained ¼ to 20% and the B stock 1¼ to 22¾.

Contributing to the market's indecisiveness was a weak New York market. There was also a prediction by the Canadian Construction Association that 1967 may show the first year-to-year decrease in value of construction since 1960.

Alcan dropped 1¼ to 29¾, Magna Electronics 1¼ to 18, Massey-Ferguson 1¼ to 22, CPR ½ to 71 and Bell Telephone ¼ to 48¾.

Ford of Canada moved up 16 to 162¾ although company officials could give no reason for the jump. International Minerals gained 2¾ to 37¾, Versatile 2¾ to 40¼ and Moore Corp. 1¼ to 32½.

On index, golds were up 37 to 173.70 while base metals ceased .02 to 192.72. Volume was 13,360,000 shares compared with 15,222,000 last week.

At Montreal, utilities advanced .45 to 148.85, banks 30 to 284.72 and papers .38 to 112.15. Volume was 3,907,000 shares compared with 4,422,000 last week.

Mackenzie Too Tough For CYC

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP)—Because initial success is important, the Company of Young Canadians should stay out of the troubled Mackenzie Valley if it hopes to work in the Northwest Territories, a special study of the CYC recommends.

The recommendation arises out of an analysis of the Cardrobbers trip conveniently reported on development of government in the N.W.T.

The analysis by Matthew A. Schonfield, 30 - year - old CYC member from Ottawa, says there is plenty of room for CYC involvement in the North but suggests that it start in the Eastern Arctic among the Keewatin regions.

These regions didn't have the "turmoil, conflicts and difficulties" of Mackenzie Valley communities.

The CYC might be wiser to stay out of the valley until it had the experience and confidence to cope with the problems there.

The company meets next month to decide whether to follow the report's recommendations.

The study suggested that Indian and Eskimo high school and vocational school dropouts and graduates are prime volunteer materials.

They might be hired as supervisors by the CYC rather than be dumped back into unemployment after their two-year tour as volunteers, the report said.

Education and health are areas where the CYC might help northern natives most.

"Students" are always needed by pre-school natives.

Their parents could use adult education classes and those living them understand government, medical and hygiene practices and the modern environment school children need.

The study contains a number of suggestions for the use of volunteers going into the North.

Volunteers should always discuss plans with area administrator, no matter who invited the CYC to the area.

Care should be taken not to make promises or raise false hopes.

Liquor should not be used as a means to get chummy with the natives. There already is a liquor problem in the N.W.T. and there is no need for further contribution to it."

Southern volunteers might find the long winter darkness lonely and depressing" and the isolation hard to take.

There were no restaurants, book stores, record shops in many communities. Where there were no movie houses, the films were old. Electricity was often a luxury, as was privacy.

The report says affairs - department administrators responsible the monitor, missionary and Hudson's Bay post trader as the most influential man in the North.

The Carrothers commission recommended a program of regional development through a territorial development board and the CYC could probably contribute most at "the grass-roots level."

Pair Seek to Remove 'Blot on Conscience'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two Vancouver lawyers with a $1,500,000 centennial project will try in Canada courts to remove a "real blotch on the conscience of Canada."

That's the price Ray McLeod for Canadian Pacific Airlines exacted on the rights of Mr. and Mrs. Torano Iwasaki, who had their property confiscated more than 25 years ago following their evacuation to the British Columbia interior as security risks.

The lawyers have given the Canadian government until June 30 to clear the country's conscience or face a court battle.

Shortly after Japan entered the Second World War, Iwasaki's son and his wife were among some 20,000 Canadians of Japanese moved inland as security measures.

The family eventually received $13,915.80 in two payments for their Salmon Arm home and a Salt Spring Island off the east coast of Vancouver Island.

Mr. Iwasaki, now 74, came to Canada in 1901 and returned to Japan 13 years later to get married. The young couple returned to B.C. in 1918 and by 1940 had made full payment of $3,850 on their island property.

Two years later, he was given enough time to pack two suitcases before he and his wife and son were put on a train for a government holding camp for Japanese in the interior.

He was a naturalized citizen at the time.

Mr. McLeod said his client's property was placed in control of government custodian, Gavin C. Mouat, who died in 1961, in 1945 the land was conveyed to Salt Spring Lands Ltd., which was under the presidency of Mr. Mouat.

But Mr. Iwasaki sought $90,000. Mr. McLeod said his client was given $6,063.

The two Vancouver lawyers took over Mr. Iwasaki's case in January after several unsuccessful years' of appeals to Victoria and Ottawa.

"This is a real blotch on the conscience of Canada," Mr. McLeod said.

"It has been swept under the carpet for 25 years. These people should be treated as Canada and in 24 hours were released as prisoners with only two handbags."

Employment News

At this season of the year the local employment trend is influenced by the labor demands from agriculture, construction, and tourist industries. Clerical help is usually delayed by the earlier poor spring weather and other factors. There is increased activity in this part of the community's economy. The strawberry pack is expected to commence early next week. This, followed by the raspberry and pea packs, will give a good number of temporary work in the weeks ahead. An improvement is noticeable in labor demand from the construction field. Initial work will commence sometime next week for the construction of the industrial plant being established in Belleville by the Superior Electric Co. Ltd. During the week, the labor demand was much stronger for men as both for women seeking employment.

In the female division locally is an experienced secretary is required in the educational field. Other work available includes typing, payroll, bookkeeping and supervision. The successful person must be able to live in residence. Still unfilled is a position as an industrial cafeteria manager. This position calls for a qualified cook with the ability to prepare the menus and order supplies and supervise the staff. There is an opening for a motel room clerk on a regular part-time basis, with the hours of tween 13 to 30 hours per week. Also required for a hotel is a bartender. Here although experience is preferred, training would be given to a suitable person not possessing this requirement. There is a vacancy for an experienced cabinet shirt finisher. Also experienced waitress is in demand for regular daytime work. A large restaurant requires a cook and qualified cashier on a part-time basis.

Urgently required are registered nurses and registered nursing assistants. An excellent opportunity is available in a neighboring town for a companion to an elderly lady. This position does not include light housekeeping and cooking.

In the male division locally, an industrial plant is seeking a qualified mechanist and an estimator who has at least five years' experience in machine shop and foundry work. In demand are a qualified barber, a qualified cook and experienced bartender. An opening is available for a junior cost clerk in the industrial field. Also a retail company has a position as a manager trainee which demands a Grade XII education or better. There is an urgent requirement for experienced a married couple to work as summer resort camp attendants.

Information about all these positions, seeking other employment, or thinking of re-entering the labor market, contact the Canada Manpower Centre at 324 Church Street, Belleville.

Summit Talks End

Deep Chasm Is Unbridged

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—The way Premier Alexei Kosygin told it Sunday night, he and President Johnson have discovered that they are, indeed, a long way apart.

After the second round of the U.S.-Soviet summit talks ended in the little college town of Glassboro, N.J., the Soviet premier moved quickly to get his version of them on the record, flying back to New York immediately by helicopter to give a press conference at UN headquarters.

Johnson, in a statement at Washington, said he feels the world is a "little less dangerous" as a result of the talks. But "no agreement is readily in sight on the Middle Eastern differences over Vietnam conflict.

If Kosygin and the U.S. leader achieved any fruitful understanding on any issue, other than a treaty to ban the spread of nuclear weapons, his remarks and his manner concealed it effectively. The cool, unsmiling Soviet leader was as grave as a teacher telling his class they have all failed and all deserved to fail.

He said there can be no improvement in U.S.-Soviet relations until the United States stops bombing North Vietnam and withdraws its forces from South Vietnam.

Israeli Withdrawal Is Demanded

He said Israel must immediately and unconditionally withdraw its forces from occupied territory in Egypt, Jordan and Syria before any further steps can be taken towards peace in the Middle East.

The UN General Assembly must condemn Israel for aggression, he said, and Israel must "pay compensation for the damage it has caused in the Middle East."

He accused the United States of "still committing aggression against Vietnam," although the war in Southeast Asia has been condemned "by all progressive forces throughout the world."

Kosygin gave perhaps the best reading of the temperature of U.S.-Soviet relations when he was asked whether Johnson, in the event of a visit to the Soviet Union, "would get the same warm welcome as you have received in the United States."

In reply, he put the question squarely in the context of the Vietnam war. "I believe that if the aggression were ended and a truly peaceful policy pursued, the welcome that President Johnson would receive in the Soviet Union would be very cordial indeed."

Kosygin Nervous About China

Kosygin seemed nervous about China, which exploded its first hydrogen bomb June 17, the day the UN General Assembly convened in emergency session on the Middle East at Soviet request.

He said China should obey the spirit of the 1963 Moscow treaty banning tests of nuclear weapons in the atmosphere, although it didn't sign the treaty. "We are against all tests by nuclear powers and China is a nuclear power."

He was asked about the possibility of China supplying more clear arms to Arab countries in an effort to undermine Soviet influence. Brushing this question off in a hurry, he said: "I don't think the question arises of China giving nuclear weapons to the Arab countries."

Kosygin Flies Home Via Cuba

NEW YORK (AP) — Soviet Premier Kosygin, leaving the United States after a nine - day stay, said today he will fly to Cuba from here on a flight Cuba from here.

Earlier today, the crew had requested flight information for both Havana and Gander, Nfld.

Niagara Visit Delights Kosygin

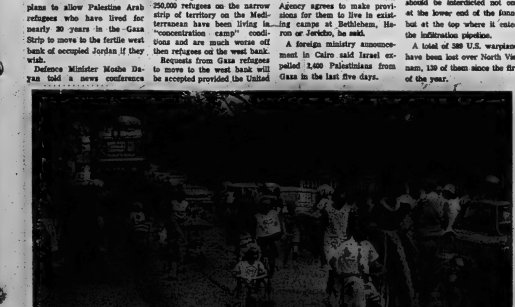
NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y.(CP)—Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin made the honeymooners' tour of famed Niagara Falls.

The Russian premier and his entourage stayed on the American side during a 44½-hour visit to the district. Technically, he skipped into Canada while viewing the falls from the middle of the river in the Maid of the Mist, but he never stepped on Canadian soil. The RCMP was ready to escort him had he done so.

President Johnson loaned the Russian premier one of his White House planes for the trip to the American falls. He suggested the trip after Mr. Kosygin said he was interested in seeing more sights. The Russian leader earlier made a tour of New York City.

Back in New York City after the tour, Mr. Kosygin happily told reporters: "I enjoyed it, I enjoyed it."

He expressed pleasure at the warm reception given some 25,000 persons who saw him during his travels around the border area and said the sights had left a "memorable impression" on him.



Israel Ready to Let Refugees At Gaza Move to Jordan River

TEL AVIV (Reuters)—Israel plans to allow Palestine Arab refugees who have lived for nearly 20 years in the Gaza Strip to move to the fertile west bank of occupied Jordan if they wish.

Defence Minister Moshe Dayan told a news conference Sunday night that an estimated 250,000 refugees on the narrow strip of territory on the Mediterranean have been living in "concentration camp" conditions and are much worse off then refugees on the west bank.

Requests from Gaza refugees to move to the west bank will be accepted provided the United Nations Relief and Works Agency agrees to make provisions for them to live in existing camps at Bethlehem, Hebron or Jericho, he said.

A foreign ministry announcement in Cairo said Israel expelled 2,400 Palestinians from Gaza in the last five days.

Ameliasburg Celebrates Centennial

Raids' Results Dwindle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some top U.S. officials are beginning to think the air war against North Vietnam is yielding diminishing gains while toughened ground defences are raising the price in U.S. planes.

Certain of them believe it might be a good idea to limit the bombing essentially to the supply routes running south through the narrow neck of North Vietnam and to cut down strikes against heavily defended industrial - type targets in the Hanoi and Haiphong areas.

But other authorities argue that to do so would result in swelling the volume of supplies and equipment to Communist forces in South Vietnam.

Those holding this general view say the Communists have been emplacing many more anti - aircraft guns in the 150-mile - long North Vietnamese panhandle, and that concentrating attacks there would not likely reduce the toll of U.S. planes.

Moreover, they contend that the movement of material should be interdicted not only at the lower end of the funnel but at the top where it enters the Haiphong complex.

A total of 388 U.S. warplanes have been lost over North Vietnam, 139 of them since the first of the year.

Pay Parity Defended By Union

PORT ELGIN, Ont. (CP)—The Canadian council of the United Auto Workers said Sunday it rejects attempts by the government to interfere with the union's drive for wage parity with the United States.

Industry Minister C. M. Drury said last March that international unions were influencing Canadian branches on the wage parity issue.

The council said Sunday that the parity issue had been started by Canadians.

"Where management supplies equal equipment, production of Canadian workers is as good as or better than that of U.S. workers," the council said.

Pat Smith, president of Local 439, was re-elected, president of the council.

James Petees, Local 1285, Brampton, was re-elected vice-president.

Clay Guards TV Reporters

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Heavyweight boxer Cassius Clay protected two television reporters from possible injury Sunday as a crowd of about 300 Negro youth threatened the men, police said.

Harold Keen and Carl Gilman were attempting to interview Clay. The youngsters told them to leave.

The men were forced to return to their car by the pressing crowd Keen said, and were struck in the back of the head by rocks. At that point, Clay arrived, accompanied by Archie Moore, former light heavyweight champion.

"Clay put his arm around us and told the youngsters to control themselves," Keen said.

Clay and Moore cleared a way through the crowd so the car could leave, Keen said.

Dief Defines Citizenship

LLOYDMINSTER, Sask. (CP) — Opposition Leader Diefenbaker delivered his personal formula for Canadian citizenship here Saturday in an address at a centennial citizenship ceremony.

"My idea of citizenship," Mr. Diefenbaker told the gathering of more than 400 persons, "is, in words, wisdom; in thought, faith; in life, service; and in deeds, courage. Those things make a nation great."

Tariffs Drop Friday

JASPER, Alta. (CP) — Finance Minister Sharp said today substantial tariff reductions to be announced Friday will enable Canadian industry to get into larger and broader foreign markets but may raise objections from producers wanting to depend exclusively on the domestic market.

The Kennedy round of tariff-cutting negotiations in Geneva, he said, "has been one of the greatest and most successful trade negotiations of our history, and certainly one from which our country must not fail to profit."

Results of the nearly four years of bargaining are to be made public at 6:30 a.m. EDT Friday, when the bargaining conclusions are signed by the participating countries in Geneva.

Mr. Sharp said Canada obtained tariff reductions by the United States for "virtually the whole range of dutiable Canadian exports," and important concessions in the tariffs levied by Japan and members of the European Economic Community.

"For Canada's part, of course, we have promised important reductions in tariff protection, and we have taken the occasion to improve and rationalize our tariff structure. Many firms which will find their tariff protection reduced will also find the cost of raw materials and components are being reduced at the same time."

Anguilla Invaded

LONDON (Reuters) — An armed force of about 30 uniformed men landed by boat on the eastern Caribbean island of Anguilla which recently rebelled against the central government of St. Kitts-Nevis-Anguilla, official sources here said Sunday.

There was no immediate official information on the purpose of the landing or the composition of the force. But a press report from the area said it was an attempt by the St. Kitts government to crush the revolt.

Anguilla declared itself independent of the central authority May 31 and armed islanders evicted a 11-man police force from St. Kitts which was stationed there.

Tre three-island group was given internal self-government as a state associated with British in February.

Guard Thought Killed in Fire

VINELAND, Ont. (CP) — A 30-year-old security guard believed to have been killed in a million - dollar fire that destroyed most of Provincial Garden Centre near this Niagara Peninsula community Friday night.

John Healey, 60, was last seen in the kitchen area of the store minutes before flames from the spreading fire drove other employees out.

Live Global Telecast Sparkles

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — History's first live global telecast —ranging from shrimp growers in Japan to the Beatles recording in London—came off stunningly Sunday despite Communist withdrawal.

Some highlights — dramatic because they were not filmed or taped but seen while happening:

—Newborn babies cuddled by mamas in Japan, Denmark and Canada and one, umbilical cord still attached, suspended by a doctor in Mexico City.

—A muscular Wisconsin farmer machine - feeding his cattle while machines harvested his 80 acres of peas.

—The mechanical pens of an Australian radio - telescope recording signals from a quasar the announcer said was "10,000 million million million million miles away."

The program, Our World, spearheaded by the BBC, was carried in Canada by the CBC and in the U.S. by the National Educational Television network. Spokesmen say commercial networks in the U.S. declined it for reasons unknown.

Russia and her Communist allies withdrew Wednesday from the telecast to protest "Israeli aggression," leaving what U.S. moderator Fred Niven called "some empty chairs in our global audience."

Russia was to have provided one of the four communications satellites for the hookup, but most views came through with remarkable clarity via three U.S. satellites 22,000 miles out, plus thousands of miles of microwaves and landlines.

Twenty-six countries on five continents saw the program. Broadcasting organizations in 16 countries contributed segments.

Direct From Expo

The Northmount Junior High Band from Willowdale performed for Belleville yesterday afternoon at Zwick's Island. The band has just returned from an Expo performance and was sponsored by B.P.O.E. No. 99. Each of the 85 pieces in the band was well worth hearing.

Oh! For the Good Old Days!

On the "Butter-Ball" float in the Frankford centennial parade Saturday participants didn't have to shake the churn — the motion of the float was enough to make cheese. The parade, which began the day's events had over 50 floats and displays. The float above displayed costumes and utensils of the days gone by.

Singing Out Centennial

The Frankford Centennial Choir, organized from churches in the area and directed by Robert Savard gave an inspired performance on Saturday. The hour long concert was in the evening and made the highly successful day even more enjoyable. Frankford citizens are hoping the choir will not disband.

Frankford Celebrates Centennial

Citizens of Frankford and surrounding areas had a very full and enjoyable day on Saturday at Frankford's Centennial celebrations.

Events got under way at two o'clock in the gaily decorated streets with a parade of fifty displays and floats. The Clown Band from Belleville gave a half hour performance after the parade.

Speakers for the day were Lee Grills, MP for South Hastings, Warden William A. Shannon, Dr. Richard Foster, George Montgomery, Wilmot Rose and Reeve Ray Moran. Former Reeve Frank Rabel acted as master of ceremonies and William Chesher of the Frankford Legion was thanked by all for the work he and his helpers put in to organizing and executing the events for the day.

After the speakers, attention shifted to the Kiddy Races and the Beauty Contest held behind the Frankford Legion. Janice Rogers was the winner of the contest followed by Nancy Rouse — first runner-up and Carol Duncan — second runner-up. The judges for the contest were Mrs. W. H. Alexander, Bob Carleton and Kenneth Couch.

The day was brought to a close by an hour of entertainment by the Frankford Centennial Choir. The choir has been organized from all the churches in the area and is under the direction of Robert Savard. The performance was exceptional and a lot of people are looking to hear from the Centennial Choir again. A dance from 9 o'clock until midnight ended the highly successful day.

CARDS OF THANKS

IN MEMORIAM

LOCKWOOD — In loving memory of our dear grandson, Donald Lockwood, who passed away June 26, 1965.

Days of sadness still come your way,
Tears in secret often flow,
For memory keeps you ever near
dear.

Though you died three years ago,
Lovingly remembered by Nancy and Grandpa Bob Lockwood.

LOCKWOOD — In loving memory of our dear nephew James Lockwood, who passed away June 26, 1965.

He was a flower too sweet for earth,
God needed him,
So he took him in his arms
And took him with a smile.
Lovingly remembered by aunt Joyce and uncle Pete and family.

LOCKWOOD — In loving memory of our dear son, Donald Lockwood, who passed away three years ago today, June 26, 1965.

Sadly missed and always remembered by mother and our hearts keep.
Lovingly remembered by Daddy and Mommy.

LOCKWOOD — In loving memory of our dear grandson, Donald Lockwood, 3 years ago today, June 26, 1965.

Dear Donald to be with us again,
Secure in our Father's care,
And let those who love you best
Never stop remembering you.
Lovingly remembered by aunt Kay, uncle Jim and family.

REDNES — In loving memory of our dear husband and father, James C. Redner, who passed away June 26, 1964.

Light is from our household gone,
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.
Some may thank you are forgotten,
Though on earth you are no more,
But in memory you're with us
As you always were before.
—Always remembered by wife Florence and son Donald.

SHARPE — In loving memory of a very dear Mother, Ruby Sharpe, who passed away in the Belleville General Hospital on 26th June, 1965.

Peacefully sleeping, resting at last,
The world's weary troubles and cares are past.
In silence she suffered, in patience she bore,
Till God called her to Heaven to suffer no more.
—Lovingly remembered by daughter Pauline.

A strong wind assisted the flames which completely destroyed a barn containing race horses and equipment. The barn was owned by Jack Parrott and was uninsured.

Ten Race Horses Evacuated From Blazing Barn

A barn owned by Jack Parrott, on Highway 2 west of the Country Club was completely destroyed Sunday when a stiff wind fanned a blaze and burned the structure to the ground.

The barn contained about $1,000 worth of race horse equipment owned by Colbourne Hess, a race horse owner.

Fire department officials say that the barn was completely uninsured.

Ten horses worth about $1,000 each, were evacuated during the blaze by Roy Buchanan, Mr. Hess' trainer, and by a passerby, Martin Cooper.

"When the blaze began to get going, the horses began to panic," Mr. Cooper said later. "They wanted to go back into the stable."

While he and Mr. Buchanan were evacuating the horses, they were aware that the ceiling was about to fall in.

No one saw the fire start. According to Mr. Buchanan it was well under way when he entered the barn. "It was extremely hot and I couldn't see. For a while I didn't think I could get any of the horses out of the barn."

The same barn burst into flames again, but firemen quickly quelled the blaze before any more damage was done.

Happy Days Are Here Again

Merchants in the Upper Bridge Street area expressed happiness today as the former two-way traffic pattern went back into effect. With the change Eastbound traffic along Station Street is again permitted to continue down Front Street instead of being forced to cross bridge.

Local Traffic Pattern in Upper Bridge Area Is Again Back to Normal

After eight months of one-way streets and other special conditions introduced last September to co-incide with the construction start on the new College Street bridge, the traffic pattern in the Upper Bridge area today is back to normal.

Yesterday city public works brews took down the special one way street signs, removed the traffic island and changed the lights in the Upper bridge area.

Then after new traffic lines were painted and the new lights were in operation, the former traffic patterns again went into affect.

And with the change back the feelings of area merchants were immediately brightened.

"We are very happy this morning," stated William Rowland at Tompler's Flower Shop. Mr. Rowland said things look a whole better without the former snow fence lane divider which he claimed was "unsightly" and had cut off the view of his flower shop.

The snow fence lane divider had been termed by city council as a "snakes and ladders" game, while merchants protested the one-way traffic pattern had cost them loss in business.

To make the changeback possible, lights at the corner of Hereist and North Front Streets were removed, and the location of other traffic lights at the top of Pinnacle Street were changed.

The island on Station street between Pinnacle and Front streets will remain but has been moved to the north to allow two lanes of eastbound traffic from the Upper Bridge.

Lights will continue to control traffic movement at the intersection of Pinnacle and Station but right hand traffic over the bridge from Station street will be allowed to continue without a stop.

To make the continuous right turn possible onto the bridge, there will be no pedestrian crosswalk at the south end of the bridge.

One of the main features of the changeback is that westbound traffic along Station street is again able to continue down Front Street.

But one precaution — that green arrow allowing continuous traffic over the bridge is for turning traffic only.

John Segar and Wally Lavergne of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club will represent this district in the Provincial playdowns for doubles after their hard-fought win in the district playoffs staged at the local club on Sunday afternoon and evening. There were nine rinks entered, five from Kingston, three from Belleville and one from Campbellford and the winners were forced to play four 15-end games to emerge the winners. It was a knockout draw and the winners were required to play a preliminary game to even the draw.

In the preliminary game, Segar and Lavergne defeated J. Dubin and C. Wickens of Campbellford 20-3 and in the first draw they defeated a Belleville pair of Jack Avery and Orlo Smith by 20-12. Bruce Miller and Jerry Hyde of the local club won over Paul Gagnon and Gilbert McCormick of Kingston, 13-8 while Bill Duncan Jr. and Dick Edney of Kingston defeated another Kingston pair of George Tulloch and George Martin by 15-6. In the other game of the first draw, R. Muir and Jim Taylor of Kingston defeated Bob and Don Bruce also of Kingston, 16-4.

In the second draw the winners of the playoffs took on Bruce Miller and "Jerry" Hyde and emerged on top 12-11. This was a close tough game with the leadership changing hands at almost every end. In the other half of the draw, Bill Duncan and Dick Edney disposed of R. Muir and Jim Taylor by a 15-4 count.

The final game between Edney and Lavergne was a real thriller and Edney had a one-shot lead going into the last end but the local pair scored a couple of shots to win 15-14.

The singles competition for district honors will be played next Sunday.

Historic Float Wins Award

Ameliasburg Twp. Has Big Day

AMELIASBURG — The centennial spotlight was on this village on Saturday.

And in spite of threatening rain at parade time local people and visitors from neighboring communities turned out by the hundreds for the occasion. When the colorful mile long procession got underway from the Keeta school grounds the normally quiet rural atmosphere had changed to an enthusiastic scene of town-and proportion

Described by Reeve George Cunningham as the biggest event in the village's more than 200 years of historic background the undertaking presented by the township centennial committee prompted praise from all of the dignitaries in attendance.

All of the float entries in the parade were outstanding examples of creative achievement. Numerous western horses and smaller ponies added more crowd appeal to the official presentation. Belleville's navy cadet corps band and the Quinte Highland Pipe Band supplied the marching music.

When the parade judges decisions were announced it seemed both fitting and appropriate they had chosen the township building inspector's float the best all - round entry. Harry Bisdee a carpenter by trade, had fashioned a miniature of the original Robin Mills, which stood in the village before Confederation and in recent years was moved to Pioneer Village near Toronto as a showpiece for the Conservation authority. The prize for the best float went to the Redeerville Womens Institute for a washday scene.

The celebration was climaxed by a western music jamboree in the township hall in the evening.

Legs Broken In Accident

TRENTON — An elderly local resident badly injured in a traffic accident on Saturday night is in Trenton Memorial Hospital today.

Police said Gilbert Whitney, 71, of 73 Scott Street suffered two broken legs and head lacerations when he walked from behind a moving car into the path of an eastbound car on Dundas street east near the Campbell street intersection. The driver of the car was Brian Williams of Trenton.

An American Tragedy

In a recent Commons debate Prince Edward-Lennox MP Douglas Alkenbrack termed the story of the North American Indian "one of the greatest tragedies in modern history."

Mr. Alkenbrack was one of the parliamentary delegation which visited the Arctic regions and studied at first hand the way of life of the Indian and Eskimo inhabitants. Some progress toward a better life for these people was noted, but other disheartening factors, such as alcoholism, pose difficulties.

"The Indians at Churchill are in a very poor state," the Picton MP noted. "When we visited their village, their low standard of living, which is largely self-inflicted, was evident. We went up a road flanked on either side by what once were neat and comfortably-built government houses. These houses were recently-built. They did not appear to be much over fifty years old. I did not see one house in which the windows were intact. This village was a real slum. It is a disgrace, not necessarily to the natives, but to us, the people of Canada and to those who sit in this chamber and endeavor to administrate."

He went on, "The chief of that tribe apologized because of the broken windows in his house. He said that he did not break them but that they were done by the younger generation who, since the tribe left the bush five years ago, had no respect for tribal authority."

Mr. Alkenbrack said he could see a parallel in this in relation to the younger generation in other parts of Canada. "These young people," he said, "will no longer respect civil or tribal authority."

The member acknowledged the government had moved to correct this situation by moving the village to a point outside the town, but the question remains to what extent are such conditions being duplicated in other areas where Indians live? The Indians are the forgotten peoples of this land and how they are to recover their former dignity and find a place for themselves amid European society is one of the unsolved sociological problems of our day.

It is as the outspoken Kahn-Tineta Horn put it recently in an address at the International Night meeting of Oshawa Kinsmen, "I do feel sure that we are interested in solving this problem of the Indian rules somewhere in the back of your conscience. Don't be hurried or worried. There is no rush. We have been here 20,000 years . . ."

But it was the point together at which it was interesting if you realized that we lived in this country in a certain manner, with certain motivation and culture which bears no relation to yours."

Wherever she goes Miss Horn is very prone to shock her audiences. And her address in Oshawa was no exception. But behind it all is a positive desire to get Canadians thinking about how they can help the Indians to a better future after years of indifference and exploitation. She suggested the means of helping Indians to support themselves lay in protecting Indian lands, developing Indian communities, better medical care, improved housing and education.

The same general theme is presented by the Indian pavilion at Expo. Canadians at large may not like it, being unwilling to accept any responsibility for the destruction of Indian society; and that is an indication that they really have not given the matter much thought. They should know it is the nation's collective responsibility to help the Indians work toward a better future for themselves in the country they have inhabited for so long.

Queen Sirikit

Thailand's day at Expo was one to remember, not only because it focussed attention on this interesting land of the Orient but because of the presence of the exquisite Queen Sirikit.

Here is what The Montreal Gazette said of the royal visitor to the Thailand Day ceremonies: "In repose the Queen of Thailand looked perfect — almost too perfect to be real. Her black chignon was flawlessly coiled, her creamy face was expertly made-up and her rich purple-blue Thai ensemble was creaseless. The movements of tiny hands with their long platinum nails were controlled and when standing or sitting her back was ramrod straight. But the moment Queen Sirikit smiled yesterday the image shattered. The too perfect picture became a warm, attractive, very alive and beautiful woman."

And there too was her husband, King Bhumidol, who gives the impression of a very serious young man. Yet he too unwinds now and then — as a jazz musician of all people. Yes, the King of Siam belts out a mean beat, so they say.

Credit Cards Get Into Wrong Hands

Christian Science Monitor

With over 200 million credit cards now in the hands of the American people, there has grown up a thriving black market in stolen cards. It is estimated that in 1946 alone, 200,000 cards were stolen. The annual loss to retailers and card-issuers is put at more than $20,000,000.

Efforts by banks and companies to track down and prevent such card abuse are hampered by inadequate legislation and by failure to develop foolproof cards.

The need for specific laws to combat fraudulent use of these cards is urged. All 50 states legislatures should enact a law providing criminal penalties for the unauthorized possession or use of credit cards. A model state law already exists and ought to be used as a guide.

Just as more states are adopting tamper-proof drivers licenses bearing information enabling officers to make a positively foolproof identification check, even so it is to the self-interest of the companies to lose no time in developing credit cards bearing the kind of information which can be electronically checked to protect against fraudulent use.

When fraud is made more difficult and prosecution and conviction more likely, this flourishing racket will cease to flourish.

Wildlife Dying Out

Ontario Naturalist

There appears to be little opportunity in Ontario for the conservation failure. The extinction of this magnificent bird is one of the prices we may pay for "progress."

The peregrine falcon nested, in suitable situation, over much of the province—especially in the Lakehead area. Along the full extent of the Niagara Escarpment, and in a belt through the Haliburton-Muskoka region.

This powerful hawk is one of the swiftest birds in the world. In a dive pursuing prey it has been timed at speeds up to 180 miles per hour. It is capable of catching flying prey with ease. The peregrin's food is almost entirely made up of other kinds of birds and this may be the key to its dramatic decline.

There is increasing evidence that reproductive failures in some of the carnivora including the peregrine, may be associated with the intake of pesticides biologically concentrated as a result of being passed along in the food chain. According to Dr. G. M. Woodwell, of the Brookhaven National Laboratory, "Pesticide residues have now accumulated to levels that are catastrophic for certain animal populations, particularly carnivorous birds."

The peregrine falcon is not the only "endangered species" in Ontario. The bald eagle and osprey have also sharply declined.

The piping plover, a bird of lonely, wild beaches, may be a victim of the population explosion. The little shorebird was once found nesting along many of our sandy lakeshores, including Wasaga Beach, Toronto Island, Point Pelee and Hurlington Beach. Now it is rarely found in Ontario — one of its breeding areas for a few years, Point Beach on Lake Erie. Its numbers there have been reduced from an estimated 100 pairs in 1919 to only seven pairs in 1936.

The timber rattlesnake, in spite of the fact that parts of its former ranges appear to be sufficiently rugged and unsettled to afford sanctuary for at least a skeleton population, apparently has been wiped out in Ontario. It formerly ranged along the limestone cut-crops along the shores of Manitoulin District.

The mocquito fern, Azolla caroliniana, reported in the late 1800s from the "Beach" at Hamilton has not been seen or collected recently, and is probably now extinct.

The yellow-fringed orchis, Habenaria ciliaris, once found in Essex County is now considered to be extinct in our province.

The four-leaved milkweed, Asclepias quadrifolia, and the lacurance iris, Iris brevicaulis, are other "endangered species" in the plant world.

The Atlantic salmon was once so common in Lake Ontario that settlers were paid for their land by spearing and selling the salmon — they disappeared about 1880.

The passenger pigeon, now extinct, once occurred in prodigious numbers in southern Ontario — the last record was two seen on May 18,1902. The wild turkey was plentiful in the hardwood forests of southern Ontario — its final extirpation was near the end of the 19th century.

The Federation of Ontario Naturalists recognizes that changes are inevitable. It declares, however, that degradation of the landscape, destruction of wildlife, fouling of the atmosphere and the polluting of our waters must be by-products of progress.

Ontario, as we used to know it is vanishing before our eyes. Today it is the peregrine falcon that is on the verge of extinction — tomorrow it may be a species of vital economic importance to man, and not to himself. Surely we should take heed of the warning.

No government can proclaim a passenger pigeon or a peregrine falcon.

No bond issue can ordain an orchid.

We cannot create the natural world — we simply can use it wisely.

Home Truths From Fiery Miss Horn

Few Indians will ever tell you how they feel, even if they could express themselves. Few Indians trust you at all to tell you anything. I am an Indian who speaks the truth because I am an Iroquois, and we have a long tradition of truth speaking. We have no word in our language for a lie.

I have heard it said that they will rewrite the history books to suit themselves. Well, why? The history books tell how the Iroquois were slaughtered when they came up Lakeshore in defense of the French and how they did not surrender when they captured the French and the Hurons?

So far the lies in the history books make them good for one purpose—to light a fire on a cold night, and if they cover years that law about hate literature it is my intention to use the lies of your history books to have your officials of the Department of Education arrested on the spot. — Miss Kahn-Tineta Horn of the Six Nations Iroquois Confederacy, Caughnawaga, P.Q., in an address at Oshawa Kinsmen Club's International Night.

Mower Hazard

Salt Lake City Desert News

The roar of the power mower sounds loud and clear in the land again as the annual battle to keep the fast-growing grass within the bounds of neatness starts all over again. So the annual campaign to save fingers and toes.

Common sense is needed in the operation of power mowers. Last year 90,000 persons in the U.S. were injured in grass-cutting accidents. Therefore, we reiterate the safety council's suggestions to:

Don't unclog or refuel mower when running or hot.

Don't pull mower backwards. Mow hills back and forth rather than up and down.

Be alert at all times and never leave running mower unattended.

Iceland's Volcanic Aspect

UNESCO Features

Geologist and astrophysicists from university research groups in Britain, led by a meteorologist, Mr. John Marsh, are leaving for Iceland in July to explore remote volcanic craters which some scientists believe were formed in the same way as craters on the surface of the moon. They hope to bring back samples of Paleobee lava, thought to be similar to some of the rock-like substances on the moon.

The samples will be brought back for analysis by the lunar research group of London University's observatory, where a team is studying various materials in an attempt to simulate the materials on the moon.

June 26, 1867 . . .

Governor John F. Digital pardoned three suspected anarchists 74 years ago today—in 1893—who had been sentenced seven years before after a bomb-throwing incident in which seven Chicago policemen were killed. Altgeld was convinced their trial had been rigged and the jury packed, and wrote an 18,000-word brief explaining why. However, popular feeling against radicals was against him and the pardon marked his political career.

"Progress" Threatens World of Nature

Gypsies Cling To Independent Ways

Windsor Star

In the supposed march of civilization, those who dare to swim against the stream are becoming more and more courageous, more and more admired, and less and less intolerant. Witness the gypsies.

An international band, the gypsies prefer a wandering, free life, unburdened by any more possessions than they can conveniently carry with them, working when they feel like working, resting when they feel like resting. They want to run their own lives, free of interference from anyone, be he policeman, tax collector, or officious busybody. When they want help, they seek it in time-honored gypsy fashion. They don't trust help thrust upon them.

Gypsies ideally lead a casual reasonably comfortable, and probably unworried life. And they are made to pay for it.

Not only does the policeman think that gypsies should obey every law, and the tax collector think that gypsies should account for every cent they make. Bureaucracy everywhere has more and more taken the view that the gypsies should have forced on them those benefits of organized society so eagerly sought after, and so dearly cherished, by average citizens.

Thus gypsies everywhere are being given—or forced to take, if they do not accept the gift willingly—such things as housing, pensions, insurance plans, training for work for and education to understand such things.

To their carnal credit, the gypsies are quietly rebelling against being forced to follow progress.

In Britain, gypsies have refused to be settled in areas set aside for them, and the British Government is taking a second look at the problem. And in a Communist country, Czechoslovakia, they have waged a successful passive resistance to the all-powerful bureaucracy.

An ambitious and sadly Czech plan for "gypsy rehabilitation" has been pronounced a failure, and in the language of the bureaucrat, the gypsy situation "continues to deteriorate."

What is deterioration to a social planner is life to a gypsy. If deterioration means resistance to conformity, refusal to knuckle under to the mob, or insistence on swimming against the stream, long may the gypsies continue to deteriorate.

Thoughts on Expo

The Czechs, Craftsmanship and Children

Ottawa Journal

Another "repeater" tells us her sure "cocktail" revived in Expo is to go into one of the theme buildings and "give over the mind and body." For a while, she says, the assistica and the pictures confuse her, but as she follows the arrows of a conception begins to take form of men the producer, or the explorer, or the artist — "and one gets a sense of peace and calm and aim in what life is all about."

That's not all about life, but what life is all about. Expo's themes stress that we don't know all but that we are getting along. Says one theme sign: "We still know next to nothing about the brain." Another: "The brain absorbs an estimated million billion bits of information." But the theme people make it clear that we must be careful with what we know; after a procession of exhibits displaying man's technical abilities with computers and gadgets the mammoth Man enquires of us: "Do you think technology permits you to listen to the universe or prevents you from hearing yourself?"

But it isn't all so demanding. There's the succession of exhibits of Czechoslovakian pavilion, all taste and good manners, including the beckoning to join a specially boarteoning room: "The Child's world, a world so attractive it is a universe where the distinction between child and evil is always clearly made." Or, down the road these days at nights, there's Marlene Dietrich showing, beautifully, that age need not wither the heart and skill of a person who has always sought perfection in her own art.

"Craftsmanship" — said the Czech pavilion, "skilled application to traditional materials it has been cultivated from generation to generation." Craftsmanship is what Expo has given us as a whole, in concept and execution.

As we move into Summer man is going to find his world as Expo a little warm — which is the way of the world.

The islands themselves, with accommodation for any purse that's going, will be cooler than most any other place in the built-up.

But there will be more people crowding together into queues, pavilions, the best and worst places. And the natural phenomenon will be that the best pavilions, the best things and best eateries will be the most crowded. The word has gone around as to what's best, and as it continues to go round the pressure on the best will increase.

This is not a complaint. It is the fact of a wonderful success. No Expo planning could wisely have counted on a quarter of a million people turning out on a May, June weekday. But they do, and they will, and they'll be glad they did. Those who fit and financially sound, decide to stay home in comfort will, so to speak, be out of this world. That they won't know it is beside the point.

The "pressure" visitor tells us he has found a sure cure for Expo fatigue. If the boulevards, feadure and pavilions start to weary the flesh and mind he sits right down on the nearest bench or grass or bench and watches the world go by.

"Watch their faces," he says, "the mixture of exhaustion and delight, of wonder and hard work; watch especially the mothers and fathers carrying on or being urged by their children. It is a great stirring, a bustling effort to see the world though it kills them. In no time at all you're up and in the stream again."

Murder Hearing Opens

Shirlette R. C. Jackson today began taking testimony on a charge of capital murder against Kinsley Wilmot Scott, 37, of Maynooth.

Scott is charged in the May 7 shooting death of his wife, Doreen, 33, outside the couple's home on Highway 62, a mile south of Maynooth.

The preliminary hearing which opened this morning in Belleville is expected to last two days before Magistrate Jackson if there is sufficient evidence to send Scott on trial.

Crown Attorney John Pringle said he would call 12 witnesses to testify for the prosecution.

Scott sat quietly in the dock behind defence counsel Robert Temple as the first of the witnesses were called this morning.

By noon, when the court adjourned for lunch, the magistrate had taken testimony from five people — mostly medical and police experts — on phases of the investigation surrounding the murder charge.

Close to 70 exhibits — mainly by photographs — had been produced, among them a 30-30 calibre Winchester rifle and bullet fragments.

Joanne McNevin Top Winner At Kingston

Joanne McNevin and her registered quarter horse, King's Crystal, journeyed to the Kingston Community Centre over the weekend to take part in the horse show sponsored by the Kiwanis Club and came home loaded with trophies and the honor of being the top winner in the show. She won the trophy donated by the Kingston Rexsky Company for owning the top games horse.

In the three shows that were held Saturday night and Sunday afternoon and evening Miss McNevin competed in 12 events and placed first in nine of them, and had one second. The events included key-hole, flag, barrel and pick-up races. The rodeo also had bronco riding, bull riding and milking of wild cows. There was a large attendance at each show.

Although an accomplished horsewoman, Miss McNevin has one of the top quarter horses in Canada to ride. The horse seems to sense every movement of the rider and has a terrific sense of balance on the sharp turns required for all types of racing.

Young Railroader

Who says all the glamor disappeared from railroading? At least not this youngster who was a ready volunteer to assist in track moving during Saturday's "operation railroad". Picture shows how old steamer was moving along Bay Bridge Road.

Already A Park Showpiece

The vintage steam locomotive, loaned to the city by CN, is already a big attraction at Zwick's Island Centennial Park following Saturday's big moving job. Transferring the old locomotive to the park was an all-day job Saturday, the moving operation being watched by hundreds of spectators.

CN Engine Placed

"Operation Railroad" Complete Success

Saturday's "Operation Railroad" — which saw a big 125-ton CN steam locomotive moved to Zwick's Island Centennial Park as a museum showpiece, was a 100 percent success.

The job of moving the vintage freight locomotive to its final resting place on the park was completed well inside of 12 hours and Mayor Jack Ellis called the whole operation one of complete co-operation.

"It was a fine example of everyone knowing exactly what he was doing," said the mayor.

The actual "lift-off" of the locomotive at the CPR - Bay Bridge Road crossing was made about 8:00 a.m. Saturday and shortly after 5:00 the old engine had been placed on its pad at the south end of Zwick's Island Park.

The engine was lifted from the rails by two of Wilson Concrete Products 100 cranes and then 150 feet at a time the locomotive was inched along the shoulder of Bay Bridge Road on five track sections especially prepared for the job.

When the engine was moved ahead the track sections were moved ahead of the engine and the entire process repeated all over again.

During the day thousands of people saw the moving operation and dozens of youngsters visualized themselves railroaders as they watched the proceedings.

Approximately 30 men, including railway section crews, Wilson Concrete crewmen and drivers, CPR employees and city workers took part in the moving job.

Mayor Ellis called the moving job a $3,000 operation if all the services had to be paid for.

Today CN workers were expected to complete the job of tidying up the old locomotive — such as replacing tie-rods and still missing engine parts.

But already the old engine is beginning to serve the purpose for which it was intended.

The locomotive had hardly been pushed into place before the youngsters were swarming all over the place.

A "no trespassing" sign was hastily wired into place but the youngsters were unmindful and all day Sunday the old locomotive continued to get a close up inspection.

There Will Be Dancing At CFB Trenton Tonight

One Arrested After Man Beaten

One man has been charged and warrants have been issued for three others, after a man and woman were beaten early Sunday on a sideroad near Bayside.

In custody is 21-year-old David Willshire, of R.R. 1, Holloway.

Provincial police said he was being held under Criminal Code charges but would not elaborate.

Officers said the incident occurred about 5.30 a.m. on Sunday on the Aiken's sideroad, about a mile north of Bayside.

They said Joseph Gould, 38, son of the owner of Gould's Taxi service, Trenton, had parked on the road with his female companion when they were suddenly set upon by four men and beaten.

Police did not give any other details.

Cessna Takes Islander On Jaunts From Home

MONTREAL (CP) — Mary Pomeroy set out from her West Indies home aboard her Cessna 302 aircraft on a 2,300-mile jaunt to Montreal. She wanted to see the Royal Ballet's Paradise Lost at Place des Arts.

She almost didn't make it.

"We ran into a terrific storm over North Carolina that threw off all my instruments and left us tossing about for an hour and a half not knowing where we were," Mrs. Pomeroy said. "I went down through the first cap I saw and the only place was a bean field.

"I had it made, too, until we ran into a ditch. I wasn't hurt but the plane's prop was bent and it took me two days to get another."

But she arrived in Montreal in plenty of time to catch the performance.

It was the first time she and The Broomstick, as she calls her aircraft, had been in trouble in their seven years together.

She bought the plane in 1960 because, she said, even in an island paradise like Nevis, the small, white - beached island near Antigua where she lives, one gets claustrophobia after a time.

"It helps considerably if you know you can get away when you want to. Now I'd sell my plantation before I'd sell my plane."

Mrs. Pomeroy got tired of life in her native Malta and in 1942 bought out the historic Nisbet Plantation where Lord Nelson courted his wife, Fanny Nisbet.

She went in for fruit and vegetable farming on the plantation first, but succeeded in flooding the local market with her modern farming techniques. This raised certain problems.

"I was disturbing the native way of life, you see. They were raising enough for themselves and selling what else they had at exorbitant prices and I would have put them out of business."

So in 1953 she went into the tourist business.

"I had two guests the first year," said the twice-divorced Mrs. Pomeroy. "Now I have room for 20 and I'm not going to get any bigger. I couldn't handle any more by myself."

She uses her plans to pick up guests at the larger islands because, she said, the local airlines don't always observe their schedules and boats come into Nevis only once a day. She is also frequently employed as a pilot by writers visiting the area on assignment.

"I get lots of writers and lawyers and psychologists who need a quiet, not too hot place to write their papers."

Alec Waugh wrote Island in the Sun while a guest at her hotel. Visiting television notables have included Gerald Lascelles Kay and James Francisco of the Novak fame.

An unusual feature of the hotel is that it has no bar.

"We've got plenty to drink, but I don't believe having a formal bar and barmaid. I just tell my guests to help themselves to what they want. Liquor's as cheap it works out to less than having a barman anyway."

All Classes Have Reason For Dancing

OTTAWA (CP)—Even dancing a wild frug or twist, you're not safe from sociologists who want to find out how you tick.

A study done by Harvard University researchers, reported in Canada's Mental Health magazine, shows that lower, middle and upper class dancers have their own separate devices and zones for breaking out their dancing gear.

At a working class hop, sociologists noted the man takes the lead in the talking and the dancing. The people "communicate more by touch than words." A specific sexual invitation was implied in the invitation to dance, which was then accepted or rejected by the female.

In the middle class, it's the woman who wants to dance and drags her man to the floor. The women said they felt alone in a dream world when they were dancing. Researchers felt this reflected an ambivalent sexual attitude. "She throws out an invitation, then retreats into her own private world."

Real dancers were just doing it to be polite. It was something to do with their feet. Women said "it's a nice thing to do at a party." Men said they were "very tired."

MR. AND MRS. GARY DOUGLAS BASSETT

Bassett — Peters

Our Lady of Mercy Church, Bancroft, was the scene June 17, 1967, at 11.30 a.m., of the marriage of Katherine Mary (Karen) daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Murray Peters, R.R. 2, Bancroft and Gary Douglas Bassett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Bassett, R. R. 2, Bellevilie. Rev. H. Mahoney officiated and the organist, Sister Mary Harold, accompanied the singing of the church choir.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length white lace gown with Empire waistline and long lily-point sleeves. The scoop neckline and train falling from the shoulders were edged in French lace. A matching lace banding trim band held her three-tiered veil and she carried a white orchid surrounded by pink roses.

The attendants were Miss Joan Peters, sister of the bride, as maid of honor, Miss Sharon Loggden and Miss Dionysia Peters. All wore blue pole de sole Empire waisted gowns with white accessories and carried bouquets of pink roses and white carnations. Miss Maria Blank, cousin of the bride, was flower girl. She wore a white peau de sole Empire waisted dress edged with French lace and carried a basket of pink roses and white carnations.

Paul McIntyre attended the bridegroom and the ushers were Richard McQould and John Morton.

VIOLENCE ERUPTS

BOLZANO, Italy (AP)—Land mines believed buried by pro-Austrian terrorists killed three Italian soldiers and badly injured a fourth Sunday in a new outbreak of violence in the Alto Adige (South Tyrol), police reported. The explosions were certain to cause a new upsurge of tension between Italy and Austria, over the former Austrian territory ceded to Italy after the First World War.

DENARD — HAMMETT

Eastminster Church, Belleville was the scene June 24, 1967 at 4 p.m. of the marriage of Linda Ann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Hammett, Bellevile, and Richard Manley Denard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Manley Denard, Belleville. Rev. A. McDowell was the officiating minister.

The bride was attired in a white yverience cocktail-length dress with a shoulder veil falling from a pillbox hat. Her accessories were white and she wore a corsage of red roses.

Vincent Woods attended the bridegroom.

DUNNING — CAMPBELL

St. Alban's Church, Adolphustown, Ontario, was the scene recently of a quiet wedding, when Miss Ruth Margaret daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vince Dunning, 173 Pine Street, Belleville, became the bride of Stephen Edward Dunning, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Dunning, Adolphustown, and the late Mrs. Dunning.

The ceremony was performed by the bridegroom's father, Rev. Dunning.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length white gown with Empire waistline and long lily-point sleeves. The scoop neckline and train falling from the shoulders were edged in French lace. A matching lace banding trim band held her three-tiered veil and she carried a white orchid surrounded by pink roses.

The attendants were Miss Joan Peters, sister of the bride, as maid of honor, Miss Sharon Loggden and Miss Dionysia Peters. All wore blue pole de soie Empire waisted gowns with white accessories and carried bouquets of pink roses and white carnations. Miss Maria Blank, cousin of the bride, was flower girl. She wore a white peau de soie Empire waisted dress edged with French lace and carried a basket of pink roses and white carnations.

Paul McIntyre attended the bridegroom and the ushers were Richard McQould and John Morton.

Women's Institutes

Curators of Trent Valley Arts Women's Institutes met at O'Hara's Mill for a picnic June 21. The event was in charge of Mrs. Ralph Carscallen Tweedsmuir curator.

Mrs. Sills arranged the entertainment and awarded prizes to Mrs. Christie of Nephton, who came the greatest distance, Mrs. Mac Vohes for the food made from the oldest recipe and Mrs. Roy Rush for the best entertainment.

The 25 women in attendance toured the mill and old house and viewed Tweedsmuir histories compiled by the curators.

HUMANITARIAN AWARD

DETROIT (AP) — External Affairs Minister Paul Martin of Canada Sunday was awarded the Humanitarian Award given by District 6 of the B'nai B'rith. Herbert Gray, member of Parliament for Essex West, accepted the award on behalf of the minister who was with the Canadian delegation at the United Nations. Mr. Martin represents Essex East in Parliament.

Two Years of Grief Wasted, Husband Alive

LONDON (CP)—The Sunday newspaper: The People says a pretty young wife has learned after two years of grief were wasted—her husband is alive.

Sheila Clarke, 23, and her two children have lived with the memory of Phillip Clarke as a dead husband and father.

Mrs. Clarke wept in disbelief Saturday when she was told Phillip is living in Wolverhampton and had planned a new life for himself in Canada.

A West Midlands police spokesman said merely a man had been interviewed in Wolverhampton in connection with the disappearance of Phillip Clarke two years ago.

The People says that in Wolverhampton, Clarke, 33, a sickness benefice, lived quietly and recently applied to the Canadian immigration authorities in Birmingham. He noted on the immigration papers his Shefield University qualifications.

Immigration officials checked these with university authorities, who got in touch with police. The People says Canadian immigration officials could not be reached Sunday for comment.

"If it is Phillip then the possibility is too horrible to contemplate," Mrs. Clarke's quoted as saying. "How could he do such a thing to the children. They still talk about him every day and look at his photograph. I am a one-man woman and I loved him. . . I still do and I still want him back."

Unionists Want Word Sex In Human Rights Codes

TORONTO (CP) — Governments should insert the word sex in human rights codes to keep employers from discriminating against women, a conference of women trade unionists decided Saturday.

The conference, sponsored by the Ontario Federation of Labor, approved recommendations that human rights codes should prohibits there must be no discrimination because of color, creed, race or sex.

A total of 107 southern Ontario delegates representing 43 locals from 18 labor and five labor councils attended the conference. The delegates also suggested that the government-management provide day-care facilities and that a working mother should be allowed to deduct costs of her child's day care for income tax purposes.

An Ontario law forcing an employer to obtain a permit to female employees are working late night or overnight shifts and supply transportation if they work past midnight was criticized by some of the delegates.

The director of the Ontario department of labor women's bureau, Mrs. Mary Eberts, said female or male designation on a job keeps women from getting the same pay as men.

Lita - Rose Betcherman said many jobs are still classified as for men only or for women, even though physical strength is not a factor.

The conference was held to get ideas to submit to the royal commission inquiring into the status of women.

Hemlines Are Coming Down In New Paris Collections

PARIS (AP)—Hemlines are coming down in the new Paris collections for fall and winter. About an inch below the knee seems to be the consensus.

"Mine will be longer," says Carven. "Why freeze in winter."

"Hemlines can't get any shorter," says Se Rauch. "I'm dropping them."

Coco Chanel, who once got herself in trouble with the young swingers with a black at mini - skirt, says: "I'm against ugliness. I always think of the once-over a man gives a woman.

"Elegance is a harmony."

The collections will be shown next month. Paris fashion says that went a couple of inches above the knee seem determined to reverse the trend. Dior made a tentative move in that direction last year by lengthening coats.

Courreges thinks "it's time has come to search for better proportions." He feels, however, "calf length is best for petites with contemporary living."

Jen Pomarede, designer for Jacques Heim, will show two lengths. For daytime, he skims the knee cap. From cocktail time on he has a "surprise opening."

Gerard Pipart, designer for Nina Ricci, spreads his lengths around the block. For sports, he follows a traditional British look, below the knees. For afternoon they swing short, and for evening they are often irregular.

Not nothing has changed for Ted Lapidus. He's another offshoot of all Paris couturiers. He likes to be guns and says "both mothers and daughters will show kneecaps in a variety of hemlengths."

Other than the hemlines, the prospect for the new season is "more away from the Twiggy look and the tendency to silhouette and back to the feminine." Clothes will be cut to show the figure. Waists will be cinched and always belted, accentuating and showers of greyvers.

Dutch Scientist Claims Pill 'Affects Woman's Femininity'

LEYDEN, The Netherlands (AP) — The controversial pill "affects a woman's feminity", and makes her prematurely old, a Dutch scientist says.

Dr. J. G. DeFaves of Leyden University says in the Dutch Medical Science Journal that evidence points to the conclusion the pill makes women in a condition comparable to that after the menopause.

He described the effect of the pill as "creeping, subclinical, but radical."

"We must seriously ask ourselves," he says, "whether we should make use, without real cause, of a substance that, though frequently used, undermines nearly all the vital functions of the psychosomatic system."

He says the pill "leads to the disappearance of libido, quite clearly accelerates the ageing process, upsets the saltcrel balance, psychoneuroses, and affects the woman in her most essential characteristic — her femininity."

WHITE CANE CLUB PICNIC

The annual picnic of the White Cane Club was held at Zwicks's Island Saturday afternoon. Guests from Kingston were Edward Wheeler, field secretary, Mrs. Wheeler and Roy Lesperance, assistant field secretary.

A bean gamble contest, designed to get everyone into the swing of the afternoon's fun was won by Doris Lloyd. A game of guessing the length of a board was won by Ed Wardhaugh, who had the nearest measurement. In pitching horseshoes the winner for the men was Clarence Morris and for the women, Vi Wale. Mary Gregory and Mr. Lesperance were the winners of the bean bag game. Clarence Morris' team was over Vi Wells's team in the alphabet baseball game. Holly Hudson won the quilt in riddles and Ray Payne of Trenton won the spot contest.

Assisting were Mrs. Cecil Kellar, Mrs. Ted Mrs. Willard Bladd, Evan, McEwen and associate members of the White Cane Club, Mrs. Ella Hollins, Miss Myrtle Peck, Miss Laurie Towner, Tom Wardhaugh and Mr. E. Seldon.

GAMMA MU

A Girl of the Year party was held recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Murray on Gamma Mu Chapter of Kapi Sigma Phi activities until September.

Entertainment during the many varieties of Canadian dishes brought by the members. A number of fun games were played followed by a sing-along. The party was concluded with the table ceremonership of Mrs. Pat Belyea and the social committee.

Mrs. Alaneen Murray gave a short talk on what a Girl of the Year should be. She stated that for the first time since the custom was begun, this year there was a tie in the voting. The two winners of the award were Mrs. Marylea Hall and Mrs. Margaret Anderson. Each was presented with a silver cake server appropriately engraved. Both names are engraved on the silver cigarette box which is passed from winner to winner each year.

Lasting Love Is Improbable Until Girl Is at Least 18

Dear Dorit: Checking your list on the leaflet "What Is Love?". I have concluded that I do love 15½-19-year-old boy. Yet you told me that at the age of 15 it is impossible. You said we are obviously good friends, fairly mature, and that I should be interested in boys nearer my own age — all of which are true. Except I can't forget him.

(1) Love is not possessive — You said, "He is a flirt" and he is. But by flirting he will realize the real thing.

(2) Love is sympathetic — You said, "He pays you the compliment of confiding in you." We share things.

(3) Love is not jealous — I am happy to have him go out with others. As long as he remembers me I am glad.

(4) Love seeketh not her own — If I tried to confine him it would destroy us both. I agree with that.

(5) Love shows a willingness to trust — you said, "You can talk seriously about things which matter." This is true.

(6) Love is outgoing — Yesterday I helped him clean his car so he could take another girl to our prom.

At 15 I cannot be in love?

I agree with everything in your letter but that. Maybe he is not taking advantage of me by kissing me so often. Maybe he is enjoying it. After he is finished flirting, don't you suppose he will realize he loves me?

Then, when I am 25 and he is 28, we will meet each other on the street one day, get married and live happily ever after! — In Love

Dear Love: So your ten-year plan is to love yet let love. Don't you plan to do any flirting or side-stepping yourself?

I like your effort to analyze; but I'd say you are ignoring any possible chance that you will change. Also, you are influenced by your own desire to be in love.

Time will tell. Lasting love is highly improbable at 15. If it grows and improves — and he starts loving you (as shown by similar outgoing actions) — you might begin recognizing the Real Thing going both ways, at, say, 18 or 19.

Dear Dorit: I am five feet four, weighing 145 pounds. I have been on a diet for two months and lost only nine pounds, mostly from around my stomach.

How come my hips and calves don't go down more? I have been exercising regularly, and ride the bike about three miles per day. — Hard to Lose.

Dear H.T.L.: Do you want to be a shadow of your former self overnight? You're doing fine. An average loss of a pound or so a week is the way to stay healthy and good nourished while you reduce.

Include in the exercises a good hip roller. Also, remember that a loss of one-half inch from a calf measurement is as good as an inch and a half from the thighs... considering relative sizes.

Riding a bike is OK; just make a little allowance for muscle expansion. And keep on as you are doing.

Confidential to Childless Widow: How frugal you have been! To make a will is a must — or there'll be an even noisier row in the family. It won't hasten your death but help you relax and live longer.

Usually we have things in those who are closest to us emotionally, or to those relatives who will likely need it most, certainly leave a proportion to a worthy community cause as you suggest.

To save feelings, if you find that the one you most care about needs a Happy least, write him a letter explaining your thinking, to be opened upon your death. There is probably some personal treasure such a one would value more than cash.

We now have some understanding of why people act as they do. Write to Dorit about your particular human problem, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.

Ann Landers

Woman of 70 Longs For New Found Love

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a woman in my 70's but nobody would guess it. I have been married for over 40 years to a solid citizen whose interest in sex went dead about 10 years ago. His impotence was a relief to me because that part of our marriage was never satisfactory. We raised a nice family and I did my duty but there was very little excitement.

Last year we had our home remodeled. A man 12 years my junior worked here for one week. This may sound silly to you but we fell madly in love. We didn't do anything disgraceful but we did have a wonderful week together. We both knew it was a losing battle with partners and age against us, and he went out of my life as suddenly as he had come in.

I can't get this man out of my mind. I wake up at night longing for him while my poor husband is snoring in the next room. Isn't it crazy that I can't have peace in my old age? I keep wondering what my grandchildren would say if they knew about this.

Please tell me, Ann, am I the only woman my age with those lecont 7?You might call it sick, but it's real and it's something I have to live with. Can you bring this subject into the open for discussion? — YOUNG AT HEART.

DEAR HEART: Of course there are other women your age who are still interested in sex. But don't delude yourself into thinking you are in love — not in one week, lady.

Be glad you didn't do anything "disgraceful" because the price, in terms of guilt and shame would not have been worth it. Dream castles are fun to visit, Granny, but don't try to live in one.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 15-year-old boy who is trying awfully hard to get along with my parents. The trouble is, whenever we have a difference of opinion they take turns giving me a lecture. When my Mom runs out of breath my Dad starts in. If I try to explain my ideas they say, "Be quiet, we don't want any back talk."

Do you think it is best talk when a person wants to present his side of a disagreement? I don't yell or anything, I just make an attempt to speak, but they don't let me finish a sentence.

Please give your opinion. My folks always praise your column. Thank you. — A FRIEND IN NEED.

DEAR FRIEND: One of the essentials of a good relationship is the free exchange of ideas. Parents who talk with their children, rather than at them find that their ideas are more readily accepted. The ability to disagree without being disagreeable is the mark of a civilized person. All kids should be given the privilege of practicing the fine art of rebuttal.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The other afternoon I invited a friend of mine for a game of bridge. She said, "I'm sorry but I am going to a dog shower today." I said "A what?" She then explained that her neighbor had just bought a new dog and she was having a shower for him. Of course each guest is supposed to bring a gift. I have heard of some nutty things in my life but this beats them all.

What is wrong with a woman who would insult her friends by inviting them to a party for a dog? — MYSTIFIED.

DEAR MORT: This is probably her idea of something novel and imaginative. I'm not going to concern myself, however, as I was not invited. How about you?

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Rich Continental Meat Rolls Are A Boon to Freezer Owners

By MARY MOORE

These meat rolls will remind you of Roulades (given here Nov. 1963) if you have any European blood in your veins. It could be they are a North American copy. However they came from Ruth Wilson of the Regina Leader Post staff. I expect she added her own touches and now I have tampered with the recipe further. A dividend our freezer owners will welcome is their freezability.

CONTINENTAL MEAT ROLLS (serves 4 to 6)

1½ tsps. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
¼ tsp. accent
¼ tsp. meat tenderizer
¼ to ½ tsp. rosemary
4 or 5 strips side bacon cut in halves crosswise
3 or 3 large dill pickles sliced lengthwise wafer thin
One 10-oz. can mushroom stems and pieces
2 tbsps. flour
1 cup dairy sour cream
1 large Spanish onion sliced wafer thin

Cut excess fat from edge of round steak and remove it cut over low heat in large frying pan. Mix together in a cup the salt, pepper, accent, meat tenderizer and rosemary and spread half of this seasoning mixture over steak on board and pound it in with meat pounder or edge of strong saucer or rolling pin until meat is flattened and stretched to 1½ times its original area. Turn it over and pound in remaining seasonings. Cut meat into 8 or 10 meat strips 6" x 3". One each place a half strip of bacon and a thin lengthwise strip of dill pickle. Roll up and tie snugly with string. Sear and brown on all sides in rendered out fat in frying pan, with heat. Transfer to baking dish with lid. (Or if no lid you can use foil) Add sliced onion to pan and fry until limp and slightly brown. Remove beef fat scraps. Sprinkle flour over and stir it through the onion. Add mushroom stems and pieces and liquid and sour cream and stir in until somewhat thickened. Pour over meat rolls, cover, and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 1¼ hrs. (Note: These could be simmered covered on top of stove if necessary.) Remove string before serving on noodles or mashed potatoes or fluffy hot rice or with crusty French bread or rolls.

Ruth winds up by saying "the sauce gravy is scrumptious and rich!" I agree. Freezer owners could make this in freezer oven-proof casserole and cool and chill, freezer wrap and freeze. To serve, thaw and heat at 300 deg. Fahr. 1 to 1¼ hrs.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "The children are so hot and fussy I don't know what to do with them. They're especially difficult in the late afternoon."

Mother: "Bring your little boats and I'll fix a bubble bath. You can play in the tub and I'll manicure my nails in here."

A squid bath is both cooling and relaxing for small children on a hot summer's day. One precaution: Never leave them alone in the tub.

China Says Kosygin and LBJ Met to Arrange 'Vicious Deal'

TOKYO (AP) — China said Sunday that the summit meeting between U.S. President Johnson and Soviet Premier Kosygin was aimed at negotiating "a vicious deal" against China and communism.

The accusation was contained in a New China news agency broadcast giving Peking's interpretation on the Glassboro, N.J., talks.

"The Glassboro negotiations more bare-faced and comprehensive than ever—for a global American-Soviet deal were intended to enhance the anti-China, anti-Communist, anti-people and counter-revolutionary Washington — Moscow alliance and intensify the suppression of the surging revolutionary struggle of the people of the world," it said.

After the first round of talks, the agency said, "Kosygin indicated his eagerness to make a global deal with U.S. imperialism by telling the press: 'We have amassed such a great number of questions that we weren't able to go through them all today, which is why we have decided to meet again Sunday.'"

It came to the conclusion that "indications from various sources make it clear that in the bargaining Kosygin is actually getting near the conclusion of a vicious deal with Johnson."

Good Mechanic Hard to Find

By RAY STAPLEY

Time and again readers ask me how to go about locating a good, reliable mechanic. To line up a reliable repair shop offering personal service coupled with the ability to accurately diagnose the tricky mechanical problems that can arise in modern cars, is no easy task.

To keep maintenance costs at a minimum, it is essential that motorists put as much effort into selecting their "auto doctor" as they would a dentist or medical doctor. It is quite possible that in a lifetime we can wind up spending a lot more money on car repairs than we will with either our dentist or physician.

Don't just rush blindly into the first handy repair shop. Inquire around, ask your neighbors, friends and business acquaintances to recommend a man they have been dealing with long enough to prove his skill and integrity. The Better Business Bureau offers good advice when it says: "Before you invest . . . investigate".

The task of finding good mechanics is also shared by garage operators and was the primary reason I closed my own garage. In the last few years of operation, in desperation, I sometimes offered salesmen and delivery men a $200 reward if they could find me a good mechanic. The idea was to lure a man away from another garage with the offer of a better salary. This sometimes worked but the price was high and good men don't always stay with you.

It took years of my life every time a mechanic told me he was emigrating to the south or opening his own garage. Good men f re quently branch out for themselves and then too, they are faced with the same problem of locating reliable mechanics.

When advertising for help you usually end up hiring a mechanic on a "trial and error" basis. Some years ago I interviewed a man who had an excellent tool kit, had operated his own shop until it was expropriated, and he seemed quite promising. I put him to work on a wiring problem and after talking away for a couple of hours he told me he was in difficulty. I found, almost unbelievably, he had the licence plate light flashing together with the left parking light for a right hand turn signal.

He turned out to be an alcoholic who was also addicted to tranquilizers. I paid him off and it took my best mechanic three hours to straighten out the jungle of crossed wiring.

The problem of finding a reliable garage becomes more critical each year. Many mechanics are encouraged and resent being paid l e s s than technicians in other fields. In many instances they find that a simple job such as installing the left front wheel on the assembly line is more lucrative, and are leaving their trade which took them many years to learn.

Usually, an established shop coupled with familiar faces, cleanliness, organization, courtesy and good equipment is a yardstick of the garage's reliability. But remember, it may be necessary to dedicate much time and effort to locate such a garage.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, MONDAY, JUNE 26, 1967

By Geo. H. Carver
Sports Editor

They're said to be the greatest thing softball comedy-wise since the laugh was invented.

The California Cuties, a galaxy of guys masquerading as gals, fans the popular sport into a gaggle of giggles but at the same time can turn on the professional heat if the situation demands.

The woods are full of softball players — and good ones — but few of them are as entertaining as the Cuties who take the field dressed in feminine attire. They then proceed to demonstrate how the game should NOT be played.

The Belleville Lumbanks, whose exclusive beat the slightest resemblance to Fort Knox will host the Cuties at the Fair Grounds tomorrow night and if it is hoped a large crowd of laugh-hungry fans will be in the stands.

The Cuties who have been frolicking all over the United States, Canada and in foreign climes are a screwball softball squad, proving that the "diamond is a girl's best friend."

As was noted the Cuties are really guys but they're dolls. They rig themselves in bathing boots, bows and furbelows and with blonde "wigs" curlers and fake eyelashes flopping, they play a wing-ding of a game of softball that pictures everybody — the hard-nosed fans who want fast action and the ticklish set who want a laugh a minute.

Despite their giggly girl get-up they are polished softball players and usually win the games they play against local teams. They play hard serious softball for the first three innings, when Trixie Frisbee who is the owner and plays in a black lace dress, pearl beads. "Then we pull out all the stops and cut up to give the crowd as good a show as Bill Veeck ever did."

The players roster includes a pint-sized fielder "Bashful" (see page 3 for elsewhere) who's thirty inches high but ten feet tall when it comes to fighting the umpires.

And there are other favorites such as "Scraggy Maggie" and "Plank Face", and "Dumpy Dora" and "Sidnaia Minnie." Named like the hurricanes, are other girls who liker up galore of laughter with their dimmed gladshow.

Other players are Leaping Lena, Minnie the Mouse, Lena Lane, Hattie the Tramp, Hetty Heinz, Lotta Fanny and Julie the Hiffilly.

Fans who saw them play here before went home with sore stomachs but for their benefit the Cuties have a brand new routine or routines. Known as the "Globetrotters of Softball" they have played to sellout crowds since they began operations back in 1954.

I have no idea how Moe Hunter and his Lumbanks are going to meet the challenges of the Cuties. There is a number of softball players on the squad so that should be no problem. Not that theyre going to be golden pigs entirely for the Cuties but they'll likely do their stars in the comedy routines.

As was noted the guys-gonnel-gals are topnotch softball players and three or four innings will demonstrate their diamond ability, with nothing funny interfering.

I cannot imagine the Lumbanks parading in mini-skirts or Bermuda shorts but they could make a quick change and add to the general latter-game comedy cut-up.

Moe Hunter and his Lumbanks are deserving of top public support at the game. Senior baseball in a city that once enjoyed the name of being the home of one of the best baseball centres in the province went into a coma a couple of years ago and now its making a comeback. Good!

Lumbanks Finance Limited came to their sponsorship aid and Hunter has rounded up a team that rates with the best in the Senior Baseball League.

So if you like to see softball as it should be played and as it should NOT be played with a hundred belly-laughs tossed in for good measure, don't miss the California Cuties shenanigans at the Fair Grounds tomorrow starting seven p.m. sharp.

Cubs Ride High On Banks' Blasts!

Rick Reichardt will remember his first grand slam homer as the one that didn't reach the seats.

But California's George Brunet will count it as one of the few good bounces he's had all year.

Reichardt's initial baseloaded homer in the majors—an inside-the-park shot that cornered crashy past right fielder Mike Hershberger in the first inning—carried Brunet and the Angels past the Athletics 4-3 Sunday.

The victory was only the fourth in 15 decisions for Brunet, a hard-luck southpaw who recently lost nine in a row while the Angels scored a total of 18 runs for him.

In other American League games Sunday, Minnesota Twins topped the first place Chicago White Sox 3-1, Baltimore Orioles drubbed Washington Senators 8-3, New York Yankees shaded Detroit Tigers 3-2 and Boston Red Sox whipped Cleveland Indians 5-1. In the Yankees past Clevelland squashed by Boston 9-2, Washington battered Baltimore 8-3, Kansas City edged California 3-1, New York took Detroit 4-3 and Chicago downed Minnesota 5-2.

But California's George Brunet will count it as one of the few good bounces he's had all year.

The Twins rallied for three runs with two out in the eighth, East Bosley's two-run pinch triple beyond the limit, and gave unbeaten Jim Merritt his fifth victory.

Baltimore's Robinson boys, Frank and Brooks, strolled three hits apiece and scored two runs between them as the Orioles buried Washington under a 15-hit barrage.

Tony Pierall, Curt Blefary and Vic Romovsky each drove in a pair of runs, and rookie Dave McNally gained his sixth victory with relief help from Moe Drabowsky.

Boston broke a run single in the fourth inning, a run-scoring single by Mackey Massie in the fifth and a triple play lifted the Yankees past Detroit.

Portuguese Tie Parsons

Belleville Parsons outplayed Kingston Portuguese in a tight Senior District Soccer League game here last night but ended up splitting the points in a 1-1 draw.

A good crowd viewed the game at Zwick's Island.

Parsons' next league start is two weeks away, against the leading Italo Canadians in Kingston on July 8, but in the meantime they play the RCAF at the air base this Tuesday as part of their Centennial celebrations there. Game time is 7:00 p.m.

Last night's game was a combination of missed chances by Belleville and fine goal-tending by the Portuguese contender.

Parsons jumped ahead early in the game on a well-placed goal by Ron Gibbs, giving the visiting goalie no chance. Gale had another great chance but missed it when Carlos Alfa hooked the ball home for an excellent goal.

The surprising third - place Chicago Cubs were acting like a bunch of kids today, having swept a doubleheader from Houston Astros, 4-1 and 8-0, Sunday.

The Cubs have blown their balloon so big, they've moved within four games of first place in the National League after first-place St. Louis Cardinals lost a twin-bill to Philadelphia Phillies 6-4 and 10-4.

Chicago also pulled within 1½ games of second - place Cincinnati as Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Reds 5-4.

Cubs Bo Boyer of Atlanta Braves has been having a good time, too. His hot bat boosted the Braves to a 4-2 victory over New York Mets.

In the other National League game Sunday, Los Angeles Dodgers defeated San Francisco Giants 3-1 on Len Gabrielson's run - scoring pinch hit single in the 10th inning.

Saturday, St. Louis edged the Phillies 5-4, New York swept a doubleheader from Atlanta 9-1 and 5-3, Cincinnati took Pittsburgh 6-4, Los Angeles blanked San Francisco 3-0 and Chicago downed Houston 3-2 in the first of two games. The second Chicago-Houston tilt was postponed by rain.

Some 21,000 fans, the largest Cub home crowd in two years, whooped it up for Ferguson Jenkins' 26 - year - old Ernie Banks a standing ovation after each of his pair of two-run homers in the second game he was not supposed to play.

"If it had been a hot day, I wouldn't have played him," said manager Leo Durocher after his team ran its winning streak to six, longest in four years.

Former relievers Bill Hands and Joe Niekro, who probably would not have been starting as all if Ken Holtzman had not been called into the army, pitched their first complete games in the major leagues.

Hands yielded five hits in the opener; Niekro, a rookie, set the Astros down on three singles in the second.

Toronto Maple Leaf pitchers gave up 18 runs in an International League doubleheader at Toledo Sunday but still mentained a 1½ point win the Mud Hens.

Toledo hit five home runs in the opener and coasted to a 14-2 victory after the Leafs came back to win the nightcap 6-4 in an extra inning.

In other games Sunday, Richmond Braves swept a twinbill from Syracuse Chiefs 2-1 and 1-0, Columbus Jets edged Buffalo Bisons twice 6-5 and 8-7 in 16 innings while Rochester Red Wings defeated Jacksonville Suns 6-4.

Saturday, Toronto and Toledo were called and Rochester downed Jacksonville 8-2, Richmond rook Syracuse 7-4 and Buffalo slipped Columbus 7-6.

Cementmen Take It In Tenth

Ronnie Maracle pitched a five-hitter but still needed four tenth-inning runs to get the win as Point Anne defeated Madoc 6-3 in a Trent Valley Softball League game at Madoc Saturday.

Point Anne scored lone runs in the first and fifth frames but gave Madoc a split in the wins, Madoc's first hit and an error on an attempted pickoff in the sixth.

It stayed that way until the top of the tenth. D. Maher's hit ignited the Winning rally. Two errors, a hit batter and Wheaton's triple made it 6-3. Madoc got one back on a walk, passed ball and a base hit but that was it.

Maracle allowed a sixth-inning single by Masters and a over the distance. He struck out a dozen. Bone but walked seven.

eight-bat ball in a route-going effort for Madoc. Conway fanned seven while passing three.

Hits by Carr and Marsels and an error netted the Potters' initial tally. G. Maher and Carr had safeties to make it 2-0.

Claude Carr had a triple and two singles and hit a ball to right field dropped for an error, that helped break the game open in the tenth. Vern Whalen also tripled while Denny Maher, Ron Maracle, Tom Mac-Donald and Gerald Maher added base knocks.

Point Anne visits the Flyers in Trenton tonight while Carm's go to Madoc both for 8:15 games.

200-Mile Road Race

WATKINS At Watkins Glen

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (CP) — Mark Donohue of Stony Brook, N.Y., won the 200-mile U.S. road-racing championship here Sunday. His Lola covered the 171.8 miles in one hour, 34 minutes, 37.5 seconds, for an average speed of 105.87 m.p.h.

Peter Revson of New York set the fastest lap in a McLaren at one minute, 12.45 seconds at a speed of 113.78 miles an hour.

Donohue was headed for one lap by Sam Posey of Sharon, Conn., whose McLaren finished a minute behind. In third place was Skip Barber of Concord, Mass., in a McLaren, one lap back.

The only Canadian running at the finish was Bill Brack of Toronto in a Lotus 47, unofficially 12th. Ludwig Heimrath of Toronto went out with gear-box trouble on lap 45 when his McLaren was in sixth place. John Cordts of Barrie, in a McLaren, lasted until lap 34 and was 12th when he went out with gear-box trouble also.

'Cavalry Charge'

Everything Was 'Jammed Lovely'!

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Sports Writer

TORONTO (CP)—The Union Jack flew upside down, the door to the Governor-General's carriage wouldn't open—and a filly won the 1082nd running of the Queen's Plate Saturday.

Jammed Lovely, the only filly in the field of 14, carried the colors of hockey great Conn Smythe into the Woodbine winner's circle.

An 11-to-1 outside choice, she won $31,821 in the two minutes and three seconds it took her to travel the 1¼-mile distance.

It was a gala affair. Girls modelled furs in the clubhouse area in temperatures which soared above 80. In grass box, 40 racing writers turned out in 1867 frock coats, top hats and pickerys as a centennial gesture.

If the off-track antics were light-hearted, the Plate itself was a hell-for-leather cavalry charge.

Jimmy Fitzsimmons of Calgary took Jammed Lovely out of the gate and across the field to settle in behind Etta Rule. As the pack responded, Jammed Lovely dropped back to fourth.

At the head of the stretch, Fitzsimmons let her go as highly regarded Pine Point made his run at her.

"I wasn't nervous at all until Pine Point came at me," Fitzsimmons said.

"Then, when he couldn't get past me, I wasn't nervous any more. I had horse all the way. That was her kind of track."

The track was fast and Jammed Lovely's time tied the oldest continually - run race in North America's one second off the track record.

She paid $24.80 and $5.10. Pine Point returned $4.80 and $3.20, while Cams by Chance, which held on for third, paid $2.80.

The gross purse was $78,725 and Pine Point picked up $15,945 of it; Come by Chance won $7,872 for third and More of Mort got $3,936 fourth money.

Jammed Lovely also won for Scythe $9 guineas than the Queen's purse and a $5,000 gold cup.

It was a second Plate victory for both jockey and owner, Scythe won with Caledon Beau in 1965 and Fitzsimmons rode Flaming Page—another filly—to victory in 1962.

A crowd of nearly 30,000 bet more than $273,000 on the Plate.

The carriage pulled up six feet away from the end of the red strip. Then, when an aide sprang to open the door—it stuck. The Michenera and their party climbed down on the infield side of the landau and walked around through the dust.

As the escort pulled away, someone lowered the Union Jack, turned it topside up, and ran it back up the pole. Then it started to rain.

Bowerman 7th With 219

Homenuik Wins Millar Trophy

TORONTO (CP) — Wilf Homenuik, a 30-year-old pro from Winnipeg, pulled his way to the 54-hole Willer Trophy golf championship Saturday and to a spot in the $300,000 World Open tournament at nearby Woodbridge, Ont., in September.

Homenuik stormed over the Richmond Hill course through rain squalls with a sparkling five - under - par 67 and a 215 total to face Bob Cox of Vancouver, 71, and Dave Clayton, 74, in a sudden death play-off.

Clayton dropped out when he went one over par on the 355-yard par-four first hole.

The two westerners went on for five more holes—to the 386-yard par-four sixth—before Cox missed his par putt and Homenuik dropped a seven-footer for a four and the $1,000 Millar championship prize money.

Homenuik, who couldn't buy a putt in Friday's round and who suffered one brief loss of composure when he broke his putter over his knee, dropped a thirty - footer on the fifth sudden-death hole with a borrowed putter.

Cox, playing upright and rigid in a corset with steel stays because of a bad back, missed short putts throughout the day. He missed a six-footer to lose the sudden death and a two-foot putt on the 18th sudden-death hole with a borrowed putter.

Billy Wakeham, from Victoria B.C., was another pro who played with a bad back. Wakeham still managed to come in with a 74 and a 223 total for 16th place.

The tournament was full of mishaps, some serious. Jack Windsor, a Hamilton pro, collapsed on the first tee in Wednesday's opening round and had to be operated on for a perforated ulcer.

Many westerners finished in top spots. Ken Fulton of Trail, B.C., shot a 73 for a 220 total and eighth place; and Fina Sorenson, Edmonton came in with a 72 for a 223 and 10th place.

Other out-of-Ontario golfers were Jean-Guy Pertard, Montreal, who shot a 75 for 224 and 17th place and Phil Giroux, Montreal, who finished with a 71, a 225 and 21st place.

Named To National Team

Archers Win Honors

Two members of the women's division of the Belleville Archery Club swept major honors at the national team selections at Port Arthur over the weekend.

Mrs. Carol Armstrong and Eileen Donaldson finished 1-2 in the finals to lead a strong field from all parts of the nation.

They were named to the all-Canadian team which will compete in the world championship tournament in Holland next month.

Four men and four women will round out the national team. Other women selectees who finished third and fourth are Joan MacDonald of Toronto and Betty McIntosh of Vancouver.

Mrs. Armstrong led the field with 1041 points Saturday and 925 Sunday for a total of 1976. Mrs. Donaldson had a 1003 and 960 for a total of 1963.

They were given the two awards of FITA stars, presented only to those who score over 1,000.

Harness Meet

Two Double Winners!

Two double winners featured the Saturday night meet of the Quinte Driving and Ridcig Club before a paid-up crowd of 600 which peeled $12,216 through the pari-mutuel windows.

The weather was clear and the track fast; the prizes good and the racing fast nothing to be desired.

Hugh Wemp and Paul Ouliett piloted home the twin winners. Ouliett betting the wire with Mr. Spudkey in the fourth and Hugh Wemp bringing home Single de Best in the fifth and Apeel Linda in the sixth.

At Brockville

Beavers Clip Lombanks 5-3

Back-to-back home runs in the fourth inning provided the winning margin as Brockville Beavers clipped a shorthanded Belleville Lombanks crew 5-3 in ZOBA senior baseball action at Brockville Saturday.

The Lombanks came up with only nine players for the game, including two from the city's league leading club and they were a good run for their money at that.

Pearce got on via a bunt single opening the Brockville fourth. Coughlin and Dexter decided the issue then by blasting home runs over the short left field wall for a 3-0 lead.

Brockville made it 5-0 with three hits in the sixth scoring one and a walk and another safety plating the final one in the seventh.

Lombanks got on the scoreboard in the seventh when Boomhower strolled and came home on "Moe" Hunter's base knock.

They threatened to pull out the decision in the ninth as scoring twice and leaving another stranded with the top of the order coming up. Ayre Kipp the relief pitcher before Moxon went out on a fly ball and Boomhower on strikes.

Double started for the Beavers with Wilson taking the mound in the sixth. They gave up seven hits, struck out 12 and walked but two.

Bill Moxon was the surprise starter for Belleville with Rodger Hunter moving in from right field in the sixth. They gave up 13 hits, 10 off Moxon, while whiffing five and passing two. The Lombanks gave the pitchers errorless support and turned in a pair of double plays.

Dexter led three of the winners' bats, Andy Teeple, Mc-Mullen and Wayne Woods collected two hits each for the Lombanks. Brian Coughlin added his home run, Carl Boomhower a triple and Rodger Hunter a double.

Race Close In S. Hastings!

Canniton Plate's and Shannonville chalked up South Hastings' Baseball League wins over the weekend to keep the leadership race a three-way affair.

Shannonville's 7-4 win over Latta boosted the club into first place while Canniton dumped Read 8-2 to tie Latta for the runner-up position. Latta and Plate's are two points behind Shannonville.

Canniton bunched all runs into two innings, scoring five in the second and three in the sixth.

Garnet Adams pitched a strong five-hit ball game for the winners. He struck out 13 and walked but two. Loser Frank Farrell and relief man Harold Pearce gave up 11 hits. They caught 11 on strikes and passed two but were hurt by six miscues.

Bob Moon slammed a two-run homer and a single while Hugh Petrie had a base-empty home run for Canniton. Ron Urch and Eric Emerson had two hits each, Pat O'Connor, Howard Skelly, Garnet Adams and Larry Adams a safety each.

Ted Abrams notched a big stick for Read with a double and two singles. The only other

Austrian Captures Grand Prix

REIMS, France (AP) — Jochen Rindt of Austria grabbed the lead in an exciting dash down the long finish stretch and edged Britain's Graham Hill by less than a yard Sunday in the Reims Grand Prix auto race for Formula Two cars.

Less than one second separated the first five finishers in the 190.73-mile race with John Furtees of Britain coming in third, Jackie Stewart of Scotland fourth and Denis Hulme of New Zealand fifth.

After Five Years

$20,700; Worth Waiting For!

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP)—It was a long five-year drought, but Gardner Dickinson figures the first place money ($20,700 was worth waiting for.

"It was a very satisfying victory," the slightly - built, 135-pound Floridi, pro outed after he breezed home in even-par 70 Sunday to win the Cleveland Open golf championship. He finished nine-under for the 72 holes with a 271.

It was the first tour title since 1962 for Dickinson. His best previous finish this year was a tie for third at Phoenix, Ariz.

Dickson, who played the tight 6,611-yard Aurora Country Club course with precision accuracy, wasn't quite as sharp as in earlier rounds when he posted scores of 66, 66 and 67.

The 36-year-old pro started the final round with a two-stroke stranglar and coasted to his four-shot triumph in the $103,500.

Tommy Aaron, who had the day's best round with a 68, closed in a five-way deadlock for fourth place with Jerry Edwards, Allen Kessing, Phil Rodgers and Lee Graham. All had 277s.

A stroke back at 278 were Cobie LeGrange, Wayne Yates and Arnold Palmer, Grouped at 279 were Lionel Hebert, Gene Littler, Bert Weaver and Billy Casper.

Yates, the young Georgian who had consecutive 68s to lead after the first and second rounds, fell to a 74.

Dickinson, who had missed the cut only twice in 18 tournaments, raised his 1967 earnings to almost $45,000 in official money. His biggest money season came last year when he won more than $53,000.

Elaine Missed Record

VANCOUVER (CP) — West at one minute, 6.6 seconds in Vancouver swim ner Elaine Tanner failed by 1.3 seconds Sunday in the most widely-exposed world record attempt in the history of sport.

Miss Tanner, 16, was clocked at one minute, 6.6 seconds in a special 110 - yard butterfly race in which she swam alone against the clock before a battery of television cameras.

The world record of 1:05.1 is held by Ada Kok of Holland.

Minor Softball Week

Tournament A Success

Warkworth nosed past Belleville Belch's 9-8 to capture the "A" title while East Gwillimbury whipped Stirmton 12-3 in the "B" final at a successful two-week softball tournament Saturday.

The four teams battled it out at Alemite Park to help the BMSA wind up "Minor Softball Week" across the province.

Beautiful trophies, donated by the Kinsmen Club of Belleville, were presented to both the "A" and "B" champions, along with awards for each player on the winning teams.

The most valuable player trophy went to one of the smallest players in the tournament, third baseman Steve Kelly of Wachworth. The lilsy player impressed with his heads - up play afield and was a constant threat at the plate, especially with bunts.

In the titular game, Belleville exploded for six runs in the sixth inning and appeared near the championship with an 8-5 lead. Warkworth ripped back, however, scoring four runs in the bottom of the seventh and final frame to snatch the crown.

Barry Grey pitched six - hit ball and fanned five for the victory. Ken Johnston was the loser, relieving John Spencett in the sixth. They gave up nine hits and whiffed eight. Hitting for Warkworth were Scarlett with a double and two singles, Conden, Bond, McNevin, Warner and Grey. John Romano hit a double and single, Stolkowch, Von, Spracket, and Stott a safety each for Belch's.

East Gwillimbury outslugged Stirmton, by hits 12-6 with Brian Connors hurling the win, Campbell and Fenton the loss. Connors also paced his own attack with three hits; Rondeau, McNeil and Gibbon getting two each. Ron Andrews slammed two home runs on Stirmton's behalf.

Harbier, Belch's survived a six - run outburst to top Stirmore 12-9. John Sprucknes threw 10 - hit ball with nine strikeouts while loser Tuton gave up 11 hits and struck out seven. Vos sparked Belleville with a double and six singles, aided by Stolkowich with one of each, Shortt and Sprucknes with two hits each, Payne a homer and Tugnetis a hit. T. Doyle had three Stirmora hits and Andrews smashed a homer and triple.

Warkworth blasted home seven runs in the sixth to defeat East Gwillimbury 10-3. Barry Grey threw a seven-hit win, fanning five, and Tom Cullen a 12 - hit loss with nine strikeouts. Grey and Bill Bond pounded a homer and two singles each for the winners, McNevin added three hits and Kelly two in defeat. Mullins was best with two safeties.

EOBA Minor

Bantams Lose First

Belleville Bantams were squelched by a hot pitcher as they lost their first game of the season to a team from Niagara Falls 3-0 on Saturday. The contest was a semi-final in the annual Chelsey Tournament.

Closer to home Belleville fared better, as local teams won four of five EOBA contests. Holy Rosary peewees blanked Ajax 14-0, then travelled to Oshawa to absorb a 5-1 defeat. On Sunday Holy Rosary whipped Whitby 8-3. In another weekend peewee affair, the Lions Club edged Welcome 7-6 in spite of committing six errors, while Booth T.V. Tyres notched a run in the final inning to nip Port Hope 2-1.

In the Niagara Falls tournament, Wayne Farrell was scratched for five hits in suffering his first pitching setback of the season. He fanned 12 and gave up only two walks.

But, of the opposing mound R. Forgie permitted only three singles to earn his shutout. He threw third strikes past six and walked a pair.

R. Bisonnette led the winning batsmen, while Glen Carleton, Paul Hall and Stan Brooks singled for Belleville.

In Holy Rosary's shutout win over Ajax, Dave Smith and Allan Wood hurled a four-hitter and fanned six.

Smith, Mike Burley and Bill Coughlin slammed doubles, and Steve Burke and John Moliville two singles each, for the Rosary. Brian Cousins and Jim Richardson also hit.

Oshawa pitcher G. Allison threw a two -hitter and led his team at the plate with two hits as Holy Rosary suffered their only weekend setback.

Brian Cousins took over mound duties for the Rosary on Sunday, holding Whitby to four hits and striking out five.

Danny Cousins, stroked a triple and Dave Smith two singles to provide the power at the plate for Belleville. Cousins and John Mulvihill also had base hits.

The Lions Club scored two runs in the next-to-last frame and then cut off a Welcome rally at one run in the final inning to gain the 7-6 triumph.

Blaine Mullins and Ron McTaggart were touched for four hits and struck out eight for the win.

Andy Ricketts smashed a home run and single, and Grant Geegan and Terry Ray two base hits each for Belleville. Jim Slather, Mike Bell and John Treery also hit safely.

Pope Creates New Cardinals

VATICAN CITY (CP)—Pope Paul created 27 new cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church today, deplored the plight of Palestine refugees and appealed for the internationalization of Jerusalem.

The Pope also called on all Vietnamese — from the North and the South—to "once again love each other as brothers" and to work to rebuild their country into a free and independent land.

Pope Paul spoke in a closed consistory he held with 25 members of the Sacred College of Cardinals to confirm the 27 prelates he nominated May 29 to join them.

The meeting lasted 23 minutes.

Speaking of the Middle East crisis, the Pope said the fighting had worsened the problem of Palestine refugees and "made evident the overly precarious and inadequate situation of the holy places (in Jerusalem), which are dear and sacred for every Christian heart."

"The holy city of Jerusalem must be for always what it represents — a city of God, a free oasis of peace and prayer, a place of encounter, of elevation and of concord for all, with its own internationally guaranteed statute."

Soviet and U.S. Pavilions Compared

MONTREAL (CP)—The Soviet pavilion at Expo 67 is garnering comments galore about its massive display—the voiceless running the gamut from "masterful" to "propaganda."

The pavilion, packed with arrays of technological exhibits, has half a dozen books in which visitors can register their comments.

The dome - shaped United States pavilion, situated not far away, has no such outlets for comments but reactions are easy to come by through personal interviews.

At the Soviet showhouse, the comment books are installed on each of the three exhibition floors.

A visitor from Alberta called the pavilion "a masterful display of your country." A French visitor said it is "one of the most beautiful at Expo."

But then there was this remark directed to the Soviets from an American: "You get an 'A' for propaganda."

"You show your people through a rose-coloured glass and I feel that the picture may be less beautified than you have presented it," said a Waterloo, Ont., visitor.

Many people thought the exhibition too scientific for the average person to enjoy.

"It lacks the human touch," write one visitor. "I would like to see more native costumes, art and everyday life," remarked another. "Too technical for the ladies," commented a third.

LOTS OF OIL

Indonesia exported 92,601,194 barrels of oil in 1966. Total crude oil output was 169,619,000 barrels.

Two Communist Leaders To Visit Expo Tuesday

MONTREAL (CP)—The premiers of two European Communist countries are expected today to make tours of the world's fair Tuesday.

Premier Todor Zhivkov of Bulgaria is expected in Montreal after visiting Niagara Falls, Ont., en route from New York where he attended a session of the United Nations General Assembly.

He is expected to make an informal visit to the Expo site Tuesday, the same day that Premier Josef Lenart of Czechoslovakia will be paying an unofficial visit to the world's fair.

Today is Man the Provider Day at the fair and Expo will be invaded by 1,000 members of the Agricultural Institute of Canada who will be treated to a parade of prize dairy and breeding cattle.

One of the highlights will be the presentation of honor certificates of the 174 sponsors of Man the Provider pavilion by Agriculture Minister J. J. Greene.

Sunday, Expo received its 15,000,000th visitor since its official opening last April 27.

A history-making round-the-world live television broadcast was made Sunday but technical difficulties in Montreal prevented viewers in 26 countries from getting an aerial view of Expo.

Fourteen countries, including Canada, participated in carrying the telecasts by four communications satellites to the far corners of the world and a potential viewing audience estimated by a CBC official at more than 500,000,000.

Habitat '67, a revolutionary mass-housing concept on display at the fair, was shown by the CBC as part of a sequence on overpopulation and man's attempts to overcome this problem.

But an aerial view of Habitat in the foreground and of the pavilions at the world's fair in the background failed to be relayed during the two-hour program.

Charles Kirkman, an official of the International Broadcasting Centre at Expo, blamed the trouble on bad weather and on the lack of sufficient time to rehearsal to iron out possible technical difficulties involving the aerial shots.

Plans for the program were drawn up two months ago when the CBC and broadcasters from other countries gathered together at the International Broadcasting Centre, a CBC-sponsored communications complex.

The Soviet Union and a number of other countries were scheduled originally to take part in the program but later withdrew their participation. The program was co-ordinated by the BBC in London.

In Ottawa, Quebec's Jean Lesage and Premier Daniel Johnson told a crowd of 2,000 at a centenary dinner which his province's blue-and-white flag was raised that Expo was "the launching pad of modern Quebec and of the French-Canadian nation."

Equality with the English-speaking provinces of Canada is not possible for the French-Canadian cultural community "if Quebec cannot negotiate freely the agreements necessary for the preservation of its particular heritage," Mr. Johnson said.

Food Expert Would Tie Aid To Birth Cuts

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada should double its foreign aid outlay and make at least half of the over-all total conditional on birth-control programs in recipient countries, a food expert said today.

Dr. C. F. Bentley, dean of agriculture at the University of Alberta, told the Agricultural Institute of Canada it is a myth that science can expand food production to provide satisfactory diets for the world population.

The population is increasing too quickly, he said. It is going up at the rate of two per cent annually. In the next 33 years, food production must double merely to maintain the present inadequate level of supply for the expanding population.

Population control to bring the birth rate down to the death rate is the only solution, he said, to food problems, he said.

He said Canada has not responded to pleas from many countries, notably India and Pakistan, for help with their population problems.

Dr. Bentley suggested Canada and other countries follow the example of Sweden, which decides the bulk of its foreign aid to population control work.

Sweden also donates one per cent of its Gross National Product—total value of all goods and services—to foreign aid. The Canadian total is half of one per cent.

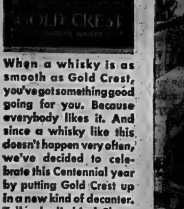
Dr. Bentley said the food aid given to India this year will prove harmful in the long run because it will increase the number of people surviving on the lowest of subsistence levels.

Tying food aid to India with a birth control program would permit India to reach its goal of reducing the birth rate from 40 to 1,000 to 25 in the next decade.

Dief Can Speak Twice

VICTORIA (CP)—John Diefenbaker will be given a debating advantage over his opponents if he decided to seek re-election as national leader of the Progressive Conservative party in Toronto in September.

He will be allowed to address the party's September leadership convention in Toronto twice, if he is a candidate, while all other candidates will be able to address delegates only once.



The party's national executive committee unanimously ruled Saturday that Mr. Diefenbaker will be invited to speak Sept. 7, the opening day, as present party leader.

On the same day, the committee decided nominations for the leadership will officially close. The next night the candidates will go before the convention, which, for Mr. Diefenbaker, would be his second oration, should he enter the leadership contest.

Announcement of the convention ground rules was made at the conclusion of the policy-setting session held by E. A. Goodman, a Toronto lawyer, and Roger Regimbal, MP for Quebec's Argenteuil riding, co-chairman of the executive committee.

Handsome new decanter. Smooth, light flavour.

Now you know why Hiram Walker's Gold Crest is the hit of every party.

When a whisky is as smooth as Gold Crest, you've got something good going for you. Because everybody likes it. And since a whisky like this doesn't happen very often, we've decided to celebrate this Centennial year by putting Gold Crest up in a new kind of decanter. Tall and cylindrical. Clean, clear, and slim. With a cut glass sunburst in the base. It lets you show off just a bit. Because it looks great, and tastes so smooth and light. It's the kind of whisky that goes well at any kind of party. Try it at your next party and see. Gold Crest. The Party Whisky.

20 Drown In Canada

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Forty-five traffic deaths and 20 drownings were among the 78 accidental deaths reported in Canada during the weekend.

A survey by The Canadian Press from 8 p.m. Friday to midnight Sunday, local times, also showed six persons died in fires and five persons were killed in other mishaps.

Another reported 25 killed—11 traffic, 10 drownings, one in a fire and three in miscellaneous mishaps.

Ontario recorded 17 deaths, including 13 on the highways. There were also three drownings and a 10-year-old boy died when he fell 12 feet from the roof of a shopping centre.

Eleven persons were killed in British Columbia, five in traffic mishaps, three in drowning mishaps and three died in fires.

Highway accidents took six lives in New Brunswick accounting for that province's total, while in Saskatchewan, which also recorded six deaths —five in traffic and one in a fire.

Three of Alberta's five deaths were drownings while one person died in traffic and one killed in a fire.

Manitoba reported four dead; three in traffic mishaps and one in an unclassified type of accident.

Newfoundland had one traffic fatality while Nova Scotia had one person drowned. Prince Edward Island was fatality-free.

GENERAL DIES

LONDON (AP)—The death of Gen. Sir Alan Bourne, 84, a founder of the British commandos, was announced Monday. He died Saturday at Torquay. Gen. Bourne was the first director of British combined operations. He formed the "independent striking units" after the 1940 Dunkerque evacuation. He joined the Royal Marines in 1899, saw action in the First World War and was promoted to general in 1942.

Famous Film Maker of India Plans Movie for Hollywood

The feat was accomplished with spectacular success by Italy's Michelangelo Antonioni in his first English - language film, Blow-up. Less successful has been France's Francois Truffaut, whose Fahrenheit 451 failed to move the critics. Nor have the English-made films of Roman Polanski drawn the plaudits of those he made in Poland.

Other foreign directors such as Sweden's Ingmar Bergman and Italy's Federico Fellini have so far resisted the offers to aim at the bigger, English-speaking market.

But Satyajit Ray, most famous film maker of India, plans to accept the challenge.

Ray has been visiting Hollywood to lay plans for The Alien, which he will make for Columbia Pictures. Until now, all of the movies have been filmed in the Bengali language primarily for the Indian audience.

"In most of my films I have been meeting with non-actors," he remarked. "Now I want to see what it is like to work with cartoon performers."

Ray and producer Michael Wilson disagree. They have their virtuoso in Peter Sellers, who has agreed to appear in The Alien, on the basis of Ray's reputation; the actor didn't even need to see the script. Now Ray and Wilson are seeking an American actor for the other major role. They would like Steve McQueen or Marlon Brando, but then, what film maker wouldn't?

Ray, 46, speaks flawless English. He was a founder of the Calcutta Film Society and moonlighted from an advertising job to film Father Panchali, part of a trilogy which won international awards.

Ray continues to work in Calcutta, which he describes as "the center for modest films, usually based on novels and short stories and rooted in the environment of India."

The world of Satyajit Ray reflects on the soul and heart of India, and that accounts for the fact that he is the only Indian film maker to be recognized outside the country's borders.

Tough Competition!

TORONTO (CP) — Ten of Canada's top track and field stars will be facing tough competition July 8-10 as members of a Commonwealth team that will meet a star-studded U.S. team in Los Angels Coliseum.

Almost every Commonwealth country has contributed to the 96-member team under generalmanager Col. Jack Davies, including Kipchoge Keino of Kenya in the mile and three-mile events and fellow countrymen Wilson Kipetjut, along with Chris Carter of England, in the 800-metre run.

Missing from the Canadian contingent is the duo is Bill Crothers of Markham and Harold one of the best half-milers in the world, who earlier this month won a 1:47.7 race in Toronto.

But Canada's best miler, Dave Bailey of Toronto who holds the Canadian fleeing record at 3:59.4 as the only Canadian ever to break the four-minute mile, will be going against Jim Ryun of Kansas and Jim Grelle of Oregon in the 1,500 - metre event. Both Ryun and Grelle break the four-minute mark at every outing with Ryun Friday zipping out a 3:51.1 tour to lower his own world mark of 3:51.3.

Canada will have two pole vaulters on the squad—Gerry Nott and Bob Yard, both of Trail, B.C.—but they'll be going against the world titlist and the man he outjumped Friday in setting the mark.

Manitoba Paddlers Up Lead

DELTA, Man. (CP)—A hare over Lake Manitoba Sunday played havoc with paddlers in the Centennial Voyageur Canoe Pageant as most overshot their target, added valuable minutes to their racing times.

"It was a bright, hazy day," said an official in his interview, "which made it extremely difficult to use visual navigation. They had to use a compass."

Manitoba paddlers gained almost an hour in the 25-mile leg from Amaranth to this small community on the southern tip of Lake Manitoba with a time of four hours, 51 minutes and 21 seconds. The other front runners, British Columbia and Alberta, took the longest of all the teams to complete the day's run.

Bass Season Opener

These three fishermen didn't fool Saturday on the opening day of the bass fishing season. The 19 beauties (total catch 21 fish) were caught in Lake Ontario off Point Traverse. The happy fishermen are Doug Archer, Tom Bently, and Dale Archer, all of Belleville.

Won By Three Strides

Roberta Gained Revenge On Abby!

SASKATOON (CP) — Robbie Picco of Toronto Saturday gained revenge for a loss in Abby Hoffman in the 800-metre event by three strides at the Pan - American Games Track and Field Trials here, ending a startling parallel with events of a year before.

Then, at the British Empire Games Trials in Edmonton, Miss Picco ran her heart out setting a record in the mile event.

The mark of four minutes, 50.5 seconds still stands, but the mile is not on the list of women's events for the B.E.G. and her performance did not win her a place on the team.

The next day, she tackled a fresh Miss Hoffman in the half-mile, finished up the track and missed the team.

Friday, Miss Picco set a record 4:34.4 in the 1,500 metres—the metric mile—but that event won't be run at the Pan-Ams. And she had to face a fresh Miss Hoffman again in the 800 Sunday.

Miss Picco's strategy was perfect.

She forced Miss Hoffman to set the pace for the first lap, then took the lead in the last backstretch on the second lap. She relinquished the lead briefly in the final turn but went right again at the top of the stretch.

They doubled shoulder - to-shoulder down the stretch before Miss Picco gradually edged into the lead.

The meet produced just two Canadian records and another was tied.

Miss Picco's 4:34.4 in the 1,500 metres far excelled the old record of 4:35.2 held by Pat Mills of Richmond, B.C.

Michael Cairns of Calgary made 177 feet, one inch in the 16-pound hammer to better the mark of 174-8 he set a week before. And Irena Piszowski of Vancouver tied her own Canadian mark of 11.4 seconds in the 100 metres.

Seven athletes, including Miss Picco, won two events.

Pat Rizzo of Toronto won the shotput and discus; Dave Ellis of Toronto captured the 5,000 and 10,000 metres; William Greenough of Halifax won the broad jump and hop, step and jump; Jenny Wingrove of Meldrum of Toronto took the 80-metre hurdles and broad jump; Don Donaldson of Fort Arthur, Ont., won the 200 and 400 metres, and Mrs. Piotrowski won the 100 and 200 metres.

Carnera Said Dying

The Italian champion, who returned from the United States to his native village last month, has been in coma for two days and only his strong constitution has prolonged his life, doctors said.

Carnera, suffering from cirrhosis of the liver, is still in the villa he bought when he was one of the most famous fighters in the world.

To Your Good Health

Child Should Not Be Forced to Eat

Dear Dr. Molner: Do you think parents should make children eat? My son and his wife make their 5-year-old girl eat what would be a good serving for a grownup. I've seen them heap her plate with meat loaf, potatoes, green beans and slaw.

She seems as though she can't swallow it.Either bit, but she does because her father has whipped her for not eating and she is afraid not to.

We don't invite them to eat with us because of this.—Mrs. D. L.

Oh, the poor kid!

There is no more excuse for making a child eat more than he or she wants than there is for forcing an adult guest to do so. But the adult, if pressed, can always say, "Look, I just don't want any more." A child of 5, with a whipping as an alternative, can't.

Such treatment is little short of brutality. In fact, it is brutality.

Naturally I've can't let a child get away with eating so dinner and then filling up on cookies and candy between meals, but that is quite a different matter.

The principal consequences of such forcing are: a child to overeat with become fat and logey; digestive disturbances from over-loading; finally, and perhaps worst of all, a resentful child who will rebel, as soon as she is able, not just against eating but at any discipline or instruction. Children remember!

You might invite them over once more for dinner, and put on your son's plate three times what he ordinarily eats. Then insist that he clean up his plate.

Or maybe I shouldn't suggest that. I don't want to disrupt a family relationship. But I do feel sorry for that little girl.

Dear Dr. Molner: Please explain how one may treat a colon that bulges in places and little pockets form and certain foods cause a lot of misery and pain. — J. T.

You have written a succinct description of diverticulosis and diverticulitis. You will find the answers in my booklet, "Don't Let Diverticulosis Throw You." For a copy send 30 cents in coin and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dr. Molner in care of the Chicago Sun - Times Syndicate, P O Box 158, Dundee, Ill.

Dear Dr. Molner: Would you do me a favor and write about what causes liver disease. It is important that people understand that it is not alone due to drinking. I have liver disease but drink nothing alcoholic. I used to drink beer every night but it never happened my appetite. — F. R.

I've said so before. I'll repeat it. Liver disease can result from several things. Alcohol (probably combined with poor nutrition is m o st cases, since hard drinkers often don't eat properly) is only one.

Sometimes prolonged faulty nutrition is the cause, with no alcohol involved at all. Various poisonous substances can damage the liver greatly. And hepatitis, which is liver disease, is caused by viruses.

To "Pigeon Breeder's Wife": Since my recent answer to you I note the results of studies at the University of Wisconsin showing that some people are allergic to pigeon dust, and "pigeon breeder's disease" can be serious for such people, unless treated. Symptoms include fever, chest pain, chills, shortness of breath, cough, loss of weight.

Note to M.L.M.: If aspirin causes white hair to "turn rust color," it's news to me. I suggest that you let your hairdresser fix your hair but ignore her "medical" advice.

Court Orders Minister Get Another Trial

OTTAWA (CP)—The Supreme Court of Canada today ordered a new trial for United Church minister Russell Horsburgh, convicted in 1964 on five charges of contributing to juvenile delinquency.

Mr. Justice J. R. Cartwright, announcing the court's judgment, said the convictions are quashed.

The Chatham, Ont., clergyman had been sentenced to one year after testimony by a group of boys and girls under 16 that he encouraged them to have sexual intercourse in an apartment located in the same building as Park Street United Church.

At a three-day appeal hearing in February, defence lawyer Charles Dubin of Toronto argued that the Ontario Appeal Court erred in refusing to accept as evidence affidavits of two witnesses who swore that they had lied at the original trial.

The two youngsters said there was a conspiracy among the witnesses to destroy Mr. Horsburgh, who had denied the statement attributed to him by the young group.

Nine boys and five girls were named in the eight charges originally laid against the 45-year-old minister.

Thailand Reds Kill Officials

BANGKOK (AP) — Communists have killed two government officials and wounded five last week in northeast Thailand while government forces killed four Communists and captured 23, Premier Thanom Kittikachorn said today.

The terrorists also kidnapped seven villagers, ambushed a government patrol and fled on a police station, Thanom said at his weekly news conference. And a series of interrelated clashes, two terrorists surrendered to government forces, he said.

Thanom said reinforcements had been sent to isolated villages in northeast provinces.

St. Ola

ST. OLA — Sympathy is extended to Mrs. Harold Polmateer in the death of her mother at Hastings Manor, Belleville, Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Van-der-Veen and Peter of Brockville visited Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Phillips and Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Phillips during the weekend.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Johnson, Irma and Marilyn visited on Saturday with Darlene, who is a patient in the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

Randy Carrel has obtained employment in Belleville.

An interfaith service will be held on the grounds of St. Ola United Church July 2, at 2.30 p.m. for the people of Tudor, Cashel and Limerick townships. All residents are cordially invited.

The county treasurer, Clayton Price of L'Amable has been making his regular annual visit to the residents of Limerick township.

Hong Kong Strikers Dismissed

HONG KONG (AP) — Utility and transportation companies have fired 4,000 Chinese who have been striking since Friday in the colony's latest Communist protests against the British colonial government.

Hong Kong continued to weather a 50-per-cent cut in many transportation services, including taxis, buses, trams and ferry boats, but power plants has had little effect on utilities, which have been kept going by skeleton crews.

There has been no violence to match that of Friday night, when rioting broke out in Kowloon, the colony's industrial sector on the Chinese mainland. Three persons were died and 80 have been arrested.

The strikes are the most serious year-old minister. The charges alleged a series of sexual incidents between July of 1963 and June of 1964.

The court divided 4 to 3 in the split decision. Justices Gerald Fauteux, Wilfred Judson and Roland Ritchie dissented.

Smorgasbord Sponsored by Hospital Aux.

NAPANEE — The Hospital Auxiliary held what amounted to a spontaneous smorgasbord on the hospital grounds last Wednesday. A marquee became available unexpectedly and Mrs. Dennis Rodrigues and Mrs. A. E. Thompson jointly convened a committee to make use of it.

Funds are badly needed for the purchase of an electrocuter-cabinet for the operating room, and this was a quick opportunity to add to that fund.

On such short notice, it was felt that from 100 to 150 people might attend, and plans were made for that number. Instead, it is estimated that close to 300 people were fed. More diner and dishes and more food were hastily acquired.

Instead of the $100 which the Auxiliary had hoped to raise for their project, they will have over $200, thanks to co-operation of members and friends, and to public support.

Peter Kenneth Carter, son of Mrs. Robert E. M. Carter and the late Mr. Carter, received his Bachelor of Social Science degree at spring convocation ceremonies at Ottawa University. He is now employed by the Children's Aid Society in Cornwall.

Religious Liberty Is Granted

MADRID (AP)—Non - Roman Catholic faiths in Spain began sharing today most of the rights so far enjoyed only by Roman Catholics.

The measure faced sharp opposition from many officials and conservative Roman Catholics who saw it as eventual concession to this officially Roman Catholic country.

The law implements organic legal changes approved by a national referendum in December, 1966, it affects about 30,000 Protestants and 25,000 Jews and Moslems in Spain, who will be free to worship publicly.

All Spaniards shall be treated equally and all will have the same rights for exercising any work or activity, including holding public offices. Civil marriage is permitted non-Roman Catholics.

Church Groups

DESERONTO — St. Mark's Ladies' Guild members gathered around a potluck supper before beginning their last meeting before the summer recess. Mrs. Margaret Lyons in the chair, the meeting itself was fairly routine until it came to the question period.

A discussion regarding the disposal of funds on hand resulted in the main body being turned over to the church officials for the purchase of kneeling pads for the church. Selling tuppenny collections were given to the Sunday School.

Funds for the annual bazaar presented a problem. The church hall has been rented to the Legion for the duration of classroom in order to have a room available in the school itself for the opportunity class. Consequently the group must look elsewhere for a place to hold their bazaar is October. It was decided to ask permission of the Lions Club to use their hall, and the women felt this permission would be readily granted as the Lions Club makes it available for such functions for other churches.

September 16 was set as the date for the next meeting, when further plans will be made for the bazaar.

Bus Safety Patrol Group Visits Ottawa

NAPANEE —The ten boys and girls who form the bus safety patrol for the H. H. Langford school were recognized for the good job they are doing by being given a tour of Ottawa last week. The boys and six girls were accompanied by Principal Dale Clark, Miss Beryl Jacks, the safety supervisor, and Provincial Constable J. E. Elliott, who organized the patrol.

The party visited the mint, spent considerable time in and around the Parliament Buildings. They had been briefed on what they would see in the grounds, such as the statues and the noonday gun. They toured the Parliament Buildings, had luncheon with A. Douglas Aldenbrack, member for this riding, and returned to the city discussing the forthcoming visit of Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth II.

Visits to the War Museum, the National Museum, and the Aeronautical Museums at the RCAF bases at Rockcliffe and Uplands made for a busy afternoon. Supper was eaten at Uplands.

Patrol leaders for next year have already been selected and are being trained. All of this year's members will probably be in high school next year.

Tin Target Tosser

Don't throw away those empty tin cans — toss them away with this handy tin can target launcher. A British gunsmith, whose products will be featured in Toronto's "British Week" in October, is producing this economical launcher which fires used cans to a height of 60 feet. Activated by .22-long blank cartridges, it supplements clay pigeon shooting at a fraction of the cost. (CP Photo from British Information Services)

Building Home Economy Russia's Main Object

MOSCOW (AP)—Russia's ruling Communist party issued Sunday a 25,000-word statement of policy stressing that the main Soviet task now is to build economic strength at home while following a policy of peaceful co-existence abroad.

A Kremlin summation of 50 years of Communist power in Russia said "the domination of imperialism on the world scene has ended"—because of the growth of Soviet military might, but the statement was relatively restrained on cold war issues.

The Soviet idea of peaceful co-existence again was defined broadly to include peaceful competition with the world while also supporting so - called national liberation movements against the West.

But the emphasis clearly was on building domestic strength.

The document dipped into history to underscore its point. It emphatically rejected Leon Trotsky's demand that world revolution come first, calling this an attempt to weaken Communist construction here.

The document, spread across 4½ pages of all Soviet newspapers, was entirely a re-statement of basic domestic and foreign policy lines.

But the format and emphasis of the re-statement were regarded as significant. The format was the basic theses on policy lines approved for celebrations of the 50th anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution Nov. 7 and for the years ahead.

They repeated familiar charges against both the United States and China, but deliberately avoided the sting of earlier propaganda blasts.

In reviewing Soviet history, the theses omitted any reference by name to Nikita Khrushchev and scores of other onetime leading figures, leaving unchanged their official status as "unpersons."

The theses charged the United States with "criminal aggression" in Vietnam and described Washington as "the main enemy" of the national liberation movements.

—Imperialism, and first of all the imperialism of the U.S.A., supports international reaction, arranges plots and coup d'etats, stirs up discord among nations, favors the increase of reactionary nationalism, provokes territorial arguments between liberated states."

With China as well, the theses were relatively restrained. They repeated Soviet charges that Mao Tse-tung is trying to split the world Communist movement. Mao is chairman of the Chinese Communist party.

But the theses stressed efforts to unify the Communist camp. In this context they dropped specific mention of the world Communist meeting the Kremlin had pushed for a showdown with Peking. The Chinese say the Kremlin wants the meeting to split the movement.

On the Middle East, the theses said: "The Soviet people fully support the just struggle of the Arab peoples against Israeli aggression, against Israel's imperialist benefactors."

Westerners here viewed as significant a section that began, "The domination of imperialism on the world scene has ended." It went on to say, "The might of the Soviet Union and the Socialist countries creates a real counter-balance to the aggressive forces of imperialism and is a major factor in the struggle for the prevention of a new world war and the maintenance of peace."

The theses claimed that the balance of forces in the world is shifting in Communist favor.

They then used this claim to support the key idea that "the main task of Soviet foreign policy is to ensure favorable conditions for communist construction. Peaceful co - existence , was called "an integral part" of its policy line.

On domestic policy as well, the theses said, "The great task of the Soviet people is the building of communism and this at the same time is its main international cause."

CITY OF BELLEVILLE — LOCAL IMPROVEMENT NOTICE

TAKE NOTICE THAT:

1. The Council of the Corporation of the City of Belleville intends to construct, as a local improvement, the following sanitary sewer, complete with private drain connections; and intends to specially assess a part of the cost upon the land abutting the work and the balance against the Corporation at large as follows:

Street	From	To	Estimated Cost	Corporation's Share	Owners' Share	Estimated Cost Per Foot Frontage	Estimated Annual Cost Per Foot Frontage
Easement/ South Front Street	Pumping Station Newberry Street	St. Paul Street St. Paul Street	$126,000.00	$33,375.00	$92,625.00	$10.01	$1.00
South Front Street	St. Paul Street	mid-point Lot 12, Plan 296
South Front Street	St. Paul Street	mid-point Lot W, Plan 296
South John Street	St. Paul Street	mid-point Lot 4, Plan 296
South John Street	St. Paul Street	mid-point Lot 146, Plan 296

50' x $10.01 — $500.50

If paid over a period of 15 years at 5½% per annum, the cost would be:
50' x $1.00 — $50.00.

2. The special assessment is to be paid in fifteen equal annual instalments.

3. Application will be made by the Corporation to the Ontario Municipal Board for its approval of the undertaking of the said work, and any owner may within twenty-one (21) days after the first publication of this Notice file with the Clerk of the Municipality his objection to the said work being undertaken.

4. The said Board may approve the said work being undertaken, but before doing so may appoint a time and place when any objection to the said work will be considered.

"What birthday present? Every year you always say I shouldn't have done it—so this year I didn't!"

MR. TWEEDY by Ned Riddle

"Actually, I'm looking for a cushy sort of job like yours."

Hees, Fleming, Hamilton Speak To PC Barbeque in Victoria

VICTORIA (CP) — Three prime candidates in the leadership race of the Progressive Conservative party took the same platform here Saturday in a plea for post-September party unity.

At an outdoor barbeque honoring George Chatterton, veteran MP for Esquimalt, candidates Alvin Hamilton, George Hees and Donald Fleming told a crowd of about 700 that the Conservatives can form the next government, if they act wisely now and achieve unity at the leadership convention at Toronto Sept. 7-9.

Asked to comment on reports a provincial premier, possibly Duff Roblin of Manitoba, will enter the national leadership race, all three said they would stand as candidates regardless.

It was the first time the three candidates had shared the same stage since each announced his entrance into the race.

Mr. Fleming, a former finance minister, warned party delegates to keep the perspective in selecting a new leader.

"One thing transcend all others in importance," he said, "that is, that out of that critical convention should come complete unity, unity of purpose, unity of loyalty."

Mr. Hees said that whoever leads in September "will have the 100-per-cent backing of all of us."

Mr. Hamilton drew wide applause when he praised Mr. Diefenbaker for leading the Conservatives to victory in 1957 and 1958 in an uphill battle.

BY HENRY HALDW

OTTAWA — The best antidote to a year in high school is to put a pack on your back and take off! Tomorrow morning, a friend, Peter Lemon-man and I are taking off for a summer - long cross - Canada hitch - hike. Tonight, as our countdown begins, I'll fill you in on our route, motives and preparations.

After a week at Expo, our route will be — first east, then west and finally north! Anything more precise would be against our spirit! Emphasis will be on travelling hard and then integrating into the life of one area for a couple of days.

I become part of a small river fishing village for a week last summer. Apart from when I got sea - sick, it was terrific! I discussed religion with a monk who compared life on earth to a little glass of wine and heaven to a big glass! And there was Sunday dinner 'chez grand'mere', the blessing of the boats on St. Jean Baptiste Day and many more beautiful adventures of the mind and spirit.

This is what we're after! Peter's 18, I'm 17. At this age, we're questioning our direction and examining our loyalties. We've read Hesse enough to know that important things like success and justice don't really have definitions. Staying tight in our middle-class vacuum won't help us find them either. We're aware of the bad. It is modest, confident and outward looking. It is what we would like to solve this summer.

"What's all this noise about Centennial Year", a friend told me recently. "What have Canadians done that any other people in a rich country like this wouldn't have done? In fact, would any other people sell exports of half their economy and with it some political independence?" Peter and I will find out this summer if this friend is right. Do we really have something to celebrate in 1967 or are we just marking time? These are our motives.

You may wonder how we are financing this Canuck extravaganza! We estimate that the summer will come to about $500 in all. If this series doesn't cover it, there'll be no car insurance in the fall! Here's a breakdown of our costs: $100 for culture (discotheques, newspapers, Expo and Stratford), $230 for food and $150 for accommodation: (camping grounds, youth hostels and the "Y").

According to these calculations, our food and board money should expire somewhere between Edmonston and Pt. Smith, N.W.T.! It is only two-thirds of what we really need! The idea is to have just enough money to not wash dishes but our vocation, but not so much to feel guilty if a poor fisherman invited us to dinner.

In the clothes department we're prepared for anything from taking in the street to taking out the girls! As for parental advice, we're all well-briefed on those things which we in our youth and soul are unable to understand: "Don't get sick! Don't forget your sleep. Don't eat!" Peter's mother has furnished him with a batch of home-addressed envelopes on which a few word message will suffice: "alive!". She also told me to remind him of his hayfever pills, especially is southern Ontario! Methera!!!

I still haven't decided whether I should bring my guitar. In favor: It's a great way to meet kids around a campfire and at youth hostels. Against: I'm tone deaf!

So tomorrow it's a short (120 miles) "thumb" down the road to Montreal. We'll search Canada street high and low for Leonard Cohen and explore the mini-skirted mini-world of Expo.

Tonight as the countdown continues, friends are trooping in and out with addresses of their friends across Canada. "Drop in on this guy", one said, "he owns a ranch in Alberta; he should be good for a meal and a bunk!"

Astrological Forecasts

By SYDNEY OMARR

For June 27

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Suspense exists. But you overcome problems through ability to be versatile. Stress on ability to work within confines of certain rules. Control tendency to be headstrong.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 —May 20): Creative pursuits are favored. Applies especially if you share them with opposite sex. Accent today on joy of accomplishment. Give and you also receive. Be at your best.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Concentrate on problems, challenges at hand. Don't compound errors or look for trouble. Some observe and judge. Prestige at stake. Maintain poise, dignity.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Ideas concerning home, domestic comforts prove constructive. Have fun, but remember responsibilities. Family member deserves your utmost consideration. Be mature.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Take realistic look at funds, investments. If you insist on being extravagant you invite loss. Overcome tendency toward self-reception. See things as they exist.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Utilize experience. Don't discard the tried and proven. Applies also to persons you trust. Recognize traits of loyalty, steadfastness. Look around — observe and learn.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Rest to finish what you start. Means don't procrastinate. Outline objective, goal — then take steps forward. The more you hesitate the more you are apt to lose.

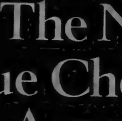
SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Any activity which encourages self-expression is favored. Do not hide light under bushel. Stand up, be counted. Constructive changes indicated. Give attention to young person.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Restraint should be used in contacts. Some may attempt to infuriate you. Realize that ulterior motive may explain reason. Keep sharp eye on property. Stick to your principles.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Day features flurry of activity. Some coincidences appear to multiply. Utilize your own experience, judgment. Statistics could be misleading. Survey can visit Italy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Pressure shown in connection with possession, money, valuables. You could lose if not aware of rights, study details. Key is to be thorough. Then you succeed.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Cycle moves up. Accomplishment is stressed. New starts, fresh contacts make this a significant day. Some may appear aggressive. Take this in stride. You come out ahead.



If today is your birthday . . . you inspire confidence in others. Many consult you. There is definite talent indicated in area where you guide, instruct, demonstrate. Numerous obstacles are due to be overcome.

General Tendencies: Cycle high for Pisces, Aries. Special word in Scorpio: keep promises made to loved ones.

Intell Marks Centennial With Its Largest Edition

1867 1967

Canada's 100th birthday is only four days away. Today, The Intelligencer, along with business firms, industries, organizations and municipalities in the Bay of Quinte district, salutes the confederation of Canada with the largest daily newspaper ever published in Belleville.

The front pages of the following sections are the four pages which made up the July 2, 1867, edition of The Intelligencer.

In today's special edition are stories which not only recount the highlights of Quinte area history but outline lesser known events.

What was the role of the Mohawk's Molly Brant? Read how a storm wrecked Carrying Place's chance of being the capital of Upper Canada. Did Sir Mackenzie Bowell's inelastic personality lead to his downfall? And Bay of Quinte yachtsmen were the last Canadians to challenge for the prized America's Cup.

The Intelligencer suggests today's centennial edition will make a worthwhile souvenir as a chronicle of Canada's — and the Bay of Quinte's — first 100 years of Confederation.

Kosygin Sees Castro

HAVANA (CP)—Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin began talks here aimed at binding Cuban Premier Fidel Castro's growing disenchantment with the Kremlin as soon as he flew in from the United States Monday night.

It was not known how long the surprise visit would last, but Soviet sources said as the two leaders began their discussions that "it was clearly not just a matter of hours."

Soviet-Cuban differences on several international topics, including Latin American, Vietnam and peaceful coexistence, have come increasingly into the open since the last visit by a top Soviet statesman, Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, in October, 1966.

Cuba's apparent disapproval of the recent Johnson-Kosygin meetings in Glassboro, N.J., and public condemnation of the Soviet line during the recent Middle East war, were the most recent signs of Cuban-Soviet differences.

There was no direct criticism in newspapers here of the Glassboro summit, but little space was devoted to it.

At the time of the war, the Cuban government openly criticized and "shamed" the Soviet-supported Security Council call for a ceasefire without condemning the aggressor.

The position adopted by the Cuban delegation in the current United Nations emergency session on the crisis also is much more radical than that of Kosygin.

At the bottom of the two countries' differences is Cuba's feeling that the Soviet Union is neglecting revolution and showing a conciliatory attitude to the United States.

Castro recently openly criticized Soviet efforts to establish economic and cultural relations with Venezuela, Colombia and other Latin American governments fighting a guerrilla movement which the Cuban leader backs.

He was also believed to feel that Soviet support of North Vietnam and the Viet Cong is too soft.

Kosygin was greeted with little warmth when he arrived Monday other his nine-day visit to the United States. No crowds were waiting at the airport to greet the first Soviet premier to visit Cuba. There were no bands and no flags.

Thant Greets Hussein

Must Right Wrong Done Arabs Or War Will Resume--Hussein

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — King Hussein of Jordan condemned the assembly Monday and warned that there would be more fighting unless the United Nations condemned Israel as the aggressor in the war and forced Israeli troops back to the lines they held before fighting began June 5.

"Today's war is not a new war but part of the old war, which will go on for scores of years if the moral and physical wrong done to the Arabs is not rectified," the 32-year-old monarch said.

Hussein said the Israelis perpetrated "an act of war as vicious as the blitzing on Poland or as stunning as the sneak attack on Pearl Harbor."

"To permit Israel to retain its gains as a bargaining weapon is immoral," he said.

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban replied that Jordan had a "heavy and unique responsibility" for the war. He said "fighting would never have spread to Israel's eastern borders" if Jordan had not joined in the war after Egypt started it.

Wilson Will Press Common Market Bid

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Wilson will keep pressure his case for admittance to the European Common Market despite increasing evidence that President de Gaulle has embarked on delaying tactics to keep Britain out.

An informant close to Wilson said today the latest developments at Brussels do not destroy the prime minister's hopes of getting into the European Economic Community. There would be no question at this stage of taking up alternative proposals, such as a possible transatlantic free trade association.

During Common Market ministerial talks at Brussels Monday, France blocked moves to get the British entry application into the negotiating stage. The only firm agreement was to have the community's executive commission prepare a report on the British application by Sept. 30. French Foreign Minister Couve de Murville was reported to have put up one argument after another to oppose an immediate hearing on the British bid.

The British informant said there is evidence that the French strategy of delay contains elements of weakness which eventually would erode the French position. He said Wilson will maintain pressure in the hope of reducing the period of delay.

Gromyko And Rusk To Talk

UNITED NATIONS (AP)— U.S. State Secretary Dean Rusk and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko plan a follow-up talk tonight on the major international issues passed down to them from the Glassboro, N.J., summit sessions.

Since Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin and President Johnson wound up their weekend conferences still far apart on big issues, their aides were unlikely to come up with any quick agreements.

Rusk and Gromyko are to dine at the Soviet UN mission and discuss such items as Vietnam, the Middle East crisis and ways to hold down the arms race. But the proposed draft of a treaty to check the spread of nuclear weapons appears to offer the best prospects for progress.

Johnson and Kosygin agreed to high priority for this treaty, which the two world superpowers proposed to present at the 17-nation Geneva disarmament conference.

Viet Cong Executes American

SAIGON (AP)—A Communist broadcast 12 days appeared to announce the execution of a U.S. aid official taken prisoner by the Viet Cong nearly 2½ years ago, the U.S. mission announced today.

The official is Gustav C. Hertz, 41, chief of the public administration division in Saigon of the U.S. Agency for International Development. His wife and four children live in Leesburg, Va.

A statement from the U.S. mission said the "language of the broadcast is not fully clear, but it implies that Gustav Hertz suffered the same fate as Sgt. Kenneth Rorebeck, who was executed on Sept. 26, 1965," for an announced act of reprisal."

The U.S. statement concerning Hertz said a broadcast June 15 by the National Liberation Front, the political arm of the Viet Cong, "appears to state" that Hertz "has already been put to death as an act of reprisal."

Hanoi radio said June 16 the Viet Cong had announced June 12 that it would execute U.S. prisoners "including a major" if the South Vietnamese government executed three Viet Cong agents the broadcast said had been sentenced to death in Saigon. However, there is now no indication of any recent executions by the Saigon government.

Hertz was captured by the Viet Cong Feb. 2, 1965, after leaving his quarters in Saigon on a motorbike. He had been in Vietnam for several years, advising the South Vietnamese on organization and administration of local government.

'Jobs for Peace'

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP)— Jobs for peace, a bargain for racial quiet which city fathers have yet to accept, took place Monday night in a schoolroom near a Negro slum.

Toronto Man Wheels Chair to Expo

TORONTO (CP) — Constable David Pugh stopped the motorist on Highway 2 just east of Toronto early this morning, then bewildered, he reached for his cruiser radio microphone.

"He says he's wheeling himself to Montreal in his wheelchair," he reported. "Is there any rule against it?"

"Try to discuss with him," replied Sgt. David Fleming.

"I can't find anything in the Highway Traffic Act. It's not a motor vehicle, or a bicycle, or a tricycle. It doesn't mention wheelchairs at all."

"He says he's not going to stop until he gets to Montreal," Constable Pugh reported. "He's got $100 and he says he can telephone for more money when he needs it. What do I do?"

"Has he got a brake on the chair?" asked the sergeant, hopefully.

"No, he's using his arms to push the wheels—and he's got the build for it. I can't talk him out of it. He says he has the use of his legs in a mine accident and he's determined to prove to his family that he's not a useless cripple. He says his family lives in Montreal."

"Tell him to go back to Toronto and make his way to Montreal the sensible way," said the sergeant.

"I can't convince him," replied the constable.

"Tell him to stay off Highway 401 and wish him luck," the sergeant advised.

Murder Attempt Charged

KAITAIA, N.Z. (Reuters)—A charge of attempted murder was laid today against a young Englishman who, with an American and a young boy, was taken from the stolen Australian ketch South Pacific off the coast of New Zealand early last week.

The charge against Brian Neville Fleeberg, 27, alleges that he attempted to murder Wylie Hanby Roberts, 34, of Birmingham, Ala., aboard the South Pacific June 18.

Fleeberg, Roberts, and Roberts' 3½-year-old son, Bobby, are all in a hospital at Kaitaia, about 180 miles north of Auckland.

When they were taken off the ketch by the freighter Tongariro Tuesday in response to distress signals, Fleeberg and Bobby were suffering from lack of food and weakness.

No charges have yet been laid in connection with the theft last April 13 of the ketch, which was handed back to its millionaire owner, corset manufacturer, H. C. Jenyns of Brisbane.

DAK TO, South Vietnam (Reuters)—More heavy fighting is expected soon in the mist-shrouded hills of Kontum province where 30 American paratroops were killed in a battle with North Vietnamese regulars last Thursday, ranking military sources said today.

They said men of the 173rd Airborne Brigade now are searching the jungle-clad hills of this central highlands province for two new North Vietnamese regiments believed in the area.

The battle is regarded in Saigon as a setback for U.S. forces. But paratroop officers here, as well as the survivors of the fight, are convinced they did great damage to the 24th Regiment's 6th Battalion, killing at least 475 North Vietnamese.

Brig.-Gen. John B. Deane Jr., 46, commanding officer of the airborne brigade, believes his unit moved to Dak To, 265 miles northeast of Saigon, just in time to hamper North Vietnamese plans.

"If we had delayed a week, it might have been all over," Gen. Deane said.

The 24th and another North Vietnamese regiment, both in the immediate vicinity of this base, had prepared battlefield positions in the mountains overlooking the valley, he said.

This was the first phase of a plan to attack and smash Dak To, with its defenders of Viet-by U.S. Special Forces officers, the nearby headquarters of the 42nd South Vietnamese Regiment, and other posts, sources here believe.

Gen. Dean said: "We have seriously and possibly completely disrupted North Vietnamese plans for an attack on South Vietnamese and other units in

The search aided by a helicopter from the nearby Canadian Forces Base Trenton started yesterday with the arrest of two more men in the case.

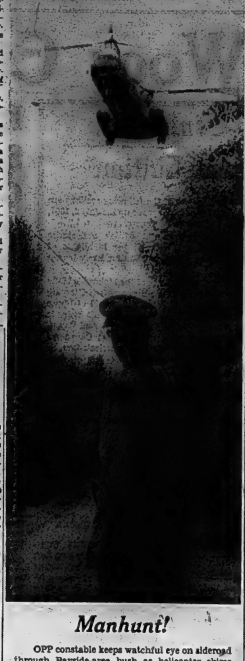
The hunt for four men was launched Sunday after police said Trenton taxi driver Joseph Gould junior, 30, and a woman were attacked in a parked car on a sideroad east of Bayside. They said the woman was taken away in another car and raped.



Wilhelms was arrested Sunday on Front Street in Belleville, where he was spotted by a city police officer.

The two others were arrested yesterday afternoon at their homes.

Shortly after, provincial police called out the helicopter and began combing dense bushland for the fourth suspect.

The helicopter flew at tree-top height while officers moved through a thickly-wooded area between White's Road and the Belle-Trent sideroad.

The area was heavily infested with mosquitoes and blackflies.

Passenger On Motor Bike Is Injured

Larry Sharpe of Wellington was rushed to Kingston General Hospital by Dr. Sally Sarles of Picton Saturday afternoon when it was found he had sustained a serious neck fracture.

Sharpe was a passenger on a motorcycle driven by Richard Van Haarlan of 224 Herchimer Ave., in Belleville when the cycle went off County Road 12 near Bloomfield on Friday evening.

Damage to the cycle was not serious and at first it appeared as if the boys had both suffered minor bruises. After returning home on Friday night Sharpe said that he took was hurting him and Saturday afternoon he went to see Dr. Sarles. X-rays showed that he had serious neck injuries and he was immediately taken to Kingston where he underwent surgery twice. His condition has improved greatly.

Hearing in Last Stage

Magistrate R. C. Jackson late this morning was expected to decide if there was sufficient evidence to send Kinley Wilmott Scott on trial for capital murder in the death of the accused man's wife.

A preliminary hearing into the charge against the 37-year-old Maynooth truck driver ended its final stage today as Crown Attorney John Pringle called the last prosecution witness in the two-day hearing.

Yesterday the magistrate heard testimony from 10 of the Crown's 12 witnesses testifying on circumstances surrounding the charge, laid after Doreen Scott, 32, was found shot to death May 7 outside the couple's home on Highway 62, south of Maynooth.

Final testimony was being taken from two provincial police officers when the court called a 10-minute recess shortly before 11 a.m.

Will Open Corby Park On Thursday

Belleville's Corby Park will have its second official opening in its years Thursday night.

The little square, first presented the city in 1905 by the Corby family, has been given a complete face - lifting to become a beauty spot on Belleville's urban complexion.

In recent weeks parks board workers and gardeners have been transforming the green - belt pocket between William and Ann streets.

Hundreds of roses, scores of bushes have been planted according to pre - determined pattern around the park.

At night, the scene is dominated by an illuminated fountain.

The park, in its new concept, is designed for strolling pleasure, say parks board officials.

Invitations have been mailed to residents in the area to attend Thursday night, when civic officials will join directors of H. Corby Distillery.

Bishop Wright To Be Speaker At Service

Representatives of Protestant, Catholic and Jewish congregations in the city will gather on Island for the service — to be addressed by Archbishop L. V. Wright of Algoma and Metropolitan of Ontario.

The archbishop is a Quinte district resident, born in Roslin where his father was a rector. He spent his boyhood in Carrying Place and, after entering the Anglican church, was for a while rector at Tweed.

Assisting in Sunday's service — scheduled for 3 p.m. — will be the Salvation Army band and a girl's choir, sponsored by the Quinte Kiwanis Club.

BREAK INTO JAIL

Expo Has Made Canada Focal Point of World Says Promotion Manager

A good promotion campaign never lets up — even if it is the most successful in the nation's Alexandra School.

That's why Expo's Alex McKay was in Belleville today. That's why he'st still be using the speaking circuit to keep enthusiasm charged for the big exhibition right up to closing time in October.

The promotion is a b i s ness one and doesn't discriminate against age. This morning, for example, he was speaking to public school students at Queen

"Just concentrating on Ontario, I've been doing this since about the middle of February," said Mr. McKay, "I wouldn't doubt at all that we'll be speaking even in October."

This, despite the fact that attendance estimates for Expo have had to be drastically revised since its end-of-April opening.

The figures have been doubled: It's now expected about 20 million people will visit the show three times, for a total of 60 million.

"But," says Mr. McKay, "any good advertising campaign does not die on the vine. It's pulsey to keep the show on the road."

However, the personal agenda, says Mr. McKay, a communications expert, with a professional background in the advertising and film industries.

EXPO REMINDERS

While the public media have performed sterling service in getting across the magnetism of Expo, he finds many people still respond with something akin to amazement at the message he puts across in his personal presentation.

Among his reminders:

That Expo, now a national institution, became a reality only because the..Russians turned it down. (Canada's original application in 1960 was refused — then granted two years later because the Soviet Union, for political reasons, decided against it.)

One of the man-made Expo islands off Montreal took 25 million tons of earth — five times the tonnage moved to build Ancient Egypt's pyramids.

Such facts are only variations on Expo's main theme, how ever.

"This is the fact that the whole event is of special interest to our country, because, suddenly we've become a focal point of the eyes and ears of the world.

"We have people coming from all over who are surprised in reality to see Canada as it is, — because they thought of it as a place of ice and snow, Eskimos and Royal Canadian Mounted Police."

"Yc," says Mr. McKay, "is the Americans who have grasped the idea of Expo.

"We could learn something from the American who told me: 'I can't imagine anything quite big and this important not happening in the United States.'"

This is the point of Mr. McKay's talks.

"We Canadians," he sums up, "should have tremendous pride in our country. In our Centennial year we have the greatest exhibition that has ever been held."

Lake Ontario Water Pipeline System Estimated at $15,000,000

An Ontario Water Resources Commission proposal for the construction of a water supply system for the Belleville-Trenton area, using Lake Ontario as the source, is under consideration today by elected representatives from seven municipalities.

The over-all cost of the project, which would include a purification plant in the Wellington area and Lake Ontario, is estimated at

The OWRC proposal is based on a preliminary report prepared by consulting engineers Gore and Storrie and is related to the development of a regional water supply to serve developed Quinte district areas.

These would include Belleville and Trenton, and the townships of Sidney, Thurlow, Ameliasburg and Murray, and also the Canadian Armed Forces Base outside Trenton.

At the conclusion of the report, possible rates per thousand gallons and methods of financing were discussed.

Water Resources officials emphasized, however, that the decision on whether to go ahead with construction of the system would be up to the municipalities involved.

Officials stated the question was not equivalent to one of cost, there also being the question of the quality of water to be considered.

The inference was that the quality of Bay of Quinte water was rapidly deteriorating.

The proposed system would take three years. With the water filtration plant at Belleville receiving capacity, there must be a decision soon whether to bring water from Lake Ontario or take most of the present plant.

The population of the Quinte area receiving water service in 1985 was 57,000 and by 1990 the estimate is the population will have increased to more than 90,000.

The proposal is for a 42-inch diameter intake extended into Lake Ontario a distance of 3,100 feet, together with a pumping station and purification plant near the village of Wellington.

From the purification plant, there would be a 42-inch main pipeline running north to the Bay of Quinte and extending across the bay at a point about four miles west of Belleville.

From the end of the main pipeline smaller pipelines would be extended east to Belleville and west to Trenton where they would empty into terminal reservoirs.

The system would be divided into three parts including a primary system extending to north of the bay and two secondary systems extending to Belleville and Trenton.

Total cost of the primary system is estimated at $8,825,000; the Trenton secondary system $1,037,000, and the Belleville secondary system $1,987,000.

The system as proposed would be shelf to serve the area for at least 20 years, following which an additional construction program would be initiated as required.

pond would mean that existing filtration and distribution systems at both Belleville and Trenton would no longer be needed. However, the proposed does not assume the acquisition of any of the existing water works facilities.

Operation of the system would call for filtration of water supplies at the Lake Ontario plant and pumping the purified water to a storage tank on the escarpment in Prince Edward township just south of the bay. From this point the water would flow by gravity into the Belleville and Trenton systems, although terminal pumping would be required to obtain the desired pressures.

Of the present systems only the pumping plants at Belleville and Trenton would continue in use.

A major part of the cost for the proposed Belleville and Trenton secondary systems would be the provision of terminal reservoirs at both municipalities.

At Trenton a 5.85 million gallon reservoir would be needed and also one about half that size at the Trenton Armed Forces Base.

A 15.85 million gallon terminal reservoir would be required in the western area of the city of Belleville. Also a 1.25 million gallon reservoir would be required for that part of Sidney township south of Highway 401 - Belleville Highway No. 2 line.

Two questions, one regarding the future quality of Lake Ontario water and the other on the probability of the city getting its water supply from the Moira River.

Didn't hold out any hope for a suitable water supply from the Moira, and in answer to the first question replied that, where there was urban development there always was a gradual deterioration of water.

However, it would be a long time before Lake Ontario water deteriorated to the present quality of Bay of Quinte water.

Hellyer Gives Views on Middle East

TRENTON — The world has an important lesson to learn from United Nations Secretary-General U Thant's accession to Egyptian President Nasser's demands for the withdrawal of peace-keeping troops from the Middle East.

Defence Minister Paul Hellyer told a Trenton audience last night that similar operations in the future should have definite terms of reference determined at the outset so that one party could not demand withdrawal.

The Liberal Cabinet minister said it would be best to avoid situations which could "negate all the good work accomplished with a single unilateral action."

"We will profit by that action in the years ahead."

But Mr. Hellyer hastened to add: "It's perhaps too easy to condemn the man (U Thant)."

"I don't really think it aids anything to comment on his position at the present time. But, looking back, I think everyone feels the matter should have been referred to the Security Council."

The minister re-iterated his position that the evacuation of the 700-man Canadian Middle East contingent did not necessarily conclude this country's military peace-keeping efforts abroad.

Unification Uniforms Proving Popular Says Defence Minister

TRENTON — The problem with new armed forces uniforms is not that they are all the same but that demand cannot exceed supply due to increased recruitment, Minister of Defence Paul Hellyer said last night.

The Liberal cabinet minister told a meeting of Prince Edward-Hastings Liberals in Trenton he was pleased with the fact that in the first five months of 1967 he up 7 per cent over the same period last year.

Mr. Hellyer said the monthly enlistment figure is now running around 1,400, and that to June of this year, 2,700 more Canadians had applied for armed forces than in the same five months in 1966.

The minister said the government had even considered cutting back on recruiting but decided against such action.

The statistics, given newsmen as Mr. Hellyer left a party association meeting on his way back to Ottawa, proved to be about the only speeches delivered by the defence minister all evening.

A sparse crowd of less than 100 turned out at the high school auditorium, and heard Mr. Hellyer limit his remarks to a general address on "The Impact of Technology on Our Life and Society."

Provincial Liberal nominees Donald Ross (Quinte), Robin Russell (Northumberland), and Fred Evans (Prince Edward-Lennox) were disappointed with the attendance, and over the absence of Dr. Pacifico Jewett. Dr. Jewett is being considered as the Liberal candidate from the new federal riding to George Hees.

Mr. Hellyer advocated streamlining present approaches to the handling of parliamentary system, armed forces, and problems of urban development.

He said there is a declining respect of our parliamentary system and selected time allotted to House of Commons procedure as a primary method of speeding up Parliament's activity. He felt such changes would serve to gain more confidence in the system by Canada's young people.

Similarly, he felt existing military situations no longer meet old lines of demarcation.

The "land, sea, and air" concept of armed forces was outdated, because, in such fields as submarine tracking: "When does an operation stop being navy and start being air force?"

The defence minister predicted that no country will not have faced a military technology problem within 25 years, and that other countries will emulate the adopted Canadian policy of unification.

To solve what he termed the greatest single problem that faces the world — namely uncontrolled urban growth — Mr. Hellyer recommended "new" living from scratch building towns and cities, but not up in the

Baker's Island To Be Scene Of Regatta

TRENTON — Baker's Island, in the Bay of Quinte just off shore the south side of CFB Trenton, will be the scene of Tomorrow's skies of Centennial activities at the air base.

One of the most spectacular events of Centennial week at CFB Trenton comes at 7 p.m. tomorrow, when station personnel will present "Operation Search and Rescue."

The rescue demonstration will involve the recovery of the crew of a capsized boat from aircraft and helicopters.

During this demonstration, Corporal William Wacey of Trenton will make his one - thousandth parachute jump and will afterwards receive a citation for the achievement.

wilderness where nobody wants to live.

"In the next 30 or 40 years, the number of Canadians who went to live in cities will be double what it is today."

We must save good land, and use marginal land for cities. There's lots of it close to water, transportation, and other features."

Mr. Hellyer advocated building a "clean, workable, rapid transportation system," and building a city around it.

He decried the tendency of the urban society to push housing costs out of the reach of many, and said communities should be built "where you could build a working mans home for $15,000."

The problem of uncontrolled urban growth could not be met by "clean, orderly" methods of growth, for "in building superhighways, aren't we only allowing the traffic jams to develop sooner?"

Name Officers For Liberal Association

TRENTON — It was mainly a case of "no contest" in last night's election of officers by the Prince Edward - Hastings (federal) Liberal Association.

Trenton councillor D. R. Fraser was unopposed in his nomination as president, as were executive vice-president Dr. Lionel Dockrill of Picton, and vice-presidents Douglas Telford (Murray Township), Cyril Harrington (Sidney Township) and Paul Coughlin (Campbellford).

William Menzies of Trenton was acclaimed association secretary, and the only contest on the slate of officers elected Mrs. H. Haven (Prince Edward County) as treasurer.

Well-known Trenton businessman Eben James declined a nomination as treasurer, "I don't think our executive has enough representation from Brighton or Prince Edward County," he said, in withdrawing his nomination.

Cadet Corp Members Receive Awards for Achievements

Last night was a special first aid night for the St. John Ambulance Brigade. The cadet corps of the medical assistance association were examined in its various courses of achievement and received awards for services through the year.

1867–1967

While Canadians these days have been casting their thoughts backwards with more than customary zeal we cannot escape the fact that mankind essentially is progressive and forward-looking.

The future . . . and renewal, these are the things that count in this world. Thus, while we look back nostalgically to the days that are gone and to the pioneering strength and imagination of our forebears we must not lose sight of the needs or neglect the aspirations of the future.

It is interesting in this context to dwell on the common factors that link 1867 with this period of our own time 100 years later. There were no automobiles or aircraft in those days — and yet, people were very much on the move.

One thinks of the much-travelled and eccentric Earl of Bristol who gave his name to hotel all over Europe and of our history is correct that was some years prior to Confederation in this country.

But looking at our files of a century ago we find that wanderlust gripped people almost as much in that day as it does in our own time. And while sundry adventurers like Maximilian, brother of the Emperor of Austria, was facing a firing squad in Mexico, travel and adventure of a more sedate and pleasurable nature was to be had here in Canada by the mere expedient of buying a steamer ticket.

Advertisements appeared announcing sailings for the West Indies, South America, Australia and New Zealand — via New York, and of course with the prospect of a stormy passage around Cape Horn.

Of events in 1867 and those occurring today we all have our own thoughts, but this common factor of a people on the move strikes one as the most interesting link between then and now.

Just how far we have come is symbolized by some words of soprano Maureen Forrester. As an opera singer Miss Forrester knows the concert halls of the world as well as any, and this is what she said in part in a recent interview.

"It depresses me to know just where I'll be in 1969 when it is so far away. Before, when an artist went to New Zealand or Australia he spent six weeks on a boat, with the children and a nanny. Now I fly off, stopping over in Honolulu, give two concerts, and jet on. It is a matter of hours."

And here are some words of Canadian bookseller Louis Melzack which also reflect the virtue of speed in our contemporary scene. "Some men gamble, some keep mistresses. I buy Canadiana. When I get depressed I browse through some of the old books in my collection. Then I'm reassured by the continuity of life."

A Serious Generation?

When her mother suggested she join the school debating society, a 14-year-old Quinte-area student replied, "It is not a debating or discussion group . . . it is just a constant clattering of tongues."

The youngster knows more wisdom than many an older student. In fact as they get older, and into the late teens particularly, feeling people seem to go through a silly phase. Unfortunately they never emerge from this period, even in adult life.

Conversation, in or out of formal debate, too often verges on the banal, the idiotic, the meaningless . . . yes, it is a veritable Chattering of Monkeys that fills with noise at parties, over lunch, in bars, in offices and business establishments. It is a sort of Tower of Babel that is forever switched on, repeating itself endlessly in inane, dull jokes and foolish chatter abound and everyone laughs . . . at their own jokes. Keep an ear tuned for some stimulating idea, something that does not involve personalities or gossip, but it seldom comes.

Where young people are concerned they are under enough pressure these days that they need some kind of outlet. But too often their conversation, for that of their elders, is also spiced with the proverbial corn.

What are we to make of youngsters who in their high school yearbook (whether in jest or not) give answers like "a bum," or "a bar fly" as offbeat answers to what will be their probable, as distinct from their real or anticipated destiny?

And strange that among all the aspirations of these young people not one expressed any desire to travel, even within Canada. Among the girls marriage inevitably is in the minds of several, but again no apparent interest in the world outside before getting down.

The ambition of one young lady is "being serious." And the others might take a leaf from her book. Not the kind of seriousness that afflicts so many in the form of an unsmiling countenance, but rather the kind that has a sense of the fitness of things, regard for other people, and intelligent interest in community and international affairs.

Drury's 'Save by Spending' Shows No Practical Results

OTTAWA — How do you cut costs and save?

Simple. You hire more staff and spend more money.

At least, that is the formula followed by some Federal Government agencies, in the department of defence production and C. industry.

And you have it on the word of no less an authority than the twin - departments, boss, Charles Mills "Bud" Drury.

It may have seemed bearing on his interesting spend-to-save way of transacting the public business that he got much of his basic bureaucratic training as a top hand in the free-spending, extravagant Trade department and as deputy minister of defence.

He just happens to be one of the six "very junior" federal civil servants recruited for service in External Affairs Deputy Minister Lester B. Pearson for his cabinet, which rather makes him a member of the power elite's "in" club.

The industry minister expounded his theory of spending-to-save in the House of Commons estimates — up 68 per cent in two years in a new $25,000,000 extension before the bemused Commons.

So what did the estimates show?

Staff up 412 in the year, just about a 50 per cent increase.

Staff now totaling 1,143, with 320 of them "chiefs," snug in the $10,000-or-better bracket and 213 of them "Indians" below the $10,000 mark.

Oh sure, there had been some staff economies.

Where last year 320 had been on the payroll in the 12,000 to $14,000 range, this year there were only 309.

But wait — where a year ago there had been only 65 in the $14,000 to $16,000 bracket, now there were 371 — and at the $16,000 to $18,000 level, where previously there had been nobody, 39 currently were employed.

Strange, wasn't it, "Bud" Drury was asked by a couple of curious MPs, odd especially now that everybody suddenly seemed "on speedy contract," as it was delicately phrased, with the alarming escalation in the cost of government?"

Well, not really, smiled the industry minister turning in the chairs that had rubbed off on him in the many years with the United Nations and several others.

It was all in the best interests of economy, he boomed expansively, pointing out his spending departmental costs would "soon" result in "considerable savings" for the taxpayer.

How so, asked the MPs, curiously further aroused.

Well, for one thing, his department was taking over the purchasing for 16 other Federal agencies, in a program of consolidation. Consolidation that got off the ground three years ago. All well, then, purred the MPs, satisfied that the department taking over its buying agent for these 16 others, there must have been a "considerable saving" for the taxpayer.

TSE Cracks Down—Four Companies Suspended in Past Week

By LARRY DWORKIN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The Toronto Stock Exchange is continuing its crackdown on unlisting speculative companies, with four suspended during the last week and 11 so far this year.

There are indications that Toronto's crackdown, on outgrowth of a two-year-old policy intended to increase investor protection, is spreading to the volatile Canadian Stock Exchange at Montreal.

Last week the Canadian Stock Exchange suspended trading in three companies pending a fuller release of information to the public.

In addition, the Toronto exchange moved last Thursday to withhold trading privileges from a senior oil company that suddenly found itself in a highly speculative position because of an announced mineral find in northeastern Saskatchewan.

Trading in Scurry-Rainbow Oil Ltd. had jumped sharply the previous week on rumors of an important find and the company itself requested a week ago Friday that trading be suspended until it could issue a statement.

The company announced its mineral find Monday and trading resumed Tuesday. On Thursday, however, the exchange was obviously unhappy about the way the stock price was moving and again suspended trading, pending further information from the company.

It had gained $12.63 to $42.38.

Exchange policies adopted during the last two years have in effect meant thumbs down on speculative companies that have been around for a number of years but show little hope of turning into a producing company reasonably quickly.

The exchange says it will suspend from its trading list the shares of mining and oil companies that have less than $25,000 in net liquid assets or have not carried out appreciable exploration or development work.

If the companies do not meet these requirements within a year their shares will be removed from the trading list.

Since the policy was started 27 companies have had their shares suspended of which 13 have been delisted.

The Canadian Exchange announced Monday trading had resumed in Devil's Elbow Mines Ltd., and Kodiak Petroleums Ltd.

Trading in Devil's Elbow was temporarily suspended last Monday pending a statement by the company.

The company issued a statement that it had completed the second well on its optioned antipluar property in the Ankarton area of Antrose, Alta., and had encountered mineralization.

Kodiak suspended Thursday, issued a statement that there had been no change in its corporate affairs. The exchange asked the company to issue a statement explain weakness in the price of its shares.

Molsons Diversify

MONTREAL (CP) — D. M. Chenoweth, president of Molson Breweries Ltd., told the annual meeting Monday the company will acquire for cash a controlling interest in Vilas Industries Ltd. and Ilsa Ulverstly into non-brewing interests.

Mr. Chenoweth said Molson's initial investment will be about $5,000,000, and suggested it would make a significant contribution to Molson earnings.

Vilas industries, a company of about 500 employees, is engaged in furniture and school supply and furnishing businesses.

The statement said that in the fiscal year ended Feb. 28 Vilas Industries achieved sales of $11,750,000.

Bursar, Librarian Appointed

Two more key appointments today were announced for the staff of Loyalist Campus — the Quinte-area unit of the new Ontario College of Applied Arts and Technology.

Both are Bellevillians:

P. Glyn Harry, who becomes bursar of the campus. Mrs. G. A. McConnell, appointed librarian of a campus library which will be totally available for community use.

Mr. Harry, a registered industrialist accountant, has been comptroller of Deacon Bros. Manufacturers for the past two years. He is a graduate of Sir George Williams University.

Mrs. McConnell is a B.A. who also holds a degree in library science.

With the new appointments seven key staff posts on the Loyalist campus are filled in preparation for its September opening in temporary quarters at Centennial Secondary School.

Prices Fluctuate

MONTREAL (CP)—An official of Klppen and Co. Inc. said Monday the brokerage house is "definitely" continuing its trade in silver options, begun shortly before the outbreak of the Mid-dle East war.

However, he said trading has been difficult because of the wide fluctuation in prices.

Parish Honors Bishop

MARMORA — The most Reverend Francis J. Spence, who was consecrated Bishop last week at St. Mary's Cathedral, Kingston, said his first High Mass as bishop in Marmora Sunday. Assisting him were Msgr. H. J. Farrell of Perth, Rev. Michael Farrell, a classmate, here on holiday from New York City, and Rev. E. J. Keyes, Marmora.

After Mass a presentation of a purse of money was made on behalf of parishioners by Paul Grady, representing the Holy Name Society, Ray Black, the Catholic Parent - Teacher Association, Miss Mary Elizabeth Parcels, the Catholic Youth Organization, and Mrs. Bill Monk, the Catholic Women's League. James L. Shannon gave the address.

A social hour followed in the parish hall, and the C.W.L. served dinner at noon to Bishop Spence, visiting clergy, his family and relatives.

Nonagenarian at Work

Eddie Clarke, 93-year-old Foxbo o resident goes to work every day at nearby woodworking shop. Here he is using tape measure to bore glass. He says work keeps him healthy.

When Should A Man Retire?

What is the right age for a man to retire?

Ask 93-year-old Eddie Clarke of Foxboro, five miles north of Belleville and he will tell you "never."

"What do you want to retire for?" he asks. "You rust out quicker than you wear out."

Besides doing odd jobs about the village — such as mowing lawns, putting on storm windows and cleaning eave troughs — Mr. Clarke goes to work every day at a nearby woodworking shop.

Then to fill in the time the elderly villager takes a bicycle ride. In the winter he goes skating — with old fashioned clip on skates.

A native of the Belleville area Mr. Clarke attended high school in the city and as a young man taught a country school for three years in North Hastings. That was back in 1894.

Then to obtain his permanent teaching certificate he decided to go to teachers college at Peterborough.

But instead of returning to teaching he ended up at Quaker Oats where he worked for the next 25 years.

About 33 years ago Mr. Clarke returned to Foxboro — ostensibly for retirement. But that isn't quite the way it has worked out.

He worked at the Foxboro bakery for a number of years and since then has continued doing odd jobs. Now he has the full time job at the Sleeman and Sons woodworking shop. There he helps to glue cabinets together, runs lumber through the planer, drills glass and keeps the place swept up.

"I've been lucky, I guess," says the 93-year-old youngster, "I guess the work keeps me going."

A strict tee-totaller and non smoker Mr. Clarke easily remembers the early horse-drawn street cars in Belleville and the later conversion to electric tramcars.

As hobbies Mr. Clarke does a bit of clock repairs and writes out poetry learned as a public school boy.

And he does it all without the aid of glasses.

NEED CANADA'S WHEAT

MAPLE CREEK, Sask. (CP) The world may not have enough food by 1980, says Dr. Robert W. Lodge of the Swift Current agricultural experiment station. He told the Maple Creek Agricultural Society Canada's entire 1966 wheat production — 14,000,000 tons — would be needed to feed, underdeveloped countries.

Highlight Of Assembly Was Movie

A capacity crowd of 600 was present at the film, "God Cannot Lie," which was shown at a high school in Peterborough. The film was the highlight of the semi-annual circuit assembly of Jehovah's Witnesses.

By means of portraits and paintings of Bible characters and scenes, the film took the audience from Adam and Eve's fall into sin to the time of the flood of Noah's day. Concerning the flood, the narrator said, "Noah and his family did everything that God command-ed them. They believed that God cannot lie. Because of this belief, they were preserved through the flood that wiped out a civilization."

The narrator continued, "Down through the centuries, God has always fulfilled his purposes. Since God has promised a paradise earth for mankind, then we have every reason to expect that he will bring it about." Concerning the inhabitants of the paradise earth, he said, "Throughout all eternity, God's creatures will raise their voices in songs of praise. Their hearts will overflow with gratitude that Jehovah is the true God who cannot lie."

Scurry Stock Jumps $30

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto Stock Exchange said Monday it has received further information from Scurry-Rainbow Oil Ltd. concerning its reported base-metal find fa northeastern Saskatchewan, but announced no decision on lifting the ban on trading Scurry-Rainbow shares.

The ban was imposed by the exchange Thursday, pending a release of more detailed information about the reported find, which had driven the price of Scurry-Rainbow stock up $11.63 to $42.38.

The exchange said a decision on resuming trade will be taken before today's market opens.

It said Scurry-Rainbow reported results of drilling 11 holes. The assays showed nickel-copper concentrations ranging from .06 per cent to 1.07 per cent and concentrations from a trace as low as .01 per cent to .43 per cent.

The company also announced it encountered concentrations ranging from 2.32 per cent to 2.50 per cent nickel in two five-foot sections in one hole and of 2.12 per cent nickel in a five-foot section of another.

Expo Wardrobe Can Be Problem for Visitors

MONTREAL (CP) — Rainy days at Expo have their own peculiar delight for increasing numbers of children, girls and mature women who have caught on to the hot-weather fad of walking around barefoot.

During hot, wet summer days the puddles at Expo have proven as much of an attraction as the pavilions for women and children.

For most female visitors, however, one or two lightweight, non-iron dresses seem to solve most of the problem.

A conservative A-line dress, for example, coupled with a bright scarf and comfortable walking shoes seems to allow many fairgoers to spend a relatively enjoyable day at the big show.

If a woman has planned to attend a performance at the Expo Theatre later on, the scarf can be replaced by a strand of pearls and a pair of earrings carried in a handbag.

A pair of drip - dry white gloves and an extra pair of nylon hose can also be toted in a purse with no inconvenience.

If a girl wishes to dress on a slightly more casual basis, the pantsuit is an ideal wardrobe item. Complemented with matching shirt and several tops, the ensemble practically comprises a wardrobe in itself.

The site can be a breezy place on many days and a light head scarf tucked into a handbag is advisable.

MARMORA PTA

MARMORA — President Ray Black presided at the June meeting of the Catholic Parent Teachers' Association of Sacred Heart School, Marmora, last week following a banquet in the parish hall.

Principal Mrs. E. P. McNamara, thanked grade 8 mothers for supplying the dinner at the recent principals' meeting in Marmora.

Mrs. McNamara noted that field day activities planned for June 23 had been organized by Mrs. Bill Jones and Rev. Keyes. The events outlined by Mrs. Jones included five competitions for main events, fun games and a ball game with the public school pupils in the afternoon. Refereeing assistance with games were Mrs. Ken Doyle, Mrs. Breea O'Connor, Mrs. Mike Caliery and Mrs. Leo Doyle.

A donation will be sent to the Ball Park Lighting Fund.

Mrs. McNamara noted that prizes would be presented to highest standing pupils in each grade, as well as to students with perfect attendance through the year.

MONTREAL (CP) — Archeologists are examining a human skeleton found under a basement floor in Old Montreal. The bones of a 50-year-old man, coated with something like concrete, were buried under a building adjacent to the 17th century Place Royale.

Successful Garden Party Held at St. Andrew's Church

A large crowd attended the St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church garden party sponsored by the Women's Guild, last Friday afternoon and evening.

The attractive decor for the event held on the parking lot was in charge of the Welcome Group and featured colorful streamers and multi-colored paonies. The entrance gate was decorated with evergreens and summer blooms and the guest tables which encircled a bed of flowers were centred with solitaire peonies with tiny birds on edge of dishes. Convenors of the social event were Mrs. H. McKay and Mrs. G. Durno.

Receiving guests at the entrance were Mrs. V. Weir, president of the Guild, Mrs. A. L. Sutherland, wife of the church minister and Mrs. S. W. Gentle, wife of the minister of St. Columbo Presbyterian Church. Others assisting in the welcoming of guests during the afternoon and evening were: Miss Freida Matthews, Mrs. R. Jones, Mrs. Elridge, Mrs. T. Auger, Mrs. F. Benoit and Mrs. B. Shog. Hostesses were: Mrs. R. Strachot, Mrs. E. Hall, Mrs. C. Ulmer, Mrs. W. Mantle and Mrs. R. Vanderwoert.

Mrs. R. Michaud was in charge of treasurer's duties and Mrs. D. Keyes was convener in the kitchen. A number of the women and young people of the church assisted with the serving.

An antique table with a number of interesting items was in charge of Mrs. Ervin Pigden. A group from Formore Presbyterian Church conducted a bazaar table where a number of miscellaneous items were sold.

A fine program was enjoyed both afternoon and evening and entertainment included numbers by the Girl Chapmen baton twirlers, tap dance numbers by Roberta Forgey and Brenda Sine, a bagpipe selection by Frank Rogers, violin solo by Ivy G. Rodrive, and to round out the evening's program a number of square dances by the Quinte Twirlers.

Designer Predicts Quick Demise for Mini Skirts

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mini-skirts are the least sexy garment that has ever been designed, says Vancouver fashion designer Barbara Roodley.

"By next summer I think we'll be back to the breezy length just below the knee," Mrs. Roodley told a gathering of 180 stenographers and other office workers in Vancouver.

Just returned from a trip to the United Kingdom, Mrs. Roodley described as "awesome" the sight of thousands of miniskirted girls pouring into offices in the morning.

"They are almost mini skirts in London," she reported. "They've got nowhere to go; any shorter and they'd be blouses."

She estimated 65 per cent of working girls in London wear mini-skirts.

Mrs. Roodley said minis are particularly inappropriate for working girls.

"There is nothing so dreadful or earth-shattering as a female in a skirt that is an inspector's nightmare at one place," she said. "When you reach above your head, you lose three inches of skirt length. If you stoop to a file you lose four inches. You just can't indict that on your co-workers, be they male or female."

Mrs. Roodley told the girls it is a myth that mini-skirts are sexy and that mini - wearers dress to please men.

"Mini-skirts are the unsexiest thing that has ever been designed. You're not dressing for men, you're dressing for each other. You want to shock each other—be sexy 'I can do further than she can.'"

The Vancouver designer, whose personal preference is a skirt length just above the knee, concedes there is a time and place for minis — at the weekend and at home and pointed the wearer is still in her early teens.

GIRL GUIDE BROWNIE NEWS

BAYSIDE PACKS

WHITE'S DISTRICT — The 1st and 2nd Bayside Brownie Packs held a Brownie Fly-up on Monday evening in the auditorium at Bayside Public School. Madam Commissioner Jessie Miller presented wings to the following Brownies: Susan Cooney, Lynne McConnell, Debbie Gray, Shelley Consul, Patti Ackarman and Reenia Cuing.

Large wings were tied on the backs of these Brownies and off they flew into Guide Land. They were met by patrol leaders and welcomed by the Guides Captain Jeanne Michaud.

Brownie Marilyn Groves hopped up to Guides by the right of her magic Brownie stone. The grand howl was given to these Brownies for the last time.

The Commissioner of the division, Mrs. Florence Brock presented Bayside Commissioner Jeanne Miller with her warrant.

Brownies and Guides entertained the parents with games and singing. Lunch was served by the Guides.

The Fly-up called with Brownie and Guide taps.

The 1st and 2nd Bayside Brownie Pack Leaders are Brown Owl Marion Ackerman, Tawny Owl Delia Difor, Brown Owl Joan Miller, Commissioner Jeanne Miller and some Guides attended the disbanded service held in Trenton on Sunday. They marched from College Street School to Dufferin Street School where the service was held.

Couple Marks 50th Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Feeney, 10 Patterson street, recently celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary at a buffet luncheon. The toast to the couple was proposed by Robert Fair, Belleville. Present for the celebration was the groomsman, Mrs. Feeney's brother, Joseph Power of Read.

Mr. and Mrs. Feeney have lived in Ameliasburg since their marriage in 1917 in the Church of St. Michael the Archangel by Rev. Killeen. She is the former Marie Power of Read, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Power and he is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Feeney.

The couple have three daughters, Mrs. Gordon (Margaret) Campbell, Toronto; Mrs. William (Betty) Melanson, Cascades, Perq; and Mrs. Barbara Ridler, Belleville. There are two grandsons, Jim of Toronto and Rod of Belleville.

Alouette Club Marks St. Jean Baptiste Day

Saturday afternoon, June 24th, the French Alouette Club, Belleville and region held the annual picnic on the occasion of St.-Jean Baptiste Day. About 75 members and friends and some 65 children gathered for the occasion at Cedardale Beach to enjoy the event, under the direction of Mr. Donat Michaud, chairman of the entertainment committee.

Those present were Mrs. Azelie Benoit of Montreal, Reverend Pierre Frechette, chaplain at the C.F. Base in Trenton, Father Gerard Cuillet from Hamilton, and Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Leguerrier from Ottawa.

Ball games between the parents and the children were enjoyed as well as a swim. The weather was perfect and the surroundings completely suitable for the games and contests organized for the children by Mr. Robert Lapierre, "Uncle Bob" for the little ones, in the absence of Mr. Michel Thiffault who will be transferred to Montreal by the end of the month. Special contests were also organized for the parents. Unfortunately, the president, Mr. J. A. C. Berube and Mrs. Berube, had to leave early to attend a special dinner that evening for the members of the Regional Committee to be held in Kingston. However, before leaving, Mr. Berube expressed thanks to the organizers of the event and to all those who accepted the invitation to participate in this celebration of the French saint patron's day.

After distribution of chips and drinks to the children, more games were conducted up to meal time.

This gathering being the last regular one of the summer, presentation of a souvenir from all members was made to Mr. and Mrs. Gilles Paiement of Trenton, who have been associated with the club for many years and who will be leaving for Germany early this fall.

At dusk, the traditional fire of St. Jean's Day was lit by the vice-president, Mr. Bernard Gagnier. Messrs. Donat Clement and Robert Lapierre during which time a French sing song directed by Father Coulee ended the happy meeting.

Chocolate Cake for 14

By MARY MOORE

. . . so I baked a cake. This is a creation that makes all of your baking efforts worthwhile.

My billeted guest of a few weeks ago, Florence Hessenauer, recommended this prize-winning chocolate cake. She certainly knows a good cake when she tastes one. It is made using the streamlined beater bowl method. I made and took it to the Goldsmith's who had invited us for dinner. There were seven of us but this cake will serve 12 to 14 people.

TUESDAY

PRIZE-WINNING CHOCOLATE CAKE
(with White Whipped Frosting plus . . .)

2 cups sifted cake (soft wheat) flour
1½ cups granulated sugar
2-3 cup cocoa
1¼ tsps. baking soda
1 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. salt
¾ cup best quality shortening (room temperature)
1¼ cups milk - divided (see below)
1 tsp. vanilla
3 large eggs

Into beater bowl sift the sifted flour, sugar, cocoa, baking soda, baking powder and salt. Add the shortening and ¾ cup of the milk and the vanilla. Beat on low speed for 3 min., scraping down sides of bowl once or twice during these 3 min. Add remaining ½ cup milk and the eggs and beat 2 to 2½ min. longer, scraping down bowl once.

Turn into three 8 x 1½" or two 9 x 2" layer cake pans lined on bottoms with buttered wax paper. (This is a lot of batter so be sure your pans are big enough.) Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 30 min. or longer if you used two 9" pans. Touch each cake gently with finger tip. Be sure slight indentation does not remain before removing cakes. Cakes shrink ever so slightly from sides of pan. Cool in pans on cake racks 10 min. Turn out on cake racks to cool, peeling off wax paper. Cakes shrink a little as they cool but this does no harm.

Into small saucepan measure 2 tbsps. corn starch. Slowly stir in 1 cup cold milk. Now cook, stirring constantly, until thick. Chill in refrigerator. Into beater bowl measure ½ lb. soft butter, 1 cup granulated sugar and 1 tsp. vanilla and beat 5 to 10 minutes until snowy white. Add cold milk sauce and beat 15 min. The long beating is required to dissolve sugar granules and to make this fluffy like whipped cream. Do not stint when spreading frosting between layers for this makes plenty. Frost sides before spreading frosting on top. As a crowning touch drizzle one square melted chocolate at random over top and let some drip down sides. Chill cake to harden frosting.

A stellar creation for Dominion Day.

Successful Living

Wheelchair Mother Seeks Help

Dear Doris: Due to arthritis I have been confined to a wheelchair since 1962, just after our son was born. I am not able to do my own house work. My husband has been doing it, and with the farm work to do too it presents a problem.

Our son is five; there is also an elderly gentleman who lives with us. He is of some help while my husband is away. We would be glad to take in an unwed mother with one or two children.

With the help of my son, I try and get things ready for meals, but this is not always easy. I do hope you can help us, as we don't know what else to do, and we do need help. — Waiting.

Dear Waiting: The regional

office of your provincial department of welfare might well guide you to anyone who would be glad to give a hand in your home, at least for a while.

But are you getting all the rehabilitation help you can use? Therapists have devised gadgets for wheelchair homemakers; and kitchens can have built-in reachable surfaces and devices for doing just about everything.

One woman I know about got married after the illness which put her in a wheelchair for life. She now has a family of three and does most of her own housework. Incredible? Just about.

But occupational therapists are working this sort of miracles regularly. Your contact should be the Rehabilitation Foundation of the Disabled, 169 Union Street, West, Kingston.

Dear Doris: I'm going steady with this boy whom I like very much. We've never had any fights, but it seems that every single time we go out his friend is there with him and I don't know how to tell either my steady or his friend that I don't mind him coming once in a while, but not all the time.

I think his friend is trying to break us up. He's always dropping hints of how much fun he and my steady used to have, and reminds him of everything they did before I started going around with him.

I'm beginning to get a bit mad, but I can't seem to tell either one of them off. I hate having fights. — Troubled.

Dear Troubled: Three's a crowd. Suggest to your steady:

(1) that your next date be just you two, like other couples do. Or, (2) that if he must bring his side-kick, you'll get a girl for him and then all four of you can have fun.

If neither of the above makes an impression, better refuse a date or two. There's no peace in keeping silent at such a cost.

To Old Fashioned: Not talking about sex has never prevented people from getting into trouble; though a one-sided bombardment with things sexually stimulating — as does happen today — may be a factor in some of the uncertain ones going astray.

There is room for healthy wholesome sex education; the kind of teaching which explains not only the facts, but contains emotional make-up, what physical indulgences do to us, and the threat they can pose to happy marriage later.

Trinity Guild Holds Centennial Supper

Members of Trinity Church Guild, Shannonville, in centennial costumes, gathered on the decorated lawn of Mr. and Mrs. V. Ramp's house Saturday afternoon for a centennial supper and bazaar.

Guests were welcomed by Mrs. Elmir Brown, assisted by the president, Mrs. A. McKenzie and Mrs. S. Fitzgerald.

Mrs. G. Sager, Mrs. M. Hill and Mrs. T. Marcle convened the hand sewing table while Mrs. Joan Henderson and Mrs. F. Peters were in charge of the home cooking. Proceeds of the candy table, convened by Mrs. E. Barberstock, will be used to send a choir member to Camp Hyanto. A display of antique articles was admired by all Johnnie Kent and Erma Baibersteck, in charge of the fish pond, assured each fisherman a good catch.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Warren, assisted by Mrs. V. Ramp, Mrs. L. Hill, Mrs. J. Kent and Mrs. A. Long, served a buffet supper. Mrs. E. Carley, Mrs. Gerald Sager, Mrs. L. Reid and Mrs. D. Kent helped in the kitchen. Mrs. A. Spencer was in charge of the sale of tickets on a draw.

J. Miller, 27 Maple Dr., was winner of a centennial quilt. The hamper of groceries went to A. Ussa, Farley Avenue, and Ray Reid, Shannonville, won the maple syrup.

Ann Landers

Lies Told by Mom Cause Home Friction

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This isn't much of a problem but it bothers me and I think maybe you can set me straight.

Almost every evening my aunt telephones my mother and asks what we had for supper. My mother always makes up a menu like they're serving at the Waldorf Astoria.

Last night we had sauerkraut and wieners. My mother told my aunt we had sirloin steaks and mushroom gravy. She went on to describe a fancy dessert that I never even heard of. Tonight we had ham hocks and beans which were very tasty. Mom told my aunt we were eating rock Cornish hen and avocado salad.

ANN LANDERS

After Mom hung up I asked her why she tells my aunt such lies. She said, "Because it's none of her business what you eat." I said, "Why don't you just tell her that instead of making up things?" My Mom got mad and gave me a wallop that nearly landed me in the middle of next week.

What do you think about this? — STILL STANDING.

DEAR STILL: I think you should take the hint and not offer any more suggestions on this subject. Of course you are right, and now that you see how unattractive lying can be it should make you more determined than ever to stick to the truth.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am deeply concerned about our 7-year-old son. I cannot discuss this with anyone, not even my husband because I don't want to give him cause to worry. Furthermore, he would not be very sympathetic to this kind of problem.

Our son likes to play with My little sister's dolls and pretend he is the mother. He enjoys her girl-type toys, cooking utensils, and housecleaning appliances. His sister is nine years old and often tells him to play he is her girl friend or her sister. I have tried to shame him out of his girlish actions but have not been at all successful.

I have read a few articles on homosexuality and I am worried sick that our son might have this problem. Will you please tell me if an answer is forthcoming, or does it sound like my fears are well grounded? — PANIC BUTTON.

DEAR PANIC: Your son obviously favors the female role at the moment, but this is not conclusive evidence that he is a homosexual. Little boys who have older sisters often imitate them and compete in any way they can.

My advice to you is to get that child away from his sister. Take him to the homes of other boys his age so he can play ball with them. Invite the neighbor boys to your home. Ask your husband to play with his son and take him to sports events. When the child begins to have fun being a boy, chances are good that he will abandon his girlish ways.

Confidential to DISAPPOINTED AND FILLED WITH DOUBTS: Take her word for it and let the matter drop. She is your wife now and what occurred in the past does not matter. It's how she conducts herself in the future that counts. It is indeed possible that she came to the marriage bed 100 per cent pure (as she claims). That "proof" of virginity as described in that book is not always present.

THE LITTLE WOMAN

"They say money is loosening up. I hope you're not going to fight this trend."

Confusion Reigns Over Weekend's Holidays

OTTAWA (CP) — One man's guess may be as good as another's in figuring out how to apply the federal government's proclamation of July 3 as a "public holiday."

The holiday was declared because July 1, Dominion Day, falls this Saturday, but most Canadians would not be working anyway. Prime Minister Pearson said a week-day holiday should be provided to mark observance of Dominion Day.

Meetings were under way here Monday to establish what federal employees, quasi-employees are covered by the order and by existing legislation—and on what terms.

"All I can tell you at this time is that we're trying to get the thing cleared up," a treasury board official said.

His expected a public statement would be made in a day or two. The clarification is likely to affect indirectly many persons working outside government institutions.

The June 13 vice-regal proclamation addressed itself to "loving subjects and all others whom these presents may concern."

It instructed them to take notice that July 3 was being appointed a "public holiday" and to "govern themselves accordingly."

Because the federal government can grant a holiday only to persons within its jurisdiction, the proclamation was speaking only to a minority of Canadians.

Others, such as those employed in any private business or provincial civil service, fall under provincial jurisdiction.

As Prime Minister Pearson told the Commons in explanation June 14, it is up to the provinces to make their own decisions on the extra holiday within their own borders.

Part of the confusion has apparently stemmed from the terms of existing legislation governing federal civil servants.

Under the Financial Administration Act, they are entitled to Dominion Day as a statutory holiday, and if it falls on a weekend—as it does this year—to receive the next working day instead—in this case, July 3.

Similar guarantees are contained in the Canada Labor Standards Code, which applies to Crown corporations.

The treasury board official said it is proving a thorny matter to decide how the legislation will be applied to specific groups. Terms of some labor contracts must be studied.

"Equally important there may be some private companies looking for a federal guide in determining which holiday they will grant and what rates of pay will be; employees required to work on the 3 or July 1.

Federal officials have not been in contact with the provinces to find out what their decisions will be, but one purpose of making the proclamation was to set an example, hoping the provinces would follow suit.

This puts a special urgency on clarifying the situation, so that the provinces will know precisely what the example is.

The proclamation made July 3 a public holiday as distinct from a statutory holiday, which is fixed by legislation passed by Parliament.

Under the Financial Administration Act, federal employees always enjoy as days off New Year's Day, Good Friday, Easter Monday, Victoria Day, Dominion Day, Labor Day, Thanksgiving Day, Remembrance Day and Christmas Day.

Keen to Learn

NAPLES (AP) — Giovanni Carillo, 18, wanted to go to school but, naked in fell on personal violence and arson charges. He was barred from a school for illiterates because he lived outside the school district, so he tried to burn the building down. His Molotov cocktail bomb succeeded only in destroying the door.

Macpherson House Furnishings Chosen

NAPANEE—There has been a great deal of activity all summer both inside and outside the Macpherson House, whose restoration is the Centennial project of the Lennox and Addington Historical Society.

Although much of the house is not yet ready for its furnishings, pieces are already being made, and the society has found that some of the material now in its possession is of the proper period and can be used in the house, the social centre of the community's young men.

John Alexander Macdonald was practising law in Napanee in the early 1830s. Also practising was his relative, and the young attorney was a frequent visitor in the home.

Last August a furnishing committee of members was appointed to decide, not only on furnishings, including curtains and floor coverings, but also on colors for walls and woodwork. Mrs. Norman Hutchison, Mrs. Sally Earl, Mrs. Hugh Ramsay, Mrs. Leyla Woods and Miss Hazel VanAlstine, all of Napanee, Mrs. H. C. Burleigh of Bath and Thomas Riedel of Willowbank Forge, Bath, have been working since then. Last week they met with two of a committee of three consultants, Mrs. G. F. Stanley of Kingston and Mrs. Jean Mathiesich of Milford, curator of furnishings for Upper Canada Village, who checked on the decisions made by the local committee.

The kitchen will have gray woodwork, whitewashed walls, and deep turkey red curtains. The local committee at first rejected the gray woodwork, but yielded when reminded of the bright brass and copper kitchen utensils which would hang near the fireplace. The paint, to be authentic, must be coloured with lamp black, as it was in early days. The society now has in its possession the rag carpet which will cover the floor.

Teams of young people are presently daily trying to strip the eight coats of paint from the woodwork of the other rooms on the ground floor. The seventh layer is the worst, a horrible gray. Fortunately there are hopes that the gray, permitting the use of white in the restoration. The plastered walls have a gray wash, which will be duplicated.

Inter-faith Service Held in Deseronto

DESERONTO — Representatives of all five of the churches in and near Deseronto attended the centennial inter - faith service held Sunday evening in St. Mark's Anglican Church. The rector, the Rev. A. F. Dowdell, was chiefly responsible for the planning and organization of the service, but says it was a community effort. Representatives of four of the five churches took an active part in the service.

Mr. Dowdell, who was in charge, opened the service, and the Rev. B. J. Barrett of St. Vincent de Paul's Roman Catholic Church closed the service with the benediction. The sermon was delivered by the Rev. D. G. Morton of the Presbyterian Church of the Redeemer. The United Church is temporarily without a minister but William George Lyons, steward of the church, represented it. Ernest Leaver, lay reader represented St. Mark's Church and Earle J. Brant, the lay reader, represented the Rosevyn Church.

The choir, made up of members from all the choirs of the participating churches, sang an anthem. Charles Knight was the organist.

Church Records Transferred

NAPANEE—Sunday saw the official union of the churches of the Bay Charge and Trinity United Church. Three of the five original churches of the Bay had been closed previously by declaration of the Bolleville Presbytery and the Official Boards, Anderson and Hamilton have also been closed, and at the service Sunday morning their records and furnishings were presented to Trinity Church. In receiving them, the minister, the Rev. Irvine Johnston, mentioned especially the communion table from Gretna Church, which will now be used as the centre of worship in Trinity Sunday school auditorium.

Marmora

MARMORA — Mrs. Clarence Shannon, accompanied by Mrs. David Crawford of Hamilton, has returned home after a two-week vacation in Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kuck are visiting relatives here and holidaying at Crowe Lake.

Mrs. Harry Draper returned home this week following a ten-day holiday visit her son Wayne, Mrs. Draper and family in Prince Edward Island.

Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Barker, Lewis and John attended the funeral of Mr. Barker's brother, Vernon Barker of Belleville, who died suddenly June 9. . .

Mrs. L. H. Stewart of Toronto, Mrs. W. Close, Mrs. J. McGuirk, Judy, Darlene and Kathy of Kingston were recent guests of Mrs. J. Park.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Dantzer of Lakeland, Florida are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Wells.

Mr. and Mrs. Andre Verreault of Montreal spent a few days recently with Mr. and Mrs. Ed O'Connor.

Batawa

BATAWA — Miss Linda Duncan of the Nightingale School of Nursing, Toronto, spent the weekend with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Duncan.

Mrs. J. Jasak is spending a few days in Toronto.

Batawa United Church congregational picnic was held at Presqu'ile Point Saturday.

Rev. and Mrs. Cliff Plant and family of Lead, Idaho, are spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. E. Erion and family.

Melrose

MELROSE — Miss Agnes Klapka, home economist from Marathon, and Miss Barbara Wesse, home economist from Bruce County spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Clare Wesse.

Many friends and neighbors joined with members of the family of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Milligan as they celebrated the 50th anniversary of their wedding Sunday afternoon. The gathering was called to order by Leslie McLaren. Mrs. Lorne Milligan read an address and Elliott Embury presented a gift of money on behalf of the community.

'Old Timers of '59' Recalled 50 Years Ago

Editor's note: In 1917 the following article appeared in the Feb. 14 edition of The Ontario. A copy was made available to The Intelligencer by Clayton French, 34 Charlotte Street.

The following verses were written by Vet (Buck) Hannan, an old Belleville boy, who went to reside in Rochester. They were dedicated to the Belleville amateur minstrels, and published in The Weekly Chronicle. They have been preserved by the city bailiff, Mr. David Ketcheson, and have been handed to The Ontario for republication, which we gladly do, assuming they will be of interest to a large number of our readers, particularly to those whose memories extend back more than half a century:

"Say, Jimmie, did you ever make any money off the Music grid northward some forty years ago, or don't you remember much about it?"

"Yes, I made a fortune, but it was a misfortune, for I blowed it all with Stranger Mangin, Big Pete Huffmere, Shiner Ryan, Libby Clement, Andy Crozier, Jim McCarthy . . .

"Hold on there, Jimmy, that will do; do you remember all those old-time boys?"

"I remember all the boys
And the men who kept the shops;
I remember when Capt. James —
Was Chief of the Belleville cops.

"I remember the gold excitement;
I remember the mounted police;
And the Hessian House of Fanning,
And the hotel run by Weese.

"I remember the old Dafoe House,
When run by Fee Napoleon;
I remember the Tiger Brewery,
When owned by Mrs. Daw.

"I remember Jimmie Mickie
When he kept the old Empire;
Also a peddling route
Owned by Jack McGuire.

"I remember Henry Covert,
And a sailor, Billy Hart,
Who strolled and sang across the bay
In a punt or fishing smack.

"I remember long Paddy McGinnis . . .
He's dead long years ago . . .
And I remember Levi Young
When he bought Sam Stickney's show.

"I remember Johnnie O'Rourke,
Way down the Ferry Slip,
And with Bill Smith on the ferry boat
I often took a trip.

"I remember old man Bedford,
Who kept a grocery store;
I remember Sylvester Sidey,
Along her of Quinte shore.

"I remember Huron's Foundry,
And Hessin Bogart's Mill;
I remember the circus ground and race track,
When up on Tayler's Hill.

"I remember old Zene Dafoe,
Who ran the county jail;
I remember Keys, the auctioneer,
And Mickey Nulty's bargain sale.

"I remember the old wood market,
And Saddy Waters' blacksmith shop;
I remember Marlowe's Western House,
Where the Frenchman used to stop.

"And in those dear old bygone days,
Their hunger, to appease,
The farmers would rush to Hambly's
And get their bun and cheese.

"I remember when Harry Corby
Used to hunt with Lemuel Pake,
And Fred Leighton could eat all the pies,
That Lem's mother she could bake.

"I remember Pidgeon's bakery
Along the Moira's bank;
I remember the old Hospital school house,
Where Hamilton there did teach.

"I remember Michael O'Dempsey's College,
And Borden's grammar school;
And oh, dear, boys, what a terrible noise!
If we broke the golden rule.

"I remember Treasurer McAmsay;
I remember John O'Hara;
And I remember Michael Gillen,
A dealer in hardware.

"I remember Police Justice Bartlett,
Way back in sixty-three;
Abe Diamond, and Tom Holden,
Tommy Good, and Johnny Fee.

"I remember Horace Yeomans,
Ayre and Mills Flint, so good . . .
From his sawmill, with a free will,
The poor got their firewood.

"I remember William Foston;
I remember Dr. Hope;
I remember old Dave Andrews,
And an alderman, named Pope.

"I remember old Job Langham;
I remember Dr. Mooney . . .
If he got hold of a shingle bolt
His mark would be on it soon.

"I remember Brown and St. Charles
That run the carriage plant;
The first pathmaster I remember,
His name it was James Grant.

"John Kerr collected taxes;
Jimmy Wilson was on the force;
John Roach and old Pat Salmon,
I remember them, of course.

"I remember Kennedy's drygoods store,
Robert and Graham Fraser . . .
You had to do your trading face to face
For then there were no 'phones.

"I remember Dr. Holden;
I remember Dr. Morse;
I remember Wallace, the miller,
Who ground the wheat to flour.

"I remember Mr. Wannacott,
Who lived on Meyers' Hill;
I also remember Wheedon,
Who owned the wooden mill.

"At the station was Bill Docter,
. . . at the upper bridge, John Doyle;
And Sylvester Hannan's shoe shop
Was very near Sam Kyle.

"I'm writing of old-timers
Who were born in '59 . . .
There was the joker, Barney Golligoly
And jolly Stephen O'Brien.

"I remember Wellington Murney
And Edmund Murney, too,
And Edward Bellton, a butcher,
Like Leo Gibson and Jim McCue.

"I remember black John Hightower,
And Sailor Hanley, too;
And bold Bill Young, the 'cock o' the walk,'
And Florence Donahue.

"And Turner Boyd, the barber,
And 'Uncle Anse' Fry;
Bill Alford, Tobe Mink, also,
And Al. Bruneau, the spy.

"Yes, I remember both good and bad
And could call them all by name,
But, just like a drive of sawlogs,
We are playing the same game . . .

"We are floating down the stream of life,
Some wise men and some fools,
Some safely run the rapids,
Some are caught in the whirlpools.

"But let us work with a will up Murney's Hill,
Bye and bye we'll take a nap . . .
And the good and bad will be sorted out,
When we arrive at the Gap."

Kiddie Car for Adults

Ford of Britain recently unveiled this prototype of the "Comuta" electric car. The experimental car is powered by conventional lead-acid batteries and has a range of 40 miles at a steady 25 miles-an-hour. Only six feet eight inches long, it can hold two adults and two children. It has no clutch or gears.

Stresses Need For Funds to Assist Israel

NEW YORK, Special — With its financial resources almost completely drained in the recent conflict, the State of Israel faces a very difficult struggle to rebuild its war-dislocated economy, Finance Minister Pinchas Sapir declared this week. Mr. Sapir called for widespread response to the Israel Bond campaign as the central source of investment funds that will be required to put the country's economy back on its feet.

In an address to trade union leaders in New York under the auspices of the State of Israel Bond drive, Israel's Finance Minister emphasized that an extraordinary flow of Israel Bond dollars was needed at the present time to finance the country's full economic recovery from the tremendous losses in exports, in tourist trade and the disruption of normal industrial and agricultural production.

Stressing the strategic importance of Israel Bonds in the economic reconstruction program, Mr. Sapir said:

"During the past 18 years Israel Bonds have helped us in all the work we have done in Israel — in agriculture, industry, road-building, irrigation and in all other phases of economic development. Now we are in great need of Israel Bond money to strengthen the basic structure of our economy. We must again develop our tourism, expand our exports and produce more than ever before."

In the coming weeks Israel Bonds will play a key role because Israel's economic resources were severely strained in its recent struggle for survival, he emphasized.

Regional director of sale of State of Israel bonds in Ontario is Maurice Skalnick, 22 Glen Park Avenue, Toronto 12.

Strictly Personal

Was Remark Candid or Rude?

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Antics with Semantics:

I heard it "from a reliable source"; you "picked...up some skuttlebutt"; he "repeated an unfounded rumor."

My response was "honestly candid"; yours was "brutally frank"; his was "unnecessarily rude."

I am "flexible"; you are "indecisive"; he is "wishy-washy."

I was caught off blance; you fumbled; he dropped the ball.

I am for more stringent gun laws, so that people can't shoot each other so easily; and what I'd like to do with the people who oppose such laws is — shoot them.

When you give an example that isn't relevant, I call it a "false parallel"; when I give an example that isn't relevant I call it "analogy."

Somebody is...the far left who is against all government is an "anarchist"; but somebody on the far right who is against all government is somehow a "libertarian."

I excuse my personal excesses on the ground that "man, after all, is just an animal"; but I rebuke your sensual excesses on the ground that "man, after all, is more than just an animal."

As an affluent liberal, I believe fervently that "people should be allowed to live wherever they want to" — because I know that anybody who can afford to move next door to me will be clean enough, rich enough, and educated enough to make absolutely no difference in my neighborhood life.

The colleague I happen to like has a "drinking problem"; the colleague I happen to dislike is a "drunk."

I sent my children away to boarding school at an early age "to give them a sense of independence and self-reliance"; you sent yours away "to get them off your hands."

When the verdict goes my way, I applaud the maxim that "justice is blind" and impartially makes decisions without regard to persons or privileges; when the verdict goes against me, I point out that "justice is blind" and can't see what it's really doing.

I am a "seasoned veteran"; you are an "old-timer"; he is a "super-annuated fossil."

If I like it, it's an "aroma"; if I don't, it's an "odor."

A "public servant" is a "bureaucrat" who has decided to see it my way.

ANAF News

During the bustle of Veterans' Week no report was had about the Provincial Command Convention. The chief event of interest to the Duke of Edinburgh. Until was the election of one of its members to the position of 2nd vice - president. The president and members extend their heartiest congratulations to Comrade Stan McBurnie, who has long been a valued member of the club's executive until being elected to the Provincial Command Executive.

A member of the HPER Spts. Mess states that a six - pounder gun, a relic from the Armonies Artillery Days, is being repaired and cleaned up and will be presented to the city for humidic. Also on the Zwicks Island Centenial Park in memory of the artillery members who enlisted here in Belleville in both wars.

The sick chairman reports that Cde. Bert Herridge is still in the Belleville Hospital but it was expected that Cde. Sheldon Smith was to come home this weekend. Other comrades hospitalized are Frank Sparks, Ontario Hospital, Napanee, and Jack Rathotte in Sarnia. Cde. Joe Sarnis is confined to his home and also Cde. Cec Chapman. All have either been visited or written to and I noted so.

The membership chairman, Ron Baker, again asks any comrade who believes he is due for a 25 - year pin, honorary membership or who has not yet been initiated, to submit his name to either the Stewards or Cde. Ron. He says that names are quite slow in being submitted.

Inadvertently, in reporting the ANAF Curling Sports winners, it was shown that Cde. Terry Boyle was the cribbage winner. Actually he was on the runner up team at shuffleboard and it was Cde. George Locke that was the winner of the cribbage tournament. Sorry, George.

The next big event of the season will be the big summer picnic and all arrangements have been made. It only depends on the co-operation of the weatherman for it to be another glorious occasion and not only for the children as the grown ups enjoy it every bit as much as the wee ones. It will be at the same place and under the same conditions as last year as most members agree that it was one of the best spots yet visited.

Wooler

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Hawes returned to England Tuesday after spending three weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Percy Goodleg.

A shower in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Fox was held in the United Church parlors Friday night.

Doug Fox is still a patient in Trenton Memorial Hospital.

Mrs. Edith Anderson and her daughter Diane, Ottawa, spent the weekend with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Austin.

BOY SCOUT ACTIVITIES

CHURCH PARADE

MADOC — The annual open air church parade for the Moira Valley District Scouts was held last Sunday at the Marmora High School sports field. Over 250 Scouts, Cubs, Guides and Brownies from Bonarlaw, Stirling, Foxboro, Plainfield, Tweed, Land O' Lakes, Northbrook, Madoc and Marmora participated. The march past took place in the main street with District Commissioner Joe Irish and Warden William Shannon taking the salute.

The service was conducted by District Chaplain James H. Thompson. Rev. Doug Miller, United Minister of the Marmora charge gave the address. Scouts and Guides read the lessons, the Cubs sang the Centennial hymn while D.C. Joe Irish and Guide Commissioner Mrs. Fred Ireland in the Promise. Quints Sea Cadet Band played for the parade. Mrs. Marion Russell, Plainfield was awarded her ten-year service medal and badge, while Cub Terry Robinson of Madoc received his religious and his emblem badge. A.D.C. Ernest Harvey, Frankford was parade marshal.

Advertising puts products out of business, too!

ADVERTISING IS A HELPFUL GUIDE TO QUALITY

Survival of the fittest, a basic law of nature, works pretty well in the free enterprise system, too.

Products that don't measure up, products that haven't kept pace with developments in their field, new products not yet fully thought out, and products that are not competitively priced often fall by the way.

And rightly so, we say.

Advertising has a lot to do with making this system work. For advertising is simply an efficient way of spreading news about products and services. And when the news about one product is better than the news about another, you can be sure consumers will turn to the better product. The other either has to be improved or is taken off the market.

Some advertising, regrettably, is misleading. But to blame all advertising for the misdeeds of a few advertisers is like condemning all mankind because some men are thieves.

Advertising is still the best—and cheapest—method yet devised for spreading the good news about the products and services designed to help make life a little more comfortable, a little more pleasant.

HUSHMOUTH REPORTS

Dear Boss: —

Uncle Stinkweetz was up from New York over the weekend on his way to Expo 67 and wanted to know if there is an Upper Slobbovian Pavilion down there because that's where Aristo Gashmouth's Folks originated.

He says Centennials are a great thing whether it be sport, marriage, family reunions or drinking spree.

Uncle Slosh is a great sports fan. My grandpappy Fishsmith was a fine baseball player and some thirty years ago took part in a game that was played best as they were in 1867 with the same uniforms, rules, and as much as possible the atmosphere.

Fifty score years back is a long, long time, boss. History has been made, nations have been remodelled and remodelled, science in all branches has made strides.

There has come a change in ideas, a change in thought, a change in expression. Time has not stood still.

Back 99 or 100 years ago, said the Uak, Queen Victoria was ruling a right large scepter in England. Russia was making passes at Turkey. In the USA General Ulysses S. Grant was smoking big black cigars as a presidential hobby. Scientific wonders were achieved when one Vander Weyde succeeded in making electric light effectual in photography.

And baseball was played, but such baseball would scarcely be recognized today. There were ten men on a side including a right shortstop. A batter received nine "ball" balls before getting a walk. The pitcher was compelled to make his pitch underhand — overhand was against the rules.

Those were the principal variations, boss, but there were others, too, to make the present variation of the game as different from the 1867 style as sardines from sturgeon.

And the uniforms! The players were ties on their shirts. Each shirt had a fishy hue or design to add class. The pants were quilt-padded. The shoes were high. The hats were crude affairs. The caps were square. It was quite an outfit.

The first of these 1876 exhibitions was played with all the rules of 90 years ago being observed, in Boston on June 24th the first in the centennial series to be played around the National League. The second was played in the Polo Grounds, in New York city.

Then were the days, sighed the Uak. The pops were gay rollicking squirts who could drink a keg of beer in two or three gulps while the mamas were blushing gals in long braids and sceans and oceans of petticoats, skirts and other flowing dress gimmicks.

On Sundays and other days when no ball games were on tap they went to strawberry socials on lush lawns — or picnics where the meals flowed freely while the men danced with the "strawberry blonded and the hands played on."

They travelled in charabancs, buggies, democrats and other quaint horse vehicles. Hickory nuts were roasted for brown bread, baked beans and handfilled tub baths, while sneezen swains didn't have to past the old "sents gut" cliche. The coal-horse pong or mustang between the shafts always got everybody home.

But back to the baseball, boss.

If the pitcher threw overhand or sidearm, the umpire waved a cane and declared "foul ball." If a pitcher foul balls three times in the same inning the umpire declared the game forfeit to the other side by a 9-0 score.

Under 1867 rules a batter could call for either a high ball, a low ball or a fair ball. There were no pinch-hitters. The winning side received the ball used in the game. A lost ball called for a five-minute halt while a search was made for the pellet after which, if needed, a new ball was put into play.

The catcher wore no skingard or mask, nor even a glove. He stood back near the grandstand and caught the ball on the first bounce. A batter who hit a foul ball could be retired if the ball was caught on the first bounce. A fair fly, however had to be caught before it hit the ground.

There was only one umpire who sat on a chair near homeplate and gave his decisions.

Wonder ,boss, what baseball and other sports will be like in 2067?

Royal Henley

Fashion Page Morsel

HENLEY ON THAMES, England (CP)—The fourth episode in England's June sport-social program, the Henley Royal Regatta, opens Wednesday.

Championship tennis at Wimbledon, the Royal Ascot horse race and test cricket at Lords —India and England—have already been serving up tasty morsels for the fashion pages as well as the sports editions.

Mini-skirts at Ascot probably attracted the most attention but the Henley affair, first held in 1836, can be expected to remain in a class of its own.

The usual blue - and - white striped tents have blossomed again on the green meadows alongside the Thames, ready to house hundreds of competing boats.

Canada is not a Henley competitor this year. The United States is represented and there are rowers from East Germany, Poland, Holland, Switzerland and New Zealand as well as Britain.

East Germany, which won its five of six international events last year, is again trying with six teams but rowing sources think the Germans may not be as strong as in 1966.

Indications are that Tideway Scullers, Britain's leading eight, and an East German crew, S. C. Wissenschaft from Leipzig, will meet Saturday in the final of the Grand Challenge Cup, the premier event.

Wins Junior Golf Tourney

FONTHILL, Ont. (CP)—Steve Hoffman, 18, of Toronto Monday won the Niagara Peninsula junior invitational golf tournament on a 12-foot birdie put on the second extra hole.

Hoffman and three others—Jim Menary of Toronto, Bob Doerr of the host Lookout Point Golf Club and John Wynn of Hamilton—all carded five-over par 77s over the 6,327 - yard course.

Mets Stop Pirates

Cubs Reaching Bearhood; 7 In Row

By MIKE RECHT
Associated Press Sports Writer

Rookie pitcher Jim Cosman of St. Louis Cardinals railed on a new no-windup delivery Monday night to get across a four-hitter for 8 3-3 innings as the Cardinals defeated San Francisco Giants 2-1.

"Billy Muffett (Cardinal pitching coach) changed my delivery," Cosman said. "I've used it before, but it felt good before the game, so I tried it."

Chicago Cubs also were doing things the new way again Monday afternoon, beating Philadelphia Phillies 4-3 and extending their winning streak to seven games, longest since 1954.

New York Mets pulled a surprise too, coming from behind to upset Pittsburgh Pirates 3-2, while Claude...Osteen rolled along for Los Angeles Dodgers with a five - hitter that halted Cincinnati Reds 3-0. Atlanta and Houston were not scheduled.

For his pleading success in his first appearance since being called up from Tulsa of the Pacific League last week, Cosman credits Muffett.

"He had a dream last night that I should try the no-windup delivery," Cosman said, "and when anybody dreams about my pitching, I've got to try his suggestion."

Cosman, who hurled a two-hit, 2-0 shutout at the Cubs on the last day of the 1966 season, made four relief appearances this year before he was sent down. He allowed only one unearned run before he left with two on and one out in the ninth. Nelson Briles got the last two outs.

Cosman also drove in the decisive second run in the second inning with his first major league hit as he led the league-leading Cardinals to a 3½ game - lodge over Cincinnati.

Successive homers by Billy Williams and Ron Santo and a run - scoring single by Al Spangler in the first inning kept the surprising Cubs on target, pulling them within a half game of the Reds. Rookie Rich Nye, 6-3, and relievers Cal Koonce and Chuck Hartenstein protected the lead.

The last - place Mets were strapping along, as usual, behind 2-0 before Ken Boyer tied the game with his first homer with two out in the eighth inning. Pinch hitter Ed Charles completed the about face with a run-scoring single in the ninth off Elroy Face. Ron Taylor of Oakville, Ont., who pitched the ninth, got the victory.

Osteen had little trouble with the injury - plagued Reds as he raised his record to 10-3. Only one man got past second base against him.

Ron Hunt backed him up with a homer and Willie Davis tripled in a run and scored on Ron Fairly's sacrifice fly as the Dodgers beat Mel Queen, 3-2.

Canadian Open

Dickinson In; Snead Is Out!

MONTREAL (CP) — Gardner Dickinson, who Sunday captured the first major pro tournament by five years with his 72-hole total of 271 at the Cleveland Open is in, but veteran Sam Snead is out.

That was the word Monday after Jack Tuthill of the PGA arrived in Montreal for the Canadian Open, scheduled for the 18th green Sunday after the 30 - year - old veteran had picked up his $20,700 pay cheque.

Snead in turn advised officials here Monday he will be unable to appear because of a sore hand. George Archer, also of the touring pros, also scratched.

While a field of approximately 170 scrambled for the 30 remaining places, after elimi-tions, over the Pinegrove course Monday, a pair of Canadian pros gave the Municipal layout their first whirl.

Moe Norman of Kitchener and WIM Homenuik of Winnipeg went around in 86 and 73 over the par-71 layout. Norman had an eagle and five birdies in his par-shattering practice round.

Tuthill managed to sign Dickinson of Lost Tree Village, Fla., Canadian Open, scheduled for the Montreal Golf Club June 29-July 2.

Tuthill announced that Dickinson received $2,000 for his victory at the Cleveland Open.

Four Repeaters

Kaline Tops AL All-Stars

NEW YORK (AP)—Al Kaline of Detroit Tigers led the list of those with 342 votes today when Baseball commissioner William Eckert announced the results of the poll of American League players, managers and coaches for the all-star team to face the National League July 11 at Anaheim, Calif.

Kaline and Bill Freehan of the Tigers and Baltimore Orioles' Robinson boys — outfielder Frank and third baseman Brooks—were the only repeaters from last year's starters. Pitchers and other squad members will be picked later by manager Hank Bauer of Baltimore.

Rod Carew, second baseman with Minnesota Twins, became the only rookie to make the club. Rico Petrocelli, Boston Red Sox shortstop, also was picked for the first time. Harmon Killebrew of Minnesota at first base and Carl Yastrzemski of Boston in the outfield have been all - stars before, but were not starters last season. There were only two left-handed batters — Yastrzemski and Carew.

Kaline received all but five of the votes he could possibly have polled, for players are not allowed to pick their own teammates. The American League had 272 ballots and Detroit contributed 26 of them. Thus Kaline got 342 of a possible 347.

Frank Robinson, the triple crown champ and most valuable player in 1966, drew 239 votes, missing on only six ballots of a possible 345. Baltimore had 28 votes.

Richmond Leafs Keep Pace

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Richmond Braves simply had too many horses for Rochester Red Wings Monday night, but Toronto Maple Leafs chewed up oats of gas against Columbus Jets in the only two International League games played.

The third scheduled game, featuring Syracuse Chiefs at Jacksonville Suns, was postponed because of rain.

The Braves and the Leafs kept pace in the close - after first-place Rochester, each 4½ games behind tied for second. Richmond won 7-1 and the Leafs won 10-9.

Felstein Verdicts McBride

TORONTO (CP) — Bob (Freaky Ray) Felstein of Toronto, after a third-round knockdown, plodded to a unanimous decision over Archie McBride of Trenton, N.J., in a heavyweight boxing match Monday.

Using a left hook to good effect, Felstein absorbed severe body blows but was in command, particularly in the late stages. However, some of the crowd of about 2,800 booed the decision.

Judge J. Johnson favored Felstein 48-46, Judge Tony Canzano 50-45 and Referee Jackie Silver 47-44.

Strike Solid Threat

TORONTO (CP) — A strike against tracks operated by the Jockey Club in Ontario became a solid threat Monday night from thoroughbred horsemen in the province.

At a special meeting, the horsemen overwhelmingly endorsed withholding entries from Fort Erie race track July 3 unless the Jockey Club agrees to a one-year contract calling for purse schedules based on 46.5 per cent of the pari-mutuels handle.

The motion gave the Ontario section of the Horsemen's Benevolent and Protective Association the right to call a halt to all racing in the province by boycotting the early bout.

The Jockey Club, which refused to send delegates to the meeting, has steadfastly refused to enter into any agreement based on a percentage of the betting handle.

Entries for the July 3 racing at Fort Erie would have to be made Friday morning.

Argonauts Receive Surprise

AURORA, Ont. (CP) — Toronto Argonauts received a couple of happy surprises Monday during training session here for the coming Canadian Football League season when a pair of veteran players signed contracts.

Defensive lineman Mike Wadsworth told coach Leo Cahill Sunday he was forsaking football for law studies. Defensive half Ed Learn, picked up from Montreal Alouettes in an off-season trade, said earlier he would either play for Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

But, Monday both turned up at training camp and signed contracts for the coming season.

Handsome new decanter. Smooth, light flavour.

Now you know why Hiram Walker's Gold Crest is the hit of every party.

When a whisky is as smooth as Gold Crest, you've got something good going for you. Because everybody likes it. And since a whisky like this doesn't happen very often, we've decided to celebrate this Centennial year by putting Gold Crest up in a new kind of decanter. Tall and cylindrical. Clean, clear, and slim. With a cut glass sunburst in the base. It lets you show off just a bit. Because it looks great, and tastes so smooth and light, it's the kind of whisky that goes well at any kind of party. Try it at your next party and see. Gold Crest. The Party Whisky.

Santana Defeat Stuns Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (CP) - Today is ladies' day in the All-England lawn tennis championships.

On the day the women players set out on their title hunt and the fans see the latest tennis fashions.

This year, the accent is expected to be on mini-skirts and colored knickers.

Wimbledon has an all-white costume rule for its women players. The rule was rigidly enforced two years ago after a parade of multi-colored panties on the centre court.

But Teddy Tinling, who designs dresses for most of the women players, has decided the time has come to try for a bit more color. He has fitted many players with white dresses trimmed with bright colors—with alternatives in all-white in case the officials object.

Frank Tuivin of Montreal, playing tournament tennis as a Canadian after eight years in Florida, came from behind to defeat Sergio Tacchini of Italy 2-6, 6-1, 6-3, 6-4.

Australian Roy Emerson, already slightly out as the tournament favorite, defeated Keith Carpenter of Montreal 6-3, 6-3, 6-2.

"Roy started slowly and I had him 30-love in the first game and 40-15 in the third game," Carpenter said later. "But he is just too strong for me."

Sensation of the day was Charlie Pasarell, who couldn't make the U.S. Davis Cup team because his record was not good enough. He knocked off the defending champion, Manuel Santana of Spain.

The 23-year-old Puerto Rican defeated Brazil - seeded Santana 10-8, 6-3, 2-6, 6-4. It was the first time in Wimbledon's 100-year history that a champion was dethroned in the first round.

Santana said if Pasarell can beat Hewitt today, "he should certainly go at least as far as the quarter - finals."

Canadian Girls Set World On Ear In First Olympics Contest

By BOB TRIMBEE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The first time they allowed women to compete in the Olympics, Canadian girls set the world on its ear.

That was in 1928 at Amsterdam, the year Percy Williams of Vancouver won the sprint double and Canada celebrated its finest Olympic hour.

The girls won two of five events open to women and placed second and third in another.

On only two other occasions have Canadian women been able to win a gold medal in a track and field event in a major world meet—in the more restricted British Empire Games when Robina Higgins won the 440 in 1938 and a year ago at Kingston, Jamaica, when Abby Hoffman won the 880.

There have been other sporadic and partial successes scored by our girls in Canada's first 100 years, mainly during the 1930s. However, until Miss Hoffman entered the winner's circle at Kingston, Canada had gone almost 30 years without a gold medal list among women in track and field in the world's two top summer sports events.

The 1928 Olympics and the 1966 Empire Games stand out as perhaps Canada's finest hours in international competition. At Amsterdam, 27 Canadian coeds and won 15 medals while at Kingston, 107 athletes returned with 57 medals. The gold medal harvest in 1928 was four and in 1966 it was 14.

While Miss Hoffman was the only woman on the track team to win a gold, three others also won lesser medals and provided the team with its best harvest since 1928, indicating things might be better for Canadian girls in the second century of Confederation.

The gold medallists at Amsterdam were Ethel Catherwood, the Saskatoon Lily, with a high jump of five feet, 2¼ inches and the 400-metre relay team of Bobby Rosenfeld, Ethel Smith, Jane Bell, all of Toronto, and Myrtle Cook of Montreal, with a world record 48.2-seconds performance.

Earlier, Miss Rosenfeld, Canada's top woman athlete of the first half century, was second in the women's 100 metres and Miss Smith third. Bobby's run in the sprint was fantastic. She was left at the start but still managed to come within a whisker of catching the American victor—many even today say she actually won the race.

Miss Rosenfeld's first task of running came at a Beaver's tea, sports of the year, teams on a softball team urged her to enter the 100-yard dash.

She later recalled that she first scoffed at the idea. "I was wearing those big pegtant bloomers and running shoes. Well, they persuaded me, the kids on the team, and I went in and won the race."

The girl she beat that day was Rose Grosse, the Canadian champion. Both girls became friendly rivals and at one time shared the world 100-yard record of 11 seconds. Later Bobby also set a world mark of 26 seconds in the 220.

Besides her silver and gold at Amsterdam, Bobby also entered the 800 metres and placed fifth, helping Canada gain 17 valuable points in the unofficial team standings, second only to Williams.

Probably the most famous incident involving Bobby was the day she won a track meet by herself. That occurred in 1925 in Toronto.

Until then Bobby never had a coach, but that day she won the shot put, discus, broad jump, 220 sprint and 100-yard low hurdles. She was second in the 100-yard dash and the javelin.

A year after her Olympic performances, Bobby was married, with arthritis and her playing career, which also included basketball and tennis, was cut short.

The latest inspiration for Canadian women was produced by Miss Hoffman, who once gained fame as an eight-year-old by posing as a boy and being named an athlete for her play in a Toronto minor hockey league.

Today as an outstanding political science and economics student at the University of Toronto, she wishes people would forget the incident. "A lot of people know I was a girl; I guess it made a good story but I wasn't trying to fool anyone, I just wanted to play hockey."

Her track career—she gave up promising future as a competitive swimmer to enter the sport at last—has had its ups and downs.

Three years ago she was no match for international competitors in the Empire Games at Perth, Australia. "I was only 15 and overwhelmed," she said.

A year later she won the Pan - American Games 800 metres, but again met failure when she did not qualify in either the 400 and 800 metres at the 1964 Olympics in Tokyo.

Shortly she worked her way back, showing promise with a 2:07.2 time in winning the 880 at the World Student Games in Prague.

At Kingston she was not rated a threat. After 440 yards she was third and in the long, hard drive home caught Judy Pollock of Australia 16 yards out and won for Canada its first Empire Games track gold medal.

Stinson Stops S. Warner

Hotelmen Grab Lead!

City Hotel moved to the head of the Commercial Softball League pack all by themselves last night with a 6-4 win over Black Diamond Cheese.

The win snapped a first-place tie between the two clubs and the Hotelmen have a game in hand on the Cheesemen.

Across the bay, Stinson Construction scored a loose run in the bottom of the eighth inning to nip Stewart Warner in a 3-2 squeaker, climbing into a third-place tie.

Mark Sheridan pitched the key win for City, allowing seven hits, striking out four and walking four. His mates got him four runs in the second to erase a 2-0 Black Diamond lead, and two in the fourth.

Bob Swan pitched 4⅔ innings before Don Holoway took over for the Cheesemen. They gave up eight hits, whiffed five, four by Holoway, and did not walk a batter.

Bob Lloyd punched a double and singled, Gerry Cenneaux and Bob Brooks two singles each for the loop-leaders. Dave Feeney and Sheridan also hit safely. Gene Francis had two Xavers' base hits, Bob Fraser a double, Jack Francis, Ross Empey, Keith Dickey and Pat O'Connor one single each.

Larry Hull for Stinson's and Stewart Warner's Doug Ellis traded four-hitters in Amelianburg and both received errorless support.

Stinson scrapped ahead 2-0 in the first and the Warnermen tied it in the sixth sending the game into extra innings. Stinson's won it on Hull's base hit, two walks and a wild pitch in the eighth.

Hull struck out four and passed two while Ellis fanned six and walked the same number.

Stinson's hits were a home run by Ken Genereaux, two singles by Jack "Deacon" Whiting and one by Larry Hull.

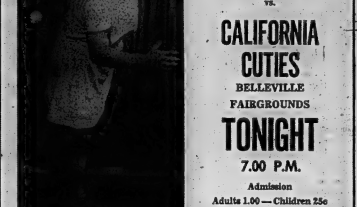
For Stewart Warner, Cliff Hinsman banged a home run and single, Jim Sopha and Lyle Wannamaker a safety each.

Dickinson Reaches Top Ten

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — Gardner Dickinson's $20,700 victory Sunday in the Cleveland Open vaulted him into the top 10 money winners on the professional golfers' circuit, according to PGA statistics released Monday.

Dickinson's tour total of official and unofficial winnings rose to $42,810, putting him 10th in money standings.

Arnold Palmer continued to lead the list with total earnings of $117,005.



The Tracks

TORONTO (CP) — Brilliant Skoo won his first ever start in Monday's fourth race at Woodbine, paying $18.10 to win.

The two-year-old bay gelding beat Dew on Rose by ¾ of a length with Mister O'Shannon getting the show spot.

The daily double of Dark Secret and Ballisally paid $18.60. In the fifth-race starter, Kitty G. and Guidecca, returned $168.10 and the combination of Mad Moo and Pretty Fussy in the seventh was worth $29.10.

Maracle Dunks Flyers

Point Anne remained within striking distance of first place in the Trent Valley League as they whipped the RCAF 13-0 last night in Trenton. The win maintained their hold on second place behind loop-leading Trenton Cern's, who disposed of Madoc 10-2 in another contest.

Ron Maracle, Point Anne pitching ace, fired a stifling three-hitter and threw third strikes past 15 in a masterful performance. He hurled to only 34 men, giving up five walks and receiving errorless support from his mates.

While Maracle needed only one run, his teammates provided him with plenty, as they lashed out 15 hits for 13 runs. The RCAF helped the Cementmen with they could with a gift of nine errors.

The winners led 3-0 until the fifth frame, when they began a four-inning scoring burst with four runs to put the game far out of reach.

Al McVicar, and Bodie the seventh, were the hapless losing moundsmen. They managed five strike outs and allowed three walks while being hit heavily. The erratic fielding of their mates did not make things easier.

Jerry Hill, Point Anne first baseman, led the winners with three hits in six trips. Glen Maracle slammed a pair of doubles, and Dave Alsey a double and single. Pitcher Maracle, Rick Rosebush and Dennis Maher stroked two hits each, and shortstop Eric Maher and third baseman Vern Whalen had singles.

Hargreaves led the losers with two of their three hitting efforts. Hollins added the other.

Tip Top exploded for 11 runs in the first frame and then hung on for an 18-15 verdict over the Fountain Park in a BMBA pewee battle last night in another game Sinc Shell whipped IBEW 6-2.

Tip Tops victory was earned the hard way, as wilaving pitchers Dave Smith, Dean Lange and Larry Kirby handed out walks to almost beat themselves. They threw third strikes past 15 and gave up eight hits.

Jim Richardson, Dale Volkenburg and John Mulvihill allowed 11 hits and issued 10 free passes to first, for the Park. They fanned eight.

Dean Lange and Jim Stather stroked two hits each to lead the Top's batsmen. Keith Wasson and Larry Kirby slammed doubles, and Will Soulnier, Dave Smith, Tom Bond and Fred Lynch had singles.

Danny Lupoestis cracked a home run and double for Fountain Park. Jim Richardson had three base hits, and John Mulvihill, Tom Harrison and Dan Means singletons.

Bobby Hazard and Blaine Mullins gave up 10 hits, one more than their opponents, but still managed the victory for Sinos Shell. They struck out 11 and walked one.

Mike Burley and Allan Wood toiled for the losers, fanning nine and walking three.

Bobby Menard smashed a triple, and single and the brother act, Ron and Don McTaggart, had two singles each for the winners. Cliff Radbourne, Bruce Nickle and Jed Forster safetied.

Allan Wood, Mike Burley and Terry Ray each banged out two base hits for IBEW. Other hitters were Stephen Burle, Terry Collins, Dave Allen and Mike Weger.

Uganda Will Be Honored in Ceremonies at Expo Site Today

MONTREAL (CP)—The Central African country of Uganda, which attained independence in 1962, will be honored today at flag-raising ceremonies at the world's fair.

Uganda's delegation at the ceremonies will be headed by A. Olang, the country's minister of information, broadcasting and tourism, who will represent President Milton Obote.

The ceremonies will launch a day of festivities highlighted by a performance in the afternoon at Place des Nations by the Heartbeat of Africa group.

Today promises to be a busy day for Expo 67 security officers because of the scheduled unofficial visits by Premier Josef Lenart of Czechoslovakia and Premier Todor Zhivkov of Bulgaria.

The world's fair Monday paid tribute to Man the Provider pavilion which featured a visit to the fair of 3,000 members of the Agricultural Institute of Canada.

Agriculture Minister J. J. Greene presented certificates of commendation to companies and organizations who contributed to the huge agricultural exhibition and the 54,000,000 pavilion.

Mr. Greene, in a ceremony at the pavilion, also unveiled three large acrylic boards by the name of more than 170 companies and organizations whose contribution helped design the cost of the pavilion.

Expo officials said the participation of Nationmart China, whose interior and exhibits had been destroyed in a fire May 30, will reopen June 30.

Now 42 exhibits have been shipped to Canada from Formosa and other Chinese displays have been brought in from elsewhere.

Organizers mentioned no poor rain the fair Monday and surpassed by more than 100,000 the attendance figure of 383,220 forecast by Expo officials.

No major incidents were reported although the Expo Express trains which carry visitors free of charge through the Expo site were halted for seven minutes Monday because of a breakdown in the switching system.

Fall Schedules Show Swing To Shows of Greater Length

Might we, some day, have to unsnap without Gilligan's Island, Peyton Place, and The Beverly Hillbillies.

The three holdovers will have a combined total of 21 half-hour programs—six fewer than last fall.

One-hour shows will increase to 43 from 40.

But whether half - hour or longer, network program chiefs say series are here to stay.

Herbert Schlosser of NBC predicts: "The future will bring a tremendous increase in the number of specials that will interrupt regular series. And there will be longer shows that offer a chance for epic sweep.

"But there still will be series. People like the Bonanza boys, the I Spy and Dundee type."

Perry Lafferty, CBS: "I think there will always be series, like the Perry Mason hooks and the Andy Hardy movies.

"On the three networks there are 75 hours of prime time a week. Anyone should know you can't come up with enough specials and movies to fill a week."

The fall figures, he said, don't yet indicate a trend.

"Our schedule was made up on the basis of what we thought was good, not because it was shorter or longer than some-

Nob Hill, in the night's first elimination event which brought the first four finishers to the final, cracked out a 2:01.3 effort.

Zip Yar, owned by Waples and Ivan Hostetler Markets, both of Dutton, Ont., and Jess Bilodeau of Hagersville and William Reynolds of North, Ont., finished second in his elimination but was too much for the two and for an exactor of $115.80.

American colt at the finish.

Zip Yar returned $12.80 and $3.60 across the board. The colt has won five of his six races this year and with Monday's victory, boosted his earnings to just over $36,000.

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Ogden's Hustler won the featured $1,100 preferred pace at Western Fair Raceway Monday night, going the mile in 2:08 5-5 and returning $21.60.

A daily double of $25.80 was paid when Chelyrock Van took the first at 9-5 and Mr. Mallard Hanover second at $12.20.

Son Goddess won the seventh and Argent Ande came in second to give them the two and for an exactor of $115.80.

'The Lip' Regains Voice

CHICAGO (AP)—Leo Durocher, who has played at many since Chicago Cubs' disastrous last place finish in 1966, is getting his voice back.

When Leo took over as manager following the Cubs' eighth place finish in 1965, he bellowed in his foghorn voice: "All I know is the Cubs are not an eighth-place team."

Once it became evident the Cubs were going to finish 10th, everyone said Leo had been right. The Cubs weren't an eighth - place club, they were 10th and last.

Durocher, convinced the Cubs were going nowhere without youth, traded off veteran pitchers like Larry Jackson, Bob Buhl and Lindy McDaniel for the likes of Ferguson Jenkins, Bill Hands, Randy Hundley and Adolfo Phillips.

Those youngsters, among others, have been every bit as good this year as they were bad last year.

Jenkins, of Chatham, Ont., ran his won-lost record to 9-5 during the weekend.

That development, coupled with the improving second base combination of Glen Beckert and Don Kessinger along with the steady help of veterans Ron Santo, Billy Williams and Ernie Banks, has turned the Cubs into winners.

Kingston Shades Picton 7-6

Picton Kinsmen are coming close but wins are still eveluding them in the Quinte-KASA Softball League.

The Kinsmen dropped a 7-6 decision to Picton George Regals down east last night.

The Regals got the winning run in the bottom of the sixth when Ron Brown stroked a pinch-hit single through second to plate Brian Greene, also on with a base hit.

Picton had tied it 6-6 in the top of the inning on Pete Mitchell's two-run homer.

Ray VanHoof of Kingston and Picton's Ken DeMille hooked up in a strikeout duel with Ron Howe fanning 16 and walking DeMille whistling 14 and passing one. Picton outhit the winners 10-8.

Bob Senior hit a three-run homer and a single, the homer his first circuit clout, DeMille three singles and Merve Stacey two for Picton. Ron Weese and Merv Stacey each added doubles.

MacDonald was injured sliding home late in the game and will be lost to the club for an unknown period.

Loftontaine Clippers visit Picton for an 8:15 game at the Fairgrounds tomorrow night.

Audienscope Used to Sample Viewers' Reaction to Movies

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Can movies be pre-tested, the same as breakfast cereals and motor cars?

It's an intriguing thought, and one that might engage the fancies of the bright new generation of film-makers.

Weiss, who operates Film Bulletin, has been conducting tests with something he calls Audiscope. He takes samplings from potential ticket buyers to see how they react to a film's components.

One of the subjects of Audiscope was A Countess from Hong Kong, which was treated badly at the hands of critics and movie-goers alike. This reviewer didn't find it all bad—but only disappointing in view of the giant talents involved. The survey's findings:

"Sophia Loren was the dominant go-factor in fostering pre-release interest for this film. She was preconceived as a pleasurable and exciting performer component—by female movie goers especially—in this romantic - comedy type of film, despite only moderate enthusiasm.

"On the other hand, The Martian Brando appeal was in evidence only sporadically, for the most part in the more sophisticated metropolitan centres, and not at all among college students. . . . Brando was actually a deterrent, a go-factor, to a considerable number of movie goers who evinced a lack of enthusiasm for the film either because they were not Brando fans, or because he held little appeal in a light romantic role.

"Apparently because Brando did not complement the gay, romantic image fetched up by Miss Loren, predisposition failed to fell into a go - condition for many potential customers. The Loren - Brando chemistry simply failed to take with the mass audience."

Departmental Softball

Electric Motors built a 9-0 lead and held on at the end to edge The Intelligencer 9-8 in a Departmental Softball League game last night.

The victory boosted the Motors into third place, one point behind the losers and one up on the Combines.

A seven-run blast in the second frame was the difference in the winners' favor. Five of their seven hits in the seventh but could not overcome the big deficit.

Ted Walke hurled five-hit ball for the winners and Ron Culbert took seven hit ball at a losing cause. Walke, passed balls, wild pitches and errors also hurt in the losers' second-frame explosion.

Glen Reynolds was the lone two-hit man for Electric Motors while Terry Lemus and Arnold Sikora added doubles. Pat Green, Dan Marchand and Ted Walke a single each.

For the Intelligencer, Steve Lang slammed a triple and a four-run homer. Gary Wood had a double. Al Lee and Terry Hiddleston a base hit each.

'Police Yourselves', Police Chiefs Told

HONEY HARBOR, Ont. (CP) — Chief Const. R. M. Booth, Vancouver Police, said Monday Canada's policemen should project a better image to ensure public confidence in police officers.

Speaking at the Centennial conference of the Association of Ontario Police Chiefs, Chief Booth said police should have the fortitude and organization to police themselves.

Only when this has been achieved, will the public and the lawmakers give us the law that will best serve the rights of all citizens, he said.

Chief Booth is a strong supporter of wiretapping. "even if it means infringing on the privacy of the individual."

Following a two-hour closed meeting on gambling, at which lotteries headed the list of topics, Chief W. J. Shrubb of Peterborough said 15 to 23 delegates present asked for discussion on lotteries and enforcement of the lotteries section of the Criminal Code.

"Some communities permit lotteries," he said. "In others, the police will act only if there is a complaint. If there is a prosecution and it gets to court, the court's ruling is influenced by the belief that the law governing lotteries is about to be changed."

"Either way, the police are left holding the bag," Chief Shrubb said.

The conference continues today and tomorrow.

Car Driver Examiners Slow Down

TORONTO (CP)—Driver examiners and vehicle inspectors in Ontario are being asked to work-to-rule to protest against a recent arbitration board decision which awarded them pay increases of between $600 and $625 a year over their present salaries of $5,000.

Earl Dickson, president of Branch 181 of the Civil Service Association of Ontario and Alvin Faught, chief steward, jointly announced Monday night that the men are being asked to take immediate action.

The work-to-rule policy would slow down the issuing of drivers licenses and vehicle examinations and might cause many licence applicants to fail, they said.

Diefenbaker Urges Commission Inquire Into Crime's Growth

OTTAWA (CP)—The government was urged Monday to appoint a royal commission to determine the scope of international criminal operations and impress on the public how crime is expanding.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker, speaking before the Commons on the motion to approve the estimates of the solicitor - general's department, said the time is overdue for such a commission.

"Royal commissions are acquired for everything under the sun," Mr. Diefenbaker said. "A royal commission on the subject of crime would pay dividends."

He said a commission on crime could have the effect of mobilizing public thinking on remedies as well as pointing out the serious expansion of criminal activities.

Solicitor - General Pennell said he had followed the Quebec crime commission closely and found nothing in public reports that had not been discussed at the meeting of provincial attorneys - general in January last year.

In debate on the solicitor-general's estimates, Mr. Diefenbaker cited reports of close connections between the Canadian underworld and "leaders of the Mafia and other disreputable organizations from across the line."

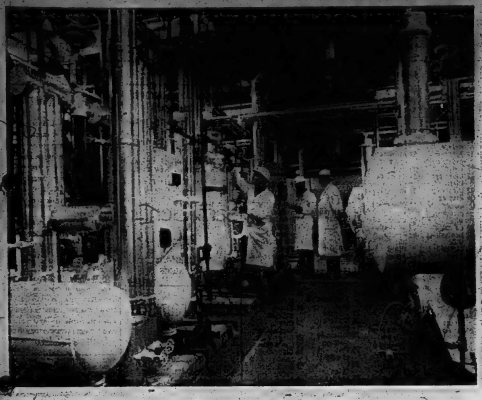
He said the provincial attorneys-general had asked for an investigation of crime and "the responsibility . . . rests with the federal Parliament."

Mr. Diefenbaker also asked the government to reconsider its decision not to grant amnesties to prisoners during the Queen's forthcoming visit to Canada.

It had been tradition for amnesties to be granted on the visit of the monarch and failure to "offer the Queen's mercy" this time would create a feeling of resentment among Canadian prisoners.

The Opposition leader asked the government to consider legislation eliminating the criminal records of persons who have been law - abiding for five or 10 years after their release from prison.

Mr. Pennell said there are great difficulties in expunging criminal records but officers in his department were still considering the question.



Jack Horner (L—Norfolk) called for legislation that would provide compensation for persons convicted of crime but later proven not guilty.

"Surely we can take a solid step forward in seeing to it that people who are convicted and later proven innocent receive some compensation to help them better themselves when they come out of prison," Mr. Kenburgh said.

David Orlikow (NDP—Winnipeg North) said the federal government should establish a national probation system in cooperation with the provinces.

He said Canada's correctional system is one of the worst in the world. Some prisons were more than 100 years old and stressed punishment rather than rehabilitation.

David Fulton, a former Conservative justice minister, called for implementation of a 1958 federal - provincial agreement to shift most prisoners to federal institutions from provincial and county jails.

Missing Toronto Boy Is Found Safe

TORONTO (CP) — A 15-year-old boy who ran away from home last Thursday, because he feared police were after him for playing hookey returned Monday to a tearful reunion with his foster parents.

"I didn't mean to hurt you, Mother," Roger Kimball told Mrs. Robert McCarthy after he was brought to their east-end Toronto home by a police detective.

Roger ran away after other children teased him and told him police would come after him for staying away from school Wednesday afternoon to go to the zoo.

Roger said he slept three nights in some bushes near a factory, and on Sunday crept into the factory and slept in a washroom.

He said a bakery truck driver, who apparently did not realize he was a runaway, fed him three of the five days he was away. The driver made deliveries to a store near where Roger was found.

"He gave me some food on Thursday and then again when he came on Friday. But he didn't come to the store on Saturday and Sunday. I had nothing to eat. But he came again Monday and he gave me lots."

About 100 police, 50 auxiliary police, 40 boy scouts and three scuba divers took part in the search for Roger.

Quebec Hydro Strike Settled

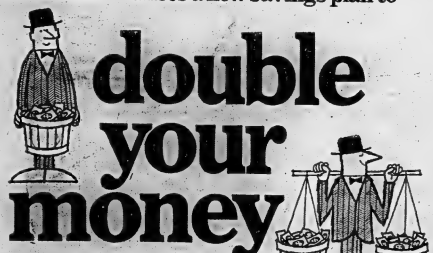
MONTREAL (CP) — The seven-week strike by Hydro-Quebec employees across the province ended Monday as employees voted in favor of accepting the company's latest offer and returned to work immediately.

Night workers returned to their jobs at midnight Monday and day employees were expected to be back on the job this morning, ending a strike against the provincially - owned utility that began on a rotating basis May 8.

A breakdown of the vote showed that 67.9 per cent of the technicians were in favor of the latest company offer. Office workers voted 67.5 per cent in favor and basic workers voted 67.9 per cent in favor.

Louis Laberge, president of the Quebec Federation of Labor, said Monday night the workers accepted the offer not because they were satisfied but because they did not want to be victims of legislation.

Quebec Premier Daniel Johnson had warned that his Union Nationale government would intervene in the strike if the security of the public was threatened.



The Canadian Union of Public Employees, a QFL affiliate which represents the 8,100 Hydro-Quebec employees, said office workers' salaries will be increased from $4 to $12, weekly, bringing weekly wages to a minimum of $95 and a maximum of $162.25.

Technicians' salaries were also increased, making the minimum salary $100.25 a week and the maximum $303 a week.

Basic workers will receive a minimum hourly increase of 24 cents to a maximum hourly pay hike of $1.05. Basic workers now will earn between $2.31 and $3.63 an hour.

Barbiturates Can Be Helpful

Dear Dr. Molner: I read your column about the dangers of prolonged use of barbiturates. My husband has epilepsy but it has been kept nearly completely under control with a combination of phenobarbital and two other drugs. He has one grand mal attack every two or three times a day.

This was prescribed five years ago but he was using phenobarbital for twice that long.

He is not exactly under medical supervision. That is, a doctor gave him a letter so he can have the prescription refilled. The original doctor (this was at an epilepsy center) said he could possibly outgrow the epilepsy in five or six years, so I assume he intended the medicines to be used for that long.

In the last two years he has had difficulty writing. He knows what he wants to write but it takes him time to make the right word and the right mind wanders. Can you explain this please? — Mrs. J.B.

First, the barbiturates. I didn't say that merely prolonged use was dangerous, but prolonged excessive use. That is different.

Constant use by someone who doesn't know what his drug includes that that be among will become excessive.

Prolonged use (as with epilepsy) is quite common and it does a great deal of good. Indeed, none of our potentially dangerous drugs was devised without a purpose. These powerful drugs are valuable, and when we warn against misuse, we hope that people will not be afraid of proper use.

The amount your husband is taking is not unusual for such cases, and I think it is understandable that he has been harmed in any way.

However, I do not think it wise for him to go so long without direct medical supervision. Some of the substances of the drugs (although a particle lookalike is advisable in this regard) as to keep track of his general condition.

There are many kinds of epilepsy. In general one does not "outgrow" it, so I assume that this must be a rather unusual case, which is just that much more reason for reporting back to the doctor, or the epilepsy center.

I cannot undertake to guess the significance of the hesitation in writing. It may or may not have anything to do with the epilepsy, but I doubt that it has anything to do with the medicines.

This should, however, be reported to the doctor. It deserves attention whether it is, or is not, related to the original condition.

Dear Dr. Molner: Whenever I put an egg in my head I hurts - and sometimes the pain even runs up to my hip. There is nothing to see or feel on my heel, only pain.

I hate to go to a doctor unless there is "something to worry about." A heel that hurts like yours would be a good enough reason for me.

From your description, your doctor's first guess probably will be a heel spur — an old injury which has left a little lump of calcium, or a "spur," which is painful when you put your weight on it. An X-ray will probably be needed to show whether that is an accurate guess.

Note to M.B.: I cannot take how switching the type of vitamins could have had the least effect on your youngster's bad tooth. I would follow the advice you mentioned: There is reason to think that something is wrong, perhaps faulty diet, perhaps some chronic illness, possibly both. Have a pediatrician take over.

Canada Will Double Food Aid To United Nations Relief Body

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada will double its $2,000,000 food aid to the United Nations Relief and Works Agency in the Middle East, Prime Minister Pearson announced Monday in the Commons.

He said in reply to David Lewis (NDP—York South) that Canada also will pay transportation cost of $125,000 to $225,000 and donate $30,000 to the Canadian Red Cross for medical supplies.

The aid will go to Arabs refugees in Jordan, Syria and the Gaza Strip.

Besides the items listed by Mr. Pearson, Canada previously had undertaken to provide $1,500,000 worth of aid to the refugees.

External Affairs Minister Martin, replying to NDP Leader Douglas, repeated that any withdrawal of Israeli forces from occupied Arab territory must be related to other basic issues such as freedom of navigation and solution of the refugee problem.

Canada, however, does not support seizure of territory by force, Mr. Martin added.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker said Mr. Martin had made a good speech to the General Assembly but had omitted a point made by Mr. Pearson June 8 that a UN presence should be established on both sides of the Israel-Arab borders.

Mr. Pearson said Mr. Martin had included this point in his UN speech.

Mr. Diefenbaker pressed Mr. Martin to explain why he had not tried harder to get a United Nations force established between the two armies with power to operate on both sides of the border.

Why, he asked, had Mr. Martin been so "delightfully uncertain" on this matter, one which Prime Minister Pearson had stressed so strongly in a foreign affairs debate in the Commons at the height of the crisis?

Mr. Martin maintained he had underlined the importance of UNEF. He had expressed hope that the United Nations Truce Supervisory Organization, the UN agency still in being after "regretable" disbandment of UNEF, would have its role expanded. But that remained to be decided at the General Assembly.

Israel has taken the position that UNTSO is no longer legally in existence because the 1948 truce lines have disappeared.

Mr. Martin said that in addition to UNTSO, the Palestine commission still exists with membership that includes Turkey, France and the United States. Consideration was being given to the possible role of this commission.

Mr. Diefenbaker retorted that he was surprised at Mr. Martin's refusal to deal with the question of a UN Emergency Force.

Mr. Martin said in reply to David Fugh (PC—Okanagan-Boundary) that it remains UN policy that any UN force established must obtain the consent of the countries in which it is stationed.

Commons Will Adjourn July 7

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons voted Monday to adjourn Friday, July 7 for a summer recess expected to last until late September or October.

The adjournment motion also provided that the 1967-68 spending estimates of 10 departments must come to a vote before the recess.

This will leave the estimates of about 19 other departments to be debated in the fall.

At the same time, the House agreed to take a holiday next Monday, July 3, to mark Dominion Day and allow MPs to visit their ridings during the weekend. Queen Elizabeth will address a special joint session of the Commons and Senate Saturday to observe the 100th anniversary of Confederation.

The adjournment motion was proposed by Health Minister MacEachen, government House leader, after two weeks of hard bargaining with Opposition House leaders. It passed unanimously with little discussion.

The government originally wanted to pass the estimates of all departments before the recess to clear the decks for a heavy legislative program in the fall.

But opposition spokesmen complained that more time is needed to discuss the estimates. They wanted an early recess, with certain departmental estimates put off until the fall.

Th three remaining supply motions, which each take up two days and allow the opposition to introduce non-confidence motions, also were deferred until fall.

The estimates of 10 unspecified departments will come in a vote by 8:30 p.m. Thursday, July 6. The next day, Parliament will debate an interim supply bill to authorize the government to pay its day-to-day obligations from July to October, inclusive.

Parliament will then adjourn for the summer.

Party whips and ministers have urged all MPs to be in Ottawa for the special sitting Saturday. They fear that half the 264 members may be absent.

Ontario's Farmlands Water-logged This Year

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario farmlands which were parched in the summers of 1963 and 1966 were water-logged this year to the point where crops are being endangered.

A spokesman for the provincial agriculture department said Monday heavy rains during the last two weeks damaged crops in parts of eastern and western Ontario which had been hard hit by drought in the last two years.

Spring grain crops are yellowing in Middlesex, Dufferin, Grey, Peel, Perth, Simcoe, Wellington, Dundas, Ontario, Lanark, Renfrew and York counties because of excess moisture in the soil.

Rains helped produce bumper hay crops throughout southern and central Ontario, however, and have been light enough to be generally beneficial in southwestern Ontario.

In Renfrew County between three and five inches fell June 6-17 and low-lying fields were badly flooded. Flooding was reported also in part of Grey, York and Simcoe counties.

The spokesman said it still was too early to predict the long-run effect of the heavy rainfall, "although there's no doubt some farmers in low land are in dire straits."

He said a critical factor will be the rainfall during July. Warm, sunny weather could compensate for the damage but a continuation of rain might be disastrous.

The Congregation of Sovereigns.

SPLENDID FESTIVITIES IN PARIS—AN EVENING AT THE NEW HOTEL DE VILLE—A PAGE FROM THE "ARABIAN KNIGHTS."

The entertainment given at the Hotel de Ville to the Sovereigns and other personages now the guests of France was of extraordinary magnificence. The fete from the moment of its announcement attracted unusual attention, and the demand for tickets was unprecedented, and fewer than 35,000 applications having been sent in before the day of its taking place but the interest deepened after the attempt on the Emperor Alexander's life, as the public fair curiosity to learn if the reprobation expressed by the general population of Paris would be responded to by those who were certain to be assembled together, at the Hotel de Ville, and as if an enthusiastic reception would be given there as had everywhere greeted him in the great thoroughfares of Paris. The warmth of the welcome could not possibly be surpassed.

FLOWERS—EVERGREENS—CASCADES.

Two entrances were appropriated to the guests, the principal one by the Cour Louis XIV., and that of the Empress, and the other by the Salle St. Jean, for the general public. From this latter, converted into an immense sandalwood perfumed saloon, to the spaciments above by the double staircase to the Salle des Echevins. The lofty vestibule at the foot of the principal staircase was ornamented with a profusion of flowers and evergreens, and a delicious fall of water at each side of half-dozen richly carpeted steps leading up to the back of the state case of white marble adorning the Cour Louis XIV. During the early part of the night two Grades-de-Paris kept the passage clear and prevented any one ascending; but afterwards, when the Imperial guests had examined at their ease the scene beyond, the communication between the two entrances were thrown open, and formed one of the principal thoroughfares between the front and rear of the hotel. Grades-de-Paris also were posted on every half dozen steps of the two grand staircases, as well as at the entrance of the principal apartments.

Beyond, after passing through the Salon de l'Empereur called so from its full-length portrait of the First Napoleon, the Salons Galerie des Fetes, the largest and the finest room in the Hotel, 160 feet long, and its by 30 chandeliers of 60 jets and 18,000 wax lights. In the centre a dais was erected, on which were placed four thrones for the Emperor Napoleon, the Emperor, the Czar, and the King of Prussia. Seats for their suites were arranged on each side.—Behind, over the thrones, was a crown, and rich hangings of crimson velvet, trimmed with gold lace. On the right extremity of the gallery was the orchestra, placed in a recess aloft, heard without been seen. A large conservatory had shown that in the gallery would be by far the greatest crush, the idea suggested itself of doubling the space and increasing by the erection of a temporary gallery on the outside of the building, and by connecting the two together by a portals richly decorated, which, after the fete, will be again what they were before, the large windows looking on the Seine and Quai Lepelletier. The windows were also taken out and formed recesses, in which seats were arranged for ladies only. In addition was ordered inside by large rows of pillars covered with ivy and other plants; the carpet was green and crimson, and the roof of the gallery, the ceiling adorned with intertwisted gilt laurel leaves; and the whole had a sylvan appearance. At the end of the collation paid to local effect, the ivy on the pillars was to the height of 8 feet, while only that above and almost out of sight was artificial. Nothing could be more cool and charming than the whole effect produced. Scented as it was with plants, foliage, flowers, fountains, and mirrors, reflecting the gorgeous scene.

At the other extremity of the Grand Gallery is the Salon de la Paix, with pantings by Delacroix, and in it was prepared a table of the guests of the Sovereigns and the persons whom they might invite to supper, the suites being accommodated in contiguous saloons.

Such were the arrangements on one side of the building, but those on the other, of quite a different character, were no less admirable. The Cour de Louis XIV., with its gilding, its floor of mosaic, covered with entrance carpeting, borrowed fresh splendour from the brilliancy of the illumination, and was by many thought to be the most striking portion of the Hotel de Ville. Opposite the entrance is the handsome double staircase in white marble, ascended at the foot of each flight by the Caryatides. The construction, which rises without support to the Saloon of the Municipal Council, was decorated in the style of the period of the reign of Queen Victoria. It was originally made of wood, but was considered so beautiful in design and proportion that it was resolved it should be permanent, and for the future serve as the grand entrance of honour.—The design is simple consisting of two Streetcars in Belleville?

Yes, but that was back before the turn of the century. The first streetcars (in 1876) were horse drawn, then in 1895 the line was electrified. Most buildings in picture have about the same exterior appearance today.

All Aboard for Tweed

Aselstine stage company operated a coach line to Tweed, the run being done in about four hours with a change of horses.

Transportation

Canoes, Ferries, Coaches Played Key Roles in Area

Canoes, bateau and sailing craft on the Bay of Quinte were undoubtedly the first means of travel in the Belleville area, but with organized settlement ox - carts, farm wagons and eventually stage coaches must soon have come into use as overland transportation.

Just when the first stage coaches commenced is not known, but 11 years before Confederation — in 1856, the Grand Trunk Railway was to run its first passenger train through Belleville.

Then in 1858 the town of Belleville was granted permission to operate a ferry between Belleville and Ameliasburg township.

Daily stage coach runs between Belleville and Trenton were likely in operation long before Confederation, but one local man, Walter Aselstine, whose family for many years operated stage coaches in the Belleville area, remembers them as they were before the turn of the century.

"It was a dusty and bumpy ride in the summer and a cold one in the winter," recalls Mr. Aselstine.

The Belleville-Trenton stage coach run took about two hours.

The Belleville man's father, Adelbert Aselstine, bought the Belleville-Trenton stage coach run from Baker and Cunningham in 1885 and just before the turn of the century moved to Belleville to commence a livery operation and also a stage coach run to Tweed village.

Mr. Aselstine recalls it took about four hours to make the Tweed run. There was a change of horses, enroute.

After the advent of the railway, the need for public transportation between what is now the north station and the Grand Junction Dock on Belleville's waterfront was soon realized.

And that was when Belleville's street railway came into being.

The first street cars, of course, were horse drawn and were to remain so until the middle 1890s when the run was electrified.

That was when Aselstine's coach lines really came into being. The firm took over where the street cars left off and ran regular service between the north station and what is now Hotel Quinte.

Then with the coming of the motor car Aselstine's kept right up with the times and put in first motor bus line operation in 1915. It was then the firm name was changed to Aselstine's Bus, Cab, Auto and Transfer Line.

Actually those first auto buses were a far cry from the present streamlined and air conditioned m o t o r - b u s seen on today's freeways.

But before the days of the motor coach Mr. Aselstine remembers the horse livery days. Trips by horse and buggy or democrat to all parts of the Quinte district were common while a big percentage of the firm's livery business was catering for wedding parties or funerals.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Barney Too Too, a shy 15-year-old Eskimo from Churchill, Man., travelled 900 bone-jarring motor toboggan miles to see the "big animals" in Winnipeg's Assiniboine Park zoo.

Well, that wasn't the real reason for the trip but it was his first request when he arrived in Winnipeg with three other Churchill men.

The six-day trip over the northern tundra, through deep snow and around dense bush was their centennial project.

Towing three supply toboggans, they followed railway tracks and ditches on their southward journey. On the rugged tundra, their supply toboggans were damaged as they spent a day making repairs. Lost time was made up by travelling all one night.

One motor toboggan also broke down and another one was purchased at the first town they came to.

They were met north of Winnipeg by representatives of the Manitoba Golden Boys and the mayor of Selkirk. They were escorted in the Winnipeg suburb of Charlewood where Barney became the first honorary citizen of the municipality.

Next morning, Barney was up bright and early. After visiting the zoo, and while his companions rested he participated in the Charlewood winter carnival's 100-mile motor toboggan race.

75 YEARS AGO...

FOUNDER: JOHN McINTOSH SR.

A SCOTTISH SETTLER NAMED JOHN McINTOSH CAME TO BELLEVILLE. UPON ARRIVAL HE OPENED A DRY GOODS STORE WHICH CARRIED AN ASSORTMENT OF MERCHANDISE SUCH AS CROCKERY, TOYS, FANCY CHINA, SCHOOL BOOKS AND STATIONERY, AS WELL AS A LINE OF TEAS AND COFFEES. THE BUSINESS PROSPERED AND BRANCH STORES WERE LOCATED IN SEVERAL SMALL TOWNS FROM KINGSTON TO COBOURG, WITH BELLEVILLE BEING THE HEADQUARTERS, AS THE TREND IN CONSUMER BUYING CHANGED, SO CHANGED THE STORE. AFTER JOHN McINTOSH SR. DIED, THE BUSINESS INTERESTS WERE CONSOLIDATED IN BELLEVILLE AND COBOURG, AND THE STORE CONCENTRATED ON FAMILY CLOTHING AND ACCESSORIES, HOUSE FURNISHINGS AND FLOOR COVERINGS.

TODAY, WHAT JOHN McINTOSH SR. GAVE BIRTH TO, IS ONE OF BELLEVILLE'S MOST MODERN, PROGRESSIVE AND COMPREHENSIVE STORES OF ITS KIND. TODAY'S SHOPPERS FREQUENT McINTOSH'S FOR THE SIMPLE REASON THAT THEY KNOW THEY ARE ASSURED OF ONLY QUALITY PRODUCTS AT THE BEST POSSIBLE COMPETITIVE PRICES.

AS WE CELEBRATE OUR FIRST CENTENNIAL AND CANADA SWINGS INTO ANOTHER CENTURY OF PROGRESS, WE AT McINTOSH BROS. STORES LTD. WISH TO THANK ONE AND ALL FOR THEIR PATRONAGE IN THE PAST, AND TO ASSURE YOU THAT WE WILL BE PROGRESSING RIGHT ALONG WITH YOU.

Early Transportation Was Tough Task

CANOES

Shortly after the turn of the century Mr. Asselstine remembers one winter day trip to Belleville Cemetery in a blinding snowstorm.

The main road (now No. 2 highway) was blocked with snow and the funeral cortege had to go up the bay. But in the heavy snowstorm the horses lost their way and the funeral party ended at Redoubt, ville.

Eventually, with the increasing popularity of the motor car, the Asselstine Bus Service was, to pass out of the picture.

And with better roads and faster vehicles the once a day trips to Trenton, Tweed and Picton were to become a thing of the past. Today Rathbone makes half a dozen or more runs daily to Trenton and there are twice daily runs to Tweed and Picton.

In the city taxi cabs were to take over from the hotel coaches.

But with the passing of the electric street cars in 1926, the city was to be without mass public transportation for many years.

Public transportation returned to the city in June 1925 when the Rawson Bus Lines commenced operation with a lone "four ton bus" in the east end of the city.

The vehicle which inaugurated the city's bus service was a 36-passenger Reo. With steep hangers it could accommodate up to 40 persons.

The bus line owner was Fred Rawson who a couple of years previously had come to Belleville from St. Catharines where a fire had destroyed a fleet of buses operated in that city.

Actually it was a big day in Belleville. Members of city council, the Chamber of Commerce and the fire chief were on hand for the inaugural run around the city and for a trip down the highway to Shannonville.

The mayor of the day said he was particularly impressed with the "beautiful appearance of the car" as well as it's smooth riding qualities.

Riders were appreciative of the fact that the bus eliminated 90 per cent of the noise of the ordinary street car and had the additional advantage of being able to take on and discharge passengers at the curb — a great convenience, especially on wet and stormy days.

Editorial comment of the day was that the coming of the Rawson street bus service marked a "new and important progressive step in the development of Belleville."

The motorbus, the editorial said, is capable of "sinuous manoeuvring" and can go wherever decent road exists.

At any rate residents apparently were pleased that street transportation had again come into its own in the city after a lapse of about 30 years. A second bus for the West Hill run was purchased a few months later.

The Rawson bus operation was somewhat of a family affair with Mrs. Rawson undertaking to wash the buses at night after the final run at 12 o'clock.

The bus line slowly prospered and by 1929 boasted four coaches. That same year, Mr. Rawson died, leaving the whole undertaking to Mrs. Rawson, her three daughters and a son.

Times were tough during the depression years of the early and middle thirties and it was only through a 100 per cent family effort that the bus operation was kept intact.

Fred Rawson, Jr., later to become manager of the bus line, drove buses from the time he was 17 for 12 hours a day without pay until the operation was in better financial straits.

By 1940 the firm was able to buy another bus and during the 1940s others were added.

But it wasn't until 1951 that Rawson's got around to increasing bus fares. That year, the company said it was sorry but after 26 years operation

Six Tickets For a Quarter

Six tickets for a quarter. It has been a long time since transit fares were that cheap. The horse-drawn streetcar operating between Government dock and the Doctor's Hotel was owned by M. B. Robbin. The streetcar would also meet Prince Edward County shoppers at the S.S. Quinte on Saturday.

Mr. Robbin had five cars and 16 horses but as business gradually diminished he was forced to sell some of his rigs to keep the business alive. The company was finally ruined when a fire destroyed all the equipment. An electric streetcar company began operation in 1895 but due to the lack of business it folded after a couple of years.

announced it was forced to amend its rate schedule. The new rate was three tickets for 25 cents or 12 for $1.00.

And with the increase in fares the company apologized and said it could no longer give the one free ride formerly offered with the purchase of 11 sheets of tickets.

Rising operating costs were soon to put the bus line in an unbearable financial position and within a few years there was another fare increase, this time to two tickets for 25 cents.

But costs continued to increase, and not long after Rawson's made it plain they would either have to be subsidized to keep the buses running or get out of the bus line business.

With the prospects of the city being completely without bus service, city council in 1960 voted to buy out the bus line and suddenly the city was in the street transportation business.

In the deal the city acquired 13 used street buses, together with parts and equipment for just over $42,000.

Rawsons didn't go completely out of the bus business but retained its charter service for of road work.

Since then the city has bought nine new buses, three of them 15-passenger Mercedes mini buses. Five of the former Rawson buses have been "retired" leaving the city with a total of 13 buses. The city transit commission has a total of 28 employees, including 14 regular drivers, two mechanics, and manager-ial and office personnel.

About 1962 the transit commission ingreased rates slightly — from eight tickets for a dollar to seven for a dollar — with single cash fares remaining the same at 15 cents.

But like most other municipal bus lines, the Belleville Transit Commission is not a paying operation. The 1966 deficit was close to $50,000 and city councillors have little hope the picture can be improved.

Harassed UK Government Passed BNA in Few Weeks

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

LONDON (CP) — Canada, in territory now the second largest country in the world, was created 100 years ago by the British Parliament in few hurried, harassed and distracted weeks.

While John A. Macdonald and other Fathers of Confederation looked on anxiously from the galleries, the Mother of Parliaments gave its blessing to the British North America Act with something close to a sigh of relief.

And Queen Victoria, in all her maternally majesty, issued this royal proclamation — a sort of birth certificate for the new country:

". . . We do ordain, declare and command that on and after the first day of July, 1867, the provinces of Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, shall form and be one Dominion under the name of Canada."

Thus Canada—it was almost called the "kingdom" of Canada — approached nationhood nearly three years after the Charlottetown and Quebec conference began the historic work of Confederation.

The Earl of Carnarvon, 26-year - old colonial secretary, matched his oratory to the occasion when he declared in the House of Lords:

"We are laying the foundations of a great state—perhaps one which at a future day may even overshadow this country.

"But come what may, we shall rejoice that we have shown neither indifference to their wishes nor jealousy of their aspirations, but that we honestly and sincerely fostered their growth, recognizing in it the conditions of our greatness. . . . We remove, as I firmly believe, all possibilities of future jealousies."

The BNA Act, embodying Confederation resolutions drawn up at the Quebec conference of October, 1864, was introduced into Westminster Feb. 12, 1867, passed March 8. It received royal assent March 29. Queen Victoria issued her proclamation May 22.

Colonial old records in archives here tell in their dignified, formal way of the hasty politics that brought the Confederation issue to a head in a robust era after it was discussed on and off for many years:

—Roman Catholic French Quebec and Protestant Anglo-Saxon Ontario—then fused together as Canada East and Canada West — had wrestled one another to a standstill. Their strange dual government—two ministers of this, two ministers of that — was deadlocked.

—The American Civil War had ended. The victorious northern states were resentful of the attitudes of Britain and the colonies during the conflict. Annexation talk — "they'll gobble us up"— was in the air. The Fenian Order of wild - eyed Irish patriots added to the unease with raids and rumors of invasion. There was talk of them trying to seize Canada as part of a fight against imperial England.

—The British North American colonies had to unite if they were to tame the West, then under the Hudson's Bay Co., and keep it out of U.S. clutches.

—Britain, worried by U.S. expansionist tendencies, wanted Confederation so that the scattered territories would be better able to defend themselves. Besides, a new surge of liberalism, combined with free trade, prevailed in Britain. Colonies were as "millstones around our necks," said one statesman.

Predicting that the new country would eventually be second in size only to Russia, Carnarvon said that even at the outset, with a population of 4,000,000, it was "superior" in population, in revenue, in trade and in shipping to the 13 colonies when they issued their declaration of independence.

Legislators were told of the "broad, fertile districts" and "immeasurable, barbarous lands" of the West and North that would be added. Carnarvon ventured to surmise: "Perhaps it is not very far distant when even British Columbia and Vancouver Island may be incorporated."

Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland, despite hesitations, would "gravitate to the common centre." The legislators would probably have been surprised if they had been able to peer into the future and see that the West would come in long before Newfoundland, the oldest colony, fell into step in 1949, rounding out the Confederation at 10 provinces.

Carnarvon said Confederation was being called a "compromise that like all compromises contains the germs of future dissension."

"It is true that it is a compromise so far as it is founded upon the consent of the provinces; it is true that it has been rendered possible by the surrender of certain powers, rights and pretensions by the several provinces into the hands of the central authority.

"But it is also to be remembered that—unlike every other federation that has existed, it derives its political existence from an external authority . . . the British Crown. And I cannot but recognize in this some security against those conflicts of states' rights and central authority which in other federations have sometimes proved so disastrous."

MY, HOW BELLEVILLE'S CHANGED!

BUT SOME THINGS HAVE REMAINED

Since 1867 our Belleville has changed a good deal . . . and most of that change has been for the better too! Certainly in the building industry little remains the same as it was a hundred years ago. Year after year builders have endeavored to improve the lives of one and all by constructing houses that provide even better living, comfort and convenience. Belleville provides an exceptional example of the industry's improvements and of how our architectural tastes have changed. But, as we said before, some things have remained.

WE'LL BE RIGHT THERE HELPING IT CHANGE, GROW AND BEAUTIFY TOMORROW

POSSIBLY THE FIRM MOST RESPONSIBLE FOR THE RECENT CHANGE HAS BEEN ROLLINS CONSTRUCTION LTD. IN THE PAST FEW YEARS MORE "ROLLINS HOMES" HAVE BEEN BUILT IN BELLEVILLE THAN ALL OTHER HOMES COMBINED! THE PRIMARY REASON FOR THIS SUCCESS IS THE CHANGE WE'VE BEEN TALKING ABOUT. WITH EVERY IMPROVEMENT AND ADVANCEMENT IN BUILDING TECHNOLOGY ROLLINS CONSTRUCTION LTD. IS USUALLY FIRST TO EMPLOY IT — MAKING "ROLLINS HOMES" ALWAYS AS MODERN AS TOMORROW. AS BELLEVILLE CONTINUES TO GROW AND CHANGE, SO WILL OUR FIRM. OUR HOUSES WILL PROBABLY CHANGE TOO . . . TO SUIT YOUR TASTES. OUR EFFORTS TO PLEASE YOU WON'T STOP THERE THOUGH — WE'LL ENDEAVOR TO MAKE THE PRICE OF "ROLLINS HOMES" AS PLEASING AS THEIR APPEARANCE! BUT WHAT IS IT THAT HAS REMAINED THE SAME, YOU ASK? WELL, THAT'S THE SECOND REASON FOR ROLLINS SUCCESS. THE MORE PERSONAL AND FRIENDLY SERVICE THAT WAS PREVALENT IN 1867 IS STILL THE NORM AT ROLLINS CONSTRUCTION LTD. ALTHOUGH WE BUILD A LOT OF HOMES, WE STILL FIND TIME TO CONSIDER YOUR PARTICULAR HOUSING NEEDS — AND WE BUILD YOUR HOME AS IF IT WERE THE ONLY ONE WE WERE BUILDING. IT'S THIS PERSONAL TOUCH COUPLED WITH A SINCERE FEELING FOR THE BUILDING TRADE THAT HAS PRODUCED THE INTEGRITY HOME BUYERS ASSOCIATE WITH ROLLINS CONSTRUCTION LTD.

CABLE TV

Comes to Belleville and Trenton During Canada's Centennial Year

YES, THIS IS CANADA'S 100TH BIRTHDAY AND ALSO MARKS CABLEVUE'S OPENING OF SERVICE TO THE PEOPLE OF BELLEVILLE AND TRENTON.

WHAT IS CABLE TELEVISION?

It is a service which delivers a wider selection of crystal clear reception TV channels to your set without any need for an aerial. The signals are received by a large sensitive master antenna located out-side the city. Amplifiers boost the signal strength and coaxial cable conveys the signal to your home.

DO YOU NEED AN ANTENNA?

No... Television cable eliminates the need for unsightly inefficient antennae which cannot compare with the crystal clear all-season reception via TV cable. Interference due to traffic or weather conditions does not affect cable reception.

HOW IS IT INSTALLED IN YOUR HOME?

Your television set is connected to the TV Cable with a connecting wire that is smaller than a lead pencil and which enters your home as neatly as your telephone line.

WHAT ABOUT COLOR TV?

Approximately 80% of evening programming is in color. Color set owners can be assured of superb reception on CABLE TV due to the installation of the finest obtainable color relay equipment installed throughout the cable system.

CABLE TV OFFERS YOU ALL THIS!

Belleville's City Hall stands as silent evidence of the spirit of Canada fast after Confederation. It was born of the prosperity of people who had achieved self-government and was dedicated equally to the service of commerce, administration and justice. Its construction was accompanied with 'municipal bickering, its cost exceeded original estimates and its completion was greeted with a mixture of scorn and admiration.

When, in 1870, the expanding community outgrew its old municipal headquarters, the now demolished police station on the market square, Council appointed a market building committee to supervise the erection of a combined market house and town hall. Alderman George Henderson set out on a fruitless trip to Boston, New York, Cincinnati and San Francisco to seek a model for the market house. On his return he hired a native son, John Forin, to draw up plans.

Forin, a contractor as well as an architect, had experience in the construction of public buildings — he was responsible for the Court House in Napanee among other buildings. He faced a formidable task.

The newness of the nation intimidated the country's founders — there was no precedent in the old British Empire for a self-governing domain. Canadians hit upon a partial solution for their unconscious feeling of insecurity — in public buildings at least, they could erect "instant history," structures designed to look centuries old the day they were completed.

Forin's job was made easier for him by the popular architectural taste of his day — a pseudo-Gothic style of false turrets, narrow pointed windows and imitation stone tracery. Whether Canadians like it, they are faced with the inescapable fact that late Victorian Gothic Revival is the national architecture.

City Hall is a perfect example. At least two visiting architectural experts have proclaimed the clock tower the most graceful and best proportioned of its type in Canada, superior even to the Peace Tower in Ottawa.

For this, Bellevillians can thank John Forin, who insisted half way through the construction, on heightening the stubby tower called for in his original specifications. City council held a special meeting to debate whether to pay Forin for the added expense of raising the tower to its soaring 185 feet above the sidewalk.

They complained that alterations had already delayed completion of the building for a year. Chairman Henderson was accused of wasting city funds on his American trip. Henderson denied the accusation of visiting the "fleshpots of San Francisco" and insisted he had paid his own travelling expenses. The fittings and furniture of the council chamber were declared by the incensed aldermen to be handsome enough, but far too luxurious and expensive. Finally, the total cost, $33,000 was in excess of the first estimates.

Despite aldermanic squabbling, the work progressed and by December, 1872, workmen put in the finishing touch, the big tower clock. Ordered from E. Howard and Co. of Boston, Mass., the clock movement has a cast iron base eight feet by four feet, shafts and pivots of tempered steel and brass wheels, one being two feet in diameter.

The great hands were of wood and the weights were two boxes of rocks, one weighing a ton, the other 600 pounds. To strike the hours, a cast iron, 4½-foot high bell, cast in England and embellished with the royal seal and the date 1872, was mounted behind the louvred windows beneath the dials.

On Christmas Eve, 1872, the town turned out to see the clock faces illuminated for the first time. Predictably, the result was a disappointment. Too few gas jets had been installed and the four faces were barely visible against the night sky. Additional burners were quickly added and on Dec. 28, "the effect upon the transparent dials was a very marked improvement".

By New Years, 1874, the fire company had moved into the old market house, police court and city council were in session in their new quarters. The ground floor was used for the banks market, a use that continued until 1961.

Still the grumbling continued. The "market building was criticized on the grounds of unsuitability. Cried one councillor in disgust, "In all the civilized world outside Canada no such building for market pitfpaces could be found — except in Holland."

The reaction to this remark on the part of the many Belleville descendants of Dutch Loyalist pioneers is not recorded. The local papers deferred their description of the too costly fittings of the chambers until later in 1874, perhaps to give time for taxpayers' tempers to cool.

In its early days, city hall served as a community centre. The chamber on the second floor was used for meetings and lectures too secular for church sanction and too serious for the opera house stage. Visiting experts packed the chamber for discourses on everything from the latest engineering marvels (accompanied with magic lantern slides) to "practical applications of the principles of the aesthetic theory to exterior and interior house decoration and to dress and personal ornaments, also the value of art in education; and the relation of 'art to morals". That was the ponderous topic of the lecture given by English author and aesthete, Oscar Wilde, on May 23, 1882.

If Belleviliians refused to recognize the grandeur of the clock tower, they reserved their greatest amusement and scorn for the clock itself. They considered it fit only as a merry-go-round for City Hall pigeons, who perched on its hands for free rides around the dials apparently the fine time - piece was poorly maintained and seldom kept accurate time. Its nickname, "the four - faced liar" is traced to a poem published in the Intelligencer by "The Cynic" in 1910.

Our Old Town Clock's the quaintest thing.
A city s'er did own,
It's truthful face to mortal man
Has rarely yet been shown;
It's not two faced (twice more than that)
But sad it is to state
That neither one of all the four
Is running with its mate.

In an attempt to achieve accurate time-keeping an electric motor was installed for winding. Once, the motor mis-functioned, drawing the tone weight up so high it slipped off its hook and went crashing through the tower. It came to rest on the floor of the second storey tower room, now the city manager's office.

In 1965, horologists Jerry O'Connor and Edward Imhoff offered to repair the mechanism. They discovered a typical large tower clock movement comparable to the best and most famous European examples. On the basis of his knowledge of similar clocks, Imhoff estimates the city hall clock, properly cared for, will keep accurate time for another 400 or 500 years.

If, as is supposed, Mr. Henderson signed the contract for the clock while on his American harpection trip, time has vindicated the lanket regardless of how many flesh-pots he included in his itinery.

Rum Pail Handy Lure For Halifax Customers

HALIFAX (CP) — One hundred years ago Halifax stores always had a pail of rum and a dipper to treat customers.

And after the St. Paul's Church choir practised every Thursday night they all had a mug of rum.

This and other information about life here in Confederation Year has been turned up by Dr. Will R. Bird, author and historian.

In those days, he told a service club, there were 26 public holidays in one year and the populace was quite liable to take the day off to watch navy vessels come into port.

One day 24 steam-driven warships of the Royal Navy arrived at one time and practically the whole population of the city trooped down to the harbor to get their first glimpse of steam vessels.

Other stories gathered from the local press of 1867 by Dr. Bird include the information that it was illegal to have weeds growing in front of your house. If caught, you were liable to a 50-cent fine.

The Harvest Yesterday and Today

The pioneer struggle for a bare living from the soil on the Prairies has become a multi-billion-dollar operation, due at least partly to the technical advances in machinery. In the early 1900s, the threshing machine and the great crews of men it took to run them made a long, hot job of the harvest. Today, long lines of harvesting combines, each operated by a single man, turn the harvest into comparative child's play.

Prairie Farms Run on Wheels

EDMONTON (CP)—In the 1890s, when the railway was bringing the first flood of immigrants to the Prairies, the number of wheels on most farms could be counted on one hand.

Almost 100 years later, the prairie farm runs on wheels. Beginning with horse and cart, progressing through steam-powered threshing machines, the wheels now propel sophisticated diesel - powered machinery that may soon be guided electronically from a remote control point.

Aided by their shiny new equipment and by increasingly scientific methods, prairie farmers have expanded their pioneer struggle for a bare living from the soil to a multi - billion - dollar operation. But uncertainty and the long working day remain a basic ingredient of their lives.

Despite spectacular production figures, no business gets smaller returns from a huge an investment and today's farmers are faced with an arrey of threats as ominous as those facing their urban counterparts.

Consumer demands, competition and the cost-price rise have ended the era of the small mixed farm, once regarded more as a way of life than as a business. Today's big specialized operations carry the earmarks of sound business enterprise.

Fewer people depend on farms for their income and each farm feeds more people. Dr. G. H. Purnell, head of Alberta's farm economics branch, says the average farmer now feeds 30 to 35 mouths in addition to his own, compared with 15 in 1950.

Federal census figures show that little additional land is coming into production and that the number of farms is decreasing steadily to meet the need for larger acreage.

There are fewer than 200,000 farms on the Prairies today, a drop of about 75,000 from 1941. Most have been absorbed by their neighbors or have been turned back to grass for livestock.

Wheat - producing Saskatchewan had 124,500 farms in 1941—nearly half the Prairie total. Today about 90,000 are left. Over the same period, Alberta's farms have shrunk from 93,200 to an estimated 67,000 and economists predict that only 36,800 will remain in 1980.

Manitoba now has under 40,000 farms, some 18,000 fewer than the 1941 total.

A quarter-century ago, the Prairies had $2,000,000,000 invested in land, livestock and machinery. The present total is estimated at more than $10,000,000,000.

Dr. Purnell says the prospective farmer in Alberta is advised today that he will need a minimum total investment of $80,000. By 1980, the minimum will be $30,000 to $100,000.

When mechanization began to sweep across the Prairies in 1941 the average farm covered 412 acres and was worth about $6,800 with machinery making up one-sixth of the total. Today the average investment is greater for machinery alone, about $10,000 for a 640-acre farm.

The cost-price squeeze, a favorite topic of almost every Prairie farm economist, has been a decisive factor in forcing people off the farms. The farm population of the Prairies, nearly 50 per cent in 1941, is down to an estimated 18 to 22 per cent.

The survivors have turned increasingly to specialization, in one of the most dramatic developments in the history of Prairie agriculture.

Alberta is credited with pioneering the trend, particularly in the last five years. Farm operations have geared for selected production in poultry, livestock feeding and production, and several vegetable crops.

For example, in 1961 potatoes were grown in Alberta on 12,000 acres by 118 farmers, with a total production of 3,200,000 hundredweight. This year, there still are some 100 growers, but 85 per cent of the total production of 1,800,000 hundredweight came from 20,000 acres and was produced by only 35 growers.

It is no longer uncommon to hear of farmers with 300 acres in potatoes, and many grow 100 acres or more. Machinery investments are high, some selling for more than $30,000 per unit.

Across the Prairies an increasing number of farmers have livestock feeding enterprises that are one- or two-man operations and contain 100 head of beef cattle or 300 hogs. Some are much larger. A few years ago such operations would have required dozens of workmen.

But as some operations grow larger, others send less into produce marketing channels, agriculture officials report.

Almost half the farm production of Alberta, for example, comes from only seven per cent of the farms. Another 40 per cent of farms are credited with only eight per cent of the total production. The remainder comes from intermediate-sized farms.

And in future, more intermediate-sized farmers appear destined to face the choice of expansion or liquidation.

Economists predict profit margins will narrow even farther, resulting in a relatively small group of highly-specialized commercial farms at one extreme and a fairly large group of low-income semi-farms at the other.

Dr. Purnell has forecast that as profit margins continue to narrow in the next few years there will be a "tremendous exodus" of farm labor.

But as farmers expand, they will hire more workers, and by 1980 there will be an increase of 7,000 from the present 18,000, he said.

Most additional labor will be farmers selling uneconomic units and moving onto larger farms.

Land prices are allowing some older farmers to sell at prices which provide retirement incomes not possible before. Others, on farms too small to yield profits, are selling and joining the trek to urban centres.

The trek already is several decades old, and economists say it has several decades to go.

Despite the passing of the way-of-life farm, observers say the trend will enable Canadian agriculture to assume a larger share of world markets.

And world demand for food, says the federal agriculture department's annual Outlook forecast, will continue to outstrip production—creating a bright future for Canadian agriculture.

Ride Saved Man's Life

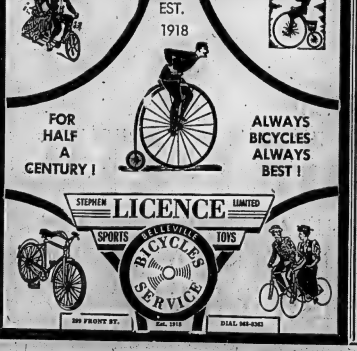
How long does it take a letter to reach its Montreal destination from its Toronto mailing point?

Even today's streamlined delivery services would be hard put to beat the record of a Quinte district stage coach driver in the early 1800's.

William Weller, whose stagecoach enterprise was based in Prince Edward County — Weller's Bay was named after him — was proud of his timetable record.

But his greatest feat was his dash from Toronto to Montreal in 1840 to save a man's life.

Weller covered the 350 dusty road miles in 35 hours and 40 minutes.



The awesome record run was made at the behest of Governor General Lord Sydenham who had to reprieve a man sentenced to hang in Montreal.

Weller wagered he could cover the distance in 36 hours.

Averaging 10 miles an hour — including stops to change horses — he made it with 20 minutes to spare.

Weller won his bet — and the governor general kept his fateful appointment.

The prisoner was reprieved, literally snatched from the steps of the gallows — thanks to the break-neck speed of the daring Quinte district driver.

Sprawling CPR Giant Was A Political Necessity

MONTREAL (CP)—This contract, mourned Montreal financier George Stephen as he signed with the quill in his hand, is one "which my friends and enemies agree will be the ruin of us all."

Full of forebodings so that day in 1881, Stephen had just taken over a 700-mile railroad from the Canadian government, a railroad he had agreed to fashion into the continent-spanning Canadian Pacific Railway.

It was an old man's gamble, accepted by a cautious and cagey investor who might have chosen comfortable retirement, and it paid off beyond his wildest dreams.

Instead of flopping as Stephen and his associates feared, the railway prospered. Through enterprising acquisitiveness and hard-nosed business sense, it has grown into Canada's biggest single industry with assets exceeding $9,000,000,000 and an air, ship and rail system that "spans the world."

Sitting these days in the splendid splendor of their cabinetled boardroom, the railway's directors can reflect they have come a long way from the times when howling wolves attacked a train at Medicine Hat or open hay coaches carried gawking passengers through the Rockies.

Far, too, from the days of the century years when Prairie farmers cursed the railway as the greedy Eastern monopoly and from the bleak '30s when an angry public watched it drop 45 per cent of its passenger services.

Through it all, the CPR has only once in its 81 years failed to make a profit. During 1966, net profit from transportation, oil, gas, minerals, lumber and real-estate topped $45,000,000.

Strangely enough, this giant business concern was born as much for political as for economic reasons. It was "the wedding band of Confederation"—the only means of binding a nation after British Columbia made a transcontinental railway its terms for joining Canada in 1871.

Hampered by political opposition and the difficulties of building through a sparse and scattered population of less than 4,000,000, the government had by 1880 constructed only 700 miles of uneven track. It turned to Stephen in desperation.

The British-born magnate yielded to Prime Minister Sir John A. Macdonald's entreaties and took the white elephant off his back — but first a hard bargain was driven.

The new Canadian Pacific Railway syndicate received $25,000,000 in government grants plus 25,000,000 acres of land in return for its promises to build the transcontinental railway within 10 years.

Bossed by William Cornelius Van Horne, a giant of a man and a bags eater, who boasted his cost of cocoa was "a Dewey Horn, Pendant, upon a Kitchen Door," the wood-and-steel track thrust west at breakneck speed.

Railroaders, paid the handsome sum of "two dollars and upwards a day," blasted their way through the solid rock of northwestern Ontario and watched seven sets of rails sink in muskeg north of Lake Superior before the roadbed held.

Yet in 1885 — five years ahead of schedule—a tough, bearded crowd assembled on Eagle Pass, B.C., to watch company president Donald A. Smith drive the last spike and hear Van Horne's cryptic summary that "the work has been done well in every way."

CPR telegraph wires and a tide of immigrants soon followed the steel rails west.

Traffic in buffalo bones and pioneer goods bargained with foreign dignitaries, among them the prince of Siam, luxuriated in CPR hotels rattled in the B.C. mountains where posters boasted service marked by "Parisian politesse."

Those were years when a CPR boss brooked no backtalk and the general superintendent from Winnipeg thought little of derailing an engine across a rival track built by the Manitoba government and guarding it with a crowd of armed railway men.

It was; the St. Paul, Minneapolis Pioneer remarked, "a scene of inflable absurdity" but it lasted two weeks until the federal government cancelled the CPR's monopoly in the West and affirmed Manitoba's right to construct a competing line.

High times remained through the first four decades of this century but signs of change were already there.

In the '20s bowls of protest from western farmers encouraged the government to freeze grain freight rates at levels one-third below those paid in the United States.

Worse still, in 1919 merger of several near-bankrupt rail companies under federal auspices gave birth to the Canadian National Railways and—complained then-president E. W. Beatty—brought the CPR "in juxtaposition and competition with its own government."

By the end of the Second World War both inland and passenger services seemed to be dying as Canadians took themselves and their goods to the fast new airlines or sped along transcontinental highways in trucks and cars.

After 1950, railway profits plunged, and shabby, deserted stations across the country told the story as the CPR slashed its passenger services, raised rates, and closed the HALIFAX CP — The history of printing and publishing in Nova Scotia, more than two centuries of it, will be the central theme of an exhibit at the historic Citadel here in July and August.

The exhibit, the centennial project of the Library Association of Halifax, will also stress two Canadian firsts in the field of publication. These are the publication in 1752 of Canada's first newspaper, the Halifax Gazette, and publication of Canada's first periodical, the Nova Scotia Magazine, which first appeared in 1789.

Other items in the display will be the first authentic history of Nova Scotia written by James Thomas Haliburton and printed by Joseph Howe in 1829.

CHARLES E. BISHOP

FOUNDED ORIGINAL CONCERN IN 1890

Charles F. Bishop, eldest son of the founder received early training in the business and then, after five years ranching in Saskatchewan, returned to join his father about 1913. Contract growing of seed crops for both domestic and export markets made up a large part of the business activity in those early times. About this time the retail mail order aspect of the business was developed.

Hastings County was his choice of site because of his interest in seed production and the export possibilities for Alsike and Red Clover to connections in Great Britain. Fishing and hunting prospects were undoubtedly an enhancing feature of the area as well.

Incorporated in 1946 the business is now owned and operated by sons Bill and Bruce with Charles F. in retirement. Basically, Bishops are processors, importers and sometimes exporters, and distributors of every adapted variety of forage seed.

In 1960 the old seed store at 173 Front Street was vacated and the larger new "Seed and Garden Centre" built at the Seed Mill location 81-85 Station Street, bringing ample parking and expanded services to local farmers and gardeners.

Future plans include possible expansion to a new 5-acre site recently purchased in the vicinity of Highway 401.

Alexander Graham Bell may have had a tickling sensation in his mind at the time of Confederation, 1867, but it wasn't until 8 years later that he finally fulfilled his dream of transmitting a human sound over a wire.

June 3 was the day . . . in 1875 Graham Bell accomplished it with his "Gallows Telephone": transmission of sound was by means of a tightly stretched animal membrane responsive to sound waves.

Then, on March 10, 1876, when Bell spilled sulphuric acid on his clothes, he accidentally delivered the first articulate sentence over the telephone. His famous words to his assistant were: "Mr. Watson, come here; I want you!" (this Mr. Watson is not to be confused, of course, with the fictional assistant of Sherlock Holmes). The receiver on Bell's "Liquid Telephone" was a tuned-reed.

In 1891, the "solid back" long distance telephone, forerunner of today's quality telephones, was introduced. This set featured a greatly improved transmitter. As it was more costly to produce, and a much better set, the customer had to pay an additional $5.00 a year for it.

The 1879 wall telephone was the first set to contain both transmitter and receiver. In this model, two receiver-like units were provided. Either unit could be used for listening or talking. Prior to this, a single unit was used, and had to be moved alternately from ear to mouth both for listening and talking.

The 1924 Pedestal Desk Dial Phone: not so stylish by today's standards. A remarkable set for those days, though—many are still in use today. What other home convenience still operates after 43 years?

The No. 200 desk set of 1930 rested on an oval base. The handset combined both the transmitter and the receiver, but it required a separate bell box.

In 1960, the modern day Contessa introduced the new era of decorator sets, in a full range of colours, attractively styled, with an illuminated dial and night light.

And now 1967. With touch-tone telephone service, dials are replaced by push-buttons, and dial pulses with musical notes.

An all Canadian Company—strongly linked with Canada's past, present and future.

History of Trade

The value of Canada's imports and exports, a bouncing baby that hadn't reached $3,000,000,000 by the start of the Second World War, now has grown into a giant that tops $10,000,000,000 in exports and probably will pass that figure in imports in 1967. Value of both imports and exports has almost doubled in this decade.

Union Disappoints Many Maritimers

HALIFAX (CP) — One hundred years after Confederation, the Maritime provinces are still disappointed that they have not realized the benefits anticipated when Nova Scotia and New Brunswick joined with the provinces of Canada.

Politicians and economists feel the region is still the backwater of Canada. While recognizing that their geographic location has been a handicap, they also blame the federal government.

"The traditional belief in Nova Scotia was that our location was a severe handicap to economic development," says Premier Stanfield of Nova Scotia. "In recent years the feeling has been that Canada is prepared to give consideration to the development of our region. However, there is still some feeling that our location is a continuing handicap.

Mr. Stanfield says "there is a considerably better feeling now, a genuine pride in Canada but "unless the economy of the region can be updated, dissatisfaction may grow again.

"It would seem scarcely possible in any political system for a province with Nova Scotias advantages and resources to have fared poorer in relation to general North American prosperity than has Nova Scotia within Confederation.

He says the province would have prospered had it been a part of the United States or an independent state because "the North American prosperity is such that it flows across borders.

Mr. Regan says the Maritimes face their current plight because elected representatives from Canada's population centres "have never given Nova Scotia and other areas sufficient compensation for the punishing effect of their protective tariffs.

However, he sees some hope, noting that federal governments in the last 10 years have begun to recognize federal responsibility in financial areas.

"It is significant that they have started steps to date inadequate, to correct the imbalance of the past 100 years.

Cyril Leard, president of the Maritime Provinces Board of Trade, agrees.

"I think Ottawa has begun to recognize the potential of the Maritime provinces and their economy. There is a spirit of dialogue between Ottawa and the provinces which is healthy.

Prof. J. H. Aitcheson, head of the political science department at Dalhousie University and leader of the provincial New Democratic Party, feels the federal government has evaded its responsibility to the Maritime provinces in financial matters.

"Since Confederation so many government responsibilities have developed within the provincial sphere that federal financial arrangements have proved inadequate. The federal government must ensure that no region suffers in basic governmental services.

He thinks full equalization payments to the Maritime provinces would be the answer.

However, he says that without Confederation the position of these provinces would have been much more difficult.

"The prosperity of the Maritimes in the days of wind, wood and water was declining at the time of Confederation and it would have been difficult to upgrade the economy without Confederation.

The task of the federal government today, he feels, must be directed to making Maritimers "first-class" citizens.

"The Maritimes must be brought up to a level with the rest of Canada. The federal government has given this region greater recognition recently.

Gilbert Finn of Moncton, N.B., president of the Atlantic Provinces Economic Council, says the economy of the Maritimes appears to have begun to lag after Confederation.

"We in the Maritimes had an export - oriented economy and when trade was redirected along domestic lines we began to suffer because of protective tariffs.

The APEC president says that although there have been periods since Confederation when the Maritimes appeared unable to continue economically, "we began to exist in the last 10 years.

He maintains that if the provinces can keep "plugging as they have in the last decade they can achieve a lot of improvements.

He sees the solution to Maritime economic ills as a three-way affair: "The people, the provincial government and the federal government.

"If the federal government or the provincial government try to do it alone it can't be done.

rival CNR win the bulk of passenger revenues.

Never again, the CPR executive decided, would the rest of the industry's many-served services be forced to take second place to the rail passenger service.

It proved a good choice—CP telecommunications and air traffic flourished while rich harvests in the West filled out a freight business already taxed to the limit carrying potash and lumber.

The long-neglected land resources suddenly proved their worth in real estate, oil, gas and minerals and the CPR subsidiary Consolidated Mining and Smelting Co. of Canada Ltd., developed into one of the world's largest mining companies.

By January this year, company chairman Norris R. Crump was happily predicting greater profits for 1967 than ever before.

The days of hand - carved wooden seats, plush-carpeted coaches and "de luxe" services were gone for good, but it didn't look as if the CPR would be missing them.

Prices Unheard of in Decade Was Lure in 1867 Advertising

By JEAN SHARP
CP Women's Editor

"A new style of woman's shoe for the southern market is made at Lynn, Mass., with the sole thin as a wafer and the heels very high and tapering to the circumference of a three - cent piece."

This 1867 fashion note is the start of item that, if written today, would turn up on the women's pages of a daily newspaper. In Confederation year there were no women's sections. If you wanted to read news about women you had to hunt for it.

But reading 100-year-old copies of the Toronto Globe and The Free Press and Daily Western Advertiser of London, Ont., provides plenty of material interesting to women, both in the news columns and among the ads.

For example, The Golden Lion was having a moving sale and offering "prices unheard of in Toronto since 1857." Leghorn hats were 50 cents, boat washing prints 11 cents, lace shawls $1, muslin dresses $1.50.

You could buy the Queen's elliptic sewing machine for $18 with the maker's assurance that it would hem, braid, full, tuck, bind, cord, quilt, gather and embroider.

Quack ads abounded: "As it is a well known and melancholy fact that one of the great causes of death among children is from worms alone ... thousands of children might be saved from the grave" by taking Hathaway's worm lozenges.

And, alas, if there were a death in the family you could easily discover where to go for mourning clothes. They were frequently advertised in the newspapers of 1867.

There were the customary reports of social occasions in that day but now and then an item appeared that suggested there were problems.

"The contagion of fashionable drunkenness is said to have broken out in Cincinnati among women of society," said one story.

Rev. George Paxton Young, inspector of grammar schools of Upper Canada, and James E. Dixon of Colborne, Ont., had a long exchange of letters to the editor about the morality and usefulness of allowing girls to attend grammar school.

Both were in favor of educating girls, the question was to what extent, and Mr. Young wasn't sure mixed classes were a good idea.

A grammar school then was one that taught Latin and offered a more advanced education than the three Rs and a more academic training than a girls' school might provide.

Catharine Marshall might appear in today's women's pages as a case history described by a social worker. One hundred years ago she was picked right off the police blotter by a reporter.

"For nearly six months," he wrote, "this miserable creature has been about on a tour for the good of her health somewhere in the U.S. and turned up in London yesterday again.

"She was found last night at 10 o'clock by Constable Keighley, parading Richmond Street in company with two of Her Majesty's soldiers, interrupting pedestrians on the sidewalk.

"The officer remonstrated with her, advising her to leave and not obstruct the way. She could not see why and gave the constable a little of her own mind on the subject, when he took her under his own personal care to the police station."

Sentence: 30 days.

The storekeepers of 1867 had gimmicks to attract prospective customers but they weren't much like today's trading stamps.

Richardson Brothers, butchers, placed an ad in The Globe offering Christmas greetings to inhabitants of the east end of Toronto and inviting them to drop in and see the fattest pig in the city.

Other ads, however, weren't all that different from what you see today.

"Have you heard of that advertising dodge that some of our friends are kicking against?" asked one. "No, what is it? George Burns is selling goods so cheap that everybody is buying there."

Disputed Border

The Labrador boundary has been the subject of dispute between Quebec and Newfoundland over the years. In a 1926 submission to the Privy Council, Canada recommended on behalf of Quebec that Newfoundland be given the bare coastline of Labrador, which Newfoundland fishermen had settled. Newfoundland claimed the territory east of the height of land and this was accepted by the Privy Council. The border has since been altered as the height of land became more accurately located. Belleville Had Bank Long Before Union

Belleville had its own banking facilities 24 years before Canada officially came into being, for it was in 1843 that the Bank of Montreal established here.

George Benjamin, who later became the county registrar and first publisher of The Intelligencer, served as first manager. It was one of the bank's earliest branches in Upper Canada.

Today, the B of M's main Belleville branch is well into its 124th year of banking business, while the bank as a whole approached its 150th anniversary and Canada celebrates a century of nationhood.

A plaque commemorating the establishment of the main branch as Belleville's first bank, the Centennial of Confederation and the 150th anniversary of the Bank of Montreal was unveiled by Mayor J. R. Ellis on May 1.

Belleville was an agricultural and lumbering town with a population of 3,000 when the B of M opened its doors for business in January, 1843. The first office was located in a one-storey red brick building on the north side of Victoria street. Several years later, the bank acquired new quarters in a two-storey, cut-stone building on Front street, which was then regarded as the business centre of the fast-growing town. This office housed the branch until 1857, when a building at the corner of Pinnacle street and Victoria avenue was occupied.

For the next 65 years, bank log was carried from there. The corner lot became served as protection against the fires which were not uncommon to a town where eight lumber mills were busy until the beginning of the 20th century.

With the arrival of the Grand Trunk Railway, the community became a main junction for the various lines and, as a result, a number of factories were established to initiate industrial development.

By 1922, the Merchants Bank of Canada had merged with the Bank of Montreal. The more modern Merchants Bank building at Front and Bridge streets was acquired. A new building was constructed on the same site in 1961 to meet the increasing banking needs of Canada's lock manufacturing centre.

The Front and Bridge streets branch has remained the Bank of Montreal's principal Belleville office, where A. D. (Al) Cameron has been the manager since 1964. However, the development of the district since the war has required the expansion of B of M banking facilities to three offices.

The North Front and College streets office was opened in September, 1963, and A. A. Kroetsch has been manager since then. Winston Kent has been manager of the Dundas street east and McDonald avenue branch since it was opened in September, 1965.

Prince Bypassed Decorated City

The Prince of Wales, later King Edward VII, arrived in Belleville harbor on the steamer Kingston in August, 1860. The town was decorated; the church bells were ringing and people thronged the streets in excited expectancy.

The next morning flags were hung from arches that had been erected. The Orangemen paraded in full regalia demonstrating their loyalty to the crown. The Prince, however, not wanting to be associated with any religious items in case it might start a feud among Queen Victoria's subjects, decided not to land and the steamer went on to Cobourg leaving behind a very disappointed Belleville.

First Delivery Of Mail Was Gala Event

By DORIS WADDELL
HASTINGS COUNTY HISTORICAL SOCIETY

For the citizens of Belleville in 1913, May 23 was not only The Queen's Birthday, it was also the day on which mail delivery by letter carried was first made to the homes and business places of the town.

About 11 o'clock on that bright sunny morning a crowd of curious gathered to hear the speeches and watch the ceremonies marking this step forward in the life of their community.

Among the onlookers are Post Master Alfred T. Giles, Assistant Post Master J. V. G. Truesdell, Judge J. F. Wills who was mayor of Belleville, J. W. Johnson, MPP, Col. W. N. Ponton, former Post Master John Taylor, W. B. Rapp, A. C. McFee and bank managers John Elliott and C. M. Stork. The letter carriers, waiting to set out on their appointed rounds, were George Irvine, Clare Jenkins, Wilson Bird, Fred Bowen, Charles Lloyd, F. O. Pitney, Harry Belzer, Robert Andrews and Harry Symons.

The story was told that one of them novice postbs got lost that day on his unfamiliar route, and when he had still not returned long after sundown, "Doc" Truesdell claimed to have found this conscientious new public servant still searching for house numbers, by light of a lantern, in the then sparsely built-up Yeomans Street area of West Belleville.

Also prominent in the picture are Co. George Rose and his wife. There had been several weeks of behind - the - scenes preparations on the part of the local postal staff, advised by Col. Rose at the Toronto postal headquarters. The rules "really" had to be organized, new facilities set up for sorting the mail into these new divisions, and both the experienced and newly - hired staff trained in new procedures.

If you wonder why mail delivery was being made on May 24, a holiday . . . it was common in those times for mail to be delivered on such days. Christmas Day itself for some years saw the carriers set out on heavily laden, pouches crammed with cards and letters, and with packets of parcels strapped to their backs. "Mail Early for Christmas" was unknown. In fact, most people purposely mailed late, to ensure their greetings would arrive on the Christmas morning delivery.

And if you wonder how Bellevilleans received their mail before May 24, 1913 . . . they went to the Post Office, corner of Bridge and Pinnacle, side of the present Intelligencer Building, and picked it up themselves.

The business and professional men, and the more affluent householder, probably rented a box, similar to those still in use in modern Post Offices.

But by far the greater part of the people of Belleville received their mail at the general delivery wicket. If Father worked in the downtown area, he probably called for his mail on his way home in the evening, although Mother may have dropped in on the Post Office during a shopping trip, and possibly one or more of the children had also called to ask for the family's mail after school.

The general delivery wicket was manned from 6:30 in the morning until 7 in the evening, when the gaslit lobby of the Post Office was a favorite meeting place. The postal clerk on General Delivery wicket duty very soon became acquainted with nearly all his fellow Bellevillians!

Didn't Always Get Men Old Trooper Now Recalls

William John McCoy, a 96-year-old who joined the NWMP in 1885, says many of the patrols weren't completed because often the men went off to drink instead.

"We were not supposed to drink but we could always get whisky. . . . Some men even took the horse's medicine and drank it. I don't know what was in it but if you drank enough you could sure get high."

Lewis Ingram Wood, 97, of Campbell River, B.C., who donned the NWMP uniform in 1892, recalls the time an officer led his troops on a 100-mile gallop across the wild Alberta prairie and didn't know where he was going.

The officer, says Mr. Wood, tried to cover up his embarrassment by ordering extra drill before the return ride back to the post.

"The sergeant lined us up on the prairie and then turned us over to the officer. Then the officer shouted, 'Parade, carry arms!' But none of us moved."

"Sir, the men already are carrying arms,' the sergeant said."

The officer blushed, turned the men over to the sergeant and rode back to Calgary by himself.

Mr. McCoy, an Irish immigrant who was stationed at the NWMP post at Maple Creek, about 75 miles east of Medicine Hat, Alta., has vivid memories of the food.

"All we lived on was prairie chicken and antelope and as true as I am here you have never seen grub like that in your life."

But there were compensations, says Mr. McCoy, now a resident of the Provincial Home for Men at Kamloops. NWMP members had the best horses available and got plenty of whisky.

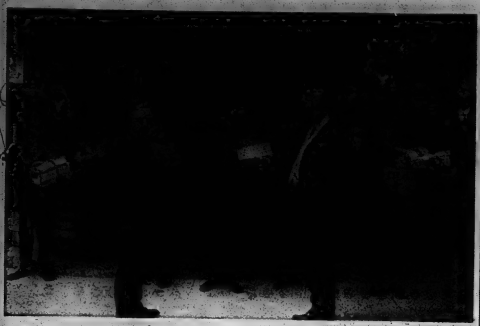
The force paid $125 each for its horses at a time when "you could get any coyuse for $5. The Mounties' horses were the very best."

Mr. McCoy says he got 50 cents a day as a constable but strict discipline and resulting heavy fines often took that away. Mounties were fined $5 for arguing with a non-commissioned officer; $10 for arguing with an officer; and two weeks' pay for sleeping on duty.

He recalls the time he and his buddy Charlie Sinclair found some American smugglers trying to sell whisky to the Indians for furs.

"Charlie told them there is no whisky allowed and you must come along with us. Charlie then fined them $50 and let the fellows go. We then went back to Medicine Hat and drank the whisky."

Mr. McCoy left the force after five years and moved to B.C.



Mr. Wood left the NWMP after a few years stationed in Alberta and headed for the Yukon when gold fever hit him. He returned to Alberta to work for the federal fisheries department, then moved to Campbell River.

Belleville Girls Warmly Greeted

Women were Canada's scarcest commodity and centuries after Louis XIV sent out the first "King's Girls" to New France women were still being shipped en masse to the new world. In 1854 the secretary of agriculture of the United Canada (a Belleville man) wrote to his mother in Ireland:

"About a fortnight ago I prevailed upon our emigrant agent here in Quebec to send up a cargo of girls (who had been sent out here by your Irish Unions) to Belleville. He told me on Monday last that he had sent up 97 according to my desire and had received a letter from the gentlem a n to whome I had forwarded them, stating that in one hour after they landed they were all hired at good wages! and a demand for 100 more."

The Unions paid the passage of these girls out to Quebec and gave them each 20 shillings sterling on landing.

Letter Carrier Inaugurated in 1913

Back in 1913, one year before the start of World War I, postal carrier service was inaugurated in Belleville. Picture shows the carrier group with E."Gus Porter, the then MP for Hastings and postmaster of the day in the foreground and local dignitaries at the rear.

Confederation Architect

Sir Alexander Galt Has Supporters

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — "Sir John A. Macdonald created the framework of Confederation?

"Poppycock!" says a University of Western Ontario professor.

"Sir Alexander Galt created the framework of Confederation," H. B. Timothy, classics professor at Talbot College, insists.

It was Sir Alexander who, in 1858, committed the government of Sir John A. Macdonald and George Etienne Cartier to work toward confederation of all the British provinces in North America, Prof. Timothy said in an interview.

"A lot of credit should go to Galt that has gone to Sir John A."

The professor is an authority on the Galt family. John Galt, Sir Alexander's father, was a native of Prof. Timothy's birthplace, Irvine, Scotland. It was there he acquired his interest in the history of the Galt family.

By, Since coming to Canada in 1859, Prof. Timothy has written numerous articles for newspapers and magazines. He is currently writing a book on the Galts.

Sir Alexander Galt's fame has suffered an undeserved eclipse, Prof. Timothy says.

When in his late teens, Sir Alexander came to this country and served as a clerk for the British American Land Co. in Sherbrooke, Que.

The young Galt rescued the land - selling and land - leasing company from its financial difficulties and was commissioner of the company from 1844 to 1855.

Prof. Timothy says a seldom-realized achievement of Sir Alexander is that he was responsible for the building of the first international railway, the St. Lawrence and Atlantic Line, from Montreal to Portland, Me.

Sir Alexander also founded Lethbridge, Alta., Prof. Timothy says.

But it was his role as a Father of Confederation that should bring him highest praise.

When asked to join the Macdonald - Cartier administration, after deciding to form the government with Macdonald and suggesting Cartier in his stead, he made it a condition that the government include a plank in its platform to bring about a federation of British North America.

After Galt took over the role of finance minister, he presented to the governments of Upper and Lower Canada the Confederation manifesto, outlining the policy of union.

With Cartier and John Rose, he went to England to try to persuade the British government to go along with Confederation.

Galt was a delegate at the Charlottetown and Quebec conferences in 1864 and the Westminster conference of 1866.

The next year he was one of the first representatives in the new Canadian government, taking on the post of finance minister.

This is the background that should entitle Sir Alexander Galt to better than he has received from posterity, Prof. Timothy says.

"And more of Sir Alexander Galt's descendants have been prominent in Canadian public life than of any other Father of Confederation."

One descendant, T. M. Galt of Montreal, is vice-president and chief actuary of Sun Life of Canada. Another, Anole Service, is an artist in Montreal. H. G. H. Smith, a grandson of Sir Alexander, is a Winnipeg lawyer.

What it means to be a hundred

As we Canadians reach our hundredth birthday we pause for a moment, to look back.

What does a hundred years represent?

In terms of nations and businesses such as ours, one hundred years is barely a beginning. Unlike the individual, collectively we gain strength with age. We enrich the experience of years with the technology, the vigour and the imagination of each new generation.

What does it mean to be a hundred?

It means that many hardships and disappointments have been endured and overcome. It means hard work and growth and achievement. It means a hundred years of human effort and experience on which to build our future.

The Bank of Nova Scotia, established 135 years ago, has shared in this experience and contributed to our growth as a nation.

Today we pause to give thanks to those who have gone before us. They have made an incalculable contribution to what we are today and what we can be.

We have reached our first century as a nation, and now, let us move forward together to the next milestone.

A PERSONAL MESSAGE . . .

Although always in the minds of the people of the County of Hastings, the Centennial Anniversary of our nation is a most fitting time to acknowledge with humility and gratitude the courage and sacrifices of our forefathers.

With such a heritage and with God's help, we now look to the future with courage and determination.

EFFECTIVE REGIONAL GOVERNMENT

Hastings County has for nearly one hundred and twenty years provided an effective second level of local government.

Originally the primary function of a county was to provide for the administration of justice and arterial roads but in recent years, this field of service has been broadened to provide a multitude of services common to the constituent municipalities.

Modern homes for the aged are being provided in both the northern and southern parts of this county. An efficient court house and administration building has been built and a new regional detention centre is planned for the area. Our road system has been up-dated and expanded to provide a secondary highway system second to none. In co-operation with our neighbors a modern, multi-million dollar hospital is being built and an effective public health unit has been created to administer to the needs of the young and old. In addition our educational system is being re-organized and an efficient highly trained assessment department has been established to equalize the cost of all municipal services to each and every taxpayer. Further improvements in municipal services are presently under discussion in the fields of welfare, industrial and agricultural development.

Today we stand on the threshold of important and far reaching changes in our municipal structure. Your county council, together with its appointed officials and staff stands ready to accept this challenge in the firm belief that our government was created to serve the needs and wants of our people.

Best Wishes to All the Citizens of Hastings From Your Centennial Year Council

Daily Intelligencer.

BELLEVILLE, TUESDAY, JULY 3.

The Liberal Convention.

In to-day's issue we give a report of the proceedings of the "Liberal" Convention, which we recommend to the attentive perusal of our readers. We may have a word to say in connection with this subject hereafter.

FROM OTTAWA.

(By Special Telegraph to the Daily Intelligencer.)

OTTAWA, July 1.

Lord Monck then announced that the Queen had conferred on Mr. John A. Macdonald the dignity of K. C. B; and on Messrs. Howland, McDougall, Cartier, Galt, Tilley and Tupper, that of C. B

Lord Monck shook hands with the Judges and Mr. John A. Macdonald, and the public were then directed to retire.

The proceedings took place in the Executive Council Chamber. There were about fifty persons present to witness the proceedings.

Sir John A. Macdonald formed a Privy Council this afternoon, which was duly sworn in, and is understood to be constituted as already announced.

Dominion Day.

Not in the history of the world was such a scene witnessed as that which passed before the eyes of four millions of Canadians yester mon. The day dawned upon a new nation, born not as nations usually are, amid scenes of strife, of carnage and of blood, but ushered into being quietly, peacefully and tranquilly as the midsummer morn which signalized its birth. There was no clanking of arms, no pomp and circumstance of war, no ruins of burned villages, no heaps of mangled corses, nor of streams of blood. But on conquering heroes came with the garlands of peace upon their brows, and along their pathway were plenteously strewn the fruits of a peaceful, bloodless victory. All honor to the men to whose skill and unflagging spirit, undaunted courage and true-hearted patriotism, we are indebted for this inestimable boon to Canada—to mankind.

We enter now upon new duties, incur new responsibilities, and must prepare for new sacrifices. The country which to-day is comprised within the Dominion is immense in extent, immense in resources. It has magnificent rivers and lakes traversing it through the whole of its length and breadth, giving a highway to the ocean capable of bearing the produce of the great West for thousands of years to come. It has capacious harbors, it has an extensive marine, and now rates the fourth maritime power in the world. Its agricultural, commercial and manufacturing resources are equal to any portion of the Continent, while its mineral wealth is inexhaustible. Its fisheries will ever be a vast source of revenue, and its timber limits promise profitable returns to the lumbermen for many years to come.

In our social and moral relations we are not afraid of a comparison with any other country, and without boasting, we can with pride point to our School Houses and Churches, which we might almost say cover the land, to show that our educational and religious status is not below that of any other country. In short, we have, within this new Dominion, all the elements of prosperity, and we will have only ourselves to blame if we do not take advantage of our position, and make our mark among the nations of the earth.

Here, as elsewhere throughout the Dominion, the 1st of July was observed as a day of public rejoicing. It was proclaimed a holiday, and observed as such by all the inhabitants. The, weather was delightful, neither too cool nor too hot, which made it pleasant for the Volunteers, who were obliged to tramp, tramp the most of the day, and made it pleasant for those who took part in the numerous games and amusements which had been furnished by the Committee, and made it pleasant for the thousands of men, women and children who promenaded the sidewalks and thronged the dusty streets. The weather, in short, was everything that could be wished for. The town put on a holiday appearance. From a hundred homestead gaily fluttered the national banner, and from windows and verandahs a creditable display of bunting was made.

At 11 o'clock the Volunteers assembled at the different armories, the 15th Battalion at the armory, Front Church Street, and the Companies of the 49th, and the grand Trunk Rifles at the armory, Bridge Street. The 15th turned out in large force, and their soldierly and brisk appearance showed they had made great proficiency in their two days' drill a week. The Grand Trunk Rifles, number ing some 95 men and 6 officers, under command of Captain Nunn, were met at Rowan's Foundry by the band of the 19th Be talion and escorted to the armory, Bridge Street. Shortly afterward, the Stirling Co mpany of the 49th Battalion, under command of Capt. Bonter, made their appearance, and were escorted by the Belleville Rifle en, with the band, were despatched to the Grove to escort them to the armory. This latter Company numbered about 40 men, and presented a fine appearance as they marched down the street. The whole force was brigaded under command of Lieut. Col. Campbell, and, headed by the band, proceeded to the Court House Hill, where a large crowd had assembled, and where the Mayor and Corporation appeared in their official capacity to hear Royal Proclamation. The Mayor, previous to reading the Proclamation, delivered a pleasant and eloquent address, congratulating the people upon the blessings they enjoyed upon the bright future which was opened up to them, and trusted that they would be worthy of that nation from which they sprung. He then read the Royal Proclamation establishing the new Dominion, after which he called for three cheers for the Queen and three for the Dominion of Canada, which were given with a will.

A Te de Jeu was then fired, after which the Volunteers and a large number of citizens proceeded to Bleecker's Grove, where three or four hours were spent in a very pleasant manner. The Volunteers were put through a variety of evolutions, and they performed in a very creditable manner, showing that they had profited well while from their officers. Lunch was provided and served up to the Volunteers, after which a recess was made for the games which had been advertised.

For the first Sack race, there were six entries. E. R. Benjamin took the first prize, and J. Godfrey the second.

For the second Sack race there were six entries. Martin Benson was declared the winner of the first prize and J. Godfrey of the second.

The next game was, "hop, step and jump," for which there were no less than eighteen entries. Godfrey was declared winner of the first prize and E. Ross of the second.

For the Mile Race, nineteen entered. J. Johnson carried off the first prize; M. Benson, the second; and J. Dougall the third.

Several other games took place which afforded considerable amusement to the spectators.

About 5 o'clock the assembly was sounded, and the Volunteers were marched back to their respective armories when they were dismissed. The Belleville Company took supper at the Anglo-American, which had been kindly provided for them by the authorities.

In the evening the only place where there was any public display was at the Railway Station. A ball was given in the Committee of the Station at the Freight shed, which was tastefully decorated for the occasion, and at which a large number of the townspeople were present. The residences of Capt. Nunn was illuminated, and there were numerous lights in the windows of the Station. Everything passed off pleasantly, and there was nothing to mar the proceedings of the day. We must not forget to notice that the premises of Arthur Fletcher & Co., on the corner of Front and Bridge Streets, were brilliantly illuminated.

Disastrous Fire.

A destructive fire occurred this forenoon in the vicinity of Flint's Steam Saw Mills, by which a number of families have been rendered homeless. The fire originated in a house belonging to which there were several families, and before it was discovered it had gained considerable headway. The Steam Fire Engine was early on the ground, but it was some little time before steam was got up. After playing for some time effectively, the engines suddenly ceased to work, and upon examination it was found that some of the valves had been choked with saw dust. In the mean time the fire had got beyond control, and speedily communicated to another house, a building used as a boarding house, and to a large barn in the rear, both of which fell a prey to the devouring element. Had the engine continued to play upon the fire no doubt it would have been confined to the building in which it originated. The firemen and citizens did all in their power to get goods removed, and too much praise cannot be awarded to Mr. R. B. Bennett, who acted as fireman to the engine.

The buildings destroyed consisted of two large frame dwellings occupied by four fifteen to twenty families. These buildings had long rows of sheds attached to and from these the flames communicated to a large barn to the north, in which a considerable quantity of grain and hay was stored. The property belonged to the Hon. Billa Flint, and was uninsured. Mr. Elliott, the occupier of the tenement in which the fire broke out, lost a considerable portion of his furniture. The other occupants also suffered a loss of their goods. The value of the property destroyed is variously estimated at from $4,000 to $6,000.

The "Liberal" Convention.

In accordance with previous notice, the "Liberal" delegates chosen at the Belleville, Sidney and Tyendinaga meetings, met at Coleman's Hall, Belleville, on Saturday last, at 3 p.m. to select candidates for the West Riding of the County of Hastings.

Nominations of Dr. Hope, Col. Elijah Ketchum was called upon to preside. Mr. A. Diamond was chosen Secretary.

On motion, Messrs. Jas. S ss, A. Diamond and Dr. Hope were appointed Committee on Credentials.

The delegates were then called, and answered to their names, as follows:

BELLEVILLE.—Dr. Hope, G. R. Henderson, J. P. McDonald, Jas. Meagher, M. Sawyer, H. Yeomans, Jas. Ross, Dr. Holden, W. W. Dean.

SIDNEY.—Dr. Bolyea, P. P. Lynch, S. Smith, J. R. Mason, Jno. Wilson, Dr. Nichol, Dr. Coleman, C. I. Gould and E. Wesley.

SIDNEY.—Messrs. John Rowe, A. Pinkle, K. Graham, E. Ketcheson, G. Lawrence, B. S. Gilbert, A. C. Crozier, W. Dafoe, R. Mallory, R. Grass, R. Rose, P. Turley, J. A. Chisholm, M. R. Bolkin, D. Vandewaters, H. Fenn, A. Vandewater, J. S. Huffman, A. Barrager, J. Bird, C. Armstrong, T.D. Farley and S. White.

TYENDINAGA.—Messrs. G. H. Gordon, Dr. Day, J. Dunch and J. Marsh.

Dr. Hope explained that in accordance with motion at Belleville meeting, the committee had struck off the vacancies in the Belleville delegation, which accounted for some names not appearing.

Mr. Rowe said the same provision had been made in Sidney, and as there were two vacancies, he proposed they should be supplied.

Mr. Jas. Rose moved that a committee consisting of Messrs. Rowe, Roblin, Farley, Turney and Barrager, be appointed to fill the vacancies.

Mr. B. Gilbert said the Convention had been called together to select their own delegates and appoint their own committees.

Mr. Rose asked if some Sidney man would not move the motion.

Mr. Gilbert said the Sidney men were content with leaving that to their own business.

After some further discussion the Sidney delegation retired, and having made their arrangements, reported the places of Messrs. R. Bird and J. Harry had been filled by Messrs Henry Vandervaters and Jos. C. Foster.

It was moved and seconded by Mr. G. E. Henderson, That the proceedings of this meeting, so far as nomination of candidates and appointment of committees, be private—Carried.

It was moved that nominations for the House of Commons should first take place—

The following gentlemen were then nominated for that position.

Dr. Holden, nominated by M. B Roblin. Seconded by Dr. Hope.

Jas Brown, nominated by P. Turley, seconded by R. Graham.

Dr. Holden suggested by Mr. Diamond, that as some gentlemen might be nominated for the purpose of speaking, that the candidates should declare their intention of retiring before an informal ballot was taken.

Mr. Dean said such a course would be unfair to deal with this Convention. If any person nominated has made up his mind not to run, he should declare himself.

Dr. Hope fully concurred with Mr. Dean. He did not believe in having persons nominated merely for the purpose of gratifying their vanity. He protested against such a course. It would be placing candidates who had consented to run, and who had made great sacrifices, in a false position. He assured the Convention that with great difficulty that they had obtained the consent of parties to become candidates, and it was unfair to the nominees others simply for the purpose of nominating.

Mr. Diamond did not exactly understand Dr. Hope's remarks about having had a difficulty to get men to stand. He did not know of any person who had made such great sacrifices. He supposed this Convention was met for the purpose of nominating candidates, and that is the way he understood the following resolution was adopted:

Moved by Mr. Diamond, seconded by Dr. Day, That the ballots be taken in the usual way. The lowest candidate on the list after the first ballot be taken off, and the name dropped, and so on successively until a decisive ballot be taken between two candidates, the successful of whom shall then stand a fair fight between those therefore dropped, and that no candidates shall be withdrawn before the majority of the whole votes of the Convention.

Nominations were continued for the House of Commons as follows:—

W. W. Dean, nominated by Dr. Hope, seconded by C. I. Gould.

Dr. Hope, nominated by Elijah Wookey seconded by Dr. Nichol.

A. Diamond, nominated by J. R. Mason, seconded by W. W. Dean.

G. E. Henderson, nominated by John P. McDonald, seconded by P. P. Lynch.

B. S. Gilbert, nominated by P. Turley, seconded by Vandewaters.

Jas. Rose, nominated by Dr.Relyea, seconded by Dr. Day.

Mr. Gilbert said he was afraid there would none be left for the Local Legislature, as the Sidney men would move, That the Convention do now proceed with nominations for the Ontario Legislature. Mr. Lynch seconded the motion, which was carried.

The following nominations for the Local Legislature then took place:—

K. Graham, nominated by P. Turley, seconded by D. Armstrong.

T. D. Farley, nominated by P. P. Lynch, seconded by Dr. Relyea.

R. Bird, nominated by D. Vandewaters, seconded by P. Turley.

Jos. C. Foster, nominated by Dr. Day, seconded by J. P. Macdonald.

G. E. Henderson, nominated by Dr. Nichol, seconded by Jas. Wilson.

M. R. Roblin, nominated by S. S. Gilbert, seconded by W. W. Dean.

R. S. Gilbert, nominated by A. Diamond, seconded by R. Rose.

Jas. Meagher, nominated by W. W. Dean, seconded by G. E Henderson.

Mr. Dean suggested, in order to expedite business that the rest of the delegates be nominated.

Dr. Day, nominated by M. B. Roblin, seconded by Dr. Nichol.

Some discussion took place about the time which should be allotted to candidates, when it was decided that each candidate should have ten minutes to speak.

Mr. Diamond asked if there was to be any resolution binding the members to the action of the Convention, or were they all loose fish?

No action was taken.

Dr. Holden, being the first candidate named was called upon to speak. He said he did not intend to trespass upon their time. He was taken by surprise, and really did not know how he could say any thing known to most of them that he had never been an active politician, but it was also known that he had been a straightforward politician, and always on one side. The present was an important crisis in the history of the country, and it was in the highest degree important that good and honest men should be sent to the Legislature. He was pleased most of the gentlemen present, and if he was so happy as to receive a nomination he could only say he would do his utmost to perform his duty and be worthy of their confidence. If they decided upon another course, he could only say whoever it was should receive his hearty support. The only question of importance before the country at the present was one of Local, and of the country would necessarily be much interfered with by the Local Parliament instead of three for this County; there would be three Governors instead of one, and the expenses of the Governments would be much heavier than under the old system. Still, he believed that there would be a benefit to a being to the country, and he was proud that the name of the new Dominion was Canada.

Dr. Holden then explained briefly what his views were with respect to Coalition.

Dr. Holden said there were times when he thought that coalitions under ordinary circumstances they were not an advantage to a country. As a rule Coalitions were bad.

Mr. Meagher—What is your views respecting the present Coalition? Do you think Howland and McDougall have acted properly?

Dr. Holden—I am hardly prepared to give this question proper consideration. My opinion is that Coalition has had its day. The object of the Coalition between the Sides been obtained, there is no use for the Coalition.

A Delegate.—Would you support the present Coalition?

Dr. Holden would make no promise. If he was honored with a nomination he should feel bound to consult with his friends. He could not say how he would act at present, when parties were in such a chaotic state.

Mr. E. Wesley said the Coalition had been a curse to the country; and that such men as Howland and McDougall deserved to be driven from the party. He could not see why Dr. Holden could not answer the question whether he would support them or not.

Mr. Jas. Brown was next called upon, but that gentleman not being present, Mr. Diamond said it was known to most of those present that Mr. Brown was indisposed and unable to be out.

Mr. Dean next took the stand, and first told the audience that he would not be a candidate, and would not answer any questions much regret. Dr. Holden had not given decided answer to the questions, but then they were just entering upon a new and chaotic state of existence, and if our representatives were not able to make up their minds to answer, well and good. If strict party government was to be carried out, he submitted that they must support a Coalition. Dr. Holden had wisely refused to make any promises, but if he was returned to the Assembly, he felt that Dr. Hope should have been returned to the country; but he declines, and therefore he really only had to choose between the House of Commons, and those are Dr. Hope and himself. Dr. Holden's claims had always been found true to his party, and was a fair and respect fitted for the position. As for Mr. Brown, he was a very clever gentleman, but he wanted to know what claims Mr. Brown had who had made such great sacrifices. He was not nominated by this convention he was not chosen by a Convention of a very different, complexion from this. Mr. Brown had been defeating ourselves and lowering ourselves to the very dust if we elect him. You remember the famous Green Card when Brown and Read were running against each other Where was Brown on the day of election? Why those who have fought the battle of the party, and who are only entitled to our confidence.

Mr. Turly—Do you know that Mr. Brown would be the nominee of some other party, or was he not absolutely made as a party man?

Mr. Dean did not know what Mr. Turly might be speaking as a lawyer, but he might safely say that Mr. Brown was no such respectable as that of a distiller.

Dr. Hope thanked the delegates for the nomination. He was not aware that he had been fully concurred with Mr. Dean respecting the Coalition. He was not that way, when he heard of the steps being taken to bring about the late Coalition, he was perfectly astounded. He had been connected with political conventions for over thirty years, and he must confess that this Convention was unparalleled. When he looked around him, he found the class of persons who were here, he stood perfectly astounded, and he said to himself, this Convention would have been attended by their political opponents. The resolution published in the papers, that the Convention should have debarred them coming here. He would not have attended upon conservative terms, and the reason why the meeting was used was for the purpose of not giving a chance to those who had formerly been with us. These Liberal Conservatives not only supported Hon. J. Wallbridge, but voted for himself, and that was the best evidence they intended to continue to support the party. Yet these men come here, and dare to get up a man who has acted against us for the last twenty years, who has been a curse to our party: if they accept him they will simply run into minor contempt. These Liberal Conservatives will not split up their ranks for Mr. Brown, are our hereditary opponents. He had nothing

American Despatches.

FROM MEXICO—MAXIMILIAN SHOT.

NEW YORK, July 1.—The Tribune's Washington says:—The following despatch was received by the Austrian Minister on Monday evening:

"Southwest Pass, La., via New Orleans.

"To Count Trauttenbrug:

"I come from Vera Cruz to telegraph to you of the death of Maximilian on the 16th inst. Juarez wishes to deliver up the body.

(Signed) Genlar Thiel,

Captain Austrian Bloop.

The Emperor of Austria and the Emperor Napoleon have been informed by telegraph of Maximilian's execution. The event has produced great excitement here among the foreign ministers.

The following has been received to-day:—

"U. S. steamer Tacony, Vera Cruz, June 20th, via New Orleans, 30th, to Hon. Gideon Welles, Secretary of the Navy:—Maximilian was shot on the 19th instant. Began to fire on his corpse for the Austrian Captain, and was interrupted. The city of Mexico capitulated on the 20th. Vera Cruz holds out on account of the fever. Upon. Diaz orders no acceptance of surrender.

(Signed), F. A. ROE,

"Commander."

It is believed that Juarez reluctantly consented to the execution of Maximilian. When the messenger bearing despatches from the United States Government relative to sparing the life of Maximilian, delivered his package to Juarez, the latter said he was disposed to spare Maximilian's life, but the pressure from the Mexican leaders and people for the execution was so great it would be almost impossible to resist it.

—One hundred tons of iron ore, the first through freight on the Marmora Railway, was received at Cobourg on the 1st July.

—A locomotive on the Northern Railway exploded on the 1st inst., seriously injuring the engineer, fireman and brakesman.

STR. ROCHESTER.—The Str. Rochester leaves Flint's wharf to-morrow afternoon, at 2 o'clock for Cowagh, touching at Mill Point and Picton.

Small-town Boy Saga

Bowell's Inelastic Personality Led to His Downfall as PM

By HARRY MULHALL
STAFF REPORTER

Human personality in history is the characteristic of contrast.

If they have done it well history remembers them. If they have managed to make all three proportionately where needed, history sanitizes them as its triumphant whim.

Mackenzie Bowell neither gleamed, nor glowered nor grovelled. In a way, he may have done all three, but none of them did he do well, or sympathetically. In fact, his failure to bend and blend characterized his one big failing: an inelastic personality.

That is the kindest thing, apparently, that history says of him as Canada's fifth Prime Minister.

The unkindest cut is to charge him with being the most inept.

Certainly, the most truthful is to reclaim his dusty personage from the national archives as the one Canadian leader most easily dismissed.

Mackenzie Bowell is the Canadian history forgot.

He was the only Prime Minister, Belleville, in its long, loyalist history, ever produced. He was allegedly one of the worst Prime Minister who ever held office within such a period of time. But then, Mackenzie Bowell was Prime Minister less than 18 months.

Yet, if his ministry was vetoed by fatal indecision, his destruction was proclaimed by clear-cut political decisiveness, still a singular quality in most public leaders in Canada.

The son of a carpenter who rose briefly to become his nation's caretaker, his career cried out for embracement as the epitome of small-town boy make-good legend.

Instead, it was fatally compromised into history's neutral zone.

For years he was lionized as a political leader within the bounds of his own society.

But, when he proved his local qualities by aspiring to Canada's stewardship this is how one contemporary historian elected to see his realization:

"Then followed days of weak and incompetent administration by a Cabinet presided over by a man whose sudden, unlooked-for elevation had visibly turned his head; a ministry without unity or cohesion of any kind, a prey to internal dissensions until they became a spectacle to the world, to angels and to men."

It sounds testamount to a curse, but time has softened that fusillade.

Time also has softened the memory of Bowell, shuffling him to a shadowy, peripheral place in Canadian history.

grave, despite its marble marble shadowy that few Belleville home — unmarked by any civic-proud plaque. Neither, of many chosen his grave, despite its marble marker, in Belleville cemetery.

Yet, far better than a half-century Bowell was a governing personality in the Quinte community.

Born in Suffolk, England, Bowell came to Canada at the age of nine years and was hired out as a printer's devil with the Belleville Intelligencer, then owned by George Benjamin, a leading citizen of the still-fledgling Quinte United Empire Loyalist settlements.

By 18, he had saved enough to go to school in Sidney, where his diligence saw him granted a teacher's certificate in less than a year.

Hired as a junior teacher, he nonetheless left it back to the first commercial connection — The Intelligencer — as a foreman at $10 a month.

Just six months later Benjamin offered him a partnership.

In 1847, the upcoming community businessman married a local girl, Harriet Louise Moore, and she bore him nine children, four of whom he outlived.

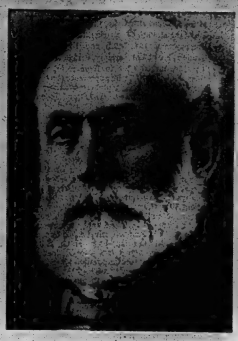
His personal life in the small, burgeoning community was exemplary. Even at his death, the Grit Daily Ontario, noted in his obituary: "The ex-premier was the man against whom a whisper of wrong — doing or corruption had never been uttered, one who was friends among all creeds, classes and parties, because of his honesty of purpose and reliability."

With domestictry prospering, he branched out — buying The Intelligencer, to become publisher of the paper he had apprenticed with only 15 years after he landed in Canada as an immigrant.

Such drive in budding communities finds a natural channel to public affairs. Bowell was no different.

One of his proudest local achievements was the founding of a rifle company of militia in Belleville. In an era when pecuniary was a solidly, integrated unit of local society, this was no mean public achievement.

And Bowell was a dedicated militiaman.



During the American Civil War — when the might of Northern Armies ominously loomed as a threat to the crown - owned Canada's-Bowell served on the borders.

When the first Fenian raid sputtered over the Canadian border he was standing to at Prescott.

But the association that precipitated his political rise — and fateful appointment with posterity — came on the bloodless threshold of his teens.

At the age of 19 he was inducted into the Orange Order. Such was his diligence that he rose readily, in 1892 he was Grand Master of Ontario East; by 1870 he was anointed as Grand Master for all British America.

Meantime, he had first toed political waters. In 1865, George Benjamin retired as legislative member for the Belleville area and nominated Bowell.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell

Aid to Catholic institutions was an issue and Bowell — ironically aiding with Benjamin's expound of Catholic rights in the national good — lost out.

It was a hint of what was to come on a greater, more devastating scale. But mean time, there was success to be gained, through failure.

It presented itself in 1867. Confederation was a reality and Bowell sought the membership for the federal riding of Hastings North.

He won, and went to Ottawa — a dedicated Tory in Macdonald's first triumphant Conservative government.

But it was in adversity he drew admiration.

Tossed out on the scourings of the great Pacific Scandal, the Conservatives were thrown into opposition.

While many backbenchers may have glowered, Bowell shone.

In Opposition he became a relentless voice, proving himself best as a critic.

In Opposition he also first drew major rancide by demanding the expulsion of Louis Riel from the House.

In 1870 with the triumphant reassertion of Macdonald on the national scene, it was Bowell surprise that Bowell should be called into cabinet.

He became minister of customs, charged with enforcing the tariffs protecting new-growing Canadian industries.

And the post was no menial sinecure.

In fact, since income tax was an innovation of war-time stresses in 1917, customs and excise duties were the federal government's biggest source of finance. Hence, Bowell in his time held a portfolio equivalent to today's national revenue.

And there was another, more significant reason for his elevation. Confederation was a shaky proposition, still a pup, still resting on the staves of regional prejudice by representation.

As a leading Orangeman, Bowell was needed by the Chief to balance his national cabinet representation — one that included such anti-Orangeist-Catholic figures as Hector Langevin, Quebec's nationalist, Catholic spokesman.

So, during the golden years of Macdonald's ministry, Bowell wound his way through the nation's political potteries.

He was a strict disciplinarian of the national accounts — at least if one extant anecdote is true.

Even in those days of easy political virtue — at least earlier than now — it skimmishes Bowell's fiscal inflexibility.

The story is told of a great Montreal merchant, discovered beating customs dues, being hailed before Bowell and threatened with arrest within two hours.

The man, a big Conservative contributor hightailed it to Macdonald's office, and demanded redress.

"I'll have to attend to him." Macdonald is supposed to have assured. "But tell me who it is. I can handle them all but one. Which one was it?"

"That fellow Bowell," replied the Montrealer.

"Ah," mused Sir John sadly. "The very man I cannot. I can't do anything with him. Take my advice and settle up at once."

Then, time ran out — and the halcyon days of Conservative expansive bumbled in overthrow, though it was not properly realized at first.

What served in undercurrents the end was Bowell.

Used his successor, Sir John J. Abbott, Bowell became minister of militia. The following year the Conservative succession fell to Sir John Thompson and Bowell was appointed the country's first minister of trade and commerce.

He launched his new portfolio with enthusiasm, organizing a mission to Australia, a trade conference — which he headed — in Ottawa, plugging for a cable link with Australia.

In the midst of his exertions he was appointed to the Senate, to reluctantly become his party's leader in the Upper House.

Undoubtedly, it was a big influence when Thompson died suddenly on a trip to Windsor Castle, and the Conservatives — and Canada — were left leaderless.

The shabby climax to Bowell's public career was set.

At his death, Belleviliaus [illegible] represented as saving their fellow - citizen as the Grand Old Man of Canadian politics.

But neither contemporary nor historic comment has been so kind to the man.

A Montreal newspaper of his day designated him as an insensible old gentleman who, despite long political experience, works himself into a white heat on very slight provocation."

There is a more pertinent commentary on what happened next on the national scene after Thompson's death.

The obvious man for the leadership was Sir Charles Tupper, then serving as High Commissioner in London.

Tupper says one authority, should immediately have been summoned to Ottawa: ". . . but for some inexplicable reason was passed over by (Governor-General) Lord Aberdeen in favor of Mackenzie Bowell, a worthy, loyal man, but one as little qualified to be Prime Minister as Lord Aberdeen was to be governor general."

Whatever the [illegible] of the political in-groups, Bowell took office December 21, 1892, and the ultimate blooming of a hometown son was halted — at least in Belleville.

But back in Ottawa, according to the historian, followed the days of political realism ". . . of a weak and incompetent administration . . . a ministry without union or cohesion of any kind . . ."

Here, apparently the 91-year-old hometown politician apparently demonstrated what is held for the ward heeler is foolishness in a national perspective. The inflexible character, as necessary to keep local political organizers in heel, failed because it could not delegate the ordinary business of government.

What was conscience on the local level was merely suspicion on the grander plateau of national politics.

The stubbornness, inspired opposition within the cabinet.

Yet Bowell was not to blame for all his troubles.

The shadow of John A hung over the country in more ways than one.

There was, for instance the Manitoba school question.

Protestants of the Western . . province had resented the separate school system for Catholics and abolished it — along with French as an official language — in 1890.

They installed a single, non-denominational system, arousing the Catholics not only in Manitoba but — naturally — in Quebec.

It had been the last big controversy ever to beset Sir John A. in the tiring years of his long ministry. Rising to the occasion he had managed to postpone a showdown — a deal it seconvers that served him the title of Old Tomorrow even in his own day.

More than three years after his death it had come to a head. It did — and erupted in Bowell's dour complexion.

FIRST IN RADIO

FIRST IN TELEVISION

The Booth family has been involved in the development of radio since its infancy and Howard Booth has been a licenced "ham" operator since 1936. With this experience and knowledge they designed and built the first police radio system in Canada in the 1930's. This transmitter-receiver system operated on 1690 kilocycles with the call letters CJR and was a "first" for Belleville as well as Canada!

Being technically minded and with their background of radio knowledge, it was natural for the Booth's to help pioneer the development of television in this area. In fact, it was Howard Booth who built the first television receiver in the Belleville area when Buffao and Syracuse were the only two stations which could be received.

Convinced of the future in the field of radio, Booth Radio and Television Limited came into being in 1945 and was located on the Market Square. Since that time they have moved to 121 Front Street and then to the present location at 168 - 170 - 172 Front Street where they specialise in radio, stereo and televjsion. They also have a temporary showroom across the street at 191 Front Street.

Since the beginning of our business it has been our firm belief that every customer deserves the best service that we can possibly give. The steady expansion of our business is ample proof that the public appreciates our concern with their complete satisfaction after purchase and it is our intention to continue this policy.

Rural Environment of Bay of Quinte District Has Preserved Many 100 Year Old Cemeteries

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Cemeteries dating back well over 100 years are quite common throughout the rural areas of the Bay of Quinte district, but in the larger urban centres traces of many of the early burial grounds have all but disappeared.

At least this is the case in Belleville where even the exact location of some of the old burial grounds have been forgotten with cemeteries moved to make way for construction or to free land for other use.

One exception in Belleville is the Anglican burial grounds immediately to the north of St. Thomas' Church on Church Street.

Here there have been no burials since the present Belleville Cemetery on Trent Road was opened in 1874, but the old graves, and many of the grave-markers remain — the occasional target of vandalism.

But it is a different story at St. Michael's Church where following the establishment of the parish back in 1839 burials were made in the church grounds.

The first pastor of the parish, Father Michael Brennan, was buried there, the actual location of the grave being under one corner of the present church.

When a new St. Michael's Church was built in 1888, most of the graves were moved to the "new" St. Michael's Cemetery on what is now Stanley Street near the CN north station.

But even this cemetery has been abandoned for more than 60 years with all but a few of the graves moved to St. James Cemetery when it was opened west of the city in 1904.

The old cemetery on Stanley Street is still church owned, but only about five of the graves still remain on the site, used mainly as a shortcut by residents of the area.

A little more than a century ago municipal leaders began looking around for another site. In 1869 authorities were given the city to purchase land for a new cemetery. Then, in 1872, the Belleville Cemetery Company was formed and the present cemetery was opened in 1874.

The graves in the Dundas Street burial grounds were moved to the new cemetery. The Dundas Street grounds eventually became a park and at one time, long before auto trailers became known, as mobile homes, was used as a trailer park.

The two cemeteries on Highway 2 west of the city — Belleville Cemetery and St. James' Cemetery — are the last resting place of some of the early Quinte district pioneers.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Canadian Prime Minister in 1894, and former Belleville newspaper owner, is buried there.

The cemetery is also the last resting place of Senator Henry Corby, one of the prime movers in the establishment of Corby's Distillery at Corbyville and mayor of Belleville in 1867.

Also buried in Belleville Cemetery are J. W. Dunbar Moodie, first sheriff of Hastings county, and his wife, Susanna Strickland Moodie, who won fame as a writer.

Francis McAnnany, who had the distinction of being mayor of Belleville for more years than any other man — 10 times from 1842 to 1861 — is buried there, as is Rt. Hon. Sir Gilbert Parker, writer and statesman, and Hon. Billa Flint, first president of the police village of Belleville, 1836, warden of the county of Hastings in 1873 and later a member of the Canadian Senate.

The last resting place of Rt. Hon. Sir Gilbert Parker is a private vault, the first, and, until quite recently, the only such vault in the cemetery.

Many of the Roman Catholic priests who over the years have been in charge of St. Michael's parish here, are buried at St. James' Cemetery in a special clergy plot. Among the graves is that of the late Msgr. J. F. Nicholson.

Belleville Cemetery caretaker Thomas Purdy estimates there have been about 30,000 burials in the cemetery, the 50 acre extent of which is now close to half filled. The number of burials at the cemetery has remained fairly constant in recent years averaging between 230 and 245 annually.

In adjacent St. James Cemetery, there are about 3,000 graves with about 30 burials per year being recorded.

Perpetual care has been offered for many years with the sale of each cemetery plot at Belleville Cemetery but this was not always the case.

In the early years of the cemetery there was no such care and at present there is a "care" charge of $3 entered each year. In many instances, however, this is but a "token" charge as no family members remain to pay the bill.

As has been the case with the cost of living, the cost of dying has risen over the years.

Funeral costs have skyrocketed, so has the cost of opening a grave and purchasing a grave marker.

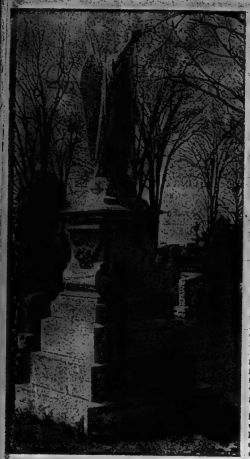
Minutes of a Belleville Cemetery Board meeting in 1910, show the cost of opening a grave was $2 in summer and $4 in winter. Today the cost still varies, but not according to the season.

Now the bill for opening a grave is $40 — if a concrete burial vault is used. If burial is to be with a wooden box, the cost jumps to $55.

The reason for this is that with concrete underground vaults there is no settling and cemetery maintenance costs are greatly reduced.

The style and size of tombstones — as well as the costs — have also changed over the years.

Today few of the former elaborate columns of polished granite are erected. Instead, the trend is toward a smaller and more uniform style stone.



One of the reasons for this, of course, is the high cost of the elaborate grave markers. Today the cost of even a comparatively moderate stone can run well into the hundreds of dollars.

Although completely separate in operation, caretaking at the Belleville Cemetery and at St. James' Cemetery is to some extent a co-operative effort.

During the winter months when regular caretaking duties are at a minimum, Clifford Champagne, caretaker at St. James' for the past 40 years, works at Belleville Cemetery.

Then in return, Belleville Cemetery equipment is used to dig the graves at St. James.

"It all works out very well," says Mr. Purdy.

First Sheriff's Grave

J. W. Dunbar Moodie, first sheriff of Hastings county in 1840, and his wife Susanna Moodie, well known in Canadian literature, are buried beneath this stone in Belleville Cemetery.

FOUNDER of Corby's Distillery and one time mayor of Belleville, Senator Henry Corby's grave is marked by this elaborate monument.

LAST resting place of Sir Mackenzie Bowell in Belleville Cemetery is marked by this towering column of granite.

Workmen Found Church Much Too Dry

During the building of the first St. Thomas Church in 1818 the rector was made a prisoner in his own sanctuary. Workmen in those days were accustomed to a liberal ration of alcohol, not forthcoming on this job.

An early historian records: "Mr. Campbell one day entered the church, when seeing its completion and walked up a ladder and entered the pulpit. Immediately one of the workmen and Smith removed the ladder, leaving the Rev. Gentleman a prisoner, nor would they release him until he had sent a messenger to his house for a certain beverage."

On receipt of several bottles of communion wine the workers released the rector and returned to the job.

Meyers Was First Mason

The Order of Free Masons came with Captain John Walden Meyers and other settlers who had been made Masons before and during the 1812-14 war. Moira Lodge, AF and AM No. 11 was founded in 1801 and is one of the oldest lodges in Canada.

On March 10, 1801, Masons from the Belleville area walked to Kingston to see Capt. J. Walden Meyers installed as the first Worshipful Master. The meetings locally were held at the Simpson Tavern.

Great things have happened in Canada in the past hundred years. From the days of the sailing ships to the present space age, this nation has prospered mightily.

TRUDEAU MOTORS LIMITED 1926-1967

The firm of Trudeau Motors Limited had its beginning in the year 1926 at Tweed, Ontario. Mr. J. J. Trudeau, the President of the present Company, started the Trudeau organization. In August of that year Mr. J. J. Trudeau opened a business in Tweed and operated a Ford Dealership.

In 1933 Trudeau was appointed Ford Dealer for Belleville and area as well as Tweed. The business in Belleville was operated as a private company under the registered name of Trudeau Motor Sales in the old Fire Hall building. After operating in Belleville for two years Trudeau expanded to Picton where a Branch Dealership was operated. The Company continued to operate these locations selling Ford Products until 1940. In that year Trudeau Motor Sales decided to change their franchise to a Chrysler Corporation Dealership.

To sell Chrysler and Plymouth cars and Fargo trucks while associated with Chrysler Corporation, Trudeau transferred their dealerships and opened a new branch at Napanee, Ontario. All of these locations were operated by Trudeau until 1952 when Trudeau Motors changed to General Motors Products with the Chevrolet - Oldsmobile - Cadillac franchise which it continues to operate to this date.

This period of time actually counts to forty-one years selling automobiles and trucks to the people in this area. The Trudeau organization located in Belleville in what was then known as the Front Street Fire Hall. This building was inadequate and in a short time the Company moved to the Imperial Oil property on the opposite side of Front Street. The business was carried on in that location until 1950 at which time it moved its complete operations to the new building erected at 31-45 Station Street, where it continues to operate. Several private properties were purchased in close proximity of the main garage to permit expansion of facilities to serve their expanding business.

It now operates from the Main Showroom, Offices, and Garage facility on Station Street. An additional building located on the East side of Dufferin Street serves as a Used Car Conditioning Plant where body and collision work, painting, upholstering and used car conditioning work is carried on.

Later it was found necessary to increase the Used Car Display area and property was purchased bordering on Station Street known as the Cain property and a Used Car Yard then owned by B. Wheeler. All of this area was converted into a Used Car Display area where modern Used Car Sales Office is located.

During the past two years, two more properties were added to the South of the Main garage have been purchased. The buildings were dismantled and this area provided Customers' Parking Lot as well as a Heavy Truck Display Lot. The Trudeau Company also operates its B.P. Service Station property on Station Street.

In addition to the Station Street location, the Company owns and operates a Used Car Lot on North Front Street where it erected a Modern Used Car Office and Used Car Clean-Up and Servicing Garage. This property extends to the rear and connects to Bell Boulevard where the Company operates a Showroom, Offices, Parts Department, and Repair Shop. From this location it carries on a Case Equipment Dealership.

The Company handles Case Construction Equipment which includes Graviers and Wheel-Type Loaders, Dozers, Backhoe Loaders, Farm Equipment, and other miscellaneous lines of equipment. It also operates a Parts and Service Department in this connection.

In the year 1961, the Company was appointed Case Construction Dealer for all of Eastern Ontario and Northern Quebec. In order to serve this area the Company was obliged to provide adequate premises. This necessitated purchasing property and erecting a new modern building suitable for this type of operation. This is now located in Ottawa on St. Laurent Blvd., just South of the Queensway. From this location the Company sells and services equipment from Napanee on the South to Mattawa on the North and Brockville to Eastern Ontario and Northern Quebec. The area west of Napanee to Cobourg is covered by our Belleville Dealership.

Each of our Construction Dealerships is equipped with the newest modern equipment designed and recommended by the manufacturer. Our staff is specially trained in Department Heads have received special training at the Manufacturers' Home Office.

Trudeau Motors staff, throughout their complete organization, are well qualified, having had special training plus long experience. Mr. J. Trudeau, Sr., has been in the Trucking and Servicing business for a long period as mentioned earlier. He feels very fortunate to have two sons who are now associated with him in the business. They are John B. Trudeau who serves as a General Management way but more especially as General Manager of the General Motors Dealership in Belleville. He is particularly well equipped with this type of line of Automobile and Truck Business. He received special training for two years at the General Motors Institute at Flint Michigan, U.S.A.

Also associated with John Jr. is his brother, James (Jamie) J. Trudeau, Jamie, as he is familiarly known is in the Business Management Department and is Treasurer of the Company. He too is well fitted for his position having graduated from Ryerson Institute of Technology after specializing in Business Administration. Mrs. Bunton (Doris) has been associated in our firm for a number of years and is Secretary of Trudeau Motors Limited. Martin Trudeau, Mr. J. J. Trudeau's brother has been associated with the business from its inception. Another employee with over 30 years service with the Trudeau organization is J. J. Lee. Mr. Lee has been associated with all departments and for the last number of years has been General Manager of the General Motors operation. The Trudeau organization employs over one hundred employees. Many of whom have been in the organization for a period of twenty-five years or more including Milton Burtt, Alf Lavergne and Sam Wright.

Mr. Trudeau, Sr., has devoted his entire time to the furtherance of his automobile business and the directing of his newest venture the Construction Equipment Business. He has always believed in operating his business based on a set of principles which include new and improvement by new ideas and methods his organization and by travelling considerably and visiting Automobile Dealers in the U.S.A. and Canada and has attended many Seminars in connection with the Automobile Business.

During the time he has been engaged in the Automobile business he has given readily of his time in Trade Association work and has given favourable service to organizations. To mention a few, he was President of the Garage Operators' Association of the Quinte area and also was made Director of the Garage Operators' Association for a period of two years. Locally he was member of the city council, President of the United Appeal, Chairman of the Bay of Quinte District High School Board and active in other civic organizations.

He also served on the Board of the Federation of Automobile Dealers' Association as a Director for Canada.

Trudeau Motors policy is and always has been to render the best possible service at the most reasonable price to the purchasers of their equipment as well as to all of the motoring public who come to them for service.

Ice Jam in the Moira River, 1936

Railway Centre Since 1851

Belleville became a railway centre in 1851 when Grand Trunk Railway engineers, plotting the route of the new railway from Montreal to Toronto, made the town their headquarters.

Grading contractors were based here and local suppliers provided timber for bridges and ties. In 1855, Belleville was made a Grand Trunk division point. The first passenger train arrived from Montreal 7:30 a.m. October 27, 1856.

Floods! And City Shivers

Five times in its 151-year history, Belleville became a miniature Venice on the Moira. Downtown streets were transformed into canals and fishermen's punts were the only mode of transportation, in 60 to 75 acres of land between the east and west hills.

The year of its founding, 1816, saw the first officially recorded flood in Belleville. Surveyor Samuel Wilmott wrote in his diary on March 26: "This day the whole Flat was over flown with water and was obliged to work upon the high ground."

The last flood occurred in 1936. The Moira's waters broke over the sleeping city at 1:30 a.m., March 12. Reported The Intelligencer:

"At Camilton . . . the ice broke away and in a roaring torrent unleashed its fury on the city. The area of lower Front Street from the four corners to the Bay of Quinte is impassable for pedestrians, while the area from Coleman Street to the foot of Murney's Hill, from the Bay of Quinte to West Moira Street is under water from 3 to 7 feet and still rising.

"Residents used boats exclusively in Murney Ward and in some places it was possible to row a boat right through the door of the house. Children who had to come across the river to go to the collegiate had to be rowed from the foot of Murney Hill to the Lower Bridge.

"For hours during the early morning dogs howled in dismal protest of their fate, adding to the general confusion of strident voices, fire engine sirens, motor car horns and the swish of cars."

Eight days later, railroad and city engineers blasted a channel from the open harbor to the river mouth and the 1936 flood swept into history. Losses were estimated at $250,000 and about 200 people were left homeless.

Major floods occurred in 1904, 1925, 1936, 1918 and 1936. More severe was that of 1890, when the first ice jam formed near the harbor on January 10 and the city

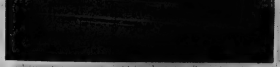
WE CAN REMEMBER WHEN . . . .

Fifty odd years ago, Mr. Arthur A. Sills, a furniture finisher in Toronto, looked into the future and found it good. He returned to his birthplace, Belleville, and started a floor laying and finishing business, operating from his home on the Trent Road. As business prospered, he moved into the premises then known as Pringle Lumber Mill at 285 Coleman Street.

As the years went by, in order to accommodate the increasing business and to stock greater quantities of lumber, cement and gypsum products, a second yard was opened at 63½ Front Street South. The company, now known as Arthur A. Sills and Son Limited, has since grown to be Bellville's largest and most complete building supply house and home improvement centre.

In 1959 the business was consolidated in one place and the President, Mr. Jack H. Sills, son of the founder of the Company, opened the most modern warehouse, showroom and lumber yard in the area at 405 Dundas Street East.



Our modern showroom is a proud landmark to us, fully modern in every way. We have kept up with the changing years but one thing has not changed. From the first customer of the founder of the company and every customer since, customer satisfaction has been and will always be our deepest concern.

Militia Models On Way

TORONTO (CP)—A childhood love of lead soldiers, developed into an adult's hobby of making models of militia soldiers in dress uniform, has evolved into a centennial project at the request of the Royal Canadian Military Institute.

Don Mellnish, a Toronto printing company executive, has for years been producing minutely-detailed military figures with a standard plastic modelling kit.

Col. William Heard of Toronto, former commanding officer of the Irish Regiment, saw three of the 10-inch figures in military dress, and showed them to the institute board. Mr. Mellnish was invited to produce figures representing 23 regiments in full dress for exhibit in the institute library.

After finishing the project some time this year, Mr. Mellnish plans to produce 2½-inch models representing each of Canada's 122 service units.

Lumber Mill First Industry

Captain J. Walden Meyers began the first industry in Belleville in 1790 when he built a dam and a lumber mill where Ashley Street would eventually intersect Station Street. It was at this time that the settlement became known as Meyers Creek.

The lumber industry made Belleville a prosperous city. The settlers needed lumber, and as the industry developed, it brought more loggers and businessmen to the bustling community.

was under water until March 8th.

"On the rampage, the despotic Moira asserts its supremacy," announced The Intelligencer. The present Holland Plumbing building on Pinnacle Street was taken over to lodge the homeless and council placed $300 in the hands of the Women's Christian Association for relief work.

The flood had entertainment, as well as news, value in 1936. The day after the waters receded W. C. Mikel, later a prominent city lawyer, took the stage of the Opera House to give "his original speech explaining the many causes of the flood."

Today engineers give frazil ice — crystals which form in very cold turbulent water — as the cause of the Moira's floods. Following a winter of steady low temperatures and a quick spring thaw, the crystals from a spongy mass of ice which is carried downstream under the sheet ice covering the river mouth. The resulting curtain dam under the surface ice causes the river to spill over its banks.

Eight minor floods occurred in 1864, 1865, 1870, 1884, 1891, 1918 and 1922. City engineers narrowly averted another in 1963 by blasting a channel for frazil ice in the river mouth.

Will Belleville be inundated again? Engineers believe it will, given a winter of high river water levels, steady sub-zero temperatures and sudden thaw. Under those conditions, the despotic Moira still reigns supreme.

"Junction" Was Built To Haul Logs

Belleville's own railway, the Grand Junction, was constructed in 1872 from Belleville waterfront to Peterborough. Local financiers built it to haul logs from the north to Rathbun's mill on Victoria Park and Flint and Holton's mill on the west side of the harbor.

Completed in 1879, the Grand Junction had 90 miles of track and eight small woodburning engines.

It operated just one year before being sold to the Grand Trunk. The track served as a connecting link between the CP and CN yard until 1964 when the track was dismantled as a nuisance to Pinnacle str. traffic.

20 YEARS plus a little....

We say "plus a little" because Ronald Keel came to Belleville in 1933. At that time he was employed with Angus McFee Jewellers at 216 Front Street (now Reitman's). Mr. Keel was with this well known store until 1947 when he opened his first store at 6 Victoria Avenue in Belleville. That was 20 years ago. Ronald Keel, a Watchmaker by trade, employed another skilled craftsman, Mr. Al Reid, to help him with his ever increasing volume of business. Mr. Reid is still a greatly valued employee today, also a director of the company.

In 1952 the Ronald Keel Jewellery business moved to a better location at 296 Front Street. Business, stock and staff have increased greatly in the last 20 years. For instance, Ronald Keel has increased his original stock of $3,000, in 1947 to what is now one of the most comprehensive selections of watches, diamond rings, silverware, costume jewellery, clocks and fine gold jewellery in the Quinte area!

As we Bellevillians, along with the rest of Canada, celebrate our Centennial, may we at Ronald Keel Jewellers extend our best wishes to everyone for another century of growth and prosperity.

Here at Rollins Lumber we feel we have many things to celebrate during Canada's Centennial year, for example: did you know that our company was the pioneer in this area for the component manufacturing of homes. To be specific, this means that we were first to offer the buying public the advantages of such products as truss roofs. Truss roofs is the latest advancement in building technology that affords an extremely strong roof, eliminating bearing walls and allowing complete freedom for multiple floor plans. Another facet of this building concept is factory built wall sections which are stronger than ordinary type walls. It's innovations like these that eliminate waste materials, provide considerably better quality and cost control, saves much time, and in the end, results in substantial savings to the consumer — you!

Really, the value of this type of construction is indicated by the tremendous interest and employment of our techniques by Britain and other European countries, who have requested us to instruct them in these methods.

THE NAME ROLLINS... SYNONYMOUS WITH QUALITY

The maintenance of a constant effort to provide only the finest products available has always been a prerequisite at Rollins Lumber Ltd. Our philosophy is that quality products are the best investment in the long run.

PROMPT SERVICE... A ROLLINS MUST

Because Rollins Lumber maintains a huge stock-on-hand and also because of the advanced techniques we employ outlined above, you can always be assured of immediate service from estimate to finished job!

QUALIFIED PERSONNEL... READY TO ASSIST YOU

At Rollins, you deal with people who are thoroughly familiar with the trade. Every job we do receives our personal interest in accordance to your wishes.

LOWEST POSSIBLE PRICES... ANOTHER MUST

And it is a must! All our efforts to employ the very best up-to-the-minute technology would be for naught if we weren't able to provide prices more attractive than our competitors.

Unusual Seating Plan In P. E. I. Legislature

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP)—It is tradition in the British parliamentary system for government members in the legislatures to sit on the right—or the side of honor—of the Speaker.

In Prince Edward Island's legislature the seating plan is reversed. Time seems to have obscured the reason for the switch but oldsters and students of government have offered interesting stories in explanation.

A. E. Arsenault, a former premier of this island province and a retired justice of the Supreme Court of Prince Edward Island, recalls attending sessions of the legislature when government members sat on the right of the speaker. That was in the 1930s when he was a student of St. Dunstan's College here.

In his memoirs, Mr. Arsenault recalls that under the Liberal administration of Premier Frederick Peters in the late 1800s there was a particularly eloquent opposition member named Cyrus Shaw.

"His voice, harsh, loud and strident, irritated Peters greatly and Shaw was addicted to sarcasm especially when he was directing his remarks to the premier."

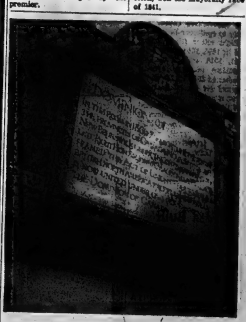
Mr. Arsenault says it soon became the custom of the premier, when Shaw rose to speak, to leave his seat and take refuge in the room used by the clerk of the House. To get to the room, located on the opposite side and at the back of the legislature, the premier had to cross the floor in front of the Speaker. In doing this he had to bow before the Speaker.

To avoid this formality and to gain quicker access to the little room, Mr. Arsenault says, the seating arrangement of the House was changed by the premier.

Others have suggested different reasons.

One author has suggested that government members were seated to the left of the Speaker so that they could more easily gain access to the clerk's office and the old legislative library which were placed on the left side. These rooms ostensibly provided facilities for smoking and chatting.

Another suggests that early governments found it more convenient to sit on the left because it was the warm, sunny side of the building.



Yet another more colorful suggestion has it that liquor may have been kept in a cabinet in the room to the left of the Speaker.

Early Editor Escaped Hanging

Belleville's first newspaperman and 1841 mayor was once sentenced to be hanged for armed robbery.

In 1837, while Alexander Oliphant Petrie was running a ferry from Belleville to Rossmore on government contract, a rival set a ferry in competition. Petrie met the rival on the lower bridge, drew a pistol and demanded the money his rival had made from the illegal operation. The rival retired with Petrie to a nearby tavern to discuss the issue. The outcome: Petrie was arrested, tried and sentenced to be hanged for armed robbery.

The Kingston Gazette, which had employed Petrie about 1809 as its Belleville correspondent, remarked that the sentence "seemed severe." The sentence was never carried out and Petrie, the convicted felon, won the mayoralty race of 1841.

Bowell's Inelastic

Bowell took office his government issued a remedial order against the Manitoba move. The provinces refused to recognize it. Its government called an election which saw only five candidates supporting the separate schools' issue returned.

There is much political subtlety to this controversy which has no place here.

In essence, however, what it evoked was stark realism for Bowell. As a great Orangeman, he had supported Confederation in a bid for partisan recognition.

Morality, he was right. Politically, the results of the Manitoba election trapped him. So spurred, he watched his supporters melt away one by one as he signalled his obstinacy to proceed with the remedial Manitoba legislation in the Commons.

Then, plucking further at his national gown of leadership, the results of his various indecisions gathered about like a band of beggarly thieves.

Suddenly seven members of his cabinet resigned and support of the revolution, says one newspaper report, reached such extremities, that members were meeting each other on the train platform in Ottawa attempting to decide who should declare themselves for the aging statesman.

Not enough did, for he resigned and on May 3, 1896, Tupper was sworn in as his successor.

It was somewhere at this juncture of self-invoked betrayal that Bowell delivered himself of the now historic statement of his office.

It was a single phrase — the denunciation of the Cabinet colleagues as "A nest of traitors."

It is his only quote bequeathed to popular record.

Tupper's leadership lasted little more than two months.

On July 11 of that year a new man was sworn in as Canada's first administrator.

Viewed from that point Bowell's premiership was part of a five-year void which the Conservative's found impossible to fill after Sir John A's death.

The destiny of the nation had passed to other hands, shadowy hands waiting in the wings to grasp at the strands of social ambition. They belonged to Wilfrid Laurier.

He grasped them in time, and a combative part of the national legend came to belong to him.

Bowell died Dec. 10, 1917, at the height of a national election and having outlived all his political contemporaries. He was buried in Belleville cemetery, with what pageantry a nation at war and political campaigning could spare.

There was one sad footnote more than 30 years later.

In 1948 the Canadian government decided to honor him with a ceremonial unveiling of a monument on the lawn of the Belleville armoury—the headquarters of a militia movement he so proudly behonored a part of his adopted community.

That day it rained, recalled reporters covering the event and the ceremonials were held inside the armoury, at a mockup of the monument.

Contemporary comment had been unkind to Bowell; contemporary colleagues had confounded him; history had forgotten and denied him.

On that day, ironically, it seemed even at that distance in history, not even the weather could accord him a pittance of warmth denied him by human posterity.

Slogans on Sidewalks Led Way to Theatre

VICTORIA (CP)—Two young ladies spend a goodly part of a hot-as-eight chalking sidewalk slogans from Victoria's dockland to a city theatre.

This year, 1967, and many other battlers for women's suffrage are remembered as British Columbia celebrates 50 years of women's voting rights.

The vote was officially extended to B.C. women in 1917, following a 30-year organized struggle and a favorable plebiscite in 191.

In the van of the often bitter campaign was Mrs. Gordon Grant, ably assisted by Mrs. Cecelia Spofford. Both were active in the Women's Christian Temperance Union and the local Council of Women and they believed women must have the vote before they could obtain the social legislation in which they so fervently believed.

For many years, the only support the suffrage movement got was from the WCTU. Then, in 1910, the Political Equality League was formed.

The league soon channelled the belter-skelter activities of suffrage advocates into cogniscive action. One of its first undertakings was to bring England's staunch suffragette, Emmaline Pankhurst, to Victoria for a rally.

Publicity was difficult to obtain, so two youthful suffragettes set out one night chalking slogans on the sidewalks from the docks, where Mrs. Pankhurst was to arrive, to the auditorium, where she was to speak.

The league set up its own newspaper, The Champion. Duties of league members included bringing to each meeting at least one anti-suffrage person or a "wobbler"—someone lukewarm to the suffrage movement.

Government hostility, public indifference, internal quarrels and press criticism did not daunt the league. It gathered momentum until by the time the franchise was extended, it had members and chapters in virtually every major B.C. centre.

Singleton First Resident

Captain George Singleton, who was a United Empire Loyalist, was the first resident in the area and settled here in 1784 with his brother-in-law, Lieut. Isaac Ferguson. They did not however live to see a settlement grow.

In 1789 John Taylor settled on Lot No. 3 in the first concession of Thurlow township and sold half of his lot shortly afterwards to Captain John Walden Meyers whose lumber mill eventually brought Belleville to be a settlement.

Highgrading Employees Defied Mine Owner

VICTORIA (CP) — Today's mining prospectors are a bunch of "cream puffs," says 80-year-old Gordon Murray, who retired last year after 60 years in the business.

"They have helicopters, station wagons and the very best of food.

"We had scorbutly (salt pork), hamock, beans and our legs."

Mr. Murray retired in 1965 as president of Mount Washington Copper Co., near Courtenay on Vancouver Island. He claims to have been the original discoverer of the Thompson, Man., nickel claims where International Nickel Co. invested $18M-000,000 in what now is one of the world's largest nickel mines.

But it's another Manitoba mining venture that will rate a lot of ink in a book he hopes to write. He says he discovered gold "lying all over the ground" in chunks as large as bricks at Kilsey Lake, Man.

"It was so rich," Mr. Murray says, "that prostitutes in Flin Flon would accept small chunks of it as payment from the men

But Kilsey Lake was a venture that failed. Mr. Murray says his employees began highgrading, or stealing, the ore they mined. He couldn't fire the offenders or call in police because "you can't just fire men in that country, hundreds of miles from nowhere."

"Besides, most of those men would just as soon shoot you as look at you."

Can you guess what year Wray's furnished this room?

GOOD DECORATING'S CHIEF INGREDIENT IS TIMELESSNESS – LIKE THOSE TREES OUTSIDE, IT'S STABLE AND ENDURING, BASED ON FURNITURE THAT'S LUXURIOUS WITHOUT PRETENCE – FLAVORED WITH MEANINGFUL DETAILING, SUCH AS THE EARLY AMERICAN MOTIFS ON THE MASSIVE ACCOMPANYING CHAIR ABOVE. THAT'S WHAT FINE DECORATORS SAY!

You may question our role as a one-word definer of such a difficult concept, but we think we're well qualified — we've been following this precept for exactly 50 years, and judging by the company we've attracted, we think successfully. Consider these facts:

All Wray's furniture is either made in Canada or very specially selected from the finest foreign makers.

As you probably know, Canadian craftsmen are among the finest furniture makers in the world!

Wray's proven reputation of half a century of furnishing professionally and proficiently many of our area's finest homes, apartments, clubs, hotels and offices, during which time we've become one of Eastern Ontario's most distinguished stores for furniture and interior design. We just won't let you make a mistake. We want you to like your home just as much 20 years from now!

Wray's delivery and after delivery service facilities are second to none. Our 'conscientious' drivers are concerned with only one thing - your furniture - and how satisfied you'll be with it. Although we appreciate compliments, we don't expect to hear from you about the room we just furnished for a long time!

Wray's scope and selection is vast, three huge floors of beautiful furniture of inspired, dramatic designs - significant, important designs created for continuity, not monotony.

At Wray's you can decorate to these high standards at many different price levels — we'll be happy to work within your budget requirements. Because Wray's buyers are so extremely selective in the furniture they buy, you can be assured that you'll not only furnish wisely, but that you'll receive superb value for your money.

That's why we're so confident of our role as proponents of good decorating. And, as to the year in which we furnished the room in the photograph above, well, it could have been 30 years ago, or possibly next week, only we and the owners know for sure — and we're not telling!

As Canada is celebrating its 100 years of confederation, we are celebrating our 50 years in business in Belleville. May we take advantage of this occasion to wish one and all "Happy Centennial Year and Every Year".

Sister of Mohawk Leader

Molly Brant Shadowy Figure in History

Molly Brant isn't the first woman to be eclipsed in history by a man.

But then, Canadian history is so sparsely populated with heroines it can scarcely afford to lose sight of her.

For posterity her greatest misfortune hinges on the fact she was the sister of Joseph Brant, leader of the Mohawks at the time of their historic decision to stay British after the American Revolution.

Brant himself was a remarkable man, whose character, framed in the times, makes him a potent figure of historical lore.

She was born in 1736, Joseph in 1742.

Before the American Revolution the Mohawks lived along the Mohawk River in New York State. British superintendent of Indian Affairs was Sir William Johnson, who married Molly after his wife died. Devotion to his new domestic arrangements brought the British aristocrat that much closer to Brant himself.

He sent Brant to a Connecticut school for education, then died in 1774 — just as the revolution was fermenting.

With the death of her husband and protector, Molly becomes a shadowy figure in history.

It is believed she fled to Niagara in either 1777 or 1779, that she died in Kingston between 1796 and 1805.

Her brother's Indian name was Thayendanegea — perpetuated forever by the Brant-Haldimand Mohawk reserve.

There is no such memorial to Molly — wherever she may be.

OLD MARKET MOVES

The 800-year-old Les Halles downtown food market of Paris is making its first move, to the less-crowded suburbs.

The Mohawk Indians of Tyendinaga Reserve were among the early arrivals in the Quinte district of British subjects remaining loyal to King George after American Revolution. They landed near what is now Deseronto, an event faithfully observed (above) each year by descendants.

Mohawks Cherish Gift From Grateful Queen

In 1771 there arrived in the American colonies a gift from a Senior European whose identity was inscribed thereon as:

"... Queen Anne, by the Grace of God, of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, of her Plantations in North America, Queen of her Indian Chappel of the Mohawk."

More than 250 years later, that inscription may readily explain why the Union Jack still floats high and wide over the annual landing-service of the Mohawks of Tyendinaga.

That service commemorates their deliverance from the ravages of the American Revolution.

The Mohawks of Tyendinaga were among the first United Empire Loyalists.

They are among the few who can prove their claim as such — if they bothered. They don't.

Besides, they are proud of their own heritage, without having to bother to set their British heritage aside, against that of their fellow refugees from the Revolution.

Today, their life on the Tyendinaga reserve is still to some extent linked to that gesture by a far-away, long-dead British Queen.

Still it is a connection that means demonstratively much — and they still produce the communion plate for an annual service marking their final settlement.

The service, despatched so long ago, is recognition of something localized with his their character — loyalty.

They were the smallest of the Six Nations of the Iroquois Confederacy.

Revolutionary war descended and the Mohawks — converted long ago to Christianity and living peacably — stayed in the fight with their British neighbors.

After the Americans had proved their point, the Mohawks suddenly found themselves the centre of reprisals. Their lands were ravaged, homes ransacked, families separated.

Nesting close to what is now Lachine, they cleared land and settled down for six years.

It was, apparently, a miserable time. Finally, the imperial government — this time in the figure of George III — made a grant of 90,000 acres in Tyendinaga township.

May 22, 1784, the Mohawks made their landing on the shores of the Bay of Quinte. They were under the leadership of chiefs Aaron and Isaac Hill and John Deserontyon.

Their first act, after beaching the canoes, was to have a service. Without a clergyman, they overturned the canoes and, one of them, placed a white cloth.

Then they set out Queen Anne's gift — and held a service of thanksgiving.

All But Forgotten Doctor Laid in State at Death

In common with most of his people's history, the story of Dr. Oronhyatekha is unknown to white brethern.

Yet, when he died, he laid in state and the great of the country rode came to pay him tribute.

He is now buried, forgotten, in Christ Church graveyard in Tyendinaga Reserve.

He won an political election — and legend has it John A. Macdonald offered him a cabinet post.

Legend also has it he turned it down. And so, unrelieved by the highlights of public appearance his image now is slipping away into oblivion.

Someday it may be revived to become only a legend.

First a look at his background:

Born at Six Nations Reserve, Brantford, in 1841, he attended a Wesleyan school in faraway Massachusetts.

Deciding his ambitions should be aimed to medicine, he returned to Canada and spent a year at the university of Toronto.

The Prince of Wales was visiting Canada in 1860 and the Brantford chiefs chose Oronhyatekha to speak on their behalf at a reception.

He did better. The young Indian caught the attention of the imperial heir and shortly Oronhyatekha was facing the future Edward VII.

Upshot of the interview was that the 19-year-old Indian went to England and fulfilled his life's ambitions of studying medicine.

On his return he first practised in Brantford. In 1866 he moved to Nepanee but local literature of his times hints his patients lacked confidence because of his Indian blood.

Then he moved to London, Ont., — and success.

In Western Ontario he quickly gained a reputation as a physician.

But he was forever in the forefront of public affairs.

For instance:

He fought so strongly for civil liberties, and those of his own people, in 1874 he was elected president of the Grand Council of Chiefs.

He helped organize the Hastings County Medical Association and was its first secretary.

Practising in Stratford, he entered politics for the Tories and won Wallace Township. Thus began a friendship with John A. which probably strengthens the story of his offer of a Cabinet seat.

Then, still a young doctor, Oronhyatekha married a native of the Tyendinaga reserve and moved back to Deseronto.

He was the first Indian to join the Independent Order of Foresters — after a court action to shatter the lodge's clause restricting membership to males, white and 21.

Then for 26 years he became the supreme chief ranger of the IOOF.

He made his home on Foresters' Island, off Deseronto, then bustling with activity.

Here he set up an IOOF orphanage, or grandiose design, linked to the mainland by steam yachts.

But there was also tragedy: His wife, died in 1901, stilling the death of a son 20 years earlier.

In 1907 the great Indian doctor himself finally bowed out. Suddenly he suffered a heart seizure.

There's Gold in "Them Thar Hills" And the Madoc Gold Boom Was On

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Gold fever!

No other disease inflames the blood of men to the same heights of recklessness and folly. It drove Columbus across an ocean and countless treasure-hunters into the interior of the continents he discovered.

In 1867 it almost drove news of Confederation off the pages of Belleville papers. There was gold in the hills around Madoc, Belleville was the golden gateway to Eldorado and all eyes were turned toward north Hastings.

As eyewitness to the gold rush was the late Judge E. B. Fralick, of Belleville, then a young man of 25. In 1922 he published his recollections the only first-hand account of the excitement.

According to Judge Fralick, Ontario's first gold rush started Aug. 15, 1866, when the two Powell brothers and a German Nicholas Schneider were prospecting for copper on the farm of John Richardson, lot 18, fifth concession of Madoc township. A large pocket of "black sand" turned out to be amazingly rich in gold. No one believed the prospectors. That gold should exist in Hastings County was preposterous.

Two men from Boston, Carr and Johnson, were the first to realize the possibilities. They were boring for oil on lot 30, 4th concession of Sidney, the Vanderwater farm adjoining Chatterton on the Belleville to Stirling Road.

"The whole thing was a fake," recounted Judge Fralick. "Crude petroleum was imported and scattered over pools of water lying in the adjoining swamp. Stock in the prospect was offered for sale, but the people were too wary to bite.

"Carr and Johnson quietly repaired to Madoc, inspected the gold find and discovered that the substance contained in a large pocket of dolomite rock was amazingly rich. They opened negotiations with old John Richardson and abandoned their fake oil proposition, to the great disgust and inconvenience of the Sidney farmers, who were left with oil leases on their farms and a cloud upon their titles."

Carr and Johnson optioned the Richardson mine for one month at $30,000. They filled pork barrels with the ore, later estimated by Capt. G. D. Rowe, a Madoc jeweller, as worth $5 per wineglass full. Miners later calculated that Carr and Johnson shipped out $100,000 worth of gold in their barrels.

"With the barrels disappeared Carr and Johnson, no doubt with the intention never to return," continued Judge Fralick. "It appears their only object in optioning the mine was to get away with the rich contents of the pocket without paying a cent."

The 30-day option elapsed and no money was paid. The field was now wide open for a pair of Chicago financiers, Lombard and Harding, who purchased the Richardson property for $30,000.

"The country was flooded with gold seekers," Judge Fralick went on. "Belleville was the golden gate and had its hotels crowded with strangers. Travelling needs were supplied by several lines of four-horse coaches which went out every morning and afternoon loaded inside and out with eager fortune hunters.

Building lots along the Hastings Road sold like hot cakes. Restaurants, boarding houses, hotels, went up like magic and by the end of 1867 the place had been named Eldorado and had the appearance of a respectable village. A small crushing mill was erected.

Belleville people began to wake up at last to the realization there was gold in Madoc. George L. Dickson, a lawyer, and other Belleville people conceived the idea of throwing a monkey wrench into Lombard and Harding's prospect. Dickson discovered an omission in the original Carr and Johnson option and took the case to court.

"They thought," said Judge Fralick "by tying the property up indefinitely by injunction and other legal proceedings, these Yankees could be bluffed into a settlement and thus they (the Belleville group) would secure a share in the Richardson mine millions.

Carr and Johnson were brought back from Boston and made the lions of the town. Writs in Chancery were issued, injunctions obtained, the mine was locked up and they commenced the legal dance down the middle and up the middle for several months.

Joe, Elvins and another were placed in charge of the locked mine with strict orders to allow no one to enter. In the meantime, scores of miners and others visited the mine. Joe, for a consideration, always had just a little of the stuff left as a sample for the visitors to take away with them.

"In the early spring, when the roads were breaking up, Caribou Cameron, a Highlander from the west coast mining fields, arrived on the scene with a party of mining friends. Early next morning Cameron and his party went up to the mine and with a liberal show of revolvers, gained entrance western style and satisfied themselves the gold was there.

"In the meantime, an Englishman came riding down into the village of Madoc, his horse foaming and himself covered with mud, scattering the news that a mob was breaking into the mine to rob it.

Then the devil was to pay. Capt. Fox quickly mustered his squad of mounted police, 50 in number, and everyone in Madoc who could get hold of a horse and saddle or a vehicle streamed out on the way to Eldorado. When the cavalcade arrived at the village they found everything quiet at the mine and Caribou Cameron sitting in his hotel smoking a cigar.

"Yes, he said to Capt. Fox, "I did enter the mines merely to satisfy myself that the gold was there. So many of these things are fakes, you know, but what are you going to do about it?"

"Of course Capt. Fox could do nothing and the multitude straggled back to Madoc, finding the mud apparently three times deeper than when they came out."

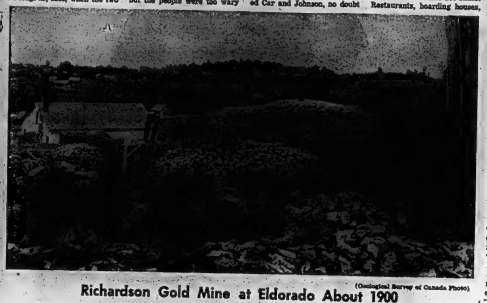
Late in the summer of 1867 the Chicago and Belleville groups settled their differences in court, a company was formed and stock in Richardson mine was placed on the market at $1 a share. A reduction mill was built on the property and a building was put up adjoining the shafthouse to store the ore mined while the mill was being built.

"About 600 tons of ore was mined, and a good deal of it was amazingly rich in gold according to a government geologist," Judge Fralick reported.

"Lombard proposed shipping the ore in barrels to New York to have the gold extracted. But the Belleville directors said, 'No, the Yankees would steal more than half.'

"Along in the latter part of the fall, two Englishmen, Scott and Taylor, blew in from somewhere, rented the crushing mill and advertised for custom work. It occurred to the Belleville people that it would be a good plan to have these people crush their ore. Scott and Taylor were given the job and knowing they had greenhorns to deal with, laid out to trim them. Following a waster of work, they had the mill foreman tell the directors that the ore went only $4 to the ton. Along with his information it was discovered that Scott and Taylor had disappeared."

Lombard arrived in Belleville, decided the two Englishmen had decamped with most of the gold and insisted that ore mined in the future be sent to New York for treatment. The Belleville directors continued to object. The following week Lombard's stock was placed on the Toronto and Montreal markets at 25 cents a share and the death knell had sounded for Richardson mine.



"Belleville people, bound to beat the Yankees, not only ruined the prospects of the country, but a number of themselves along with it," commented Judge Fralick.

The story of Richardson mine was repeated throughout Madoc and Marmora townships in the feverish two years between 1866 and 1868. Farms sold for fantastic prices, rich strikes turned out to be low-grade ore, swindlers abounded. Farmers dug holes on their property, "salted" them with a bit of ore from another site and called in the prospectors. Probably more money was sunk into the ground of the country north of Belleville than was ever taken out in gold.

Late in 1868 the golden gates to Eldorado thudded shut and the treasure of the Hastings hills was left to the Sunday afternoon enjoyment of 20th century rockhounds.

IS PLEASED TO CELEBRATE

CANADA'S CENTENNIAL YEAR

As Belleville's Oldest MEN'S WEAR STORE

Meagher's started in this field back in 1869. In 1916 Charles and George Meagher opened their new modern store in Belleville and since that time we have come through the good times as well as the depressed periods.

Over the past fifty years we have had the pleasure of serving four generations in a family. This has only been accomplished by service and quality and by the wonderful people who have come back time after time for our service and merchandise.

— IN 1967 —

Our New Men's Wear Store Is One of the Most Modern In Eastern Ontario . . .

In celebration of our fifty years of business in Belleville, and as a Centennial effort, we moved into our new, modern store pictured here on February 1st, 1967. This step was taken with confidence in the advancement of Belleville with our country in the future years.

Mr. John Bean, who is better known as the Warren K. Cook specialist, has been in this business for the past thirty-five years and has been with us for the past two years.

Quality, style and service is our motto and we hope that we may have the pleasure of serving you in the future.

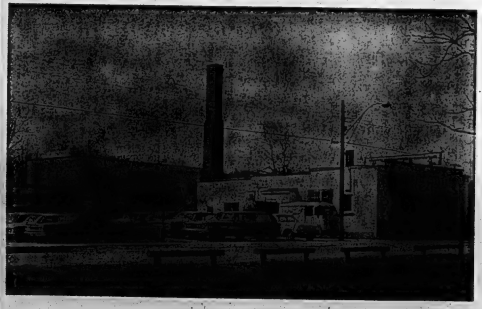
Question:

WHAT MAKES A NATION GREAT?

Answer:

PEOPLE!

As simple as that. Great countries begin with great people; people with vision, courage and the will to work. That's how Canada achieved nationhood. Each hardworking segment recognizing the others' contribution. As a result, everyone gained pride of achievement and material and spiritual well-being.



Now we come to a second century of opportunity and the horizons were never brighter, not only in terms of continued social, cultural and scientific achievements, but in the continuing quest for world-wide peace and happiness.

We hope to play our part in these noble aims as we have tried to do for the past 28 years

This dairy has been a continuing service to this area for over 40 years.

Canada's Last Bid for America's Cup by Quinte Yachtsmen

By GEO. H. CARVER
Sports Editor

"Gretel", Australia's 1962 America's Cup challenger left to the United States abroad an ocean liner.

In 1931, "Atalanta", Canada's last bid for the famous silver was towed through the Erie Canal by mules en route to New York.

"Gretel" had aluminum masts, mahogany, Canadian cedar and glued laminations. She was crewed by expert "down under" yachtsmen.

"Atalanta's" timbers were hewn from North Hastings bush, floated down the rapids of the Moira river to Belleville.

Her captain Alexander Cuthbert and crew of four were untried fresh water sailors; rank amateurs from the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club.

The 78-foot gaff-rigged Canadian sloop was still on the stocks here when Captain Cuthbert issued the challenge to the New York Yacht Club in May, 1931.

The challenge was accepted for a series of three races to be held off New York in September of the same year.

But lack of funds delayed the completion of the Canadian sloop. There was no time for her to take the St. Lawrence and ocean route to New York.

Captain Cuthbert took her the "short way" and entered the Erie Canal at Oswego where her spars were unwhere her spars were unballast of iron ore.

Her beam, 19 foot, six, was 18 inches wider than the canal. The crew shifted her ballast to one side to "heel" the boat enough to enable her to navigate the narrow locks.

Mules towed her through. At Albany she was put on an even keel and her masts restepped. She reached New York Harbor on October 30.

There was not enough time or money to finish the "Atalanta". She sailed in her "rough" hull. Her sails could not be recut nor spars improved for America's Cup.

"Atalanta" was built on a total outlay of $2,100. Had another $10,000 been spent on her she might have won the America's Cup.

Her amateur crew was augmented by saltwater men at New York. But they were out-classed from the start by the American defender "Mischief", a 90-sloop built of iron, polished smooth with blackened and equipped with lead ballast.

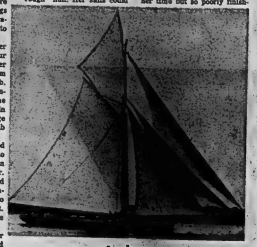
She was of good design for her time but so poorly furnished, crudely rigged and badly handled she did not have a chance against the "Mischief".

Gusting squalls greeted the boats in the first race, held on November 9th. "Atalanta" staggered under the windy assault. Forty-minutes were lost in reefing and by frequent luffs Cuthbert brought his boat home 26 minutes behind "Mischief".

In the second race it was different. "Atalanta" rounded the first mark a half-minute behind "Mischief" despite the fact she lost her spinnaker boom a half-hour earlier.

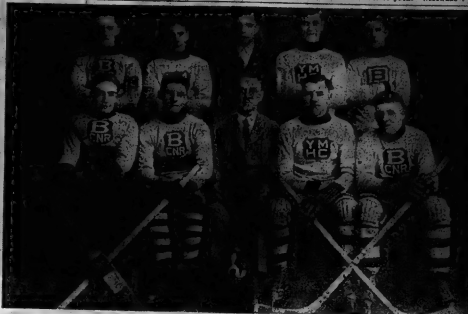
The boat back was in gale-like winds. Topsails came down and mainsails reefed. Unfortunately Cuthbert mistook the position of one of the course buoys, and Canada's second attempt to win the American Cup was lost.

The first occurred in 1876 when the Toronto sloop "Countess of Dufferin" of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club was defeated.



"Atalanta" went on to win the International Fisher Cup Trophy symbolic of the North American fresh water championship from a field of 13 boats. The trophy remained in Belleville until 1962 when the Rochester yacht "Onward" won it in the Bay of Quinte.

Captain Cuthbert, the skipper of the "Atalanta", was one of the best boat-builders of this part of Ontario at the time.



He not only constructed the "Atlanta" but built the Toronto challenger "The Countess of Dufferin". He sailed as a member of her crew in her attempt to wrest the America's Cup from the Americans.

He also built the "Nora" for the late John Bell which later took the Fisher Cup from "Atalanta", only to lose it back to her again.

He constructed the "Katie Gray", a second class yacht and the "Kathleen", the "Hohantha" and the "Bonaparte". He also built the third class yacht "Widewake".

THE "NEW LOOK" AT Artistic

OUR STAFF:

Throughout the years, the Artistic has been fortunate to have wonderful employees, all of whom are qualified to meet the needs of the customer. We would be remiss not to mention three staff members who are no longer with us. Their devotion and sincere efforts in assisting the present owner during the early years of business were much appreciated: Mrs. F. Shorey, Mrs. M. Campbell, Mrs. A. Haslip — to you our sincere thanks.

"54 Years of Sales Experience"

MRS. AGNES GRANGE: Employed with the Artistic for the past 15 years, Mrs. Grange is our head saleswoman and is well known throughout the Quinte area. She is in charge of all departments in the store excluding Wedding Gowns and Foundations.

MRS. RUBY MORTON: Employed with the Artistic for 3½ years. Mrs. Morton joined our staff shortly after leaving International Knitwear. She does double-duty by managing the office and working on the sales floor. She has many close friends and is most popular with our many customers. She has resided in Belleville for 10 years.

MRS. ULA WILKINSON: Employed with the Artistic for the past year. Mrs. Wilkinson joined our staff after Eaton's Department Store ceased operations. She was employed in the Ladies Wear Dept. for 15 years . . . and is well known throughout the Quinte area. She is our Wedding Party Counsellor.

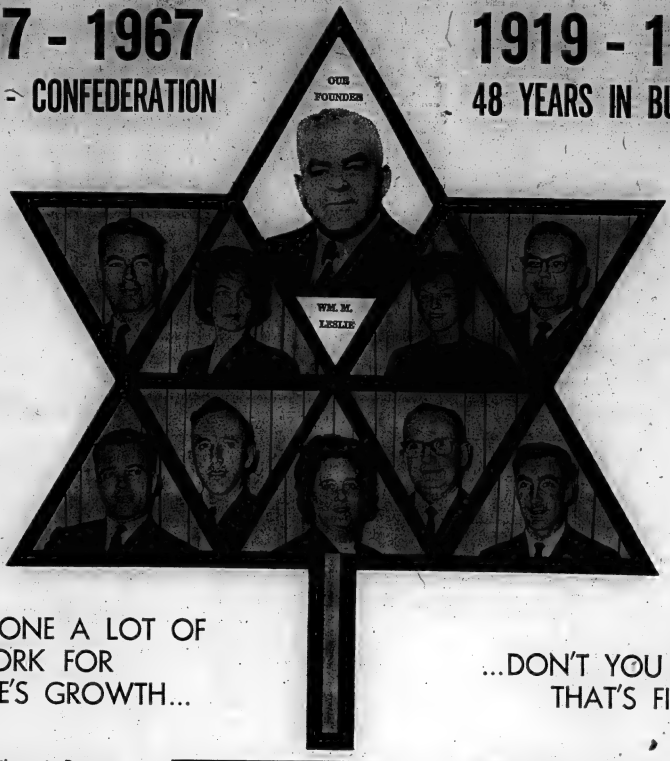
MRS. ROSE WILLIAMS: Employed with Artistic for the past year. Previously employed with Eaton's for 8 years in the notions and 4 years in ladies wear and also has had a total of 22 years in women's retail sales at two of our competitors' stores. She is a qualified corsetierre and is in charge of our Foundation Department. She is a most welcome addition to our staff.

OUR ALTERATION DEPARTMENT: Mrs. Bush and Mrs. Di Cesare. Artistic has always featured a complete alteration staff. Quick and efficient service is the most important aspect of this department.

MR. STANLEY L. ALBERT
MANAGER AND BUYER

Mr. Albert was born and educated in Belleville, and completed his formal education in Retail Merchandising at Ryerson Institute of Technology. Among his varied interests and activities in the community are: The Junior Chamber of Commerce, charter member, past vice president (2 years). The Belleville Industrial Commission, 2 years on the General Board of Directors; the past president of the Belleville Ladies' Wear Association; the past treasurer and vice president of the Downtown Businessmen's Association and is currently president of the D.B.M.A. He is married to the former Maxine Rose and they have 3 children.

42 Years of Tradition



"Artistic for Value" — nearly ½ a century old — growing with the community and expanding to meet its needs. Established in 1925 by S. Springer, Artistic initiated a policy of quality merchandise at prices the Quinte area's population could afford. This tradition was continued under the original owner's brother-in-law, the late J. Abramsky. J. Abramsky bought the store in 1934 in partnership with the late B. Springer. In 1939 the original building was torn down and the store was modernized. J. Abramsky operated the store until his sudden death in 1956. In 1956, the present owner Stanley L. Albert and his brother Norman Albert purchased the store until his owner's widow, Mrs. J. Abramsky. The store was operated on a partnership basis until 1967 when Stanley Albert became the sole owner. In 1967 the store underwent major renovations and has received compliments of its many customers and friends. The "new look" of the Artistic makes it not only one of the most modern in the Quinte area, but in Eastern Ontario. The tradition established in 1925 is still maintained by the present management. Artistic is also known by the company it keeps . . . company in the form of famous brand names: Foolure, Nu-Mode, Fantel, Leo-Daniel, Leberg, Spi-Bor, Sterling Originals, Sea Queen, just to mention a few of the very reliable firms that Artistic trades with. For stylings that are seen in the fashion centres of Canada first and then in Belleville, credit must be given to Stanley Albert, for he travels some 7000 miles a year to Toronto and Montreal to ensure the Quinte area of up to the minute stylings! The Artistic location has been a ladies' wear store for over 50 years (the Kroch Bros. operated a store previous to 1925) and is considered a landmark for ladies apparel. Artistic is proud to be part of Canada's Centennial Celebrations and Belleville's 135th Birthday.

BELLEVILLE'S LEADING FAMILY SHOE STORE"

CANADA - CONFEDERATION

1919 - 1967
48 YEARS IN BUSINESS

WE'VE DONE A LOT OF FOOTWORK FOR BELLEVILLE'S GROWTH...

...DON'T YOU THINK THAT'S FITTING?

Belleville Continues to Progress

In June 1919, the late William Malcolm Leslie, who had been a salesman in and later manager of Vermilyea Shoe Store, bought out John McKeown. Mr. McKeown had been a shoemaker and merchant for many years at 255 Front Street — the same location as the present Leslie's Shoe Store Limited.

From 1919 when Mr. Leslie started on little capital but a lot of public goodwill until 1952 when he passed away, Leslie's Shoe Store grew to become one of the finest family shoe stores located anywhere.

Mr. Leslie's philosophy of success was very simple — give the customers personalized service, sell only quality footwear which will insure customer satisfaction, continually learn new ways of improving the fit of better grade shoes, and lastly but of most importance, employ conscientious shoe fitters who like the business and are willing and able to give his customers this high standard of fit and satisfaction.

Leslie's Continue to Grow, Too!

Mr. Leslie's two sons, Donald and Bryson' who "grew up" in the shoes business, carry on the family store endeavoring to continue the operation in the image of their father.

Leslie's Shoe Store Limited has continued . . . and is continuing . . . to grow to the point where it is possibly the largest family shoe store between Toronto and Montreal.

Most of the success of today's Leslie's is the competent staff which it employs. The full time staff is seen above and it is supplemented on weekends and busy periods by four well trained part time shoe fitters.

Yes, Leslie's are proud of the small part they play in making Belleville's shopping area one of the finest in any city near its size.

The management and staff of Leslie's Shoe Store wish to thank their large "family" of loyal customers and wish every one Very Best Wishes for the future of Belleville and our country.

LESLIE'S SHOE STORE LIMITED

255 FRONT STREET — "FINE SHOES – LUGGAGE" — BELLEVILLE

HISTORY OF THE LESLIE FAMILY BUSINESS

THIS IS THE ORIGINAL STORE FRONT.

On March 16, 1946, Donald and Bryson Leslie, in co-operation with their staff, published one complete section of fourteen pages in the Ontario Intelligencer as a tribute to their father and founder William Malcolm Leslie, on the occasion of his fiftieth anniversary in the Shoe Business. This was accompanied by the presentation of a gold shoe with a diamond chip on a watch chain.

These tributes along with literally hundreds of "Best Wishes" from business and church associates from all over Ontario, were a complete surprise.

Mr. Leslie who was lame as result of a serious school accident at the age of seven years, found it physically impossible to travel the two miles to school on crutches over country roads and therefore his primary school education was cut short at the end of the second book (grade IV).

After a few years on the farm, an older sister brought him to Belleville where he attended and graduated from Ontario Business College. His immediate problem then was he could not find any bookkeeping employment.

After a short and unsuccessful attempt at bartering, he was employed by Mr. Sid Vermilyea, who owned a large wholesale and retail shoe business.

So, on March 17, 1888, William Leslie started in the shoe business at a weekly salary of $2.00. He was soon satisfied that 'this' was the career he wished to pursue and gave in everything he had. After a few years of progressing up the ladder, he was appointed store manager and at the same time travelled Hastings and Prince Edward counties for the wholesale division. He continued to cover this area for himself after he opened his own business and continued doing so until ill health forced him to retire. At this point, his son Don became the company's travelling salesman.

In June 1919, he bought out a small shoe business owned by John McKeown who was anxious to retire. With one thousand dollars in cash but a good measure of public goodwill, he soon found the business thriving beyond his fondest dreams.

Much can be said about 'Bill' Leslie but he was known as one who sincerely liked people. He encouraged country folk to meet their friends at his store, sit down and visit for awhile, to leave their parcels while shopping and even supplied a baby carriage and umbrella for those who needed them. His store soon became one of the meeting places in the community.

In 1931, a young man who was a second cousin, Arthur L. Hill, joined his staff as a salesman. He and his 'boss' became great friends and each held a high regard for the other. Art soon became his right arm and entered into the buying as well as the bookkeeping when customers didn't require his shoe fitting ability.

Mr. Hill is still an esteemed member of the Leslie 'family' of business association and is managing Leslie's branch store in Lindsay Ontario — the post he has held since that store was opened in 1954.

Mr. Leslie passed away in 1952 and is survived by his wife, Bertha Jeanette, daughter Margaret (Trowsdale) of Frenchman and Bryson and Donald who operate Leslie's Shoe Store Limited today.

to say against Mr. Brown. No one ever heard him say anything against that gentleman. But he had done more to injure our party than any other man in the County of Hastings if there is a Reformer here to-day who does not wish he had come forward with upmanship, he will spurn the idea of supporting such a man as Brown. If we now take up a man who has been used by the Conservative party for the purpose of defeating us, we will unstultify ourselves, and deserve the reproach of every honest man. He knew some Conservatives themselves who had sold to-day they had acted upon a false party cry. The speakers had concluded by paying a high compliment to the character of Dr. Holden.

Mr. Diamond commenced by observing that in reference to Coalition, we have had a Coalition in this county for several years past, in which certain of the Reformers united with certain Conservatives in supporting Mr. Wallbridge, and that the combination was considered very corrupt. Those parties had learned to act together, and he regretted to see that attempts were made to-day to drive them apart, when a wise policy dictated that they should be consolidated into one party for future purposes. There were two questions made here to-day; the first was to attack a man who was not a candidate, and was that the composition of this Convention should be questioned. How could Dr. Hope stand aghast at the composition of a Convention, when it was one of his own creating? If the people of Sidney had chosen a mixed delegation we had nothing to do with it. We could not question their credentials. If we deny their right to sit in the House we call in question the propriety of their being here, they might as well deny our right to be here, and abolish this Convention at once. So much for the attack upon the composition of the Conservatives. He had not come to say in defence of Mr. Brown. His sense of fair play and British honour would not allow him to hear of a gentleman being attacked when Brown has been when he was not here to defend himself. Mr. Brown had been spoken of as a person not to be mentioned amongst the old Reform party. Who are we to consider than members of the old Reform party? Are we to ostracize such men as Geo. E. Henderson, Jas. Reid, Jas. Ross, Robt. Reid, S. Huffman, such men as the Parleys, such men as Dr. Dobbs, and others he might mention, who have done great service to the Brown has done and nothing more. In this respect the leaders of the Reform party are displaying an intolerance which is unworthy of their name. Unless we pronounce their Shibboleth the peculiar manner which some gentleman require, we are ostracized. He did not expect, so long as that course was pursued, that the Reform party would ever triumph. He must say that Dr. Hope was a most honourable man. Why, would you believe it, the Dr. Hope was the man who nominated Mr. Brown as a member of this delegation. He presumed Dr. Hope had consideration in Mr. Brown or he would not have nominated him. He was either honest and sincere in what he had done, or it was done as a trick to catch him and he him hand and foot. Dr. Hope led me to think that Brown was Mr. What has taken place since last "Senator to change all this? If we wish to heal up our difficulties we are taking a very improper course. Cannot we bury the Hatchet? Is it necessary that this movement's so favorable for such an object—Till ye must be in a state of chaos when Dr. Holden cannot answer a straight forward question put to him. He fancied his head must be in a calculating state when he could not defend his position. I do not say I am an advocate of Mr. Brown, but if I am one, I can only say that Dr. Hope has made me one. If Dr. Hope had not had confidence in Mr. Brown, why did he write him a letter urging him to attend a meeting of his friends for the purpose of re-organizing the party? Why did he nominate him as one of this delegation?

Dr. Hope—Tell the whole story.

Mr. Diamond—I don't know any other story. I understand there was a caucus to-day at the Doctor's office, when the whole matter was arranged, and how it was that Brown as an old Reformer, and the editor of the Reform organ, should have been put on as unreliable, is something very strange. I question the right of Dr. Hope or any other person to decide whether I am reliable or not.

Mr. Dean presumed that the remarks about attacking a man in his absence were intended for him. He had yet to learn that there was any indiscrecy in speaking one's sentiments about a man as a candidate. He had come forward here as a candidate, and who might have been here as well as not if he was so disposed.

Dr. Hope denied that there was any caucus at his house to-day.

Mr. Diamond could only say he had been told there was.

Dr. Hope said it was false. He was anxious to learn the opinion of his Sidney and Tyendinaga friends, as he had had certain persons to ask them, if they were in town, to call at his place, that he would like to see them. His object was a sort of informal meeting for parties to come and consult about political matters, and he had an undoubted right to ask any one to come to his house.

Mr. Diamond—If Dr. Hope says there was no caucus he would accept the explanation.

Mr. G. E. Henderson wanted the Convention to understand that he was a candidate for their suffrages. He had been nominated for both Houses, and if he did not get the nomination for the Local Legislature, he would go to the vote for the Local Legislature, and he was there to ask them for their votes. Referring to the contest, he would appeal to every man who knew him if they did not know he had always been identified with the old Reform party. He had talked about Coalition and against Coalition, when it was evident they did not know what they were talking about. He was there not a coalitionist of parties when Wallbridge was returned as a Member of Parliament? Was there not a coalition of parties when Wallbridge was made Judge? And because I supported Brown am I to be told here by parties of no party standing that I am not an old Reformer? Am I and others to throw ourselves into the hands of Dr. Hope and the Reform Convention at one time supporting Wallbridge and then going for Brown? Why was this change? Simply because they took confidence in Wallbridge. He would a thousand times prefer an honest Conservative to a man who was proved a renegade. They were a mixed assembly, and they were there to select from amongst themselves honest and reliable men, and was he to be charged with being unreliable? He appealed to the past to vindicate him from such an unjust charge. He hoped they would sink all differences and unite upon the best men for the election; and if they did he was sure they would be triumphant. Mr. Henderson then at length gave his views upon Coalition Governments, which were to the effect that there were times when it was necessary for parties to coalesce, as in 1854, but that Coalitions were demoralizing, that the element of necessity could alone justify them, and that they should be condemned as a rule.

Mr. R. B. Gilbert, the next candidate, said he was sorry to see landing men of both parties (Mr. Gilbert). He said that when reports did not present him on their due, and it might be he would get somebody to bring him forward. He did not aspire to a position in Parliament, with respect to the politics of parties, he was prepared to say when there was a Coalition as Wallbridge's election, that Conservatives were now to be found in the Reform party, and that Reformers came over to the Conservatives. Every one who knew him knew that he was a Reformer and no Conservative, and he was likely to remain so. He was not anxious to talk about supporting a Coalition Government when the Government had gone a-pulley. He hoped, whatever they did, if Belleville was allowed a fourth member for the House of Commons, they would allow Sidney to select one for the Local Legislature.

Mr. Dean, before reading the list of candidates for the House of Commons, declined being a candidate, but he hoped, whatever they would select, both would be Reformers.

Mr. E. Graham was next called upon. He said from some remarks made by previous speakers, it was a question in his mind whether he had a right to be here. But he considered the time of Dr. Hope's visit to Sidney premature to embrace himself and all other Liberal Conservatives. It might be considered unfriendly to the party he had served Conservative still, but he would say this, that if the views expressed by some here to-day were the views of the Reform party, he thanked God he was a Conservative. He was misled to explain his action of calling the meeting at Sidney and what was done there. He would say the Sidney delegation represented the intelligence and wealth of the County, and he thought him is that the farmers of the County had some to oppress the Conservatives. However, since he was selected he could assure them he would not betray them. Referring to Dr. Hope's attack upon himself, Mr. Graham said, that Dr. Hope wrote a letter to Mr. Brown, inviting him to a meeting, and he was told by Mr. Brown and such men as John S. Huffman, D. Vanderwater, Wm. H. Austin and others, that it was not a that he was an intruder. The speaker did not intend to read anything to be construed into giving his views on Coalition and party government, which were his private views.

Mr. Dean asked Mr. Graham if he would support the present Government.

Mr. Graham would support the present Coalition until the machinery of the Government could be changed.

Dr. Hope asked Mr. Graham if he had testified himself from the Conservative party, and had stood of such men as Hon. Robt. Read, Mac. Bowell, Bowell, Thos. Ritchie, and others, who is a Reform Convention, and he wanted to know whether he had allied himself with the Reform-ers. He wanted an answer yes or no.

Mr. Graham said he would answer the question just as he thought proper. Was it come to my political antecedents you know where to find me. I give no unasked account in political matters; but in times of Coalition we find ourselves voting for old Reformers. We have voted for Jas. Brown, for Dr. Holden, for Allen Flint, and for Wallbridge.

Dr. Hope asked again if Mr. Graham had testified himself from the Conservative party.

Mr. Graham considered himself a true reformer as Dr. Hope. I might ask Dr. Hope did he testify himself from the Reform party when he went over to the Wallbridges?

Mr. T. D. Farley said if he consulted his own feelings he would decline the nomination, but having been urged by a large number of his friends to stand as he would do so. He was elected would do his utmost to promote the interests of his constituents.

Mr. G. E. Henderson said if he failed to receive the nomination for the House of Commons, he was a candidate for the Local Legislature.

Mr. Austin did not feel warranted in withdrawing his name, though he had great personal dislike to being placed in a position. He contended that Sidney and Trenton, representing more than half the constituency, should have a candidate, and he hoped Belleville, after choosing a member for the Local Legislature, would allow Sidney and Trenton to unite upon one for the Local Legislature. The proposition which seemed to be before this Convention was one of Coalition. His answer to the last question was similar to that expressed by Dr. Holden. There were times in the history of the country when Coalitions were necessary, while at the same time he believed Governments could best be carried on by party organ-ments. But when we say that Coalitions are not necessary, we arrogate to ourselves a position not warranted by our position and conduct here to-day. It is only in extreme cases that Coalitions are justifiable, and such a case, I think, now appears in the House of Commons. Confederation has been carried out by a Coalition of all parties, and only here but in the Maritime Provinces; and it is only by a Coalition Government that the new machinery can properly be set in motion. We are pledging ourselves we go to the House of Commons trammelled in the way you want to send Brown there. While he was in favor of a Coalition Government in the House of Commons, he was opposed to Coalition in the Local Legislature. They had a notable instance in the Ontario Legislature, where the coalescing of parties was an injury, and he hoped they would not repeat it.

Mr. M. R. Robin was the next speaker. He declined being a candidate. He deprecated the recriminations which had been indulged in by parties here to-day. He saw a good number of his liberal Conservative friends present, and he was glad to see.

Mr. Geo. Ritchie—I don't think you respect as much or you would not abuse as as you do.

Mr. Robin went on to speak of the relative position of parties, and the danger of having proceedings several of the delegates from Sidney left.

Mr. Jas. Meagher, one of the candidates, briefly addressed the assembly, declining the nomination.

Dr. Hope followed, also declining the nomination, but hoped they would select Mr. Austin as the Candidate for the Local Legislature.

A motion was then made appointing the Chairman, Secretary and Dr. Day, Scrutineers.

Considerable confusion took place previous to the ballots being taken, as to whether the Liberal and Reformer were circulated previously, and Dr. Hope took up his hat and hand, and said he got nearly to the door, when he was prevailed upon to stay. At length the Scrutineers of the Sidney delegation then retired to the back part of the hall, refusing to take any further part in the proceedings.

The following delegates from Sidney did not vote: Messrs. R. Graham, A. Fralick, W. Dafoe, D. Grass, R. Ross, T. Parley, J. Chisholm, Henry Fenn, Alex. Thompson, J. C. Holden, G. Armstrong and J. C. Bird.

The third ballot was taken for Holden and Henderson, and resulted for Holden 36, Henderson 9.

Dr. Holden's nomination was on motion of Mr. Wilson, seconded by Mr. Henderson, made unanimous.

The ballot for Candidates for the Local Legislature next took place.

Thos. Farley—Graham, 8; Farley, 17; Henderson, 6; Austin, 19.

Second Ballot—Austin, 18; Henderson, 6; Farley, 20.

Third Ballot—Farley, 20; Austin, 24.

Dr. Farley's nomination was then made unanimous, and the Court then adjourned, after giving a vote of thanks to the Chairman, and three cheers for the Queen.

The Changing Times

Sport Before Turn of Century Was Strictly Labor of Love

By Geo. H. Carver

One hundred years ago when the bewhiskered pioneer gentry, later called the Fathers of Confederation were trying to form a national government league, the rank and file of the people used sports as a respite from the daily toil.

They didn't have lighted baseball parks, heated arenas, enclosed football stadia or refrigerated and hot - equipped race tracks, but they had just as much fun as the modern spectators of today.

Organized sport as it is known today, was a thing of the future prior to the turn of the century. Contests and matches were mainly individual although in some cases leagues developed without benefit of constitutions.

From 1867 to the turn of the century lacrosse and cricket were the most popular sports in the city with baseball a close third.

However it was not each to his own and figure skating, skiing, harness racing, curling, soccer, billiards, motor-boating, rifle shooting, gymnastics and other sports had their own participants but in lesser numbers.

Hunting and fishing were not classified as "sports" in those days coming under the head of "labor" to help replenish the pantry.

From those early days to the modern era, sports have flourished and grown, a few dying by the wayside but the majority enjoying expansional development.

City sports organizations enjoyed provincial associations after time turned over a century page and have compiled a highly creditable record.

They have produced district, provincial and national championships, the highlight, of course being the capture of the world amateur hockey championship in Prague in 1953.

EARLY ORIGINS

By June 1867 billiard parlors were in evidence operated by men named Davis and Shaver.

One of the first big harness sports took place on the city course with a trotting match for six entries the feature. It was won by a Picton horse which took the complete purse of $40.

The first curling club was organized here on December 20, 1867. It elected officers and posted a notice, "Gentlemen desirous of becoming members will please attend a meeting next Thursday night."

By this time cricket had become extremely popular with young and old. It is noted that a Belleville grammar school club defeated a Picton team by 59 runs. Rivalry between Picton, Kingston and Belleville clubs was very keen. One "single wicket" match was played for $50 a side.

The first Belleville Lacrosse club was formed on October 17, 1867 and the first match was that between "the volunteers and civilians" presumably stationed troops and residents.

The Belleville club improved to the point where it was rated among tops in the county and received a challenge from the St. Regis Indians, Cornwall, the national championships for "$100, or flags or medals worth that amount."

Rifle companies of the local militia stages special shoots while a skating rink was built with a curling section attached.

In March 1868 the first snowshoe races were organized with hurdle and other events. The first race was over a course of three miles "and down to old Cronkle".

THE GROWTH OF GOLF

Golf was a little heard-of thing prior to the 1890's, played by the hardy Scot settlers who brought the sport and equipment with them from the old country.

The advent of the 20th century saw golf increase in popularity and become organized on the local level in the early 20's with two clubs the Belleville Golf Club and the present Bay of Quinte Country Club sporting nine-hole courses.

The Belleville Golf Club eventually "passed away" but the Country Club has developed into one of the best golf associations of the district.

A few years ago it expanded its course to 18 holes which drew the approval of the Ontario Golf Association. It is now recognized as one of that body's "tournament courses".

It now boasts a membership of approximately 600 golfers of both sexes. A feature event is the annual "Festival of Golf" a three-day session of Civic Holiday competition which attracts the best pros and amateurs in the province.

Plans are in the making for a brand new club house with a year-round operation which will include curling. This will, estimated to cost $350,000.

Alleys bowling, it is believed, started here in early years of the century with the first games bowled at the YMCA. Since the five pins has enjoyed marked popularity with ten-pins entering the picture a few years ago.

Both games are popular and provincial tournaments have been held here. Many local tournaments are held each season and some fine bowlers of both sexes have been developed. Some are regarded as being the best in this part of Eastern Ontario.

BASEBALL CHAMPIONS

Although it started here in 1868 organized baseball did not actually come into its own until after the turn of the century. It blazed into championship glory in 1919 when the famous Grand Trunks under the management of the late Walter Gerow s won the all-Ontario senior baseball title.

The club carried on in the Central Ontario Senior Baseball League with Oshawa, Peterborough and Kingston and under the name of the "Goldoaks" and still under Gerow won its second senior crown in 1929.

These teams were perhaps the best ever to represent Belleville. The COBL established an identity until the late thirties. Senior baseball carried on and it was perhaps the Babe Shoemen that "spelt" the title with Oakville in the early fifties. It lingered until two years ago when it faded out of the city sports picture.

The Kiwanis Club sponsored junior baseball here and the youngsters were runners - up on two or three occasions. With the formation of the Belleville Minor Sports Association the younger fellows are enjoying the sport in various categories.

Softball has flourished with perhaps the two greatest teams to come out of the city being the Perrytak, Ontario intermediate "A" champions in 1936 and Don McKevin's Glen Roys all-Ontario junior champions in 1953. The minors are well - organized with Commercial and other city and district loops going well. The Belleville and District Softball League is the top category here at the moment.

Harness racing was a popular sport here even before the birth of confederation. Small meets were conducted at first strictly at the local level. However in more recent years with the advent of legalized betting through the pari-mutuels, it has grown by tremendous leaps and bounds in popularity.

After the turn of the century a franchise was purchased by city racing interests but was sold after some years of operation and is still in existence somewhere.

As popularity grew, many fine horses were purchased, raised, bred and trained by city and district horsemen. The Quinte Driving and Riding Club became associated with provincial racing associations and today conducts highly successful summer-long meets.

Belleville horses have raced, and are, racing at the leading tracks of the province and Quebec.

The Driving Club conducts sixteen weekly meets during the summer with the Exhibition Fair giving up a full afternoon to racing with the Black Diamond Stakes the chief attraction.

Tennis has enjoyed a fair share of popularity since confederation. The Quinte Tennis Club operates here and at one time a district league flourished.

The Quinte Trap and Gun Club was formed a few years ago and today enjoys a lively enthusiastic membership with a club-owned range. Many fine shots have been developed with some winning district and provincial championships.

Hand-gun clubs here have good memberships and shoots are conducted at regular periods the year round. Interclub meets have proven extremely popular.

"FISHING PARADISE"

The city has always been known as the "gateway" to some of the best hunting and fishing areas in the province.

Bay of Quinte waters, its tributary rivers and the hundreds of lakes and streams to the northward, teem with the fighting bass, muskellonge, trout, pickerel and assorted small types.

To the north is a hunter's paradise. Easily accessible, the Hastings county forest floors abound with deer, moose and other hunting quarry. Hundreds of hunters seek the black, mallards, teal and other breeds of wild duck in the many natural haunts that dot the area. Rabbits, pheasants, partridge and other game are available.

Basketball aside from the secondary schools level, has never enjoyed any great popularity here. Some years ago there was a district league formed which operated up until a year ago. This year one team, the Aces, was in action but played only exhibition and tournament games.

During the war years, however, some of the best hoop teams in the country were stationed at an RCAF training centre here. It went on to win the Canadian national finals in its class but met defeat by a Windsor team.

Football was fairly popular here some 30 or 40 years ago with Belleville teams operating in a Central Ontario League. This city developed some outstanding players such as Wally Hilton, Jim Follwell, Ed Schreider and others. Later it sent Gary Schreider, Ed's son, to Queen's and Ottawa where he starred with the Golden Gaels and the Rough Riders professional squad. Gary learned his early football at St. Michael's Academy here under Coach Jack Doras.

Professional wrestling drew some of the biggest names in the sport here some thirty years ago, but interest has dwindled in recent years.

Organized boxing never met with any great degree of success here. In the early days of the century bouts were held on Victoria Park and in the 30's organized meets were staged by various promoters. Poor management and unsatisfactory cards, however, led to an early demise.

In the early days outdoor winter sports consisted of shinny and skating on the bay and river, ice-boating on Quinte with some harness meets held. Sleigh rides were held an old and young rode bobsleds down hills in the area. Today skiing, one of the most popular outdoor sports, is available at Mountain View, the Oak Hills and Batawa.

Oddimers curled with odd stones on outdoor rinks in 1867 but in recent years Belleville and the district has attained a high status in the realm of the sport. The Quinte Curling Club with Trenton and the RCAF have capacity memberships of both sexes and stage tournaments that equal any in the province.

Some excellent curlers have been developed and championships have been won by the local clubs.

While the sport was probably played in the latter part of the 19th century, lawn bowling was first organized here in 1903. It proved to be popular and the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club has enjoyed years of consistent success. It boasts a large membership of both sexes and many tournaments are played here during the season.

The famous Corbin Gold Trophy for teams held on Civic Holiday annually, placed Belleville high on the popularity list. Bowlers from all parts of Ontario and Quebec competes and are loud in their praise of the city's hospitality. The Lawn Bowling club here sent Gerald Hyde, a veteran member, to the presidency of the Provincial Lawn Bowling Association.

SECONDARY SCHOOLS

Soccer has enjoyed mediocre popularity since the 1890's when teams of the military played exhibition matches here. It was organized some years ago with a city league.

Then came the Bay of Quinte League and the Kingston and District Soccer League which are still operating with the Belleville Farmers the loss city entry. Soccer is now played in public and secondary schools.

SECONDARY SCHOOLS SPORTS

Blessed with outstanding coaching the secondary schools of the city, BCI, Moira; Quinte; Albert College and the Ontario School for the Deaf have maintained a high calibre of performances in their sports activities.

The two most popular sports have been and are football and basketball since athletics were organized into district and provincial organizations.

Volleyball, badminton and wrestling play an important part in the school's activities. Lacrosse is being revived in some of the institutions.

Girl students display an active interest in volleyball, badminton and basketball. In fact a Moira S.S. junior girls' basketball team brought the first girl's COSSA championship to the city last year.

Boys' teams have excelled in basketball and football bringing not a few Quinte District COSSA titles in their allotted years. Three BCI basketball teams set a record last year by going through their schedules with unbeaten records, only to lose in the championship games.

Wrestling and track and field have played prominent parts in secondary school athletic programs. More than one Quinte and COSSA championships in both sports have been brought home by school teams and Bays badminton teams have compiled fine records.

The modern younger sports are by much better off then were their forebears when they were moppets.

Under the aegis of the Belleville Minor Sports Association hundreds of youngsters from tyke to juvenile are playing baseball, softball, soccer and hockey under fine coaching and administrative jurisdiction.

The Belleville Garrison Badminton Club has flourished since its inception some years ago. It plays consistently all winter and is regarded as one of the better clubs in the Eastern Ontario Badminton Association. It has a highly creditable tournaments record and as a host club its hospitality is unsurpassed.

With members ranging from tots to grandmothers, the Quinte Figure Skating Club holds an important gesture in the sports world. It trains its members all winter, climaxing the season with the annual colorful extravaganza, a variety show of color and beauty.

A practically new sport to the city, archery has placed its name on the sports headlines on not a few occasions. Both men and women members have reached a high state of efficiency over the five years of existence and present indications have it one or more members will be placed on a

1867 FORWARD WITH A GROWING CANADA! 1967

THE PAST . . .

Canada celebrates her Centennial. At Stephens-Adamson of Canada we mark the end of our fourth decade.

These have been forty good years, in a country where we feel we can be proud to have had some small part in the material and cultural progress of its people.

In 1927 we started operations in Belleville. We had about 20 workers: proudly we say many are still with us. Our payroll was about $800.00 weekly.

Today we have approximately 325 employees, with an annual payroll of about $2,000,000.00.

THE FUTURE . . .

We have depicted some of our installations which we feel are unusual.

(1) Shows a vast iron ore storage and shiploading complex at Sept-Iles, Que., where to date approximately 100 million tons of iron ore have been handled at approximately 8000 tons per hour.

(2) Shows the CAPE BRETON MINER, a bulk unloader built for Upper Lakes Navigation Company, loading at Bedford Basin, N.S. This ship will unload 3000 tons of gypsum per hour. The loading apparatus shown at the prow of the ship was also built by Stephens-Adamson of Canada for the National Gypsum Company, and loads this same material at 4000 tons per hour.

(3) Shows an unusual method of conveying people, together with their miscellany which may include valises, shopping carts, baby carriages or what have you. While this installation happens to be at Dorval International Airport, Stephens-Adamson passenger handling facilities can be seen at many shopping centres, subway stations, elevated railroad stations, apartment complexes, etc.

We believe that Stephens-Adamson will grow with the future demands for handling bulk and packaged materials, as well as humans, economically, efficiently and safely.

Senior "A" Hockey's initial appearance in Belleville left a brief but blazing trail in the city's sport history.

During a four-year period, Belleville McFarlands were born, won Canadian and world hockey championships, ignited a judicial inquiry and faded into oblivion.

The Macs came into being in the fall of 1956 when Wren Blair was instrumental in talking the OHA Senior "B" League into changing its status to "A". Belleville representatives were against the move at first but finally fell into line.

Blair and his Dunlops won the Allen Cup in that 1956-57 season, stunning the hockey world in so doing, and suddenly the "infant" Eastern group lay took a back seat to none.

The Macs carried on where Whitby left off in the 1957-58 season.

Managed by Drury Denyes and sponsored by Mayor H. J. McFarland, of Picton, the club was strengthened for a bid at group honors. But the Macs far surpassed that goal.

Belleville finished atop the Eastern League standing with a record of 29 wins, three ties and 20 defeats, this under the guidance of new player-coach IkeHildebrand.

The Macs received surprisingly-strong opposition in the first round of their group playoffs before disposing of Kingston CKLC's, four games to three, winning the deciding game 9-0 at home. Pembroke Lumber Kings ousted Cornwall in the semi-final but the Macs won the group crown by defeating the Kings four games to one, with one tie.

South Porcupine was next in line and the Macs swept the 3-of-5 series with wins of 4-0, 9-3 and 6-5.

Next in line was the biggest series of the year and most Macs supporters felt if any club could stop "their boys", it would be the powerful Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen.

By this time, tickets for Macs home games were next to impossible to get and a full house went wild as the Macs nipped the Dutchmen 5-4 in the series opener. Back in Kitchener, the McFarlands repeated the win by an identical score and took a 2-game lead with a decisive 8-1 win back in Belleville. The Dutchmen, battling to the end, won the fourth game 6-2 at home but not to be denied, the Macs captured the all-Ontario title with a 6-1 home-ice victory as a tremendous crowd almost tore the roof off Memorial Arena.

Only the Eastern Canada finals stood between the Macs and a berth in the Allan Cup finals now and the Levis, Quebec, club provided the easiest opposition of all. The series, set to be a 4-of-7, was forfeited after Belleville won the first two games at home, 12-3 and 6-4.

The cry then was "Onward to Kelowna and the Allan Cup" as local fans "fired" hockey. The Macs won the first game in British Columbia 6-1 but the Apple Kings rapped back with wins of 6-4, 5-0 and 4-3 to hang the Ontario squad on the ropes of elimination.

But on Monday, April 28, the Macs began one of the greatest comebacks in the history of the Allan Cup with a 4-2 win. Inspired now, they tied the set 3-3 with a 4-3 win, setting the stage for the big one. Kelowna grabbed a 3-goal lead half way through the game before the Macs rallied in the third period for an 8-5 win — and the Allan Cup. It was a night long to be remembered in the city of Belleville where fans celebrated all night.

The conquering heroes arrived home amid great celebrations and already plans were under way to whisk the Macs to Prague, Czechoslovakia. Various money-making methods were used while the Booster Club and Mayor McFarland also assisted greatly.

New players were added at the start of and during the 1958-59 season, among them Al Dewsbury, Johnny McLellan, Jean-Paul Lamirande, Gordon "Red" Berenson, Fiori Gorgoza, Pete Conacher, Roy Edwards and Billy Graham. Some of the "old faces" didn't make it but in the end, Coach Hildebrand, manager Drury Denyes and newly-appointed assistant manager Billy Reay, came up with a world championship club.

Overseas, the Macs did their city and country proud. Following a lengthy exhibition series, they defeated Poland 9-0, Switzerland 23-0 and Czechoslovakia 7-3 in the tour season's preliminary round.

Into the final round, the Macs warmed up for the big game against Russia by blanking Finland 6-0. Then in the big one, with the eyes of the world listening, Belleville defeated Russia 3-1, following up with a 5-0 win over Sweden and a 4-1 nod over the United States.

So, undefeated going into the final game against Czechoslovakia, a team they had beaten 7-2, the Macs could only lose the world title by suffering a lop-sided defeat.

The stubborn Czechs did beat the Macs but only 5-3 and team captain Floyd Crawford stood proudly upon a pedestal to accept the honors as champions of the world.

Later at home, the hockey scandal dimmed some people's idols but others close to the scene still maintain that hockey was only a small part of the whole story, facts of which may never be known.

Many of the players left the Belleville area and the club suffered through a poor season, both record and money wise, during the 1959-60 year, the final one for senior hockey here and in many other centres, until this past fall.

The Boards Chairmen

Reorganization of sports became more or less general after the turn of the century in the city.

And with it a number of sportsmen through natural administrative ability rose "through the ranks," so to speak, to become the "Chairmen of the Board."

Included are:

Don Lee, president Ontario Amateur Softball Association.

Harry Rollins, for many years honorary president of the OASA.

Jack Carson, president of the Ontario Baseball Association and president of the Eastern Ontario Baseball Association.

Jack Devine, president of the Ontario Hockey Association (upcoming this year.)

Bob McCulloch, a director of the Canadian Power Boat Association.

Ken Carr - Braid, National coach of Canada's weightlifting team at Sao Paulo, Brazil, and Kingston, Jamaica.

Many other prominent sportsmen have held positions on the executive bodies of provincial sports organizations.

Yachting and sailing have come a long way since the days of the "Atlanta" Canada's first entry in an America cup race back in 1881. The Bay of Quinte Yacht Club boasts a proud flotilla of yachts and other sailing craft, a far cry from the punts and other craft of the last century.

The Bay of Quinte Power Squadron is rated one of the best on both sides of Lake Ontario. Many handsome craft fly its burgee and its annual sail-past and "rendezvous" is a thing of nautical beauty.

HOCKEY IS KING

Hockey in the last two decades at least has been the most popular sport, spectator-wise, in the city has produced.

Some great teams have worn the Belleville colors topped by, of course, the world champion McFarlands of 1959 whose story appears elsewhere.

They marched over the years from Junior "B" to intermediate "A" to senior "B" and "A". Along memory trail are such milestones as Bill Green, Daw Whalen, the great Ed Thomas who took his intermediates to the Ontario title in 1936; the great Junior "B" squads of the Bill Cook and Toots Holway eras; the senior "B" squads of the early fifties and on to the Macs.

Many of the players left the Belleville area and the club suffered through a poor season, both record and money wise, during the 1959-60 year, the final one for senior hockey here and in many other centres, until this past fall.

City, commercial and outside leagues flourish here as do some 1,400 minor hockey players.

The junior "B" squad sparsely supported, kept the flag flying after the demise of the McFarlands. This year senior "A" hockey returned to the wars and the spectator response was little short of sensational after six years dormancy.

And in passing it might be noted that are few cities of Belleville size in Canada who can proudly display in town halls scarlet banners of league, Ontario, Allan Cup and world hockey championships.

Another sport that has brought the city in the national and world headlines is weightlifting. Belleville's Apollo Barbell Club manager and Canada's national coach for two years Ken Carr-Braid has trained national champions, some of whom represented Canada at British Empire and Pan-American games.

And in closing it might be noted that Belleville can claim at least part of a share in the best hockey player in the world today one Robert Marvin Hull and brother Dennis Hull who is rapidly approaching star status in the National Hockey League.

Baseball Was Big After World War 1

Railway baseball teams have won provincial senior baseball championships twice — once in 1919 and a second time in 1928. They have also received runner-up honors several times over the years.

The first team to win the the "Grand Tanks" in 1919. Even prior to this Belleville was a hot bed of baseball with 2,500 to 3,000 fans attending games.

Old timers will remember the town "closed up like a book" on Wednesday afternoons as a great majority of citizens wended their way to the park.

The first manager of the Grand Trunks was Tommy Fegg who was later succeeded by Walt Gerow. In 1918 the team joined the Central Ontario Baseball League and represented the city for many years.

At least two of the initial team members stood out in press reports of games played in the league — the pitcher- "Penny" Mills and "Joshua" Jack Williams. It was not unusual for them to record 15 to 18 and 22 strikeouts in a game.

Williams went on to play in the International League with the Rochester Red Wings.

The first baseman on early teams was Walt Gerow. He later became coach and handled the team through good years and bad until his efforts culminated in the 1928 championship.

In 1923 the Canadian National Railway was set up and by name of the ball team was changed to the "Nationals."

Some members of the 1928 championship team included "Penny" and Harry Mills, Freddie and "Soup" Goyer, and the infamous "Hoot" Gibson.

Vinny Utroski, a fine burler and Doctor Harry Blakely at second base were heroes of the day.

Other players were Bob "Wicky" Ross and "Sonny" Green. Alex West and Jack Williams also gave the crowds their share of thrills.

Baseball remained high on the list of things to do in Belleville until the early 30s when interest in the game faded. Efforts have since been instituted to revive the game, but nothing that has happened since the 30s can come close railway teams.

Favorite Sons And Daughters

Belleville has had its share of international figures. Sir Gilbert Parker who achieved fame in England as a statesman and politician was from Belleville.

Susanne Moodie wrote her now famous books while she was living here — giving posterity a true picture of frontier-life with "Roughing It in The Bush" and "Life in the Clearings."

Sir Mackenzie Bowell was also a familiar sight on the streets. After becoming proprietor of The Intelligencer, he embarked on a political career which was consummated in his election as Prime Minister in 1894.

During Canada's Centennial Year, Dolan The Druggist can look back with pride on the history that has made them outstanding for specialization in prescriptions for over a period of 80 years.

Many milestones from mortar and pestle to pushbutton pill productions have occurred from the time the first proprietor Mr. N. S. Morden dispensed the first prescriptions from 1887 to 1889. The business changed hands to Charles Clarke from 1889 to 1913 improving the reputation of the prescription business as time passed on.

Dolan the Druggist came into being in 1919 when brothers Charles and Terry Dolan purchased the drug business and operated from the present location of Agnew-Surpass Stores. In 1929, they moved to their present location.

Saturday was farmers' day in the city and Belleville was strictly a farmers' town. The drug store sold items of things necessary to them, from paints and oils to veterinary supplies, condition powders and ointments. In those days, the team of brothers were busy with mortar and pestle, compounding prescriptions, from formulas handed down by former forefathers.

Mr. Charles Dolan passed away in 1945 and Mr. Cleo Colling another well known city pharmacist joined the Dolan Staff. Five years later, he entered into a partnership.

Three years ago, another staff member, Mr. Archie Boyd entered the partnership combining the three grads as pharmacists as Dolan The Druggist.

Today, more than ever, Dolan the Druggist continues to specialize in prescriptions. They maintain a complete drug store with a graduate pharmacist on duty at all times; prescriptions are the most important phase of their business. Many of Dolan's regular customers are receiving the same attention their grandfathers, grandmothers, fathers and mothers received, the personal attention which affords Dolan the Druggist the title as "headquarters for all your prescription needs".

We at Dolan's are proud of our prescription reputation and will continue to serve the Quinte area with the same standard of honesty and excellence which has been our policy since our beginning.

Fair Parade Show Piece

Getting all decked out for parades was just as popular half a century ago as it is today as is vouched for by this bakery wagon all set for Belleville Fair parade about 1910.

Fair Attractions--Circa 1896

Old time stage companies offering fall fair attractions went all out in their advertising as is shown in this circular received by Belleville Fair officials. Fair board minutes didn't indicate whether the company was hired.

Local Fair 45-year Stripling By the Time of Confederation

It has been known under at least four different names and has been held on as many different sites, but the Belleville fair is one of the oldest in the province and already 45 years of age at the time of Confederation.

According to records at the Canadian Archives in Ottawa, the local fair actually had its beginnings in 1821.

Local records of the first fair are apparently non existent, but some of the details have been dug out by Robert Phillips, past president of the Belleville fair, and Gerald Boyce, former chairman of the Hastings County Historical Society.

Even the name under which the fair initially was known seems obscure but apparently it was a county fair sponsored by the Midland District Agricultural Society.

Some of the fair founders were John W. Meyers under whose name Belleville was once known (Meyers Creek), Thomas Coleman, William Bell, William Ketcheson, Robert Smith, Roswell Leavens and Abel Gilbert, all well known names among Quinte District founders.

The first prize list totalled only $1051/2, paid only on livestock.

The fair seems to have been some sort of a market variety and possibly held quarterly. By 1849 the name had been changed to Victoria District Fair and Cattle Show.

A newspaper report of that year describes the streets of Belleville as "thronged with stock as team after team arrived." The report said that exhibits exceeded those of previous years.

Then again in 1855, a report detailed Belleville and agreed by B. F. Davy, president of the Board of Agriculture for Upper Canada, mentions the show as again having increased attendance.

Somewhere along the line there was another change, for in 1860 it was known as the Bay of Quinte Fair, a name which was to continue until after the turn of the century.

Some of the fair officials in that year were President J. Brown, vice-presidents J. J. Farley and W. Woods, and S. D. Farley as secretary. Directors included E. Vanderwater, D. Anderson, Munro Morden, Thomas Wills, P. R. Palmer, J. Diamond and G. Fleming.

But in 1881 fair members' badges were marked South Hastings Agricultural Society and newspaper advertisements indicated the fair was then called South Hastings Agricultural Fair.

In 1954 the Belleville Fair was recognized by the Ontario Agricultural Society as then being 100 years old. To "commemorate the Pioneers of Hastings and Prince Edward Counties who in the past 100 years served the cause of agriculture," centennial gates were erected at the entrance to the present fair grounds.

For many years, however, the Belleville fair grounds were south of Bridge Street, directly opposite the present grounds and on the site now occupied by the American Optical Company plant.

The first fair on the present grounds was held in 1925.

In 1894 the Bay of Quinte District Fair was advertised as a three-day show — on Sept. 18, 19, 20. The president in that year was the late Col. W. N. Ponton who was to continue as fair head for several years.

But the next year — in 1895 — the fair was expanded to a four-day show. Members tickets said it was the 30th annual fair. A four-day show was also held in 1897.

Admission to the grounds at that time was advertised as 25 cents for adults and 10 cents for children. A two-horse carriage with driver cost 75 cents and a one-horse vehicle 50 cents.

The fair was presented by the West Hastings Agricultural Society and the Belleville Horticultural Society.

City Waterfront Today A Far Cry From Its Heyday as Freighter Stop

Cruising Down the River

The scene is Belleville Harbor — back in the good old days. Canoe in foreground seems to be keeping pace with one of the many steamers which once plied regularly up and down the Bay of Quinte.

Old Belleville Dock

Picture taken about 1910 shows steamer tied up at the old dock in what is now termed the "inner" harbor. Tall structure in background was a grain elevator.

Oil pipelines, motor trucks and railways have taken over from the schooners and packet freighters, but Belleville at one time had a really bustling waterfront.

Back before the days of the railway and when present Highways were little more than trails through the woods, trim, tall-masted schooners piled up and down the bay on Quinte carrying grain and lumber.

Later steam paddle-wheelers made regular runs between Trenton and Kingston and packet freighters hauled a variety of goods in and out of Belleville.

At one time Massassaga Point, three miles east of Belleville in Prince Edward county, was a popular holiday and picnic resort with steamers transporting crowds of summer holidayers to the point for a day in the sun.

There was even a big hotel at the Point and sailing boat races were a popular attraction. Later a dance pavilion did a thriving business.

Another popular spot was Twelve O'Clock Point west of Trenton and Presqu'ile Point where excursion steamers ran regularly from Belleville.

In the old days there was no Victoria Park as is known today.

In fact Victoria Park was once little more than a sawdust pile.

On the site of the present park was a big sawmill owned by the Rathbun Lumber Company, one of many such mills operating in the Belleville area and up and down the bay.

Each spring the Moira River — as well as the Trent and the Salmon rivers — was choked with logs as the annual spring log drive got underway.

At the north end of what is now termed the "inner" harbor (just south of Fireman's Park) there was a ferry or loading dock.

On the east side of the "inner" harbor a short distance north of the Moira Schooner coal-yard was the ferry slip where ferries from Rossmore tied up.

The early ferry which commenced operations about 1858 was horse propelled with horses walking treadmills to provide the motive power.

Later steam driven ferries came into use, only in turn to become obsolete with the construction of the bay bridge in 1891.

But that is all in the long past. The passenger steamers, packet freighters and grain schooners have given way to more modern methods of transportation.

And Massassaga Point is all but forgotten as a picnic and holiday spot with the old Wallbridge hotel having been long since torn down.

The coming of the automobile sounded the death knell for Massassaga Point and the old passenger steamers are remembered by only the older residents.

But the last of the packet freighters docking at Belleville is still recalled by many Bellevillians.

It was the packet freighter Glen Allen which for years made weekly trips between here and Montreal hauling Bay of Quinte district cheese for export to England.

The Glen Allen, owned by the late W. R. McCreary and Canada Transport Ltd., returned to Belleville laden with sugar.

In the mid-forties the old Glen Allen was replaced by a more modern boat called The City of Belleville but eventually spelled the doom of the freighter and the service was discontinued.

But in the old days Belleville was really a booming town when on grain shipping days, dozens, even hundreds of farm wagons loaded with barley or cheese lined Front Street waiting to be unloaded.

The main activity was at the old Grand Junction Dock, now runner of the present Government Dock constructed about the time of World War I.

In the old days horse drawn street cars ran between the north station and the Grand Junction Dock and it was something really worth mentioning in the newspaper when in 1871 gas lighting was installed at the waterfront dock.

Around the turn of the century the old Grand Junction dock fell into disrepair and its rotting remains were dredged away to make way for the present dock.

Today motels and motor hotels have to a great extent taken over the lodging requirements of the travelling public, but in the old days Front Street was lined with hotels and inns.

Among familiar names were "Commercial House" at the lower end of Front Street (still known as the Warren Building) "Hastings House" the "Anglo American" the "Windsor" and the Kyle House.

The Dafoe House was the forerunner of the present Hotel Quinte.

The string of hotels and inns continued north of the city and at one time as many as half a dozen were operating in Foxboro.

In 1818 a converted schooner appeared on the Bay of Quinte as the first paddle wheeler. Shortly afterwards built at the Finkle shipyards at Bath, started making regular runs.

The Frontenac was followed by many other passenger boats and freighters with such names as "Utica", "Belleville", "Quinte", North King", "Oswego Belle", "Brockville", "Niagara", "Prince Edward" and Picton being among the regulars.

The steamers were largely owned by private stock holding companies and a note in the Intelligencer in March, 1837 shows a general meeting of the stockholders for the steamer "Brockville" having been held in Belleville.

In 1833 twice weekly trips to Ogdensburg on the "George Frederick" were being advertised while in 1837 weekly trips to Montreal on the Alexandra appeared in the newspapers.

One Belleville man, Fred Chamberlain, Bridge Street, recalls when he was about eight years old he accompanied his father on an excursion steamer to Kingston where they attended the funeral of Sir John A. Macdonald.

And Maurice Callaghan, who has spent a lifetime around Belleville's waterfronts recalls the annual river drives with logs backed up the Moira to Camiffton.

At the Belleville harbor the logs were sorted and boomed to sawmills operated by the various owners.

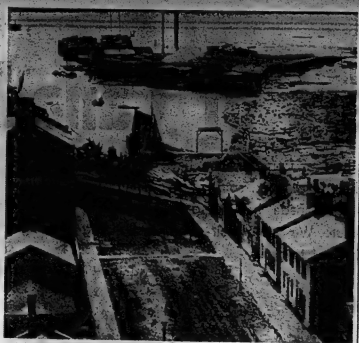
Mr. Callaghan remembers at least half a dozen sawmills in the immediate Belleville area.

He also remembers when Zwick's Island was much higher than it is today. He says at one time it must have been at least 70 feet above the bay. The Island was robbed of gravel and fill for city streets and for the present government dock.

Also he recalls the last of the old coaling schooners handling up to 500 tons of coal at a trip. It took two days to unload at Belleville but the fastest of the schooners could make the run to and from Oswego in little more than 24 hours.

But the steam coalers eventually put the schooners out of business and several of the old hulks were scuttled in the Bay. One of these is at the foot of George Street, while another still pokes its ribs above the water near Zwick's Island.

Mr. Callaghan is one of Belleville's old time ice dealers who saw the modern electric refrigerator put him out of business like the coaling steamers scuttled the sailing schooners.



For several decades the annual winter ice harvest saw busy times in Belleville but about 1943 ice refrigerators were becoming a thing of the past and Callaghan's went out of business.

During the American prohibition days the port at Belleville had a brief return to popularity.

Almost every night speedboats loaded with whiskey left Belleville, their cargoes "billed" for Caribbean ports.

But the boats made exceptionally fast time to the Caribbean, as the following morning they were back in the city.

Rumor has it that the cargoes ended in American hands at isolated ports on the south shore of Lake Ontario.

Victoria Park A Century Ago

What is now Victoria Park was a bustling sawmill many years ago. Picture taken from the city hall tower after it was completed in 1873 shows lower Front Street and the bustling Rathbun sawmill at the mouth of the Moira River.

Edmonton Centennial Project

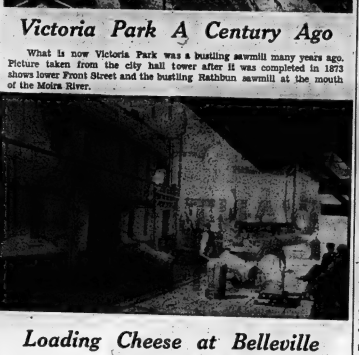
Forty Indian students from the Gooderham Indian Day School at Duffield visited young sters from Grades 4 through 7 at Edmonton's Virginia Park School.



For months before the visit, the young Indians had been corresponding and exchanging pictures with the Edmonton children.

Lal Sabharwal, principal of the Indian school, said the main purpose was to promote better understanding" and help the Indians realize "they are no longer a cultural island."

Cecil Woodward, principal of Virginia Park School, is credited with originating the idea. During the remainder of the year the two schools will exchange principals and teachers for short periods and work together in various centennial projects.

Experts Predict Future in Arts

As a centennial project, The Canadian Press asked a group of experts for their predictions on what the next century has in store for Canada in several fields. This story covers the arts.

By JOHN LeBLANC
Canadian Press Staff Writer

There's optimism and gloom over the outlook for the arts in Canada's next 100 years.

One intellectual thinks commerce will move in. Another figures Canada will not be producing literature. Others say the future will open up new and exciting fields.

Two leading writers find the view clouded.

"During the next century Canadian writers will substitute for their attitude of querulous and impotent rebellion one of rational and total subservience to the business community. Such quixotic protestations as artistry as are now attempted by putting a naked woman in bed with a dildo man or two dildos man into a barrel of LSD will have been cast aside like children's beubles.

"By 2000 AD, the few remaining writers who are not staff priests in the temple of commerce will be working for the same outfit through the channels of publishers, advertisement, computer universities, book-of-the-month clubs, magazines such as Time of Your Life, Reader's Delusion and the combined organ of the FBI, RCMP and CIA, Truer Than Truth. . . .

"Canadian writers will be well fed, untainted by any intellectual attainments, and properly contemptuous of all ethical and artistic tenets.

"Half before 2067, they will have achieved nirvana by becoming one with the grey intestinal of shit to which mankind will have by then been reduced—assuming we have not all been reduced to ashes by that time."

Novelist - historian Thomas Raddall of Liverpool, N.S., says that by 2067 Canadians will have sung since bought up all foreign-owned shares in the economy, invested millions abroad and given away billions in foreign aid.

But he adds:

"Someone has written a book called The Ugly Canadian, and from Chile to China there are shouts and scrawls demanding 'Canuck go home.' This does not apply to expatriate Canadian poets, writers, painters and others in Paris, London and Hollywood, who thank God for their absence as publicly as possible.

"Canadians will be buying more books than ever before, and some curious minds will still be trying to figure out what Marshall McLuhan was trying to communicate in 1967.

"A group of Canadian professors will have just published a new history of Canadian literature which states at great length that Canada has no literature, but it adds that Canadian critics are the world's best. Meanwhile, Canadian writers go on writing best-literature and Canadien and other non-professors go on reading it."

NEW INSTRUMENTS

A more cheerful prospect for the fine arts is seen by Dr. Walter Johns, president of the University of Calgary:

"I don't expect too many changes in drama because drama is the portrayal of the human being on stage. . . . I think the form of the dramatic piece might change.

"In the graphic arts, I hope to see a return to the highly developed skills and techniques rather than the sort of thing we are seeing so much of now. . . . An improved knowledge of chemistry should lead to improved colors and new materials for the sculptor.

"In music I expect to see new types of instrument developed. . . . I think electronics will not only change the form of musical instruments but might lead to the development of totally new instruments of a type not yet conceived."

Builders of Canada - 1867

The Fathers of Confederation have been aptly described as "Builders of the Nation". Their hard work, spirit of co-operation and planning were the corner-stones upon which Canada has emerged, one hundred years later, as a Country with a bright future. We salute their efforts in building a strong foundation from which our land continues to grow.

BUILDERS OF CANADA - 1967

The construction industry in Canada has also made its contribution to the building of Canada – albeit using different methods and materials than those employed by the Fathers of Confederation. Skilled draughtsmen, experienced engineers, gifted craftsmen and willing workers combine their talents to complete construction projects that build a better Canada. We salute everyone in our industry on this historic occasion and hope that Canadians everywhere enjoy a happy Centennial Year.

Message with A Punch

They were pretty direct in the old days — if a little bit over anxious to put the political point across. However, even national campaigning like the above advertisement was nothing to hyper-acidity that spilled from rival newspaper presses.

Political Campaigns in Past 100 Years Were Opportunities to Trade Insults

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Political campaigning sort of appealing to the common man — has never been the business for the man of common means.

But campaigns have come in for some breathless alterations in 100 years.

Today, a politician must be eloquent, but not verbose; well - heeled but not ostentatious; provocative, but scarcely provoking.

The subtle shadings of today's campaign demands should make many a politician yearn for the more brash publicity days of yore.

Today campaign managers must scramble to make the news shlotments of radio, TV and newspapers. What they can't carry for free they must purchase.

In the old days it was simple. You either owned a newspaper — or your party associates did.

Therefore it was imperative that each hot seat of local political power have two newspapers. (These also were the halcyon days when only two political parties were needed to express the full range of a nation's political idealism).

The resultant rivalry, which mounted to vitriolic fury in campaign years, provides a rich lode of historic journalism of which The Intelligencer library is a valuable repository.

Opposing editors became so involved with trading personal insults the candidates often were dropped somewhere in left field, depending on ideologies.

This is what the Daily Intelligencer and the Hastings Chronicle scribes thought of each other during the 1962 elections in Upper Canada:

"Corruptionist Organ!" roared the Chronicle.

"A Monstrous Job!" bellowed the Intelligencer.

"Greasy Skeddadle!" sneered the Chronicle.

"Retouchment with a Vengeance!" thundered the Intel.

"Our Porcine Neighbor!" castrated the Chronicle.

It is doubtful if the struggle between provincial, hometown journals was waged more bitterly than in Belleville — and for good reason.

For much of his early life, The Daily Intelligencer was the property of Mackenzie Bowell, the printer's devil who rose to an ill-starred Conservative Prime Ministership of Canada.

A dedicated Tory in a Tory milieu he was the arch angel — or arch demon, depending on what paper you bought — of local Toryism, and his Intelligencer a bulldog bible of his party.

Stolidly, for more than a half century he patiently published his testament to 19th-century Toryism, to make the world, and Belleville in particular, a torment for his journalistic opposition.

But, even though entrenched, he and his editors had their afflictions, first from the Chronicle, then from the Daily Ontario.

Politically, all factions knew their places.

The trouble was, the journals forever reiterated the other fellow down the road didn't know his.

In print, they wept, they prayed for his redemption from his self-chosen political limbo.

When all was said and done, they were really only being solicitous.

"We would recommend that our contemporary suspend publication for a while and take time off for a much deserved and needed rest at some health resort," The Ontario gently counselled The Intelligencer during the white heat of one campaign. "This would do much to tone up the system, restore the jaded nerves and give balance to the perturbed mentality."

Besides politics, both The Intelligencer's opponents had common gripes for the Conservative organ's style through the years.

"Our grenadined contemporary," The Chronicle called it in 1862.

"The last surviving representative in Canada of backwoods journalism," laughed The Ontario as late as 1917.

Nonetheless, the Old Lady of local political journalism could kick like a mule when the occasion stirred her.

In 1907, Bowell himself took to the first Confederation hustings in North Hastings, against incumbent T. C. Wallbridge — and obligingly sent his reporter to cover Mr. Wallbridge's rally at Stirling.

"This meeting," relayed the astounded reporter, shows the necessity of having someone present when Mr. Wallbridge addresses a meeting in order to controvert all his wild and untruthful assertions. His case is becoming desperate and requires falsehood and chicanery to sustain it and he doesn't hesitate to use both. Nor is any man's character safe from the vilest aspersions when no one is present to watch him, and thus put a bridle on his tongue."

Again, in 1882, when Peter Coe had the temerity to oppose Bowell's return to Parliament, The Intelligencer thundered:

"The opposition . . . is of the most contemptible character. We ask the honest electors of the constituency to stamp out such opposition in a manner so thorough that no man will ever again venture to seek to use them as a means of forwarding his selfish interests at the public expense or of gratifying an unworthy feeling of revenge."

Polemic journalism was in its hey-day. Expensive teams of public relations experts were unnecessary. All that was needed was an editor with a political liver as inflamed as his imagination.

In 1891 the Daily Ontario editor, courteously referring to his Intelligencer opposite number as "the conceited fossil who fills the editorial chair of that organ of monopoly and the political pen on behalf of R. C. Clote against Harry Corby."

School Books Nothing But Trash Complains 1845 County Inspector

Canada was an underdeveloped country 122 years ago, struggling like Asian and African nations today for stability through improved education.

In 1845 the Hastings County public school inspector wrote to his mother in Ireland:

"The farmers are every year becoming more and more alive to the value of substantial education. In the midst of snow and biting frost many of the children in the back townships were at school barefoot.

"Everywhere we are very badly off for books, having nothing but trash and I wish some of your wealthy associations at home would take pity on the poor Canadians and send us out a supply of the Irish National School Books."

The Old Belleville Fairgrounds

Bay of Quinte Exhibition

Somewhere about the turn of the century the Bay of Quinte District Exhibition ceased to function for a few years and the grounds were purchased by a group of local horse owners as a driving club.

Back in 1892, two area agricultural groups, the Thurlow Agricultural Society and the East Hastings Agricultural Society amalgamated and decided to hold fairs alternately at Roslin and Thrasher's Corners. Then when the fair at Belleville went dormant exhibitors transferred to the Thrasher's Corners Fair.

One local man who distinctly recalls the Thrasher's Corners Fair is Fred Denyes, 87-year-old Sidney township farmer and director of Belleville Fair for 30 years.

"I showed a team of carriage horses at that fair," he recalls. "I was only about 18 or so at the time."

But after a few years the fair at Belleville was re-organized. The old grounds where the Optical company plant now stands were re-purchased and the fair continued on the site until the move was made to the present grounds about 40 years ago.

In 1907 the old fair buildings at Thrasher's Corners were sold and the same year the name Belleville Fair was formally adopted.

However, the name Belleville Fair had apparently been in common use long before then. Over the years the fair has been sponsored by the West Hastings Agricultural Society, the Thurlow Agricultural Society, the East Hastings Agricultural Society and the Belleville Horticultural Society. Today all of these groups are merged into the Belleville Agricultural Society with membership still from the areas represented by the older fair boards.

Buildings on the old fairgrounds south of Bridge Street have long since disappeared but at the south end there is still a faint outline of the race-track and some of the foundation blocks of the old grandstand can also be picked out among the trees north of the Albert College property.

One of the show buildings was actually moved to the new grounds and is still in use.

According to Mr. Denyes, in the old days horses were almost as common as cars are today.

"Practically everyone had a horse — doctors, lawyers and merchants — and harness races were held at the fair grounds," he said.

Horse racing on the ice of the Bay of Quinte — with cutters or sleighs instead of sulkies — was popular in the old days. Horsemen from considerable distances came to the city and staged races on the bay.

Mr. Denyes remembers on one occasion when the weight of the horses and crowd caused the ice to sag and the starting line had to be moved to another area.

In the summer races were held at the fair grounds but "fast" racing was done at the Donnelly farm on the 2nd concession of Sidney north of the railway tracks.

After about 1900 Mr. Denyes was a regular showman at the fair and on four occasions won silver cups for the best carriage team, owned by a farmer. He recently donated one of the cups for competition at the present fair and turned others over to the historical society.

Prior to the turn of the century he recalls an aerial car being used as a fair attraction.

Even then fair officials went all out to provide special attractions for the fair and prior to the day of the aeroplane, balloon ascents and parachute leaps were the "in attraction."

Barn-storming groups offered their services and would do two parachute jumps for $200. After three jumps the charge was $60 per jump.

And according to Maurice Callaghan, former Belleville ice dealer, some of the balloonists actually did come to the city.

He remembers one balloonist representing a tobacco firm who parachuted into the bay after an ascent from the fair grounds. On another occasion a girl parachutist was scheduled to go up but the balloon burned as it was being filled and she failed to get off the ground.

Balloons at that time were filled, with hot air blown through a trench by the wind. Sometimes sparks got through into the balloon with disastrous results.

And there were also road shows offering a host of stage attractions. These included "up-to-date burlesque" aerialists and gymnastic performers.

Back in earlier days of the fair only livestock was mentioned as fair exhibits. However, by 1886 the Belleville show was being advertised as the "largest cheese exhibit in Canada". In addition there were horse races, chariot races, bicycle races and foot races.

In 1887 there was strong emphasis on horse racing with three days of events offered. There were classes for "Thoroughbred, Skies and Suffolk" horses and for "Durham, Welsh, Grade and Fat" cattle.

In the field crop classes there were sections for white oats, and for black oats and another for bales of hops.

In the domestic section, there was distinction between homemade and factory cloth. Butter was listed as firkin," "rolls", "prints" and "tubs."

In 1908 there was mention for the first time of a baby show.

By this time it seems the fair was again having its financial difficulties and member of the day signed a note for $250 to settle fair accounts.

This debt was cleared the next year and the fair board reported a balance of $14.32 after total receipts of $1861.85.

In 1910 there was mention of a standing field crop competition and the same year fair attractions included the artillery and a New York stage show.

And fair officials really went all out in decorating the grounds. Each year a motion is recorded "to decorate the grounds at a cost of not exceeding $10."

In 1912 there was first reference to a regular midway and the next year it was decided to bring "The Dragon" to the fair. Just what this attraction was is not recorded.

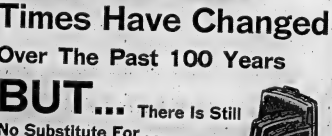
And apparently in an stylings to boost attendance from Prince Edward county, the fair board in 1913 made an effort to have the toll on the Bay Bridge reduced for fair time.

By 1914 there was first mention of a charge of 25 cents for automobiles and a wild west show from Oklahoma was engaged for three days with street parades each day.

In recent years Conklins have supplied the fair midway and in return for paving the midway area some years ago have a contract guaranteeing concession rights on the grounds.

After World War II a new grandstand and lighted ball park was constructed on the grounds while new accommodation has also been provided for horse, cattle, and hogs.

More recently track lights have been installed at the grounds for the holding of night harness racing.



Currently the city parks board is planning erection of a new fairgrounds building to incorporate an artificial ice arena and auditorium, to replace the now obsolete Manufacturers and Commodores buildings.

However, the new structure will not be ready for this year's Centennial Fair and the present buildings are expected to be used still another season.

TIMES

CHANGE
but NOT QUALITIES!

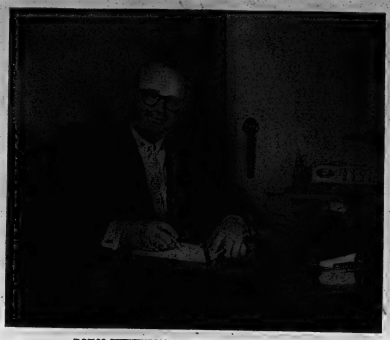
The same rugged and sincere qualities that marked the character of the Fathers of Confederation are inherent in many of the traditional household articles that Canadians still cherish and enjoy. Things like Colonial furniture – sturdily built, gracious and homey. Times may change but true quality never does.



And it never will in our store. New styles, new colors, new fabrics make their appearance regularly and we accept them – but only if they have the in-built quality that marked the basic thinking behind Canada's creation as a Nation. Don't you agree that time should never change that philosophy?

A Solid Quebec Will Vote to Rule All Canada Only a Solid Ontario Can Defeat Them

Common Ground

Headlines Unchanged Over Years

OTTAWA (CP) — Do these headlines sound familiar? "Canada Needs New Flag." "Reorganization of Armed Forces." "Confederation Train."

No, they were not selected from a recent sampling of Canadian newspapers. They are from the newspapers our ancestors were reading as the British North American colonies planned to take on nationhood in 1867.

The drab, picturesque, four-page journals of a century ago bear little relationship to the bulky, slick newspapers that roll off the electronically-controlled presses of today. But in perusing the archives, the reader sometimes finds himself on familiar ground.

Take this item from the Brantford Courier of June, 1867:

"Some of our contemporaries are continually advocating the necessity of a very early formation of a new flag by which to designate our dominion. There can be no doubt that our government will attend to this matter soon after the assembling of Parliament."

The language may be a bit stilted, but there is no mistaking the sentiment.

On June 28, 1867, the Quebec Morning Chronicle pondered the role of the military in the new dominion.

"The reorganization of our defensive forces and its establishment upon a basis commensurate with its importance and the requirements of the country will be among the first of several important subjects to claim attention at the hands of our new government."

The anti - American feeling that often enters into political discussions today has its roots back well before Confederation.

Joseph Howe, who led a strenuous campaign to keep Nova Scotia out of Confederation, was accused of siding with Washington.

The Toronto Globe was one of several papers that spoke out loudly against the U.S. practice of electing judges to make sure that the same system was not applied in Canada.

The Barrie Northern Advance felt so strongly about the system of government to the south that on April 4, 1867, it wrote:

"American legislatures are filled with damagogues, prize-fighters and other specimens of the genus vagabond who can handle a bowie knife much better than a pen."

The civil rights question, as much in the news these days, was just beginning as the country was born. L'Ordre of July 1, 1867 reports that a Negro who was ejected from a Montreal restaurant because of his color had laid charges against the proprietor.

The Confederation train of 1867 was similar to its 1967 counterpart in name only. It was an excursion laid on for the celebration of Confederation and it took vacationers from Montreal to Portland, Me., and then by steamer to Halifax or Saint John, N.B.

Cost of the round trip, according to Le Pays of Quebec, was

Sawdust Flats Often Flooded

Hundreds of families on both sides of the Moira River were forced to evacuate during "the flood of 1886." It was the worst flood in the history of Belleville and lasted several days.

The lower part of the city called "Sawdust Flats" was particularly hard hit by the rising waters and shelters for the homeless had to be set up on Pinnacle Street.

The paper reported: "If it were not for the ice floating around the scene could be described as Venetian." When the waters finally receded the streets were left littered with drift wood and ice.

City Celebration Attracted 20,000

In 1850 Belleville was incorporated as a town. Benjamin F. Davies was elected, by the council, as the first mayor.

The first mayor to be elected by the people was F. McAnnany in 1858.

It was not until 1878 when an act of the Ontario legislature incorporated Belleville as a city. The event was celebrated on Dominion Day of that year.

People began pouring in from the country as early as four a.m. By eight o'clock in the morning there were more than 20,000 people on the streets. It was all the marshalls could do to keep order.

1917 — Provincial rivalry was violent — so was local politics!

Editors in Thick of Fight

era House rally "A Complete Fizzle" he informed his readers: "The whole meeting throughout was nothing but a mess of personal abuse . . ."

However, Bowell cranked his sights from The Intelligencer's editorial gun deck and fired back, comparing Cluis to Corby:

"Look at the cold and distant, unsympathetic visage of the one and the smiling genial countenance of the other, with an open hand and generous heart to help his fellow man."

Having demolished Corby's opponent, Bowell then rounded on his own in North Hastings — this time Peter Vankleek:

"Mr. Bowell's friends are urged to turn out on election day and evidence their condemnation . . . by making the majority as large . . . as to cause the forfeiture of the deposit made on behalf of the first candidacy of despair and malice."

With the 20th Century came campaign innovations — notably the automobile — and the journals kept note with them, being however traditional language.

In 1911, the Intelligencer, smelling heavy afoot — an .ss wheels — ran a breathless warning: "Information has been received by The Intelligencer from a source, the reliability of which is beyond question, that an automobile that is carrying the boodle for the Grit bribers in Ontario east of Toronto, left Ottawa yesterday and reached Kingston at 11 o'clock last night . . . Also a wagon, the load of which consisted of $67 worth of whiskey started last night for the eastern polling places in East Hastings. Watch for the bribers and bring them to justice!"

Menace by motor-car — and a new era had arrived.

With World War I the power of organized propaganda was born and the campaigners hitched it to election bids.

Full-page national advertisements, cartoons and standard campaign slogans, dazzled the political pages, the introduction to a style of campaigning familiar today.

It also was the farewell to the journalistic grand-slam on the local level.

As if aware they were locking in a death-struggle of style, The Intelligencer and Daily Ontario unleashed broadsides of ferocity, unmatched even in their bloody record of rivalry.

Roared the Ontario: "Owing to the flood of dictwater that gushes forth every evening from a certain source on Front Street, some critics have been unkind enough to name the aforesaid source "The Little Tammany Eye-Opener . . ."

Blared The Intelligencer: "Apparently trying to cover convicted guilt by noise, the opposition candidate's publicity department Saturday issued a manifesto of hysteria covering several columns of denunciations . . ."

Shrugged the Ontario: "Our readers must not expect us to dignify all this senile drivel with a reply. It is difficult to carry on a discussion with a parrot whose sole contribution to the argument is the continuous chatter, over and over again of 'Yer a liar.'"

However, the strain of struggle must have momentarily dizzied the Ontario, for at its height, the paper published, what surely is one of the most astounding pieces of false reporting in history: The scare news of a Zeppelin raid — over Edmonton.

Gleefully, The Intelligencer waded in for butchery:

"The Fiction Factory has gone entirely loco Apparently. Not satisfied with throwing a scare into people some months ago by scaring our Catholic citizens of planning a massacre of Protestants, the Lauzierite organ last evening printed as news an imaginary tale of a Hun Zeppelin raid on Edmonton with great destruction and loss of life . . . Exaggerated reports of election meetings and enthusiasm which does not exist must also be judged by the same standard of unreliability . . ."

The 1917 election was the Jutland of the journalistic dreadnoughts.

There was another election in 1921. But the bile was banished from the columns of both local dailies.

The world had changed and economics more and more were calling the tune, resulting, among other things in newspaper mergers.

Just ahead was one such combination — The Ontario with its old foe The Intelligencer. The marriage still is being put to bed every night.

LOOKING BACK . . .

Electricity was first turned on in Belleville in the year 1885. In 1919 Finkle Electric opened their doors for business In the electrical installation and maintenance field and since that time have been proud to play a small part in the electrical development of this community.

It dates back to the year 1835 when the pharmacy was founded by the pioneer physician Dr. R. Holden. At that time, it was located at the corner of Front Street and Victoria Avenue, where National Billiards Hall now stands.

In 1871, the store was purchased by Albert L. Geen and now, nearly a century later, it is still operated by his descendents. Mr. Albert Geen, pharmacist, was also widely known as Reverend Geen, since he was an ordained minister of the Anglican diocese of Ontario.

Percival W. Geen purchased the business from his father in 1936. Mr. Geen's sincere feeling for the business has done much to instill goodwill in customers and staff alike. Active and outstanding in business and community affairs; Mr. Geen at the age of 81 sparks enthusiasm in the store's operation and is still registered with the Ontario College of Pharmacy.

Alwyn S. F. Geen, son of Percival, received his Pharmaceutical Diploma before the outbreak of World War II and after serving overseas with the Airforce, returned to Belleville. In 1945, the business was incorporated as a company.

A loyal and conscientious staff has been the key to success for Geen's Pharmacy. Mr. Lyle A. Twiddy, pharmacist, has been with the firm for over 26 years. Mrs. Anna Foley, Head Cosmetician has been devoted for over 27 years. Mr. Walter Symons, Head of the Stock Department, has contributed 15 years of service. Mrs. Henrietta Kelly, Assistant Stock Clerk, Mrs. Marie Thibault, Bookkeeper, Mrs. Edie Easton, Cashier Clerk, and Mrs. Geraldine Wensley, Cashier Clerk. These outstanding employees have done much for the reputation of a fine drug store.

SYNOPSIS

GOLD MINING ACT OF 1864,

27 and 28 Vic. Chap. 9. and the

Gold Mining Amendment Act 1865,

29 Vic. Chap. 9.

THE Gold Mining Act of 1864 provides that Governor in Council may erect Gold Mining Divisions.

Governor may appoint Officers for Divisions.

Two Divisions erected in Lower Canada:—"Chaudiere Gold Mining Division," bounded South, East, and West by the Seigniories of Beauce, Vaudreuil, and St. Francis, and North by the Province of Canada. "Megantic Gold Mining Division," bounded by Lots, Townships, and Seigniories, Nos. 1 to 7 inclusive, and Nos. 20 to 25 inclusive, and Seigniory of Metgermette.

One Division erected in Upper Canada by Proclamation, 31st March, 1866:—"Cariboo Gold Mining Division," commencing on the Township of Barrie, Clarendon, Pakenham, Miller and North and South Canonto, in the County of Lanark, the Township in the County of Renfrew, situated north of the Townships of Miller and Pakenham, the Townships in the County of Addington, the Townships in the County of Hastings and Barrie, the Township in the County of Peterborough, the Townships in the County of Victoria, Thurlow, Tyendinaga, the Township of Belleville, and Town Plot in the County of Hastings, and Township situated north of the Township of Belleville, Alfred Argyle Campbell, Esq., of Belleville Inspector.

No person to mine without a license.

Two kinds of licenses, one "Crown Lands Gold License," for mining lands, for unsold Crown Lands, and the other "Private Lands Gold License," at per month, for private lands, or lands first obtaining consent of the proprietor.

Private Lands Gold Licensee may stake out and work claim on unsold Crown Lands as follows:

ALLUVIAL MINES.

On a river or large creek, 30 feet front by 80 from the water's edge. In small creeks, 40 by 80 from centre of the stream. In gully, 60 feet along course, and from hill to hill. In ravine, 100 feet by 80. In dry diggings, 100 feet square. If no defined course may grant larger claim. In bed or river subject to discretion and position of Agent.

QUARTZ MINES.

To each miner, 100 feet along lead by 100 on each side from the centre of the lead. For companies, 20 feet additional along lead for every additional member, not to exceed 200 feet altogether.

Claims to be numbered by the officer, and to be laid out in quadrilateral and rectangular shapes, horizontal, and to conform to the course of the lead, as far as practicable.

Crown lands licences to work continuously and renew licence.

No person to occupy more than one claim on Crown Lands at one time.

Discovery entitled to free licence for one year in manner provided by Act.

Party wishing to lease between claims on Crown Lands, party removing party wall to construct a new mode of working claims.

Crown Lands licencees not to cause damage to others.

Registration of claim on Crown Lands temporarily suspended, pending Order in Council. Private claims to be marked.

Penalty provided for removal of stakes on claims.

All licencees to make returns.

Quartz crushing machines to be licensed. Fee $6 per month. Agent to keep and return licences.

Act extends to parties mining near Gold Mining Districts.

Sale of liquor prohibited except under licence, annually, by Agent.

Provisions made for appointment of constables and protection of persons and property.

Persons working under Gold Mining Patents in force when proclaimed, may finish, &c., only one such patentee, viz.: for the Seigniory of Beauce. Vested rights under the Gold Mining Act of 1862 preserved, and royalty since commuted to five under Gold Mining Act.

Governor in Council may make regulations.

Officers may convict on view.

THE GOLD MINING AMENDMENT ACT OF 1865.

Repeals clause in Gold Mining Act of 1864, providing that no licence fee shall be charged for exploring for gold until the precious metals is discovered.

Enacts that Tavern licence provisions in previous Act may be applied to territory covered by Mining Patents.

Fee for Gold Mining Licence for Crown Lands, or Private Gold Mining Division may be determined by Order in Council.

INFERIOR METALS.

INFERIOR METALS AND SALE OF MINERAL LANDS.

The following are the Regulations:—

DEPARTMENT OF CROWN LANDS.

Ottawa, 13th July, 1866.

REGULATIONS for the sale of Mineral Lands, approved by His Excellency the Governor General in Council.

INFERIOR METALS.

1. That each regular mining tract as numbered, territory shall consist of two hundred or five hundred acres, and no more.

2. That the dimensions of each regular mining tract of four hundred acres be forty chains in front by one hundred chains in depth, and of two hundred acres be forty chains square, in the same proportion. The bearings of the corners to be true North and South, and East and West respectively, in the unorganized territories of Upper Canada, and in the Seigniories of Lower Canada, as the case may be.

3. That mining tracts bordering upon lakes and rivers have their fronts measured upon such waters, and shall be subject in all cases to the general mining regulations applicable thereto, and that mining tracts, as aforesaid, shall have a mean depth of one hundred chains, or such depth as may be found to contain the full area of one of the tracts of land above described, bounded by straight lines, in accordance with the above mentioned bearings.

4. That mining tracts in the unorganized territory shall be surveyed by a Provincial Land Surveyor, who shall be sworn to the faithful discharge of his duties previous to the survey (to be administered by any Justice of the Peace in the territory) at the cost of the applicants, who shall be required to furnish with their application the surveyor's fees, field notes, and plans of survey, and to comply in all things with the foregoing regulations, and to the satisfaction of the Department, and pay the price of one dollar per acre, into the Department of Crown Lands at the time of making application.

5. That in surveyed townships, lots presenting indications of mineral may be sold on the above conditions, but not less than one dollar per acre in any township, and at the same price in unsurveyed tracts in the territory, and as it is more than one dollar per acre.

6. That mining lots in surveyed townships be sold by the local agents for cash, but all lands in unsurveyed territory shall be sold by the Department.

7. The above regulations do not apply to mines of gold and silver.

GOLD AND SILVER.

8. That in selling the lands in the gold mining districts the department is to discriminate as far as practicable between purchasers for actual settlement, home use, and those for mining or speculative purposes; selling to the former for the present price and terms (subject to an increase to $3 an acre, under the order of 8th August, 1866, when actually worked for gold), and to the latter for one dollar an acre, cash.

9. That in all Letters Patent for lands, the clause reserving the right of gold and silver be omitted.

10. All previous regulations inconsistent with the above are cancelled.

When the Bay Bridge Was A Long Bridge

The present bay bridge and causeway route to Rossmore at one time was a long series of truss spans stretching all the way across the Bay of Quinte. Here the original structure is seen in an early photograph. Bridge tolls were removed in 1921.

Tolls on Bay Bridge Annoyance to Public Until City Takeover

It was a happy day for the residents of Belleville and of the two counties of Hastings and Prince Edward when back in 1381 the bridge across the Bay of Quinte was completed and opened for traffic.

True, the new bridge with its numerous truss spans was a tall structure with travellers having to pay each time across, but it was a tremendous improvement over the slow ferry service on which residents had been dependent.

The first public ferry over the bay had been established in 1858, the early ferries being operated by horse walking the treadmill or by sail. Then in 1878 a licence was granted for the operation of a steam ferry.

It wasn't until 1887 that a group of Belleville area businessmen formed what was known as the Bay of Quinte Bridge Company and set about to raise funds for the construction of a bridge. The company was capitalized for $150,000 to be raised by the sale of 1,500 shares at $100 a share.

And they apparently had a fair measure of success in raising the necessary funds, for the new bridge was completed four years later — in 1381.

The first directors of the bridge company were well-known businessmen of the day and included Thomas Ritchie, Henry Corby, James Brown, George S. Tickell, Uriah Thompson, Charles F. Smith and William Anderson who held the charter for the operation of the steam ferry.

Bridge directors were given the right to set bridge tolls — providing they didn't go over a specified rate.

The rate was five cents walking adults with children under six accompanied by parents getting a free walk.

A single horse and wagon was charged 10 cents with five cents for each added horse. A horse and rider was 10 cents.

The charge for a wheelbarrow and its attendant was five cents and there was special declining rate for herds of cattle being driven across the bridge.

But as the years passed there was agitation for the tolls to be lifted and Belleville Fair directors even felt the tolls were cutting attendance at their annual exhibition.

In 1890 the bridge was purchased by the city, the county and the government and the following years tolls were eventually lifted.

Originally the Bay bridge was a continuous truss span all the way across.

In the 1930s after the provincial government took the bridge over most of the bridge trusses were removed in favor of a rock causeway leaving openings for bay currents at the north near the Belleville shore and also at Rossmore, where the swing bridge section is situated.

That is the way the bridge remains today but modern day motor traffic and the increasing popularity of boating is making the swing structure obsolete.

Currently there is a request that the old bridge be replaced by a high level structure similar to that now nearing completion at Deseronto.

This would allow free passage of boats without the frequent tie-ups for motor traffic.

The proposed bridge will no doubt eventually come but Ontario highways department officials feel the old present structure has still a few more years of life.

This May Be Our Last Centennial

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. Hugh L. Keenleyside says that unless man learns to control his own stupidity and malevolence there will not be any Canadians to celebrate a second centennial.

Dr. Keenleyside, co-chairman of British Columbia Hydro and Power Authority, says the chances "are certainly more than even that 100 years from now Canada—and the rest of the world—will be a barren desolation."

The former United Nations official and Canadian diplomat made the comments in a written reply to a question seeking his predictions of the Canada of 2067.

"The outstanding fact of our history is that among all the higher forms of life only human beings have been engaged in a constant and determined effort to exterminate their own kind."

Given this "history of constant warfare" and the existence of weapons of massive destruction, "the great probability is that by 2067 humanity will have perished from its own stupidity and continuing malevolence."

Should the world survive, he said, the Canada of 2067 should be a nation of enormous material prosperity but with some severe social problems.

The country should have a population of about 60,000,000 which, in common with other nations, will be marked by a mixture of races resulting from large-scale world migration.

Physical labor will have disappeared and Canadians will live in megalopolic concentrations, huge sprawling urban areas which will encompass the areas from Vancouver to San Diego, Calif., and from Trois-Rivieres, Que., to Niagara Falls, Ont.

Dr. Keenleyside predicted that Canadians will have guaranteed basic incomes, reduced hours of work and more extensive and better medical and psychiatric care.

The acute problems will include "a great proliferation in the scope and severity of police and other state controls," tremendous pressure on individuals to conform and the need to cope with life that will have become increasingly complex.

The Toronto-born hydro executive is a former high-ranking member of Canada's diplomatic corps, former deputy minister of resources, and one-time director - general of the UN Technical Assistance Administrations.

The first opportunity for Belleville residents to take their money out of their mattresses came in 1847 when the Bank of Montreal was opened on the north side of Victoria Avenue under the management of Phillip Ham.

Belleville's first bank was followed by the Canadian Bank of Commerce in 1878 and the Dominion Bank of Canada in 1880. The Royal Bank of Canada, which was not established until 1869, did not come to Belleville until 1919.

In Early Days, Prairie Women Undertook Many Different Jobs

RED DEER, Alta. (CP)—The Prairie settler at the turn of the century had to be his own builder, fireman and veterinarian.

His wife was sometimes hostess and sometimes farm hand in a land where neighbors had to help each other or give up.

There's a poster in the Confederation train that advertises land free for homesteading in Canada. Andrew and Mary Woima, natives of Finland, were living in Montana when they heard the same news. Red Deer archives tell what they found when they arrived with four small daughters early in 1901.

A 25-mile drive with hired horses through heavy snow brought them to their homestead, and to temporary shelter with friends?—in a one-room, sod-covered cabin that already housed a family of six.

Eight years later they had a permanent frame house, but first came a tar-paper cabin of their own, and then a log house.

Fish was their main food for the first year. Fruit, even dried fruit, was a luxury, and sugar was scarce.

The first grain was sawed by hand, tied into bundles with straw, and threshed with a wooden flail. Mr. Woima did his own experimenting with small plots of different wheat varieties.

Money was scarce, and the butter Mrs. Woima sent into Red Deer might remain unsold at five cents a pound. The men in the area took winter jobs on railway construction or in British Columbia mines.

While her husband was away one winter, Mrs. Woima was tending a sick horse with the help of neighbors and the older children. One of them, Mrs. Ernest Kimm, later recalled how a younger child ran to the barn and whispered that the house was on fire.

"Everybody dashed out to see fire showing through the roof," she said. "The horse was forgotten, and the men, using snow and water, managed to put out the fire."

One of the small children had been playing with a candle.

"When the excitement was over, the offender was found hiding under the sewing machine. In the meantime, the sick horse died."

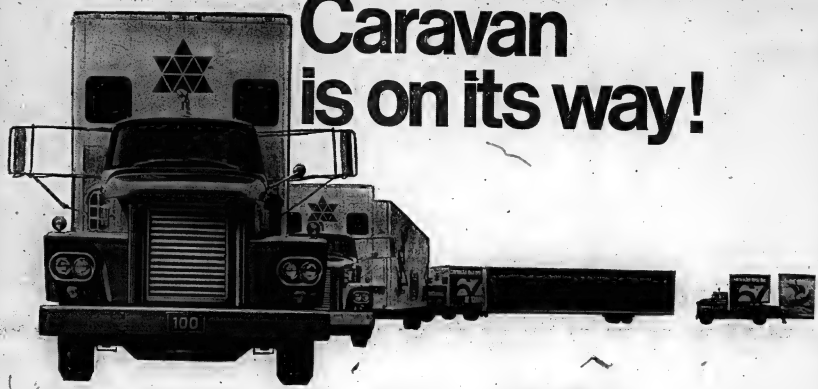
For Mrs. Woima, homesteading meant mending the family shoes, darning sweaters and stockings, and baking 10 or 12 loaves of bread three times a week.

But it also meant friends dropping in for coffee, and walking to the neighbors' for a few hours' chat.

When Mr. Woima died in 1914, his widow was left with 10 children, the youngest 3½ months old.

That spring, neighbors brought their implements and put in the crop for her. With her second daughter, Lempie, she kept the farm producing for six years until the boys were old enough to take over.

She fixed fences, made hay, sawed fir wood and milked 20 cows.



Jennie, the oldest daughter, "worked out" and saved money to buy an organ. Four children could play on it at once while another pedalled, and Mrs. Woima said that as long as she could hear music she could work outside without worrying.

Mrs. Kimm later recalled one of the songs played on it. Popular around 1914, it began:

My house, it is built of the natural sod,
The walls were erected according to Hod,
According to Hod,
The roof, it is flat and so very plain;
And I always get wet when it happens to rain.

Hurray for each county, the land is so fine,
The home of the bachelor, the bedbug and flea,
You may sing of its praises and that of its fame,
A starving to death on a government claim.

The Confederation Caravan is on its way!

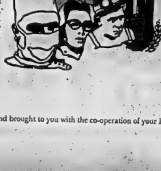
It arrives in 1 week July 5 at Zwick's Island

1. In the first car you see "The Land is Born." You find out how the ice age shaped the land . . . how the earliest Canadian Indians lived . . . and hear the sounds of life that existed thousands of years ago.

2. The second car takes you back to the discovery of Canada. You become an explorer in a canoe trading with Indians for furs, beads, axes . . . you see copies of the original maps of Canada . . . and you compare the old tools of exploration with our own modern methods of surveying.

3. What was it really like to be a settler in early Canada? Here's where you find out! You visit a French Canadian tailor shop of 1730 . . . walk along a street and hear the sounds of horses and jingling bridles . . . enter an English Canadian tavern of 1830 with people singing and glasses clinking . . . then see a gallery of pictures showing the life of Canadian pioneers coast to coast.

4. In the fifth car, you begin to feel some of the confusion of early settlement life . . . separate colonies existing without significant cultural, economic or political ties.



Then, Confederation. At last this young country could begin to develop and advance as a strong new nation.

1867 | 1967

5. The fifth car shows the enormous and exciting progress in Canada in the last quarter of the 19th century. You share the excitement as Canada becomes a continent bordered by three oceans . . . live through the Riel Rebellion . . . the completion of the rail line to the Pacific . . . the Klondyke rush . . . the often stormy elections of the five Prime Ministers of those times. Canada was growing up.

6. With the coming of the twentieth century—the Boer War—a flood of immigrants from eastern Europe—and you experience the frightening din of trench warfare as seen from a dugout in World War I. The twenties roar in with flappers, peep shows, player pianos and a Mack Sennet movie. Suddenly, the stock crash—the bleakness of the thirties ending. In 1939, with newspapers proclaiming "Canada at War with Germany."

7. The second World War—Canada begins producing warplanes, tanks and ships while her heroes fight and die abroad. Prime Minister Mackenzie King announces the war's end. Now Canadians turn anew to science, politics, medicine, industry, the arts and international affairs. Our achievements in these fields give every indication that our greatest era is about to begin . . .

Get ready! Canada's coming to you!

Railroad Was Built In New Way

HALIFAX (CP)—Sir Sandford Fleming threw a picnic party 100 years ago May 31 and it would have been a washout because of the rain but for a convenient railway culvert.

The party was to celebrate the opening of the Truro-to-Pictou Landing section of the Nova Scotia Railway. The fact that it was held in a culvert was perhaps fitting because the contract had been built by Fleming at a radically new approach to railway construction.

The 64 miles of track between Halifax and Truro were opened in 1858 but money ran out before the line could be extended.

However, Dr. Charles Tupper, then premier of Nova Scotia and later knighted for his role in Confederation, wanted the line put through to Pictou Landing, 46 miles from Truro on Nova Scotia's north shore, as part of a general network of lines within the province.

Tenders were called and work was started in 1864. The contractors, many of them professional men and small merchants in Pictou County, had no idea what they were getting into. Work bogged down and finally ground to a halt the following year.

At this point entered Fleming, the Scottish-born engineer and railway builder who was later to become famed as the father of standard time.

Fleming, who had been chief engineer of the Ontario, Simcoe and Huron railway in Upper Canada, submitted a bid of $2,118,500 and undertook to complete the Nova Scotia Railway by May 31, 1867.

His bid was eight per cent below the original tenders and the government accepted it on the advice of Alex Mitchell, the provincial engineer.

One of the problems facing construction crews was a series of deep ravines in the Gordon Summit area midway between Truro and Pictou Landing.

The normal procedure would have been to build iron bridges across them, but Fleming came up with a new approach. He imported two huge machines known as Great American Excavators, a primitive type of steam shovel, and filled in the ravines — much faster and cheaper than trying to bridge them.

Culverts were constructed to carry water beneath the fill, and one of these culverts is one of those culverts that Fleming held his opening day picnic May 31, 1867, one month before Confederation.

The line had several other distinctive features. It utilized the first all-steel rails in Eastern Canada and Fleming invented a new kind of fastener for the tracks. It was the first to employ bridges all of iron, dispensing with the wooden trestles common on earlier roads.

The drainage and substructure were such that parts are still in use with little change today.

The new section long desired by Tupper did not remain the property of the Nova Scotia government for long, however. The Nova Scotia Railway was taken over by the federal public works department July 1, 1867, as one of the terms of Confederation and eventually became a part of the Inter-Colonial line and later the CNR.

Fleming went on to become engineer-in-chief of the CPR and was the first to demonstrate the practicability of the route through the Kicking Horse, Eagle and Rogers passes in the Rockies.

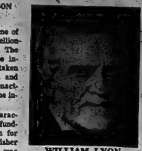
MacKenzie's Left Wing Rebellion of 1837 Was Comic Opera Act in Belleville

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Belleville made the scene of the 1837 Mackenzie Rebellion with a comic opera act. The affair, staged as a farce involving incidents of mistaken identity, confused signals and general confusion, was enacted with a real talent for the ridiculous.

Consider this cast of characters: an earnest church functionary who was mistaken for a rebel agitator; a publisher whose printing plant was wrecked because a butter-fingered compositor made a typographical error; a bungering (and probably tipsy) officer who tripped over a bayonet in his front hall to become the war's only casualty and a dedicated pacifist who donned cavalry uniform and instantly regretted it.



In 1837, William Lyon MacKenzie led a radical left-wing faction of the Liberal party in open revolt against the Family Compact in Upper Canada. The Tory favorites who sat in the Governor's Council and enjoyed the spoils of power had no love for the rabble crew that wanted to introduce that "American abomination" democracy, into British North America.

As MacKenzie made his demands for reform and those in power shouted him down with cries of "treason!" feelings rose to fever pitch in Belleville.

The Governor called out the Hastings Militia and patriotic inhabitants rushed to Belleville to take their posts. Boisterous youths from remote farms tasted town life for the first time. At night, dandified in their British red coats, they loitered on street corners and imbibed too much at the numerous taverns.

Watchful mothers shooed their daughters into the house at nightfall and locked the doors. Careful shopkeepers barricaded their windows against military looters. The natives were restless and the stage was set for hysteria.

Against this background, John O'Carroll, grocery merchant on Front St., devoutly launched his fund-raising appeal for the new St. Michael's Church. O'Carroll, as parish secretary, sat behind his shuttered windows each night, laboriously penning his request for money to the Roman Catholics of the district. Each morning he stuffed the nearest mailbox with his campaign literature.

Soon the rumor spread that he was distributing rebel propaganda.

A crowd of soldiers gathered outside O'Carroll's store, smashed in their way in, threw merchandise into the street and carried off a large part of the stock. The unfortunate O'Carroll was bundled off to Fort Henry for eight weeks and forced to sell his business at a loss.

In the crowd that gathered to watch the looters were two teen-aged boys, one of them an Intelligencer printer's apprentice, Mackenzie Bowell, who grew up to become Prime Minister of Canada. The other was A. T. Petrie, later an alderman. In 1905 the two men combined to present testimony of O'Carroll's innocence to the Premier of Ontario. O'Carroll's two aged daughters received $200 each from an apologetic government.

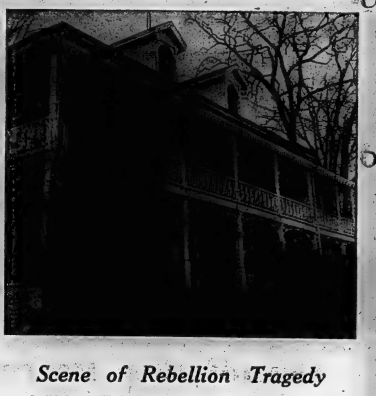
Another victim of the militia's mixture of patriotic and notable spirits was Samuel Hart, publisher of The Plain Speaker, a newspaper with reform sympathies. One day a printer made a common enough error — he replaced the royal coat of arms at the head of a proclamation with another engraving. His mistake was corrected before many copies were printed, but it was interpreted as a calculated insult.

The next evening The Plain Speaker printing shop was wrecked. The foreman, James Gardiner, recorded the event in his diary:

"The super-loyal (among them some of the Militia) attacked the printing office and threw much of the type into the street. The Loyalists engaged in this destruction stole a few things, among them a cloak and a pair of gloves of mine. The cloak was supposed to have been carried to the "then rear of the county."

Fear of an American takeover has been a perennial theme in Canadian history. During Rebellion years, militia officers slept with one ear cocked for the expected invasion alarm. One night, thanks to militiamen who got their signals crossed, it came.

Troops guarding prisoners in a tavern mistook a tolling fire-bell as a signal that Reformers were attacking the tavern to free the prisoners. They sounded a warning that the townspeople, in their turn, mistook for the general invasion alarm.



Troops rushed to waken Capt. John McNabb, sleeping in his new stone house half way up Bridge St. West hill. Roused by the commotion in his front hall, the captain raced downstairs. In the dim light he tripped and fell on the bayonet of a militiaman who was running up to meet him. The captain died 24 hours later of a deep abdominal wound. With black arm bands, muffled drums and firing party, the Hastings Militia turned out to bury Belleville's only Rebellion casualty with full military honors.

The military career of one Lieut. Farley of a hastily organized cavalry unit had a happier outcome. A member of a prominent Quaker family and a dedicated pacifist, young Farley temporarily forgot his principles when revolt threatened and ran off with his horse to enlist.

By the time he was given his first military assignment, Farley was torn with conflict between his duties to God and to the state. He was ordered to carry a message to Cobourg directing troops of that area to Toronto to engage the rebels at Montgomery's Tavern. As a Quaker he could take no part in precipitating bloodshed. He solved his dilemma with pioneer ingenuity.

As soon as he had ridden out of sight of town, Farley dismounted, drew the nails from one horseshoe and led his mount by the bridle until he came to the first blacksmith's shop. There he explained that his horse had cast a shoe and waited patiently until the smith had replaced it. Once out of sight of the shop he repeated the performance. Leaving his horse and stopping at every smithy along the way, Farley made it to Cobourg in a little over a week. His dispatch was received too late to make mustering of the troops feasible and Farley's conscience remained untroubled. As soon as he returned to Belleville he negotiated an honorable discharge.

With Mackenzie's flight to the United States the rebellion excitement gradually petered out. The militia was demobilized and the political prisoners released. Belleville forgot its role in the Rebellion, but the battle between Grit and Tory left a legacy of bitterness and deep scars.

EDUCATION is the KEY to PROGRESS

but not everyone can attend a university nor does everyone need to attend a university.

Throughout history, the one meaningful key to man's progress has been his absorption of knowledge. Both science and industry have forged ahead only as a result of becoming better-educated . . . learning new things and new processes that ensure the continued progress of mankind's endeavors.

The educated person climbs the ladder of success, achieves better-than-average earnings and enjoys living conditions for him and his family that surpass those of less educated citizens. Are you one of these?

If, you do not yet know what your vocation is going to be . . . if you know how, or are willing to learn how to study . . . if you would like to begin to earn as soon as possible . . . perhaps to finance your way to University . . . or even to just better understand what is going on in the world around you today . . . a less-than-one-year diploma course at Business College offers you far more leverage for prying loose a good job than any similar amount of time any at any other type of training.

The door to a better job, greater earnings and fulfillment of your aspirations remains open. Canada Gave Ice Hockey and Lacrosse to World Sports

Canada's preferences is for participant games. Youth chooses the combative or highly competitive ones while the middle-aged and elderly people are satisfied with games that call for technique and precise execution without requiring brawn or swift action.

Canadians have invented games that have spread to all parts of the world. They have taken sports from elsewhere and changed them to conform with their own ideas.

Lacrosse, made the national game by legislative ruling, originated in Canada but has lost some popularity. It is now being taken up in the schools of the country. It has been taken up by other countries which have lifted it to high favor.

Canadians pioneered ice hockey — McGill University students took the crude form about 80 years ago and developed it into a game played indoors and outdoors in other lands.

The first recorded match of lacrosse is that played between teams of Iroquois and Algonquin Indians in September, 1834. The game was not standardized until the 1860's. The Mann Cup emblematic of the national championship, is lacrosse's most treasured trophy.

Swimming is something a Canadian youth and girl never forgets. Rowing is one of the country's great favorites. Canada has long been the home of remarkable oarsmen. Internationally the skiers in Canada are the Canadiens and win first prize."

Canada has been the home of some of the fastest ice skaters; it has produced record-making skiers and jumpers. It has had some of the world's best figure skaters and curlers. It was the real home for dog-sled racing and has produced many topflight snowshoe racers.

Canadians are adept at cricket, rugby, soccer and their own type of football. Indirectly, they are responsible for American football since McGill U. introduced rugby to the USA over 75 years ago.

American college of that era took McGill's presentation blended it with soccer and original ideas, and the college and pro football south of the border has been the result.

Badminton and table tennis are in high favor here. Canadians love their lawn bowling in the summer — and curling in the winter. They have cricket billiard players and stars at bowling. Some 'topnotch basketball teams have operated here. The "Grads" of Edmonton, a women's aggregation, was rated for a decade, among the greatest in the world.

The late Lionel Conacher is considered to have been the greatest athlete Canada ever produced. He was voted the "best in 50 years at the end of 1950. He was a great rugby player, punter and runner; a superb lacrosse performer. He played baseball with the Toronto Maple Leafs, He was a hockey star with the Chicago Black Hawks and the Montreal Maroons. He was a fine boxer.

Hockey has produced many sports idols in Canada, including the late Howie Morenz, Maurice Richard, Gordie Howe, Bobby Hull, among others.

The country claims many renowned track and field stars both men and women. Men like Robert Kerr and Percy Williams, Olympic champions at sprinting; distance runners like the great Phil Edwards who competed in three Olympics; Frank Lukeman, Bobby Kew, William Sherring, a marathon champion, George Robertson, and others won international fame. Then there were Ethel Catherwood Olympic High Jump champion, and the famous Bobby Rosenfeld who also excelled at ice hockey, speed skating, basketball, softball and jumping and who was voted the country's woman athlete of the half century.

The first known Canadian track and field meet was held over a four-day period, Sept. 11-14, 1838, three years before the formation of the Montreal Olympic Club. The meet was held four miles north of Toronto and more than 600 competed. Prizes were trophies. Among the winners were farmers, tailors, and army personnel.

Canada provides the greatest hunting and fishing areas on the North American continent. Its lakes number in the thousands and each seems to teem with fish of almost every fresh water species. Wild game is found in generous supply throughout the country. Its lands are pounded by the feet of deer, moose, elk and bear. Migratory birds breed in the northern reaches of the country and fly from there to the United States and often to Latin and South America.

Canadians like spectator sports. They attend races for thoroughbreds and harness horses. They watch football, cricket, softball and baseball games. They crowd river banks and lake shores whenever regattas are held. They patronize rodeos and many indoor shows.

Canada was a land of sports before people south of the border were doing little more than pitching horseshoes. English soldiers coming here after 1763 introduced many varieties. Settlers were too busy hewing homes out of the forest to indulge in games but the military had plenty of time on its hands.

Cricket matches between Toronto and Hamilton were played in 1835 Sherbrooks organized a club in 1836. Montreal also had cricket teams in the 1830's. The first match between the United States and Canada was played in Montreal in 1842. In those days, matches between teams in cities widely separated were few.

The Montreal Curling Club was formed in 1807, with the first inter-city match played in 1835 between Montreal and Quebec, the game being held at Three Rivers midway between the two large towns. Quebec won.

The next sport in age is snowshoeing. Just when it began is not known but the Montreal Snowshoe Club was organized in 1840. The modern snowshoe was devised by Canadian Indians.

It has not been established when football (soccer) was introduced in Canada, but the pioneer organization the Montreal Football Club was formed in 1868. Whether play was at soccer or rugby is not known.

Golf made its how in Canada in the 1870s — or earlier — by officers of ships sailing from England and Scotland. These men brought their golf clubs and balls and built courses both in Montreal and Quebec. On November 4th, 1873, a group of original players formed the Montreal Golf Club since renamed Royal Montreal Golf Club.

Canada has two distinctions in horse racing on the North American continent. It continues to stage the oldest race also the oldest stakes race of continuous existence. Both were named the King's Plate. The race originated in Quebec, the other the present Queen's Plate in Ontario. From its first running in 1860 until 1901 it was known as the Queen's Plate. It came about when the Prince Consort of England pleaded with Canadians for intensified breeding to improve their horses.

Queen Victoria donated a plate and fifty guineas for the winner of a race which Canadians named in her honor. It was changed to King's Plate when Edward succeeded his mother on the British throne. With the coronation of Queen Elizabeth II in 1953, it was again called the Queen's Plate.

Many other famous stakes and races are now held every year.

Canadians pioneered sports on the North American continent. They have kept the pace through the years with the inventive, tinkering and improving Yankees. Canada has not been able to produce star for star with the Americans but when it is recalled that Canada has some 20 million people as compared to 180 million for the United States, it is obvious that Canadians have performed magnificently in the field of athletics.

Nephew Never Knew What Sir John Drank

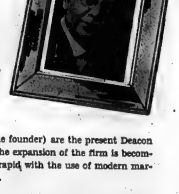
WHITE ROCK, B.C. (CP)— When Sir John A. Macdonald came to dinner he got drunk, says Hugh Angus McDonald, 87, a nephew of Canada's first prime minister.

Recalling his boyhood days on a family farm near Cobourg, Ont., the retired CPR engineer said there was always quite a party at home when Sir John, heroes and witty uncle visited.

Mr. McDonald said he never knew what his father and Sir John A. drank at these parties.

"I only know I and my brothers were sent into town every two weeks with an empty five-gallon Jimmy-John in the wagon and came back with a full one. It cost 45 cents a gallon, but I don't know what it was.

"I can't remember sitting down to a meal in our house when there wasn't a decanter on the table in front of me.



"It was all around us, but only one brother of mine (Neil) ever touched a drop and then only very little, and he lived to be 104."

Mr. McDonald, interviewed in his home at this seashore community 30 miles south of Vancouver, said the proper spelling of his name is MacDonald, not Macdonald as his famous uncle's name is spelled. He himself changed his own name to McDonald.

He also said Sir John was not the illegitimate Alexander John, not John Alexander, that Sir John A. didn't like the name Alexander, so he switched them around.

Grandfather Deacon really started something in 1887...

Of course, he didn't know he had! He also didn't know he would eventually be a grandfather. All he knew was that many of his customers in his retail shop wanted good quality white shirts and couldn't get them.

So William Deacon, being a good business man, filled the demand by manufacturing his own supply of white shirts.

It took time, but the word spread, and by 1903 he had sufficient customers to enable him to close his shop, and launch the Deacon Shirt Factory, aided by his brother Fred S. Deacon. That's how Deacon Brothers started.

Then in 1924 along came 'Young Fred' (Fred H. Deacon) followed thirteen years later by John W. Between them, these Deacon Brothers built up the business by enlarging it into the sportwear field. During the early 30's an exclusive association was made for the use of famous Grenfell cloth. This was made into jackets, parkas and rainwear, and from its inception was extremely popular. Equally so where the sport shirts made from Viyella and Deacon Brothers association with both these firms continues to this day.

Time as usual, moved on, and in 1961 another generation took over. Fred B. Deacon, ably aided and abetted by brothers Don G. and Eric J. (all grandsons of the founder) are the present Deacon Brothers, and the expansion of the firm is becoming even more rapid with the use of modern marketing methods.

So when you see the well-known "Double-Headed Deacon" trade mark, remember that it's a mark that represents a firm known in Belleville and in Canada for over 80 years. That's quite a time. Incidentally, we've no intention of changing the mark now that there are three brothers instead of two. After all, who knows how many Deacon Brothers there might be in another three generations.

Fighting Editors Recognize Rights of Pigs to Wander Streets

TORONTO (CP)—In the view of fighting editors a century ago, even a pig had a right to wander about the streets of the city without having to worry about being run over by a horse and buggy.

The Toronto Globe of 1866 had an item about an old sow "taking her morning constitutional along with three of her offspring." The place was the foot of Yonge Street, the city's main thoroughfare, and it appeared the sow was somewhere near the present-day site of the O'Keefe Centre.

"While crossing the street, the youngsters, unaware of their danger, were loitering behind, snuffing the sweet rubbish, when a buggy that was being driven furiously along came into violent contact with the ribs of the smallest. It was not killed, but very near it, and surely those in charge of vehicles ought to be more cautious.

"The pig has recognized rights in the use of the streets, and these being granted, it should share their common privileges. We protest against this lawless invasion of vested rights."

Bell Presented to Community

WINNIPEG (CP) — A bell used by the Winnipeg fire department for 35 years was presented as a centennial gift to a northern community because the little village had a suitable alarm.

Winnipeg is situated on the Red River. The village that got the 30-pound bell is on another Red River.

It's called Arctic Red River and it's a community of 100 persons at the junction of the Mackenzie and Arctic Red rivers 1,300 miles northwest of Edmonton.

Winnipeg decided to make the gift after hearing that Arctic Red River was building a fire tower.

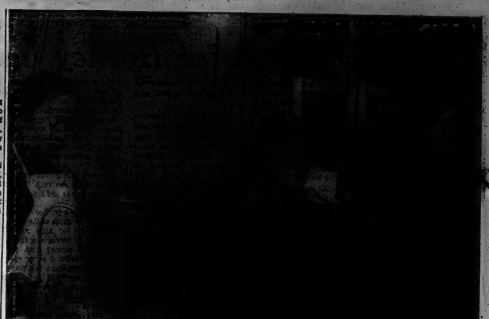
Pre-confederation Horses Moved Fast

CORNWALL, Ont. (CP) — When anyone talks about the horse-and-buggy era today he usually means a time when everything moved at a slow pace.

But Canadians who lived in pre-Confederation times didn't think that way.



An 1849 newspaper report had this item:

"The celebrated mare Fly, the property of Andrew Elliott Esq., was driven yesterday from Cornwall to Montreal, a distance of 90 miles, in eight hours and 35 minutes, including two hours stoppage, which is deducted from the time will show an average rate of travelling of over 15 m.p.h. - a feat totally unprecedented in the annals of Canadian equestrian travel."

What's more, Fly's owner said the horse was ready to return in the same time the following day.

City First to Get Dentist

Here's something to think about next time the dentist says "open wide" — 1967 marks the 100th year of continuous dental practice in Belleville. The record is unique in Canada and even more remarkable is the collection of pictures, instruments and equipment owned by Dr. Jack Marshall that documents the story.

The area along Highway 2 between Cornwall and Cobourg is the cradle of dentistry in Ontario, Dr. Marshall says. Before Confederation, itinerant American dentists travelled the heavily settled southeastern part of the province, crossing the St. Lawrence at Cornwall or Prescott and returning to the United States by steamer from Cobourg. They carried their equipment by horse and buggy and worked for a day or two at a time at any settlement where their services were in demand.

In the summer of 1867, a Dr. G. V. N. Relyea, holder of an American degree in dentistry, travelled the route looking for a community in which to set up permanent practice. He chose Belleville and began operations late in the fall by securing the endorsement of the six local doctors for his painless extraction method using nitrous oxide gas.

After five years in Belleville, Dr. Relyea sold his practice to Dr. S. G. Gilbert, one of the first licensed dentists in Ontario and a graduate of the Royal College of Dental Surgeons, Toronto. J. A. Marshall entered the picture in 1886 when he bought the practice.

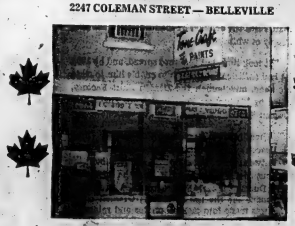
He was a school teacher in Madoc, married and with a family when he was persuaded by a brother in the profession to go back to school to study dentistry. His office was taken over by his son Dr. C. A. Marshall, who graduated in 1895. His grandson, an orthodontist, graduated in 1929 and is still practising.

Although Toronto had a dental college, until 1900 most men took the apprenticeship route to a dental licence. Early practitioners, as some of Dr. J. A. Marshall's 1886 text books prove, knew as much about the teeth and jaws, their functions and diseases, as dentists do today. Lacking were refined techniques to deal with them.

Forceps, for instance, are a comparatively recent development. Extractions were made with an instrument that looked like a miniature logger's peavey used to pry the log from the jaw. The dentist placed the hook of the instrument over the aching tooth, and with a strong flip levered it out of the jaw. Stubborn roots simply broke off and were left to fester out. Jaw infections were common.

"They couldn't do much about patients with infections in those days," says Dr. Marshall. "They buried them."

Nevertheless, dentists of Dr. Relyea's era were surprisingly adept at fitting dentures in the mouths of patients with infection eroded jaw bones, as casts in Dr. Marshall's possession prove. Long before orthodontics became a separate specialty, Dr. Marshall's grandfather tried his hand at teeth straightening with successful results.



Cavities were filled with rubber stopping which lasted about six months, long enough for the patient to summon up courage for the eventual extraction. The drill was powered by a treadle worked with the dentist's foot.

Until injected anaesthetics were introduced at the time of the first world war, nitrous oxide (laughing gas) was the only pain-killer available. This the dentist manufactured himself in a gasometer, a machine resembling a still.

The equipment brought to Belleville by Dr. Relyea was used by his successors until after the turn of the century, and was preserved by the three generations of the Marshall family that inherited it. Probably the only complete set of equipment in Canada, it is now part of a centennial year display at the Dental College in Toronto.

HAPPY CENTENNIAL YEAR

Not A Car in Sight

The date when this post card picture was taken of the Belleville market is not known, but there is one thing for sure — that it was before the advent of the motor car. Only horse drawn rigs are seen and of the buildings shown, only the city hall and the Whi'e Meat Market building remain.

Market Day in 1900s Like A Country Fair

Back in the days before supermarkets, Belleville residents were greatly dependent upon the farmers' market for much of their daily supplies of fruits and vegetables.

True, the Belleville farmers' market is still operating, but nothing to the extent it was half a century ago.

The Saturday and mid-week markets were really something back in the early 1900s, with the market square taking on the aspects of a country fair.

Teams and wagons, buggies and democrats jammed the square to overflowing as farmers from the Quinte district offered fruits and vegetables in season, as well as a wide variety of other farm produce.

Butter and eggs were offered the year round while during the winter months, pork and beef by the quarter was regularly offered. Sleighloads of stovewood and big loads of hay were common.

The advent of electric refrigeration and the popularity of the modern day supermarket have now cut the one time vital need for the farmers' market.

And at the same time the huge market crowds have all but disappeared except for a few weekends during the summer.

Most Belleville residents still remember the "inside" market on the ground floor of the city hall. This vestige of the market disappeared completely only about 10 years ago, when additional space was required for municipal offices.

Now with the exception of Saturdays there is seldom a big market crowd. And during the winter the once bustling farmers market exists in name only.

For the most part the old market square is used as a metered-hitching post for auto parking.

Modern Metis Says Riel Not Rebellion Leader

SASKATOON (CP)—A modern Metis leader says Louis Riel was not the main leader in the North West Rebellion of 1885.

Prof. Howard Adams of the University of Saskatchewan suggests it was Gabriel Dumont.

Until now, he says, historians have identified Riel as leader of the Metis uprisings which began in the St. Boniface, Man., area and culminated in the 1885 rebellion.

Troops were brought from Upper Canada to put down the disturbances in what now is Saskatchewan.

Prof. Adams, himself a fighter for the Metis Indian cause, says historians make prominent and frequent mention of Dumont as Riel's deputy and leader of the fighting army but they declare Riel was the prime force in the uprising.

He argues, however, that Riel was a pacifist rather than a leader, that he was the man called in by Dumont to speak to the government on behalf of the illiterate Metis, but that Dumont was the actual leader.

Riel was hanged in Regina for his part in the rebellion. Following defeat of the rebel forces, led by Dumont at Batoche, Dumont fled to the United States. He died of natural causes.

Prof. Adams says he is restudying history with a view to putting the position of the Indians and Metis in correct perspective and plans to write at least one book on the subject.

Participation Sports Popular

Whether it was wrestling, boxing (without gloves), tug-o'war, quoits, horseshoes, tennis or bowling, almost everybody participated in pioneer days. Hockey was played on the old hospital lot on Church Street which was also used for baseball and football in the summer. The Belleville Hockey Club was founded in 1905.

Cricket, lacrosse, curling and yachting were also very popular. In fact with so many sports and so many people playing them — who were the spectators?

School Board Dates Back to 1816

First School Was Log Cabin, Textbook Was New Testament

The educational system in the Belleville area dates back to the early 1800s, when several families banded together to hire a teacher for Kelly children.

One of the first teachers was Rev. William Wright who taught in Belleville in 1805 and 1806. Although other teachers worked in the area, prior to the building of the first school, history does not record many of the names.

The first school building was a primitive log structure which stood below the present market, near the river, on Front Street. It was a one-room structure and one settler describes it as "Frankly not fit for use as a pigsty."

It is understood the building left much to be desired. A person of ordinary size could not enter without stooping — but it was a start.

In the early school days discipline was strict. "To spare the rod" meant "to spoil the child".

The only means of learning in those early days was a spelling book and probably the new testament. Salaries for teachers were low and anyone who could read and write was considered qualified.

Due to the nature of the farming economy in the area education was not considered to be of great importance.

Belleville's first school board was formed in 1816. Its first duty was to purchase a lot for a new grammar school and it was set aside for future use.

Prominent early teachers were Rev. John Attwood in the 1820s; W. K. Bland in the 1830s, and George Benjamin, founder of The Intelligencer, who also taught in the early 1830s. Mr. Bland opened the first known night school in the area in 1837.

Other schools were conducted in Belleville by a Mrs. C. Moorhead and a Miss A. Tapson in the 1830s. These were schools for girls.

In 1849 a Miss C. Booth opened a girls' school on Front Street opposite the post office. A boys' school at the corner of Front and Hotel streets was opened in the early 1840s.

Common schools remained few until the passing of the common school act in the early 1840s. Then primary education became free and compulsory and the whole system began to change.

By 1860 Belleville had five common schools, under the compulsory system. These were managed by an eighteen man board of trustees from 1850, when they were instituted, until 1871, when the system was changed.

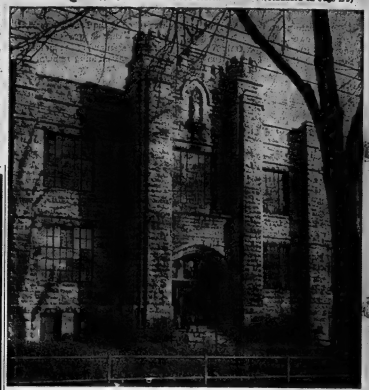
During this period two Roman Catholic separate schools were also operated on John Street.

On the site of the present Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School the trustees first erected a two room senior county grammar school. Children in Belleville were admitted free while non-residents paid three dollars quarterly.

The headmaster of this school was Alexander Burden. His annual salary, by 1860, was $1,000. His assistant, William Tilley, received $500.

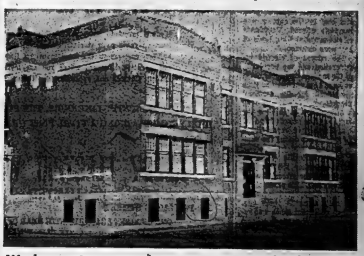
Union of the board of education occurred in 1871 and this new system serviced the city until 1937. The board was composed of 16 common school trustees, with one appointee from the separate school board.

The first chairman of the board was Rev. John Grier.



In 1874 a new brick school was built west of the first grammar school. It became known as Union School.

It was a combined public and high school but as the population increased the entire building was handed over for use by high school students. In 1877 the building was torn down and replaced with the present Collegiate Institute.



From the early staff of three teachers the school now hires more than 80 full-time staff.

YESTERDAY
Canada's Centennial provides all of us with a reason to pause and reflect on the early year's of our nation's development. The hardships, heartbreak and stalwart efforts that went into successfully welding our country together.

It took courage and determination and, thankfully, we had people with these attributes.

TODAY
The days of the oxen, the voyageurs, the wood-burners and the "two-man" top are over. Today we ponder the wonders of high-speed transportation, automation and space exploration.
We've come a long way in a relatively short period in history.

TOMORROW
The future holds forth exciting prospects for all Canadians. For our part, we plan to maintain ambitious expansion and continual modernization to meet the needs of our customers. We believe this is part of being energetic Canadians.
Why not join us in making Canada's second century of nationhood as illustrious as the first one.

ALBERT COLLEGE

Albert College in Belleville, one of the oldest residential schools in the nation, opened its doors in 1857.

The college was first known as the Belleville Seminary when it was founded by the Methodist Episcopal Church to provide a centre for higher education under the Christian influence.

In 1866 the name of the seminary was changed to the present Albert College and in 1867 the institution became a university with the power to confer degrees.

Associated with Albert College was a girls' institution known as Alexandra College.

In the early days Albert College did not accept government assistance and money was scarce. The first building was constructed on the north side of College Street and during the 1890s Massey Hall was added.

In 1917 fire destroyed part of the college's buildings but it was not until 1956 that the institution moved to its present location on Trent Road where Gothic style stone buildings were erected.

Earlier in 1894 Albert College was federated with Victoria College and it later became a secondary school.

At the present time the college consists of 10 classrooms with two boys' residences and girls live in "The Manor" and the "New Manor" while the boys' residences are called "Graham Hall and Baker House".

Facilities include modern classrooms, an up-to-date science laboratory, library, gymnasium, swimming pool, playing field and a skating rink.

More than 180 students attend classes at Albert College and the institution employs 16 full time teachers. The annual school budget for operating expenses totals $321,000.

SECONDARY SCHOOLS

The first high school or secondary school in Belleville was built in 1874.

In 1927 this building was torn down to make way for the present Belleville Collegiate and Vocational Institute. From an early staff of three teachers the number has increased to more than 60 full-time tutors.

When this school became crowded in 1954, Quinte secondary school was added. Moira Secondary School was erected in 1958 and Centennial School in 1966. A 12-room wing was added to Quinte Secondary School in 1957 and a vocational wing in 1962.

These four schools handle all secondary students in the Belleville area. Total enrolment in 1967 was 3,564. The secondary school board hires 212 teachers for the four units.

The secondary school system has Belleville's highest school budget — spending an estimated $2,725,643 for operating expenses in the 1967 fiscal year.

Belleville Collegiate has a total enrolment of more than 1,400 students with 60 teachers. The building includes modern classrooms, two gymnasiums, a cafeteria and an auditorium. The first edition of a yearly magazine "The Elevator" was published in 1911.

Quinte Secondary School opened in 1954 with 250 students and 15 teachers. Present enrolment in the school, following addition of the 1967 wing is 1,400.

Due to increasing enrolment Moira Secondary School was added to the system in 1959. An addition was constructed two years later to handle the ever increasing number of secondary school students.

The newest school in the system is Centennial Secondary School which was completed in 1966.

BUSINESS COLLEGES

The Ontario Business College in Belleville was founded in 1908 by Samuel G. Beatty and George Wallbridge. Since the early days, when the college had few pupils, the institution has progressed to the point where more than 80 students are now enrolled.

For the first few years the college was operated from various locations throughout the city. It is now established in the former Emmanuel Episcopal Church annex on Victoria Ave.

Other business colleges have flourished in Belleville but the Ontario Business College is the only one still in existence.

The Belleville Business College once operated at the corner of Front and Campbell Streets. It was founded in 1889 by Robert Bogle, a prominent businessman in the area.

Today the Ontario Business College has an enrolment of 80 students with six full time teachers. Over the years students from around the world have attended the institution.

A former principal of the college, J. W. Johnson, wrote and published business textbooks. These became widely circulated in English language schools throughout the world.

Another school that once operated in Belleville was the St. Agnes Manor, at the corner of Bridge and Ann Streets. Opened in 1903, it was a private school for young women. Boys were allowed to attend — but only in the primary grades.

The school was connected with the Church of England and it's premises were constructed in 1890 by Billa Flint. The school was closed when attendance "fell-off".

SEPARATE SCHOOLS

Separate Roman Catholic Schools have a long history in Belleville. Although most early records have been lost,

Separate Schools Existed in 1830

Indications are that a separate school board existed as early as 1830.

It is known that a separate Roman Catholic school operated in 1852 because a legal case developed over the fact Protestant and Roman Catholic ratepayers alike were assessed for common schools in the area.

The legal case was dropped when a supplementary school act was passed in 1853. It acknowledged the rights of the schools.

Early separate schools in Belleville were operated from private homes.

In 1871 two separate schools were operating on John Street.

The property for St. Michael's School was purchased in 1882 and a convent was erected on the site. A select school for girls and boys was opened south of the convent in 1883.

A one-room school near Holloway Street Church was also operated, for students on the West hill.

The first building erected on the present St. Michael's school site was in 1908. It was destroyed by fire in 1929 and a new building was erected in 1930.

By 1949 St. Michael's had become crowded and at this time Holy Rosary School was built on College Street. When St. Michael's again became crowded in 1953 — St. Joseph's school was build on Bridge Street.

Our Lady of Fatima School in west Belleville was erected in 1960. Nicholet Catholic College was opened in 1959 and an addition was added in 1965.

The first high school classes at St. Michael's were started in 1922.

Present enrolment in the separate Roman Catholic school system totals 1,500. More than 60 teachers use the up-to-date facilities in the six schools. The annual budget for the separate school board totals $575,000.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS

The earliest of the remaining public schools in the Belleville area which was built in 1900. Before this time many of the schools in the area were incorporated with secondary schools.

There include: Bayview — 1900; Queen Victoria 1947; Prince Charles — Avondale — 1912; King George — 1922; Prince of Wales — 1924; Hillcrest — 1941; Prince Charles — 1943; Queen Elizabeth — 1951; Harry J. Clarke — 1961; Parkdale — 1962; Sir MacKenzie Bowell and Sir Winston Churchill — 1964.

Present student enrolment in the schools is 8,306, more than 170 teachers are working in the public school system.

The estimated budget for 1967 is approximately $1,750,000 for operating expenses.

Coat of Arms Tells Story

Belleville has its own coat of arms which relates the history of the settlement.

The lion at the right illustrates the settlement of the community by United Empire Loyalists. The logs on the left depict the lumber industry, which originally brought Belleville its prosperity.

On the bottom the bundle of wheat and the fir tree demonstrate the important role that agriculture played in the growth of the city.

"Economy is the best revenue" translates the latin inscription beneath.

UELs Invited Cal Coolidge

Perhaps one of the longest celebrations in Belleville's history was in 1924 when Belleville commemorated the 140th anniversary of the settlement of Upper Canada by United Empire Loyalists.

The festivities lasted for one week. Prior to the celebration, the mayor of Belleville sent a message to United States President Calvin Coolidge inviting him to attend.

Miss Gwen Latzer left Belleville on her horse "Tip" on Apr. 24 and arrived on the White House lawn on Apr. 30, after an 800-mile journey.

Long Trek To Nowhere

A young "pedestrian" from London called Robert Fell arrived in Belleville in January of 1859. He was to walk up and down the bedding of a bowling alley for 100 hours without sleep or rest — pausing only 10 minutes a day — for a purse of 100 dollars. Spectators were admitted for a fee of 12½ cents.

It is not reported whether Mr. Fell succeeded, but if he did not fall asleep from weariness he must have died from boredom.

After operating a Chev.-Olds. automotive dealership in Stirling, Ontario, Mr. Walter Elliott purchased H. W. Gourley Motors, 24 Dundas Street West in January 1952, and renamed this franchised Pontiac, Buick, G.M.C. Dealership as Elliott Motors (Belleville) Limited.

During the first year of operation, the firm sold two hundred and sixty-three new cars and trucks and had a staff of nineteen. In growing with the community, the firm expanded into the School Bus business selling Blue Bird and Brantford bodies; developed a volume in the Heavy Duty G.M.C. truck line and started servicing and selling large fleet accounts in the Pontia Buick line.

In 1956, because of an increase in volume, a new three car show room plus additional service department facilities and new and used car display areas were added to the existing Dundas Street building.

Early in 1959, the firm expanded its interests to the car, truck, leasing field and 1961 formed the Walter Elliott Leasing Ltd., company to handle this volume. Today this company has approximately 90 cars, trucks and buses on daily, weekly, monthly and yearly lease.

In the spring of 1961, Elliott Motors were appointed Eastern Ontario Distributor for Thomas Built School Buses of Canada Limited and still retain this distributorship which they value very highly.

Space was becoming a problem by this time and in 1962 Mr. Elliott purchased thirty-five acres of land on North Front Street and in 1963, had developed this land to commence construction of a new modern dealership which officially opened in January 1964.

The firm continues to grow yearly with now over eighty employees and having new car-truck sales of over eight hundred units in 1966.

The business employs many community minded employees and tries to assist in local activities for the good of the community.

Mr. Walter Elliott, President of the company became a resident of Belleville in 1956 and devoted many years of community service to the area besides the expansion of his business.

He served two years on the General Motors Presidents Advisory Council, four years as an Alderman for the city of Belleville, five years as a Director on the Belleville Chamber of Commerce and several years with the Belleville Agricultural Fair Board. He is active in his church and service club work and is an ardent sports fan.

Mr. Elliott insists on good owner employee relations and the fact that several of the employees and managers have had at least ten years of service with the firm speaks well of this relationship.

Mr. Elliott developed a slogan: "Nearly Everybody Likes Elliott Motors"; a slogan which is a challenge to the employees in their work and community efforts. With over eighty employees this is over eighty good reasons to do business with Elliott Motors, serving the community for fifteen years.

Two Women Fought Battle As Pioneer Social Workers

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
STAFF REPORTER

Early one morning during the bitter January of 1886, Belleville police ushered a pathetic huddle of people into court — two prostitutes, a male found-in and five children. The women were charged following a weekend newspaper campaign urging the clearing out of that crib of iniquity on Zwick's Island," a by 10 foot hut inhabited by the eight.

Bolstered by public indignation, the magistrate handed out sentences of six months each in Mercer Reformatory, Toronto, to the women. What would become of the children?

The only people who seemed to care were Mrs. J. J. B. Flint, treasurer of the Women's Christian Association, and a pioneer social worker, Mrs. Anselm Schuster, director of City Mission.

In an age when respectable women read the police news secretly, Mrs. Schuster and her allies of the WCS appeared regularly in court to interceede for the friendless and forgotten.

Mrs. Schuster was a tiny woman with piercing black eyes and a quick, sharp, almost abrupt manner. "She came to the point of an issue immediately and could hold her own with anyone," a contemporary said.

Mrs. Schuster's point that morning was the welfare of the children. She begged to be allowed to take them into her home under an already operating personal foster care plan. Mrs. Flint offered to provide the shoeless brood with suitable clothing.

The offer was refused. Victoria, 11, and Margaret, 4, were sent to Mercer, where, the newspapers piously reported, "they will be properly reared." The boys' fate is unknown.

The same story was repeated routinely in court rooms across Canada during the 19th Century. No one was concerned about society's outcasts. In Victorian times social work was in the hands of the church, administered for the benefit of church-goers only. Society consoled itself with the puritan philosophy that poverty and misfortune were the outward and visible signs of an avenging God's disfavor.

But in the last quarter of the 19th century, cold-hearted sentimentality was replaced in the hearts of a few with a compassionate realism. In Belleville, symptom of the changing attitude was the almost simultaneous formation of two interdenominational organizations to serve those not reached by the churches.

In 1879 the WCA was born, the inspiration of Mrs. Harriet Jacques, wife of the principal of Albert College. Its objects were to build a home for the destitute and aged and open a hospital. By 1886 the 80 members succeeded, despite the objections of most of the population. In addition, council gave them the thankless job of administering the city's poor fund and emergency relief measures.

City Mission, Belleville's first social work agency, grew from the zeal of a Jewish convert to Christianity. Anselm Schuster, trained as a jeweller in his native Frankfurt, Germany, was converted by Methodist evangelists during a tour of Canada and ordained a minister of the Bible Christian Church in 1870. When called to the Bible Christian Church in 1877, he began his ministry by distributing tracts in the neighborhood of South John, Wharf and Church Sts.

Affected by the plight of the dockworkers, coal heavers and immigrants of Foster Ward he told his congregation: "While we seek the spiritual welfare of the city, we do not intend to forget the temporal."

Sailing action to words, he resigned from the ministry, sought the moral support of local clergymen, and the financial support of sympathizers' free-will offerings and began a career of fulltime social work.

With interdenominational cottage prayer meetings and a Sunday School operated in borrowed quarters over a store, he gained the confidence of the people. Dec. 1, 1882, the Schuster opened the City Mission building, at 69 Dundas St. E., built by John Farin, architect of City Hall — for $1,250.

It housed the enterprises the Schusters considered essential, a labor exchange and day school. In his office, Schuster kept hoff of those seeking work and those needing workers. Every morning he went with job hunters to introduce them to potential employers.

Mrs. Schuster's first contribution was the operation of a day school two hours every afternoon to teach the rudiments of reading, writing and arithmetic to illiterate adults and children in the district.

Lack of proper clothing had kept many of the children out of the free public schools and no one had cared sufficiently to ask the truant officer to investigate. Education, to the Schusters, was the only factor that would break the vicious cycle of ignorance, unemployment, poverty and disease in the district.

Mrs. Schuster also took the most destitute girls into her home to learn housekeeping. After a few months instruction she found them jobs as maids.

In its third year the Mission took over a farm east of the city for an industrial school. A warm-hearted couple supervised a group of teenagers and taught them the elements of farming, gardening, cooking, and housework, in preparation for jobs as hired men or domestic servants.

Schuster was the first clergyman to visit the jail and conducted regular Sunday morning services for the prisoners.

Because local bankers refused the penny deposits of the poor, totaling $5 or $10 a year, His last enterprise was a savings bank, "to induce people to save during the summer, when work was plentiful and thus meet the hardships of winter and enforced idleness."

Not content with practical good works alone, the city missionary turned to the newspapers to spread his gospel of social justice. Two favorite themes were the treatment of the mentally ill and the high cost of funerals. His knowledge of jail conditions prompted frequent outbursts in the press about the evils of imprisoning the insane in cells with criminals.

Slum landlords and the complacent middle class also felt the prick of his pen. "The hoodlums of these miserable wenches who let them to the poor have a greater income and a smaller outlay than the landlords who are letting good and comfortable houses. Many are of the opinion that the position of the poor is the result of a careless life and think they should suffer the consequences. It should be no excuse for the neglect of our duty to humanity."

After Schuster died in 1885 (ironically, his admirers insisted on providing $1,000 for funeral and bronze headpiece) his wife carried on. As the need for her day school diminished, she pioneered a kindergarten with the same objectives as the present American program. Opened on Headstart. Her aim was to upgrade the experiences and vocabulary of underprivileged children to fit them to begin school on a par with middle class children.

At the mission Mrs. Schuster and her helpers ran a soup kitchen, conducted sewing classes, taught flower and vegetable cultivation in the garden, ran a used clothing depot and arranged social events concerts and summer excursions so her charges could enjoy some of the delights the affluent took for granted.

Gradually, the government began to play a part in welfare work. In 1900 the Mission received its first government grant, $47 toward meeting the annual $18 expenses of the kindergarten. The local Children's Aid Society was formed in 1907 and Belleville merchant Thomas Ritchie donated a children's shelter to the city.

No longer were little Victorias and Margarets packed off to reformatory with their mothers and small boys turned loose to beg in the streets.

The Schusters and others like them across the province, by uniting all churches in interdenominational social action and rousing the public conscience, had cancelled out the need for their services. City Mission operated until the 1930's but its work was gradually usurped by welfare agencies.

Mrs. Schuster died in 1922 at the home of a son in Pittsburgh, and was buried in Belleville from the home of son William Schuster, founder of Moirs-Schuster Company.

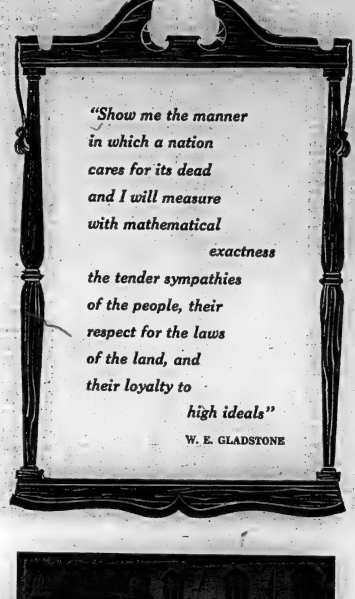
Bridge Tolls Too Heavy

On Dominion Day in 1881, the privately promoted Bay Bridge was opened for traffic. It had cost nearly $100,000 and though there had been substantial subsidies from the surrounding towns it was privately owned. Though much needed, it did not pay at first and during the depression in the early 90's a small mortgage holder was able to obtain ownership. Consequently heavy tolls strangled commerce between Prince Edward County and Belleville.

In 1920 the bridge was purchased jointly by the city, county and government. It was made a public utility and all tolls were lifted on July 1, 1921.

RACING BATHTUBS

NANAIMO, B.C. (CP)—More than 200 persons, including business executives and beer waiters, have entered the centennial version of the annual Nanaimo to Fisherman's Cove bathtub race July 30. This year the contestants, many of them bedding specially constructed fiberglass tubs, will race across the Strait of Georgia from this Vancouver Island city to the posh Vancouver yacht club.



A Royal Proclamation

This is part of Queen Victoria's proclamation, issued after the British parliament passed the British North American Act. It is "A proclamation for uniting the provinces of Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick into one Dominion under the name of Canada," and was "given at our court at Windsor Castle this twenty-second day of May in the year of Our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty seven and in the thirtieth year of Our Reign."

Dark Doubts Remain

Sir John Needed All His Talents to Survive Pacific Scandal

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's first prime minister looks a little weatherbeaten these days—75 years after his death —but his boots are planted firmly and his sculptured gaze over Parliament Hill is serene and confident.

Wrapped in his bronze greatcoat, Sir John A. Macdonald stands waiting for the 100th birthday of the nation he helped build and gives no sign he remembers the year Canadians first discovered he had feet of clay.

That discovery, later labelled the Pacific Scandal and made when this capital was little more than a crude and muddy lumbering town, came close to wrecking the great Conservative chief and even closer to destroying the coalition party that had built Confederation.

In 1873 Sir John was to insist to the Commons that the whole affair was just a "foul, false and calumnious" invention of the Opposition, but to this day historians have been unable to erase the dark doubts cast on his integrity.

Even Prof. Donald Creighton of Toronto who has chronicled Macdonald's career in loving detail refuses to exonerate the Pacific Scandal.

"His crime was the crime of accepting campaign funds from the very man with whom he was negotiating a contract of major importance in the national interest," Creighton writes in his prize-winning biography of the Glasgow-born prime minister.

But some defence perhaps for Sir John came with last year's Report of the Commission on Electoral Expenses which notes Canada was born in an age so marked by corruption it produced three major public scandals in the first three decades after 1867.

It was that Macdonald behaved worse than many of his contemporaries—just that he got caught at it—caught red - handed accepting some $350,000 for his 1872 election campaign fund from a Montreal financier whom he in return promised the presidency of Canada's first national railway.

Yet any bare-bones account of the scandal somehow leaves out the hopes and dreams for the newborn dominion that drove the foremost Father of Confederation into the notorious deal and embroiled him in its complications as more personal greed could never have done.

"His crime was the crime of accepting campaign funds from the very man with whom he was negotiating a contract of major importance in the national interest," Creighton writes in his prize-winning biography of the Glasgow-born prime minister.

But some defence perhaps for Sir John came with last year's Report of the Commission on Electoral Expenses which notes Canada was born in an age so marked by corruption it produced three major public scandals in the first three decades after 1867.

It was that Macdonald behaved worse than many of his contemporaries—just that he got caught at it—caught red - handed accepting some $350,000 for his 1872 election campaign fund from a Montreal financier whom he in return promised the presidency of Canada's first national railway.

Yet any bare-bones account of the scandal somehow leaves out the hopes and dreams for the newborn dominion that drove the foremost Father of Confederation into the notorious deal and embroiled him in its complications as more personal greed could never have done.

Macdonald wrote during the campaign to his friend John Rose saying: "I am as you may fancy exceedingly desirous of carrying the elections again; not from any personal object, because I am weary of the whole thing, but Confederation is only yet in the grists, and it will require five more years before it hardens into bone."

Then it was that in the last hectic pre-election days of 1872 when it seemed only lavish campaign spending could hold Ontario and Quebec for the Tories, we were haunted, desperate, and reckless.

Jumped at the golden bait tendered by Montreal shipping magnate Sir Hugh Allan.

Passing over the claims of one of his oldest friends, David Macpherson, president of the Intercolonial Railway Co., Macdonald sent Allan his promise that "the power of the government will be exercised" to give Allan the presidency of the proposed Pacific Railway.

The pay-off money came promptly in return and, before his meagre electoral victory at last became clear, Macdonald and his lieutenants had (and repeated) begging requests to Montreal.

In the last days a fatal telegram had runs out to Allan.

"I must have another ten thousand," Sir John had wired with almost incredible carelessness. "Will be the last time of calling. Do not fail me. Answer today."

The Tories were returned to Ottawa with a bare majority. And somehow, that time, their leader's electoral jubilation was tinged with a chill of unease—there were rumors current in the capital, rumors suggestive of trouble ahead.

By 1873, there were more than rumors. Macdonald didn't know it yet but the Liberals had the damning telegram, bought for $5,000 from a young clerk who had gone through the files of Allan's solicitor and extracted the evidence.

April 2, an astounded Sir John could only sit and watch as Lucius Seth Huntington, an obscure Liberal MP who was to make his reputation as a scandal-sniffer, rose to tell the Commons that Sir Hugh Allan had bought the Pacific contract with election donations.

For weeks "Old Tomorrow" eased his fears with its familiar remedy of drink and, while the parliamentary inquiry dragged on, faced the House with what Opposition Leader Alexander Mackenzie contemptuously labelled a "studious silence."

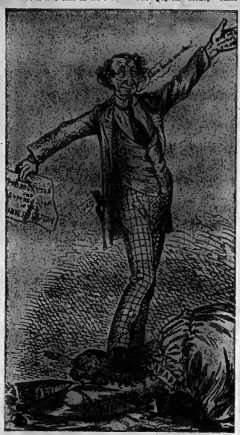
Stung finally to reply and unaware of just how far Liberal information extended, he made his answer to the Commons with an air of injured innocence that passage that can be most kindly called hypocritical.

"Neither by thought, word, deed or action has the government done anything of which it can be ashamed," reads the yellowed newspaper record of his speech.

"From the conception of the idea up to the placing of the charter in the hands of the Pacific Railway Co., we were actuated and moved by a desire to promote the best interests of this dominion."

Short days later his begging telegram was splashed simultaneously across the front pages of the Toronto Globe, the Montreal Herald and Quebec's L'Evenement. The embarrassed prime minister had to admit he was "fairly staggered."

Parliament limped on but the end was near. By Nov. 5 the inevitable Commons defeat had come and Macdonald wearily handed in his resignation to Governor - General Dufferin.



In his five-hour final speech, the battling old prime minister told Parliament he could "see past the decision of this House" to a day when the nation would recognize his contributions.

If he could see ahead, Macdonald would have realised his luck was with him still, timing even his defeats for exactly the right moment.

He was to go on to see his dreamed - of transcontinental railway push through to the Pacific and to win permanent fame as moulder of a nation before his death in office in 1891.

Grateful future generations set up the bronze memorial on Parliament Hill to the greatest prime minister soon forgot the days he been their greatest scandal.

The Corby Story

With particular reference to the prominence of the Corby name in the history of the Belleville area over the past 100 years and more.

A year or two before Belleville was incorporated as a Police Village in 1834, a ship from Quebec made its way up the St. Lawrence, into Lake Ontario, and tied up at the wooden docks flanking the mouth of the Moira. Among the few passengers aboard was a young Englishman by the name of Henry Corby, who had just arrived in the New World, along with his wife, in search of adventure and opportunities. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Corby were so impressed by the beauty of the little River Moira and the Bay of Quinte, that when the boat sailed on, they remained.

Henry Corby first opened a grocery shop and shortly after he started a bakery in connection with the shop. Within a few years he was the leading baker in the community. By 1838 he had abandoned the grocery and expanded the bakery. In that year a tragedy befell the Corby household, as recorded in the Belleville Intelligencer. Two days after Christmas his wife and his three children were drowned in the Bay of Quinte when the sleigh in which they were riding broke through the ice. This disaster occurred just opposite a narrow tip of land known as Massassaga Point. Many years later Henry Corby Jr. bought the point, and made of it a Summer resort, with mineral baths and one of the finest hotels, of that time, in Ontario.

Henry married again – the sister of his first wife. Her name was Matilda, and their offspring numbered 12, one of whom died in infancy. The second son of this marriage was named Henry, after his father, and is to figure largely later on in this story of the grand old Canadian name.

In 1855, Henry Corby bought the grist mill at Hayden's Corners, from Salyer Reed and the Honorable Robert Reed, then the owner of a large distillery in Belleville. The mill was built in 1812.

It is not entirely certain that Henry originally had in mind a distillery operation in connection with his mill, for it was two years after the mill started operating that the distillery first went into action in 1859. His advertisement of 1859 offers "cracked grains and flour and the finest whiskey in 25, 10 or 5 gal. kegs, to suit the customer, Henry Corby, Alma Mills Hayden's Corner, Thurlow".

During the first 10 years of his life as a miller and distiller, Henry Corby's popularity in the community had grown. In 1867 he was elected mayor of the city of Belleville. He was also elected a member of the board of police commissioners established in Belleville, and also captain of the fire companies for several years. He represented Ketcheson ward for some time at the city council from 1842, was Reeve of Belleville in 1857 and Reeve of Thurlow Township in 1863. For many years he was President of the St. George's Society – Vice President, Mackenzie Bowell.

Also in 1867, England passed the British North American Act, out of which emerged the Dominion of Canada. The same year, Henry became "H. Corby, M.P.P." – member of the provincial parliament. Thus, he served as a legislator in the province of Ontario during the first year of Confederation, representing his people in East Hastings.

Meantime, the farmers of the community were stopping with their wagons of grain to be ground, sampling the "whiskey" from Henry's growing number of barrels and selecting their preference. And an increasing number of people from Belleville were making the horse-and-buggy trip out to Corbyville, to sample and to buy the Corby "whiskey" which was becoming more widely known. It became a vital part of Belleville social life, and of the farm life thereabouts. In those days many a farmer would leave a part of his grain with Henry, as a payment for the milling service – and perhaps a bit more in payment for a "crock" of Corby "whiskey".

In August of 1881, being ill, Henry Sr. sold his distillery to his son Harry. Henry Corby died October 25, 1881, leaving four sons and seven daughters. In January, 1882, Hayden's Corners was granted a post office and it was renamed Corbyville in his honor. Young Henry Corby known as Harry was born in Belleville in 1851. He attended the Belleville public schools, and later Rockwood Academy. In 1872 he married Maria Courtney and they had three daughters.

Under the direction of Harry Corby, the distillery grew rapidly, the son being more aggressive and modern-minded than the father in merchandising policies. He built a suite of offices and a warehouse on the main street of Belleville (where the old Chamber of Commerce was) and operated the business from there. As a result of his initiative in large-scale distilling the name and fame of Corby's whiskies spread across Canada.

It is difficult to pick a starting point in delineating the benefits which were brought to Belleville by young Henry Corby, whose position for philanthropies was much improved over that of his father, who created the businessand who, like most first generations, never developed the spendable means available to the second generation.

There stands, in Belleville, the Corby Free Public Library. Young Henry bought a building which was evacuated by the Merchants Bank moving into larger quarters. He refitted the building into a library, and established a fund for its maintenance as an institution free to the community's citizens. There is the Corby Park in Belleville, a small, quiet, tree-fringed piece of land, well suited for a stroll beneath giant trees, for meditation. The park has recently been completely renovated as a Centennial project.

At one time the bridge across the Bay of Quinte was called the Corby Bridge. It was Harry Corby who recognized the need for a more speedy method of crossing the bay than the ferry which once operated there. He promoted the bridge, and was Vice-President and a principal stockholder. The bridge, in two sections, is believed to include the longest steel span in the province.

He originally promoted the Quinte Hotel in Belleville. An older hotel – the Dafoe House – had burned. He financed its rebuilding. Again it burned. Again Harry backed its reconstruction including the subsequent addition of a fourth storey.

Harry Corby was a charter member and founder of the Belleville Yacht Club, the Belleville Cricket Club, the Cycle Club, and many others, which have now resolved themselves into simply the Belleville Club.

He constructed a set of public baths and a pavilion in Victoria Park, much needed in a day of outdoor plumbing. He was a member of St. Thomas' Anglican Church, as was his father before him, and where two stained glass windows commemorate the Corby name. He gave strong financial backing to the Belleville hospital, which was built and operated by the Women's Christian Association, which also administers the annual Corby Christmas fund to the present time.

As a fitting climax to his career as a statesman, businessman, citizen and public benefactor, the government of Canada named him a Senator. Harry Corby died in 1918, but the grand old Canadian name of Corby lives on as a solid part of the social life of Canadians from coast to coast, and of others in distant lands. All of which is a grand tribute to the enterprising young Englishman who first stepped ashore at Belleville more than 100 years ago.

To the Citizens of Belleville

June 30, 1967.

To The Citizens of Belleville:

The lives of all Canadians, whether they attend every Centennial function in their community or attempt to ignore Centennial completely, are being altered by the events of this Centennial year. We now sit in judgment on the Fathers of Confederation and, in the main, we acclaim their notions with the finest sounding adjectives and the loudest praise.

One hundred years from now succeeding generations will look back and judge us. The advances in the next century will double, triple, or quadruple those in the past. We can not say, but surely it is absolutely imperative, that we as Canadians conduct ourselves and our affairs in this Centennial year in such a manner that history will have, for us also, a few words of praise.

That which is necessary on a national basis, can only be achieved by individuals in small communities, such as the City of Belleville, participating to the fullest extent.

and grievances in the interests of establishing a unity of purpose and grievances in the interest of establishing a unity of purpose and a positive approach to all our problems.

The whole Quinte area is poised on the brink of tremendous growth. We see more evidence of this everyday. The citizens of Belleville can and must provide the necessary leadership. Nothing less than our finest effort will be acceptable. Together we can make the second century of Confederation as successful as the first.

In '67 Belleville Still Retaining Its Pioneer Town Ways

It may be a bit hard for today's jet-age set to appreciate but Belleville was still pretty much of a pioneer centre at the time of Confederation; with few, if any, of the amenities which today are taken more or less for granted.

Back in 1867, Belleville was still a town — it won't be become a city until 1878 — and there was no electric lighting, no water service, hospital, or mail delivery service.

All these — like confederation — were to come much later, one of the conveniences not until 1913.

Gaslight had come to Belleville in 1854 when a privately owned gasworks was constructed.

But electric lights didn't make their appearance until 1885 and it wasn't until 1901 the electric street lighting replaced the old gas lamps.

"experiments" had been made between Belleville and Picton in 1877 but regular phone service in the town did not come until 1881. Two years later there were still only 29 telephones in the young city.

But the convenience of the telephone wasn't apparent to the city fathers and it wasn't until 1892 that he city clerk go one in his office at city hall.

The bay bridge was not completed until 1891 and it was to remain a toll structure until 1921 after it was taken over from its private owners by the city and the government.

Street cars came to Belleville in the 1870's but they were horse drawn affairs. Electrification of the car line didn't take place until 1895, and even this didn't save the street cars as the loss went out of business a few years later through lack of patronage.

The first railway line through the city was completed in 1856 and the same year saw the first through train from Toronto to Montreal. Prior to 1856 all travel out of Belleville had been by boats, stagecoach or horse and wagon. The motor bus line as we know it today wasn't started until 1925.

Until 1926 Belleville residents had to depend on wells or cisterns for their water requirements. In that year the first waterworks were built, and in 1929 the facility was taken over by the municipality as the forerunner of the present day diffusion plant and water distribution system.

The city depended upon a volunteer fire department until 1916 when the first permanent fire fighting force was organized. And it was not until 1921 that the first motorized equipment was purchased to replace the horse drawn fire engines.

And Belleville resident had to go to the post office to pick up their own mail until 1913 when a letter carrier system was inaugurated.

What is now the Belleville hospital came into existence back in 1896, and then only after a group of determined women finally convinced civic leaders that a hospital was necessary. Until that time, there had been neither a hospital nor home for the aged in the city.

Three Years After Union Ontario's First OSD Opened

The Ontario School for the Deaf regularly graduates students seriously accepted as competitors in every enterprise.

Acceptance wasn't always that easy for the deaf. In fact, the OSD partly represents that change in social thinking.

True appreciation of the deaf was slow in coming to society.

In Canada, the first big consideration came in the mid-1800s when Catholic priests showed the way with schools in Montreal.

Within the decade the inspiration had spread to Ontario and schools were opened in Toronto and Hamilton.

The government of the fledgling Confederation province of Ontario decided to build — from public funds — an educational centre for the deaf.

Work began and the earth began to stir a mile west of Belleville — not yet a city — as suitable foundations were probed.

After $85,000 had been spent, the project was sufficiently advanced to permit an official opening.

So, on Oct. 20, 1870, the Lieut.-Governor of the new province, its Premier, John Sandfield Macdonald, members of its cabinet and local officials took carriages to the site, escorted by militiamen and a brass band.

The building bore out the promise of changing social expectations.

Lieutenant-Governor Howland enthused about "a beautiful site to meet the needs of those unfortunate people" and a classless education system "which has tended so much to our honor and advancement."

But no matter what ideal it stood for, the new school still had some strings that betrayed social thinking.

It was named the Ontario Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, although to be deaf was not necessarily to be incapable of speech.

The department of education was its logical trustee. But public thinking apparently didn't bend that way for the deaf.

Here's how one historian puts it, writing long after opening day 1870:

"Since its establishment the institution had been at intervals in charge of nearly every department of government but the right one.

"But for many years previous to 1904 it had been administered by the provincial secretary in conjunction with prisons, asylums and charitable institutions. The deaf were dissatisfied with the arrangement. . . The reports of the institution were incorporated with those of the asylums and prisons. When the inspector of prisons and asylums inspected the school twice a year he left on the same day to visit Belleville jail!"

Notes an historian:

"This was not only humiliation to the deaf and their teachers and parents, but also tended to prejudice them in the minds of the public and still further handicapped them in their efforts to obtain a livelihood in competition with hearing people."

But there were no ordinary teachers in the early days of OSD.

Their spirit was epitomized in the figures of their principals — the first OSD superintendents.

Its first father figure was American, W. J. Palmer, who volunteered to set the new project on its way, bringing two experienced teachers with him.

That first year — 1870—closed with 70 pupils on the books. The next year the spiral began. Registration was doubled in 1871 and in the next two years it climbed to 190.

Within three years increased accommodation was necessary. In 1876-77 there were more additions.

Then, inexplicably, for the records hold no explanations, Palmer left.

However, by now the centre was an established part of public education—and its premises accepted as one with normal society.

Or were they?

After Palmer's still-mysterious departure, administration was taken over by a Kingston native, Robert Mathison.

For years, it appears, he pushed the point that his deaf students were being degraded, being associated in the public mind with criminals and the insane.

His vindication is recorded by one historian: "Due chiefly to Mr. Mathison's urgent and persistent advocacy, in 1904 the institution was placed under the Education Department to the great gratification of the deaf and their friends."

The change was bolstering, significant.

Just two years later the Ontario Association of the Deaf was told at its annual convention in Belleville by president E. C. Slater.

"We are not burdens on society, which some might argue as a necessity of our position, but on the contrary the deaf as a body are successful wage-earners, gaining the respect and approbation of the community."

By 1906 Dr. Charles Bernard Coughlin became superintendent. Just two years later he began strongly urging a change in the title.

It took another five years, but finally, in 1913, the Legislature authorized that the now 43-year-old institution be officially recognized for what it truly was: The Ontario School for the Deaf.

That year, too, eight girls from the newly-named OSD passed the first high school entrance examination ever set at the centre.

Belleville Celebrated Its Coming of Age With Giant Party Attended by 25,000

Belleville's inauguration day — July 1, 1878 — was celebrated with pomp and ceremony with more than 25,000 people in attendance.

The July 2 issue of the Intelligencer headlined "the demonstration a complete success".

Belleville actually became a city on Dec. 31, 1877 but officials felt July was a better month to hold a demonstration to celebrate the occasion — and what better day than Canada's birthday.

From early morning the various roads leading to the city were alive with wagon loads of people. It is reported the number of visitors was such that hotel and stable accommodation was completely insufficient to handle the crowds.

Steamers docking at Belleville also added many hundreds of people with shiploads coming from Watertown, Trenton, Picton and Napanee.

It is reported the crowds thronged the city's main streets and were overwhelmed with the decoration on buildings throughout the parade route.

A morning parade was followed by afternoon athletic activities, a banquet, torchlight procession and fireworks display.

It is reported the weather for the day was "fine—though very hot."

Inauguration day activities got underway at 6 a.m. with the arrival of the steamer Kincardine with the Watertown firemen and band as well as 125 excursionists. The Intelligencer of that day reports the visitors were greeted by the Oddfellows band playing Yankee Doodle.

At 7:30 the steamer Utica loaded with 200 people arrived from Trenton. She was followed by the Alexandra and Aurania Gilbert, also from Trenton, loaded with 136 and 60 people respectively.

Around parade time, at 10 o'clock, the City of Belleville with 250 visitors, arrived from Picton; followed by Pierrpont from Napanee with 500; the Armenia from Picton with 500, and the Shannon from Napanee with 100 more.

The procession started at 10 o'clock and The Intelligencer reports: "The procession was the finest of its kind ever seen in Canada and surpassed in extent and magnificence many of the same nature which we have seen in the largest cities in the United States."

The parade is reported to have taken more than one-half hour to pass any given point on the route from market square to the agricultural grounds.

Included in the parade were: the Grand Marshal; the 15th Battalion Argyll Light Infantry and band; the 49th Hastings Rifles; the mayor and celebrities; Oddfellows band; 13 fire departments and bands; the "butchers"; Grand Encampment Knights of Canada, the trades, and citizens in carriages.

Among the trades was the Intelligencer entry, with men at work on a wagon printing and distributing an "extra."

Following the procession the mayor expressed satisfaction and introduced Hon. Bills Flint who gave the inaugural address.

During the afternoon the Caledonian games were held at the agricultural grounds. More than 4,000 attended and bands played at intervals between events.

Following a banquet, dense crowds thronged the streets to watch a torchlight procession. During the march to the fair grounds a small fireworks display preceded the torch bearers and bands.

It is reported that Front Street and many private residences were illuminated for the occasion.

More than 12,000 are said to have attended the fireworks display at the agricultural grounds following the parade.

The Intelligencer claims it was a high quality display.

The early edition of the paper also notes that many private homes were decorated and the city placed decorative arches at entrances to the city.

Among the notes from the special day are these: there were some slight cases of sun stroke; no accidents were reported; it is creditable that there was little drunkenness — less than six arrests.

Also among the notes are these: H. J. Lott's horse took a carnivorous turn and ran into Green and Co's butcher shop — the damage was slight; a pickpocket was captured while plying his vocation.

Man Makes Centennial Clock

WINNIPEG (CP) — Jack Kreutzer built a six-foot-tall grandfather clock inlaid with the centennial symbol, a design that fascinates him, as his personal centennial project.

Mr. Kreutzer, a 75-year-old retired cabinet maker, built the clock to show other people how they could use the centennial symbol. "You can use it on any piece of furniture."

The cabinet is of walnut, mahogany and oak and Mr. Kreutzer aptly used 100-year-old bass wood for the inlay work. The wood, from Japan, originally was used in the lobby of the Fort Garry Hotel here and was salvaged when the hotel's lobby was remodelled.

Materials for the clock, made without plans, cost about $30. It took six weeks, about 100 hours of work, to complete.

Airmen's Hike

CORNER BROOK, Nfld. (CP) Seven American airmen, stationed at Pine Tree radar station decided to walk 40 miles from Corner Brook to Stephenville to help publicize Canada's Centennial.

Four of them failed to complete the walk. Frank Bourque, 25, of New York, Sal Valdez, 23, of Tijuana, Mexico, and Jim Mabon, 22, of Chambersburg, Pa., finished the hike in 14 hours.

The CPR Mislaid Last Iron Spike

MONTREAL (CP)—The Canadian Pacific Railway has mislaid its last spike.

Not that it was such a valuable item—it was only iron, not gold or silver as were so many of the pegs ceremonially hobbing down American lines.

But it was the authentic final spike driven by the CPR's first president Nov. 7, 1885, on the spot where Eagle and Western gangs laid their final yards of track on Eagle Pass, B.C.

It marked the end of five years of backbreaking labor as railroaders drove west through wilderness and mountains to span a continent and bind a nation.

While his bearded audience watched, President Donald Smith lifted his hammer and struck a glancing blow, bending his first spike.

The roadmaster quickly put in a second and discarded the first spike. It was picked up later, split into shims and mounted with diamonds to make pins for ladies connected with the party but not present at the pass.

A third spike never made it to the ceremony.

The Marquis of Lansdowne, the Governor - General, had been so sure he would drive the final spike that he had had a silver one made for the occasion. But he wasn't invited.

The CPR's hard - driving manager, William Cornelius Van Horne had no use for silver spikes—he had watched too many American lines, flushed off with gold and silver, collapse within a few years. They were clearly bad luck, so he ordered a plain spike used.

But the second spike—the one finally driven by President Smith — was removed within hours by roadmaster F. P. Brothers who feared it would otherwise by taken by souvenir hunters. Years later he presented it to the company's sixth president, R. W. Beatty.

Omer Lavallee, unofficial historian for the railway, says the last spike rested in a glass case in Mr. Beatty's office and was seen there after his death in 1943. But today it is missing, case and all.

"I have no idea where it got to," Mr. Lavallee says. "I suspect it's hidden in the CPR's head office, probably in some official's vault. But of course, everyone denies it."

FLOODS ARE THREAT

TRAIL, B.C. (CP)—The city council here is taking no chances of floods spoiling a giant fireworks display planned as part of the city's centennial celebrations. The display was postponed till Sept. 9 from July 1 after the council learned the threat of high water in the Columbia River would continue beyond July 1.

Lumber Built Trenton's Economic Platform

The settlement at the mouth of the Trent River gained momentum because of the lumber industry. Perhaps the largest single contributor to the St. Lawrence, this venture was the initiation of the settlement of River Trent into an industry which was to be a financial mainstay until this century.

As in many pioneer communities, the hewing of forests began in River Trent as much to provide space for homes as an industrial undertaking. Early descriptions of the Trent River mouth depict "solid masses" of tree bordering the river.

Primitive lumbering operations were carried on by such men as Captain John Meyers, a British officer with a distinguished record of service in what the Loyalists called the "American war on secession.

Captain Meyers constructed a sawmill just east of the Trent in 1794, to add to a long list of other noteworthy accomplishments. He had built the first brick house, constructed the first grinding mill, and made the first "batteau" in Upper Canada.

Into the hills and valleys of the Trent, farther and farther each year, men journeyed in winter to fell the huge trees, and in spring floated their harvests to River Trent for sawing, squaring, & binding into the vast timber rafts for the trip down the St. Lawrence.

By the 1830's, lumbermen and sailors were a buttress to local merchants, in addition to promoting the growth of the lumber trade.

Then in 1853, a Quebec lumbering firm decided to establish a branch sawmill, thereby beginning the long association between Trenton and Gilmour and Company. The lumber yards were located on the east bank of the Trent mouth.

The community's population began to swell as did the annual business volume of the new industry. As many as 600,000 logs would be handled annually by Gilmour, and 30,000,000 feet of lumber were cut during one year.

Using offices in the stone building now functioning as the town hall, the company later started up a patented door manufacturing operation further up the river. Some of Canada's best-known public buildings are guarded by portals turned out at Gilmour's Trenton factory.

But even the most dense forests are depleted, and great sawmills were set up in other centres. A Gilmour saw cut its last log in Trenton about 50 years after the first one.

In 1910 the Gilmour institution in Trenton vanished when the door and woodworking factory closed. The plant was destroyed by fire about a year later.

But Gilmour and lumber had provided the impetus through Trenton's crucial embryonic stage. Canning factories, a baby-carriage manufacturer, a cold storage firm, and other fledgling enterprises stepped in to take up the economic slack. And it was only to be 20 years before a large Air Force installation would further bolster the local economy.

It seems appropriate today that Trenton's most ambitious recreational project ever, — the recently-opened Centennial Park — lies on the very site familiar so long as the home of Gilmour Lumber.

door factory kept Trenton's economy sound for more than 50 years.

N. S. Firemen Construct Blockhouse

DARTMOUTH, N.S. (CP)—Firemen trimmed and cut old railway ties to be used in building a replica of an 18th century blockhouse as a centennial project.

During the summer the firemen will work on construction of the blockhouse in a park in the centre of the city.

The original blockhouses were built in the mid-1700s as fortification for early settlers seeking protection against Indians.

Ceremonial Robes Are Presented

FREDERICTON (CP)—When it was discovered that Fredericton's mayor has no ceremonial robes for formal civic occasions, school children decided to collect money as a centennial project to buy a set.

A robe of scarlet, black and white, a cap and jabot were bought in England and presented by a delegation to Mayor William T. Walker who promised to wear the outfit whenever he visits schools in the city.

1861 Problems

First Bylaw Aimed At Stray Cattle

TRENTON — It makes an interesting study to ferret out a municipality's old records and find which regulation was deemed important enough to be the first on the books.

A dusty, leather-bound volume containing Trenton's first 500 bylaws reveals that village fathers in 1861 were faced with problems not altogether applicable today.

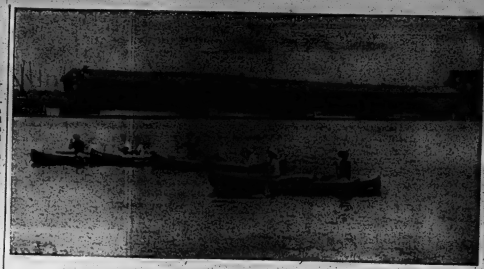
Passed Jan. 2, 1861, Trenton's initial council legislation aimed "to prevent the running at large of horses, oxen, cows young cattle, and swine between the first day of November and the fifteenth day of April each year."

Penalties provided for in the law ranged from five shillings to the owner of a stray horse down to two shillings, sixpence for "every young creature."

TRENTON — More than dress and customs have changed since Canada's early days. Writing styles have also tended to evolve.

For instance, what preminent citizen wouldn't give his eye teeth to see himself in print the way a local author described Trenton's Robert Waddell in 1813:

"Trenton has frequently been brought into prominence in all parts of Canada through the enterprise and business undertakings of Mr. Robert Waddell.



"For many years his machine shop and foundry has been one of the important industrial establishments in the town. As a businessman, Mr. Waddell is enterprising, energetic, and practical. His progressiveness and manifest interest in the town, together with many other good qualities have won him the esteem of his fellow citizens, by whom his public-spirited disposition has been much admired.

"Trenton would have been a city long ago if it had a few more such men as "citizens".

The "documentary" concludes: "His home is one of the finest in Trenton."

PAYS FOR OLD CHUM

KAPUSKASING, Ont. (CP)— It cost him $3 but that was cheap to get back an old friendship. Roland Lafiamme had had Fred Dubeau charged with assault after Fred hit him on the head with a chair but changed his mind in the two weeks before the court hearing. He asked that the charge be withdrawn and gladly paid the $3 court costs.

1833-The Trent River Is Spanned

The first of three major spans over the Trent River, the 1833 covered wooden bridge was replaced in 1917 by the existing town bridge. A second and more modern structure should be completed this year.

Trenton Has Changed Over Years

TRENTON — The mouth of the Trent River has been the hub of industry and communication for the settlement on its banks. But over the decades, the emphasis on its aesthetic and scenic side has dwindled in favor of assessments of its practical virtues.

The spot where the Trent slips into the Bay of Quinte was quite possibly the first glimpse afforded Champlain of Lake Ontario 300 years ago.

Historians say the site was once a dense cedar swamp, permeated with springs abounding in trout, and with groves of trees lining the shores further upstream. It was once described as "a perfect wilderness."

A clergyman wrote: "The windings of the River Trent contribute to furnish lovely scenes such as the painter would delight to delineate with all his artistic skill."

One such painter, if a self-confessed amateur, was Jeremiah Simmons, who served as Trenton's clerk for 30 years after the 1853 incorporation of the community.

"Having some pretensions as an artist," he writes, "I painted at odd moments a bird's-eye view of Trenton from the summit of Mount Pelion in 1847".

The height yields a spectacular view of the Bay of Quinte and the town below, which was a meagre settlement of 400 inhabitants at the time of Mr. Simmons' depiction.

The finished product, a historically valued piece of town history, today hangs on a wall of the council chambers in the municipal building.

Actual changes in the Trent mouth scene have been dramatized by the evolution of the bridge structures that have spanned the river. From the old covered 1833 bridge familiarized in early postcard days, to the "modern" 1917 structure on the same spot that engineers say today is as good as the day it was built. And sometime later this year, the most dramatic of all will appear — the streamlined D. James MacDonald bridge several hundred yards up-river from the existing span.

In this century, the Trent has been both artery and receptacle to most of the town's large industries. Indications are, however, that future generations will see a cleaner, more attractive water approach to the heart of Trenton.

Town fathers are now working on a long-range, quarter-million-dollar scheme to face-lift the mouth of the Trent into a scenic marina-docking area. The aim?

To make Trenton the attraction for Lake Ontario boating traffic it once was, and to try and shake off the Bay of Quinte pollution syndrome.

Grand Trunk Key in Merger

The Canadian National Railway was not built as a system but is the result of the amalgamation of government and privately owned railways.

The pioneer in Canadian railroading was the Grand Trunk. It was incorporated in 1852 to develop a railway system in Canada and the United States. The term Grand Trunk signified, in the 1850s, a line running from east to west across Canada.

At the time of the Grand Trunk's amalgamation with the GWR in 1923 it controlled 4,778 miles of track both in Canada and the U.S.

Over the years, since its inception, the Grand Trunk had merged with more than 125 smaller private companies to form the larger unit.

The first railroad in Canada — the Champlain and St. Lawrence—was completed in 1836 and merged with the Grand Trunk in 1864. It was a line which ran from Montreal to St. John's, Quebec and later to Rouses Point, N.Y.

Another early line was built to Portland, Maine, to provide a winter outlet to the sea when Montreal Harbor was closed to shipping.

A small line had been developed in Nova Scotia and in 1867 the federal government undertook to connect the seaside provinces with a line from Montreal to Riviere du Loup, Quebec. It was completed in 1876.

Meanwhile the Grand Trunk had proceeded with construction of its main line from Toronto to Montreal in 1853. It was completed in 1856.

By 1876 the country could boast connections from Halifax to Toronto and southward to Portland, Maine.

Later lines crossed Canada from Toronto to the west coast and when the Grand Trunk Pacific ran into financial difficulty in 1919 it was taken over by the federal government.

By 1923 the government had taken over other smaller lines including the Intercolonial and National Transcontinental Railways. This meant the government owned railway system was operating from coast to coast and offering service to many parts of the country.

Since 1923 the CNR has expanded in all areas. When Newfoundland joined confederation in 1949 its railroads were taken over by the company to make it a truly national line.

Belleville's Role as Pioneer Community Helped Earn Title 'City of Churches'

St. Thomas Church in the 1840s

"A great eyesore" to author Susanna Moodie, the first St. Thomas' Church was approached by a path leading from Bridge Street.

Pioneer life centred around the church, the rallying point of community activity.

Fear of God goaded early settlers into their labors, the revival meeting was their psychic energizing, prayer their tranquilizer and the fervor of denominational rivalries the passion of their lives.

No wonder pioneer Belleville matured to earn the epithet "city of churches". To its credit first. The city is the site of the world's first Sunday School picnic and boasted the first Methodist church spire and bell in Upper Canada.

The Anglicans, securely entrenched as the government-supported, established church, sent no missionaries to the first Upper Canadian settlements. The Methodists, imbued with missionary zeal, rushed in to fill the vacuum with circuit riding preachers. The first religious service in Belleville was said to have been conducted by a circuit rider in 1795. Preachers came regularly thereafter and the first congregation was formally organized in 1815.

The first Methodist Church, a rough wooden structure on the site of Holland Plumbing, Pinnacle St., was occupied in 1818. A Sunday School was started in 1822 by Billa Flint, lumber merchant, who in 1832 organized the first Sunday School picnic in the world near Grove St. In 1847, the brick building still occupying the site was erected.

Billa Flint donated the land for Bridge St. Church and in 1865 Rev. Egerton Ryerson dedicated the stone church dignified with the first Methodist steeple and bell in Upper Canada. Following a fire, the present church was rebuilt around the base of the old spire in 1887.

Tabernacle United Church had its origin in the same Methodist Episcopal congregation which built the first place of worship in Belleville. It was erected in 1877, the same year Holloway St. Church, sponsored by the Bridge St. Church congregation, was dedicated.

By 1818, Belleville had a resident Anglican clergyman, Rev. Thomas Campbell. He supervised the building of St. Thomas Church on a plot granted by the government.

The first St. Thomas Church was in use by 1820 and attained some notoriety in 1852, when Susanna Moodie in her book, Life in the Clearings, described it as "a homely structure — a great eyesore — built partly of red brick burnt in the neighborhood and partly of wood colored red to make up the deficiency of the costlier material."

Mrs. Moodie also decried Bellevillians' selection of the brows of hills for the sites of their churches and surrounding cemeteries.

"The time will come," she warned, "as population increases and the dead accumulate, when these burying-grounds that flow through them, will materially injure the health of the living."

In 1858 the new stone St. Thomas was built on the same site, only to be destroyed by fire and replaced by the present church in 1879.

Christ Church, begun in 1854, had the distinction of being the first Anglican church in the diocese to abolish pew rental. It burned and was rebuilt in 1882.

In 1839 the government granted as new of land on the corner of Church St. and Victoria Ave., to the Church of Scotland and by the next year the congregation had erected the first church on the site.

In 1852 Susanna Moodie re-Church is a small neat building of wood, painted white. For several years after the great split in the National Church of Scotland it was shut up — but has been reopened within the last two years."

The frame church was replaced with a brick building which burned in 1894. The present church was opened in 1895.

John Street Presbyterian Church, known as the "Free Church" to Mrs. Moodie, she described as "built of dark limestone quarried in the neighborhood, a remarkably church burned in 1836 and never rebuilt.

Tabernacle Baptist ministers were active in the community before 1815 but not until 1875 was a church built in Belleville on the corner of West Moira and Coleman, Sts. In 1896 the congregation moved to a building on the corner of Pinnacle St. and Victoria Ave. and erected Victoria Ave. Baptist Church in 1906.

The Salvation Army came to the city in 1884 and moved into the present Citadel in 1940.

The first Jewish settler arrived in Belleville in 1904 and services were held in homes and in the Orange Hall on Front St., until 1929. In that year the synagogue on Pinnacle St., now the Legion Hall was opened. By 1956 the congregation had outgrown the first building and the Sons of Jacob Synagogue at the corner of Bleecker and Victoria Avenues was erected.

One of the great figures of Belleville's early years was Ref. Michael Brennan, parish priest of the Church of St. Michael the Archangel from 1829 until 1863. Although Mass was celebrated in private homes in the Quinte district since 1805, building of a small wooden church near the site of the present structure was delayed until Father Brennan's arrival.

In 1837, he organized a campaign to replace this with a new stone church, "an elegant structure with a graceful Moodie. This church was replaced in 1886 with a larger Gothic style building which burned in 1904. The present church opened in 1905.

From 1837 to 1886 St. Michael's was famous for its "deep-toned, sonorous bell", cast in Spain and purchased for £700. "

"It can be heard eight miles into the country and as far as the village of Northport," said Mrs. Moodie. "A few years ago the mechanics in the town entered into an agreement that they would only work from six to six during the summer months and from seven till five in the winter and they offered to pay a sum to the Catholic church for tolling the bell at said hours."

At a time when, it was said, "everything was tinted with a touch of the orange and the green", the ecumenical striking of St. Michael's bell sounded a harmonious note in the city's religious life.

Road Link Came in 1816

At the turn of the 19th century the first road section in the area between Bath and Kingston became part of the Danforth road between Kingston and York. Unfortunately it by passed Belleville.

By 1816 the road was in such poor shape that it had to be rebuilt and although the new road closely followed the old it was re-routed to pass through Napanee and Belleville. This "Kingston road" soon brought in the first stage coach. By 1850 roads throughout the county were gravelled and conditions greatly improved.

DELORO STELLITE, A DIVISION OF THE DELORO SMELTING AND REFINING COMPANY LIMITED, OPENED ITS PLANT IN BELLEVILLE IN 1956 AND HAS STEADILY GROWN SINCE THAT DATE. THE PLANT OPERATES STRICTLY FOR THE MANUFACTURE OF COBALT AND NICKLE ALLOYS AND THE MANY FINISHED COMPONENTS WHICH ARE MARKETED THROUGHOUT CANADA AND EXPORTED TO MANY PARTS OF THE WORLD.

The company started life in this district in 1911 at Deloro, Ontario, smelting and refining silver cobalt ores. In 1914 the world's first commercial cobalt metal was produced at Deloro with processes worked out at Queen's University. It was also discovered that alloys containing cobalt, chromium and tungsten, remain hard to red heats that would soften steel. Along with corrosion resistant properties and machine components made from these alloys, known as Deloro Stellite, household carpets made from modern tough wear fibres are cut at a lower cost by knives of Deloro Stellite which last 3 times longer than steel ones. The cost of plastic kitchenware is dropping all the time through better manufacturing techniques including cleaner cutting with cobalt base alloys.

Deloro Stellite's research facilities are among the best equipped in Canada. Extensive experimental work continues on new alloys for special purposes to serve industry's ever growing range of needs.

Whitton Family Pioneers

First Cheese Factory in Area Started in 1850

By ROY PEACOCK
STAFF REPORTER

Commercial manufacture of Cheddar cheese is just over 100 years old in Ontario but as a farm industry it was underway in the Bay of Quinte district nearly two decades before Confederation.

The first recognized cheese factory in the Province went into operation in Western Ontario in 1864 but as early as 1850 farm cheese was being made in Seymour township near Campbellford and a year later in Rawdon township north of Stirling.

It was all started by the Whitton family (the great grandparents of former Ottawa Mayor Charlotte Whitton) who came to Canada from England in 1840.

After settling briefly in the Kingston area, the family moved on to Seymour township with a knowledge of cheesemaking gained in her native England, set up a basement plant to make cheese with which to feed her growing family.

About a year later the Whittons moved to Rawdon township where another basement cheese plant was put into operation — the forerunner of the first commercial cheese factory in Hastings county.

That first commercial factory, owned by a small stock company of neighboring farmers, was known as the Bree factory with James Whitton as the maker.

In 1874 another joint stock cheese company was formed at Wellman's but the firm ran into financial difficulties and was closed for a few years, reopening in 1879 as the Plum Grove Factory, James Whitton remained as cheesemaker for the next 21 years.

But the crude cheese factories of a century ago were a far cry from the large automated plants of today.

Instead of steam heated vats, automatic agitators, mechanized curd mills and compressed air operated cheese presses, it was a strictly "hand" operation.

The vats were crude combination furnaces and milk container affairs adjoining little control over milk temperatures. And what temperature control did exist was guided through careful stoking with water kept in readiness as a coolant. The milk was stirred by hand, the curd was milled by hand, and the cheese presses were crude screw operated affairs, each with a one cheese capacity.

For the most part farmers in the early years delivered their own milk to the factory. Then came the horse-drawn milk wagon with the one conveyance gathering milk all along the route.

In many cases the cheese maker was more than a maker of cheese — he was also a stock feeder, looking after hogs kept at the factory to drink the whey.

For obvious reasons — mainly sanitation and odor-stopping of hogs at the factory did not last very long.

The alternative was for the milk hauler to haul the whey back to the farm where each farmer fed his own hogs.

Eventually even returning whey to the farm in the same cans used for milk was frowned on by dairy department sanitary inspectors. But this in turn created another problem — what to do with the whey, a problem which still confounds factory owners.

Today the old cheese factory has been completely transformed.

No longer is the cheese maker expected to make his home in a few rooms over the factory. And the small cheese plants have given way to big amalgamated plants with the latest in mechanized equipment.

The old horse drawn milk wagon has long disappeared with the milk now hauled in bulk tank trucks. Modern mechanically cooled curing rooms have taken the place of the old ice cooled storage.

Even the shape of the cheese has changed with the modern day preference being 40 pound square blocks which lend themselves more readily to the modern concept of prepackaging.

And over the years the name of Belleville and Hastings county cheddar cheese has become known throughout the world.

One of the oldest cheese exporting firms in Canada was the W. S. Cook and son Ltd. of Belleville in operation for close to a century before it amalgamated with Black Diamond in 1958.

Many years ago Hastings cheese got into the news in a big way. An 11-ton cheese was made and sent to the Chicago World's Fair for display purposes. Making of the big cheese took more than 200,000 pounds of milk.

Manitoba Centennial Projects Are Practical

WINNIPEG (CP) — Prairie folk don't go much for frills. They want practical value for every nickel spent.

The trait showed up when Manitoba municipalities went shopping for centennial projects. Monuments and the like didn't have a chance against the practical possibilities of parks, community halls and curling rinks.

Only two of the province's 214 municipalities went against the current to show an artistic inclination while a handful showed their individuality with museums and libraries. Five had the history of their area recorded.

Most imaginative was Killarney, a town in southwestern Manitoba that is as Irish as its name. There, Canada's Centennial will be commemorated by a fountain depicting a leprechaun astride a turtle.

The grassed area around the fountain is designed in the shape of a shamrock.

But the vast majority — 171 municipalities — stayed on safe ground and earmarked their centennial funds for recreational purposes. A total of 91 created or improved parks while the balance built recreational facilities.

These range from the bleachers built in Argyle's centennial park to a $90,000 community centre at Kirkdale, replacing the ice centre destroyed in a 1965 fire.

Part of Great Falls' centennial funds went to what most quality as the most practical project in the province—an electrically-heated bus shelter.

Practical or not, the projects are carrying out the intent of the senior governments' plans to give every community an opportunity to have something with which to remember Canada's Centennial. To this extent, Manitoba must be one of the front-running provinces with only 13 municipalities failing to participate in the program.

The provincial monument, to be a Canadian showpiece, will commemorate both Canada's Centennial and Manitoba's 100th birthday in 1970.

A science and cultural centre, expected to cost about $20,000,000 when completed, is under construction on Main Street in downtown Winnipeg. The first building of the four-building development will be opened this summer with the fair in Manitoba's Centennial Year.

"We're building to commemorate Confederation and to serve the future," says Premier Roblin of the development which will include a concert hall, planetarium, museum of man and nature, theatre centre and art gallery.

Five years of planning went into the design of the development which Maitland Steinhof, chairman of the Manitoba Centennial Corporation, says will be in a class by itself—"There's nothing else like it in the world."

Only part of the project will be financed by federal and provincial funds. Winnipeg and many other metropolitan municipalities contributed their centennial grants and a citizens' campaign was launched among Manitoba residents. One of its purposes is to give residents a financial stake in the development.

It's rapidly approaching its $4,500,000 goal, of which $2,500,000 will go toward the cost of the Winnipeg cultural centre with the art gallery and Brandon's centennial auditorium getting $1,000,000 each.

Among the ways the money is being raised is the sale of a centennial licence plate at $5 each with the name of every buyer listed in a room at the centennial centre.

A MESSAGE TO THE CONSTITUENTS OF HASTINGS SOUTH RIDING

As the Member of Parliament for Hastings-South in this Centennial year, I am greatly honored to participate in some way in the preparation of this Centennial issue of the Intelligencer which will be read by hundreds of people this year and in the years to come.

Canada has come of age having reached its 100th year in 1967. No nation can be great if it does not continue to grow. As in any family, we will have our problems from time to time but with planning, wisdom and foresight, the right answers will always be found.

In my own experience in the political, business and community life of the Quinte area, I have found Belleville and the adjoining counties a land of opportunity associated with a kind and friendly people. The Belleville District offers a great potential for the future. It has long been known throughout the world as the home of good Canadian Cheddar Cheese and many other fine products.

None of us can say what lies ahead in the nation's second century. It will not be an easy one, however, I feel our children and their children will meet the challenge of the next century with the same determination as their forefathers.

It is my fervent hope that the citizens of tomorrow will live in peace and prosperity and will strive to build a better Canada and a better world.

THE BELLEVILLE MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION

We are greateful to Almighty God for the rich spiritual heritage of the past one hundred years that has been passed on to us. Our forefathers laid deep and broad spiritual foundations upon which the structure of our Canadian way of life has been built. From the beginning of the past century's history, indeed from the earliest period of discovery and exploration, religion has not been absent from the Canadian scene. For this we give God thanks.

Now we fare forth on the second century. Organized religion will change many of its forms and practices before 2067; but it is our hope that the ecumenical spirit and fellowship will blossom forth and come to good fruition. Of this we may be sure, as one writer has stated: "Our material resources will not save us if we know not how to use them. Our educational advances will profit us little if they enable us to reach the outer planets but fail to teach us how to walk as brothers on this one". Let us therefore join hands and march into our second century of nationhood in the faith that "righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people" — Proverbs 14:34.

Grand Trunk-Oct. 27, 1856

From First Days of Railroading Belleville Key Junction

By ROGER WORTH
STAFF REPORTER

The day the first train passed through Belleville — Oct. 27, 1856 — was a gala occasion for the citizens.

Crowds of people lined the tracks to see the 15 passenger cars and two wood burning engines pass through the city on the initial Montreal - Toronto run.

The train was loaded with celebrities and officials of the Grand Trunk Railway — operators of the new line.

When the train pulled into Belleville the passengers were officially greeted by Mayor John O'Hara and members of his council. The present Belleville Depot was used as a station by the railroad.

Construction of the railroad started several years earlier when the railroad purchased "right - of - ways" for the 855 miles of track. Each section was then given to local contractors who cut the timber and prepared the roadbed.

These contractors worked independently of each other and the contracts proved a boon to residents along the rail line. Horses equipped with scrapers were used to prepare the base.

Following the preparation of the roadbed, section gangs, composed of Irish workmen and local laborers, laid rail. Each section was laid separately and locomotives were brought in by road to test each section of track when it was completed.

Even in those early days labor troubles were apparent. The section gangs were unhappy with the pay and claimed they would obstruct the trains on the initial run. Although the train ran at a slower pace — in case any trouble occurred — the workmen did not carry out their threat.

The first scheduled runs of the Grand Trunk Railway were estimated to take about 15 hours to cover the distance from Montreal to Toronto. It is interesting to note that in 1856 the time zones had not yet been set up.

While the train schedules were set up on Montreal time, the time in Brockville was 8½ minutes faster; which was 12 minutes faster than Kingston; which was 14½ minutes faster than Belleville; which was 23 minutes faster than Toronto.

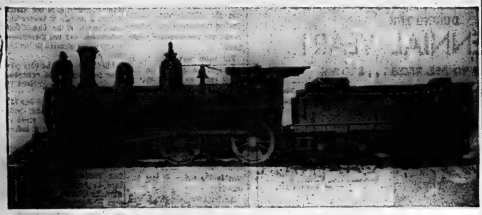
For those and other reasons the early trains were generally running behind schedule. Grand Trunk officials were criticized in many newspaper editorials for importing inferior locomotives from England. It was claimed the engines were the prime cause of the trains running behind schedule.

The total cost of the new line was 2,030,000 pounds sterling and this was considered reasonable on a per mile basis.

The first class fare on the Grand Trunk was $18. Second class passengers paid $8 for the Montreal to Toronto ticket. Early newspaper reports claim there was no difference between the two classes of travel and several sarcastic editorials were written on the subject.

In later years the Belleville stop became one of the most profitable for the Grand Trunk. In 1867 the first locomotive shop was built her and later a second shop was added to accommodate the company's 34 engines. These shops employed 130 people.

The locomotives on the system were wood burning steam engines. It required two locomotives to haul a 10-car train. Passengers crowded into the hard wooden seats and stops had to be made every 50 miles to pick up cordwood and water.



In later years private interests also built many small lines from Belleville, Trenton, Scarboro and other points. Through the years many of these lines amalgamated and became known as the Midland Railway.

The Grand Trunk leased the Midland's lines in 1884 and finally merged with Midland in 1893.

The Grand Trunk operated the line until 1923 when the government - sponsored Canadian National Railways was set up. Over the years Belleville has been an important link in the railway system and is today a regional divisional point in the CNR operation.

Art Experts Compile Book

FREDERICTON (CP) — New Brunswick art experts have compiled a book that they describe as a cultural history of the province.

Arts in New Brunswick was sponsored by the provincial government and the Canada Council as a centennial project.

Prof. W. Stewart MacNutt, dean of arts and professor of history at the University of New Brunswick, and Prof. Fred Cogswell, head of the university's English department, edited the 280-page book.

The volume surveys musical, literary, theatrical, artistic and handicraft achievements in New Brunswick. Brainchild of R. A. Tweedie, director of the New Brunswick travel bureau, it includes poems on farm life in the province.

Organization Spreads

Read First WI Branch in Quinte Area

Not only is it Canada's Centennial but it is also the 70th Anniversary of the founding of the Women's Institute which took place Feb. 19, 1897, at Stoney Creek, Ont.

At this time a group of dedicated women laid the foundation for an organization which has spread to 46 countries, and encircles the globe.

A group of farm wives of the Stoney Creek district began a new era in the lives of rural women the world over. Inspired by Mrs. Adelaide Hoodless, they gathered at Squire's Hall and before their meeting was over, the first Women's Institute was formed. Mrs. R. D. Smith was the first president and Mrs. Hoodless, honorary president.

Thus were WI's started, and a program launched that has so broad an appeal to rural women that it could not be kept within the confines of the original organization. It spread over the province, then Canada, and eventually across the seven seas.

In the East Hastings District there are at the present time 30 branches of the Women's Institute and these include Quinte, Melrose, Plainfield, Tyendinaga East, Pollard Rose - Carmel, Roslin, Consecon - Corbyville, Chapman's and Foxboro.

The first branch in this territory was organized at Read when in 1901 Miss Blanche Maddocks was sent by the Farmers' Institute, Guelph, to assist women to establish a Women's Institute branch. The initial membership was 10. Mrs. Fred Fairman was the first president and Miss Mary Hanley, secretary-treasurer, and the branch was first known as East Hastings.

Mrs. Fairman then was president of the Melrose branch (1902) and organized branches at Tweed, Foxboro, and Spencers. Mrs. Carrie English succeeded Miss Hanley as district secretary-treasurer in 1903 and was secretary of the Melrose group for a number of years.

She introduced printed programs in 1906 and a small library was started. Books were ordered through the department of agriculture but later it became difficult to obtain volunteers to look after books and distribute them, so the library was discontinued.

The Quinte Branch Women's Institute has Mrs. J. Ferrell as its 1967 president and this group had programs dating back to 1919. The first president was Mrs. James Garbutt who is still interested in its activities. This branch was organized at Clarke's School Aug. 7, 1907 and meetings have been held since that time on the second Tuesday of each month. Present day meetings are held at the Women's Institute hall the former Bayside school house on Dundas Street East.

Along with other branches, the Quinte branch worked side by side with the Red Cross Society in knitting and sewing for the service men during the two world wars.

All branches follow the same program syllabus, each opening with the Mary Stewart Collect creed followed by roll call which is usually in reference pertaining to a Canadian industry linked with agriculture. The monthly programs are based on work done by the various committee conveners and these committees include home economics and agriculture, citizenship and education, historical research and current events.

Clarke T. Rollins,
M.L.A.

On the occasion of Canada's 100th Birthday, I would like personally to pay tribute to the founder's of our nation and the people of yesterday and today who have continued to contributed to the development of Hastings County and Canada.

In my many years of public service, I have been privileged to act for you in both municipal and provincial governments, having served as councillor and warden of the county, and since 1959 as your member of the provincial legislature. During that period of time I have come to know a lot of you personally, and it has been my pleasure to serve you at all times.

May the coming years continue to bring prosperity, good health and happiness to all.

Dickey's Stand Lost Him Friends

HALIFAX (CP)—Some might argue that Robert Barry Dickey wasn't really a Father of Confederation. That's because he was the only delegate to the Quebec Conference who refused to sign the Confederation resolutions.

But those who insist he deserves to be included in that select group emphasize that he did agree to Confederation once he was sure Nova Scotia would receive the political and financial considerations it deserved.

He took such a strong stand at Quebec, in fact, that while it helped improve the financial terms for Nova Scotia's admission to the union, it lost him friends.

His granddaughter, Mrs. W. B. Almon of Halifax, says: "The other delegates were so angry at him that they didn't invite him to go to London for the formal Confederation ceremonies."

Mrs. Almon, the daughter of James Dickey, says her grandfather, a prominent lawyer and businessman at the time of Confederation, was not the austere conservative pictured in the history books.

"But he wouldn't be very popular nowadays," she concedes, "because he loved England "so much."

Mrs. Almon says she has her grandfather's diary and it shows he had a "wonderful" sense of humor—"It's very funny indeed in spots."

Macdonald Institute Filled Void

Ontario Women's Institutes feel they have a heritage in Macdonald Institute at Guelph. When Adelaide Hoodless the founder of Women's Institutes persuaded Sir William Macdonald to give funds to build this school of home economics she had a triple purpose in mind.

First she wanted a school where farmers' daughters could study home economics for the betterment of their own homes. Second, she could foresee the need for trained teachers to carry homemaking education to the new organization for rural women, the Women's Institutes.

Already the Institutes were asking for such help and the limited number of home economists available in the provinces had received their training either in the United States or at what was called the Ontario Normal School of Domestic Science and Art.

This school had been opened in Hamilton in 1900 through the influence of Mrs. Hoodless with the YWCA, the Hamilton city council the Ontario Department of education and a number of wealthy friends. The school later merged with Macdonald Institute.)

Mrs. Hoodless was also crusading to have domestic science taught in public schools and if this was to be extended, numbers of domestic science graduates would be required as teachers. There were difficulties in financing the Hamilton Institution so Mrs. Hoodless looked about for other possibilities.

Her son was a student at the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph and she knew the president Dr. James Mills. She discussed her problem with Dr. Mills and he encouraged her to try to find funds for a building which could be located at the college. Mrs. Hoodless took her appeal to William Christoper Macdonald, millionaire tobacco manufacturer; the funds were provided and Macdonald Institute was opened in 1903.

At this time Miss Mary Urie Watson, a native of Ayr, Ontario was principal of the Hamilton School of Domestic Science and Art and she moved with the school to Guelph, to become the first principal of Macdonald Institute.

MISS M. HANLEY
Secretary, Melrose, 1961

In 1941 Macdonald Institute was closed as a school to provide accommodation for the air forces. After the war a great deal of work was needed to renovate the building.

In 1946-47, there were no professional courses, only a one-year diploma course, but the staff worked with an advisory committee to plan a four-year degree course which was introduced in 1948 with Dr. Margaret McCready as principal.

Ontario Women's Institute members are familiar with Dr. McCready's progressive program. In recent years the one-year diploma or homemaker course has been transferred to the Kemptville Agricultural School. Accommodation is still inadequate for the many applicants who would particularly like to take their degrees at this school. Many WI members' daughters have been Macdonald graduates, but many others know the disappointment of having a daughter rejected because there is no room for her.

For yearr the Women's Institute has enjoyed the hospitality of the OAC, now Guelph University, for conventions and conferences. They feel they have a stake in the school because the founder of the Women's Institute movement was also co-founder of Macdonald Institute working together for better homes and better family life.

So the Women's Institutes are not unaware of the heritage that is theirs in Macdonald Institute. Now that the whole University of Guelph is in a campaign to raise funds for expansion, it is not surprising that the Institutes want to do something for that part of the university that seems especially their own.

was held in the City Hall, Belleville on Oct. 26-27, 1926. On this occasion Mrs. M. E. Weese, a Belleville resident who has served for many years in women's activities, was chairman. Mrs. Garbutt was district president at this time when 200 delegates attended.

One of the highlights through the years was a cemetery bee at Shannonville in 1930 and gates installed 1930-1932. This was accompanied with the help of a number of men in the area. A minstrel show was held in 1932 and 23 under the guidance of Mrs. Fred Parrott. The production also performed in various centres throughout the district. One of the more recent undertakings and perhaps the biggest for all WI branches in the area was assisting at the International Plowing Match held on the farm of F. Versilyes, Oct. 4-7, 1961. Tweedsmuir teas are held annually by most of the branches.

Each year courses are conducted by home economists for the branches in the district where millinery, making of rugs, preserving, glove making, public speaking, dressmaking and many other projects are made available to the community. Along with this the Institutes also sponsors the Girls' 4-H Club work which started in 1929.

In fact, as in other areas, the same and objects of the Women's Institute are: to help women to acquire sound and approved practices for greater home efficiency; to help discover, stimulate and develop leaders; to help develop a more abundant life in the communities and a deeper appreciation of the things near at hand, and to help develop better, happier and more useful citizens.

THE STYLES AND TEMPO MIGHT CHANGE BUT AFTER 100 YEARS MUSIC IS STILL MANS UNIVERSAL LANGUAGE

What would the world be like without music - radio and T.V. would be dull and lifeless - records would be unheard of - parades wouldn't interest and draw people from all over with their exciting marching music. Think of the circus - Would it stir you up inside the same without its thrilling drum rolls? What about the fair with the merry-go-round and ferris wheel - without music it would be like having a black and white world. In this fast high pressure world of today we need music more than ever to relax tensed up nerves and add excitement and color to our lives.

THE CANADIAN TIRE CENTENNIAL TOUR

of CLASSIC and ANTIQUE CARS
... a salute to our country in HER 100th year
JULY 24th to AUGUST 6th, 1967

On July 24th, one hundred Ancient and Classic Autos, from the pages of automotive history will set out on the Canadian Tire Centennial Tour for Expo '67.

To enable the greatest number of Canadians to see these fully restored vintage vehicles at close quarters there will be several starting points to the Tour — twenty-five cars from Sault Ste. Marie, fifty from Windsor (Ont.) and twenty-five more from the East Coast, Halifax, Yarmouth (N.S.) and Charlottetown. Stop-overs, parades and side-events en route will add to the educational or nostalgic interest.

The Canadian Tire Centennial Tour of Ancient and Classic Cars, some more than fifty years old, will be on display at Expo '67 — August 4th to 6th.

Sir John A. Macdonald

Old Tomorrow Liked to Call Himself Just A Quinte Boy

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Centennial of Confederation is also a tribute to Sir John A. Macdonald, whose achievements in binding Canadians into a new national unit obviated a consummate politician to the first all-Canadian here in our history.

On occasion he referred to himself as a "Quinte boy." His adopted home was Kingston and he rarely visited Belleville — the hub of the Quinte district — in the years of his greatness.

Yet the Quinte town once gave him a reception that has never since been equalled in its own political history. It also had some strategic importance for the great statesman who at that time had arrived at uncertain crossroads in his career. This is the story of that day.

He was Jubilant!

Even the pithy coughback in the local Grit journal — The Ontario — could be cause for merriment.

Bowell's paper — The Intelligencer — had proclaimed the day: "The Great Demonstration . . . 20,000 People Present . . . Nothing To Equal It! . . .

The Grit thunderbolt had reciprocated: "A For God Sake Appeal by the Chieftan . . . 10,000 People Present . . . What Cheap Steamboat Fares and A Free Lunch Will Produce . . .

By God, he was jubilant and he didnt mind who noticed it — least of all the Grits.

And of all the boisterous, if tired, crew surrounding him at the Grand Trunk special heaved gently out of Belleville station, he was the most elated. And he one who had the most vital reason for being so.

For that day of September, 12th 1878, John A. Macdonald the berated and beskemmed, had proved beyond doubt he was yet the beloved premier politician of his own fledgling Canadian Confederation.

Little more than a year earlier he had been regarded as the ailing, indeterminate political quantity of his young nation, a man whose party leadership was denounced as a figurehead of imperial disgrace.

Just 12 months from that day his power still largely rested on the negative side of survival. Now, all was being salvaged and Old Tomorrow was tentfully reasserting his sparky old self in the realm where he was most dangerous — popular acclaim.

And his enemies only had to incline an slightly from their lofty moral pinnacles to hear the 15,000 lusty echoes in the streets of Belleville, to know he was back in business — and meant business.

A mature child of politics, as his train rolled out of the little Quinte centre, he could well approve the one loss element that prevented his beloved parliamentary politics being endowed as a classical pursuit — the element of chance.

Fortune had brought him to the pinnacle; fortune had cast him in the lowest lambo of political despair. Yet, he was one of the few who could manipulate fortune — given half a chance! And this he was doing now—for fleeting chance once again had wheeled back his way.

And the Grits were feeling bitter about it.

"Why then this ovation? was the sour demand of The Ontario, as it scanned the day's triumph in Belleville. "What then has occurred to awaken this enthusiasm? Is he not the same Sir John who was sent to Coventry? These are important questions and there are several ways of answering them, one of which is creditable to the gushing thousands in our streets . . .

Reading that, John A. could gleefully rub the great nose and meditate he was once again the political sniffer bear none, since Canada was a pup.

He could also recall the print of another Grit journal, scampering across the page three years earlier — the exposed text of his own telegram that sealed the whole thing!

"I must have another ten thousand. Will be the last time of calling. Do not fail me . . . "

But chance had now passed its apogee. With skilful manipulation that ridiculous day — when CPR bribery of his own party was revealed in his own words — could be linked in full orbit to the triumph at Belleville Fairgrounds.

And so it was to prove.

Within two years, riding the crest of the wave, whose gathering tumult was hinted in Belleville, John A. Macdonald swept triumphantly from political twilight to a return engagement with national destiny.

In 1872, the youthful Confederation still knew no alternative to Macdonald as a national leader. The general election that year confirmed him once again in office as the guarantor of national unity.

But youth has no truck with moral compromise and a year later, his indignation set the guarantor on his ear in the political stadt. The Canadian Pacific Scandal had erupted from the darker labyrinths of party politics, in particular, Macdonald's own notorious "I-must - have - another - ten-thousand!" telegram — stirred a railroad magnate at the height of the '73 campaign — sent the Tory government to political perdition.

It also seemed John A.'s passport to oblivion. And this he appeared to believe himself.

"I cannot last much longer," he publicly told a party dinner at Russell's Hotel in Ottawa in November 1873, shortly after his unconscious resignation of office to Grit Leader Alexander MacKenzie. "You will find young men of your party that you will be proud to follow with the same undeviating constancy that you have followed me . . . "

In the ensuing general election of 1874, historians noted him expressing the same general theme—his approaching retirement from leadership.

A sideline comment from the governor-general, Lord,

Sir John A. Macdonald, who said "I was born a British subject and I will die a British subject," was the subject of this newspaper cartoon illustrating Canada's long concern with annexation by the United States. In the first years of Confederation, Canada felt she was the victim of both American pressure and British wavering.

Dunlevie, also noted: "It would be unwise to look too far into the future. I should be sorry to think that his public career is over. His health is precarious however . . ."

And later, Macdonald himself wrote a friend: "My Belleville boys are over, I think . . . To think this dump spirits further, even the love of power, which he helped constitutionalize so briefly before, raised its hand against him.

In November 1874, his earlier election with its big Kingston boats riding was set aside on his opponents' appeal. They joined battle again, and again John A. won, of course. But public response could only compound the pessimism. He won by 17 votes — his slimmest majority since entering politics in 1844.

In 1873 he took steps to move to Toronto, even transferring his law firm to the provincial capital. His personal acceptance of a political assignment was the key to this. Even later he was writing: "We are all getting old and have earned a rest . . ."

A rest he had more than earned, for he had served his country well. Nature had given it a destiny and stayed on to debenture for its progress. But he still had his feet, not as he reviewed his years, but the social panorama of his own times.

He had been born in the year of Waterloo, and the world had never known such change as in his time. The common man had been educated on such products of the industrial revolution as steam engines, iron ships, coal oil gas lamps, truthfully imparted to that of Napoleon the aura of some exotic, unconnected age.

John A., whose life spanned stretched back to that era, continued now to sit out his century's mounting years on the Opposition benches of the House he had contrived.

His constituents still dismiss him as the victim of his own ambitions.

He suffered something more chronic.

John A.'s affliction was greatness. Not that greatness is not mere ambition but an ungovernable compulsion for achievement, for power, and or no, the historic quality began to assert itself.

As he sat now on the Opposition benches familiar vibrations started coming in on the politician's mental telegraph, intangible, but recognizable.

Fortune was playing the field again, centering across his horizon. Cautiously Old Tomorrow stirred, then gathered himself.

Suddenly, once again the game was afoot.

If the period since his downfall had been one of personal desperation for Macdonald, it had also been one of growing recession for his country. Economic thunderbolts had been assembling over North America. These ominous marked out unemployment for the worker, economic uncertainty — at best — for the capitalist. For the independent yeoman, its stamp became the growing number of easy-term for-sale signs in the columns of the little local newspapers.

Simultaneously, Mackenzie's Grit government was unsuccessfully attempting re-negotiation of a reciprocity treaty with the United States. It was blasted by the fledgling Canadian manufacturing industry and the nation's traders on every level. Daily the protests grew with delegations seeking tariff protection from Ottawa.

Macdonald watched and found it good. He began to energy as his old self again. Then in 1876, a divided Grit party rushed any tariff adjustments from the budget.

At long last Macdonald pounced, rallying his party behind the cry of a National Policy of protection for home industries.

It could not fail to appeal in a country suffering acute economic recession.

In July the party called on John A. to address a by-election rally at Uxbridge. In public excuse was a picnic — nothing new in the almanac of Canadian political presentations. But, as the Tories sadly realized, its potential had never been fully exploited. At last, here was the platform.

A schedule was hastily drafted and local party organizations gathered to work.

At the end of July there was one at Cobourg; in August, St. Catharines; September, in Woodstock.

All the while the crowds were growing. Disaffected by national scandal, now in national distress they were returning once more, cheering with mounting affection as the old, irrepressible John A., struck among them.

Then came the great triumph of September 13th. Four pickets earlier the crowd had been reported as 8,000 at Cobourg.

Now, at Belleville, the response swelled beyond estimation.

Belleville was the homeground of one of the Tories leading ward-heelers, Mackenzie Bowell, Editor of The Intelligencer, and Orange Grand Master. Member of Parliament one day himself destined to a brief gloomy premiership after the Chiefs death, Bowell held a whiphand on local party organization.

What was wanted in Belleville was no mere tribute — but a triumph.

So the word came down, and, laboring mightily the local loyal workers fulfilled it.

While Bowell's Intelligencer beat the drum out front, party workers began setting the stage and canvassing crowds to the great all-for - nothing gala gathering.

Behind the scenes agreements were struck with steamboat and railroad companies for reduced fares between Kingston and Toronto. The Fairgrounds was booked and arrangements made to feed thousands.

Then the scenery started going up. From the Grand Trunk Station to Fairgrounds, Belleville blossomed with banners, bunting, evergreens and colored lanterns. Triumphal arches were spotted along the route.

Everywhere the slogan went up "All Hail Our Chieftain! Home - Industry and British Connection." "Sir John, Canada's Best Friend." "Protection We Must Have."

The affinity with triumphant motos did local Grits one sweet flash of vengeance.

After one arch had been laboriously completed, Tory workers suddenly did a doubletake at the grand slogan front.

One one noble-proportioned arch Tory workers flew the slogan: "The Handwriting is on the wall."

Well now, rejoiced one waspish wit, that's a pretty past when even the Tories acknowledge John A.'s sumptuous picnic as a Balthazzar's feast!

Cheering Grits gathered round suggesting such alternatives as "Pull down your Veil," "Send me another $10,000. . ." Choleric-red with annoyance, the Tories scrambled aloft and tore down their proudly waving faux pas.

Still the local Tory machine groaned on, churning out more and more pieces of organization. The Grits could only grin and bear it — leaving their local organ, The Ontario, to sound sour anthems for the event.

And The Ontario's leader writer had no stone unturned in his search for ammunition, as witness this example published the day of the picnic, decrying the closing of city schools:

"Who dismissed these schools? By what authority are the children of p r o r a t a who refuse to send the sons in subordination to the Tory leader to be driven into the streets? . . . Are the people to be forced to pay tribute to the coming of a political demigod? There are some things that may be borne with complaisance, but this unwarrantable outrage is not one of them . . ."

However, such paeans of protest diminished to a wet hiss against the roaring avalanche of Toryism that now descended on the town that pleasant Fall day.

Even the weather, it appeared, was for the Tory cause, and the day of September 12 came over the horizon cool, clear and brightly shining.

In wagons, rigs, on horseback, dressed in their rusty Victorian best, inhabitants of the country-side began moving on Belleville in the small hours, anxious to secure vantage points on its streets.

At sunrise, the ferry Prince Edward began plying across the Bay, shipping over scores of spectators and their teams with each crossing. Chugging down from Trenton came the steamer Utica, with a packed schooner in tow, carrying 300 passengers and the Norwood band. The Armenia arrived next from Napanee with 400, and then the Rochester with 800 from the Picton environs. Finally, the Oswego Belle shouldered its way to Belleville docks, with close to 1,000 and the Picton band aboard — picked up along various Bay wharves.

At the Grand Trunk station a special arrived from Kingston to send hundreds more streaming into town, "and soon all the hotels and prominent places of resort became crowded."

But not all were jamming the taverns and eating houses. The railroad station was a cheerful, animated scene where, The Intelligencer claimed, some 3,000 people awaited the arrival of an express from the west.

A long line of carriages carrying local civic and party officials arrived, indicating the end of the restless visit.

Shortly before noon, the parting matter of the Grand Trunk locomotive was heard approaching and, moments later, it bored into view. Bell ringing, steam whistle braying, it slowly clanked to a stop while the crowd cheered and cheered again.

The Intelligencer claimed there were "400 gentlemen" on that train, but it is doubtful if anyone in the throng saw fit to count immediately recognized. They sought out only one — the face beneath the puffy triangular hairline that fondly carried before it a nose like a subdued bugle. For the features of John A. were as much a familiar device of the Canadian scene as the beaver itself.

It had been 16 years since John A. had last visited Belleville. Then he had come to address a banquet, plain Mr. Macdonald, attorney general for Canada West. Since then he had been nationally hailed, knighted, disgraced and dismissed as a political power.

Now he was bidding for a comeback, seeking to manipulate political fortune on public approval. In recent weeks that approval had been shouted at him, in volume across the picnic grounds. As he prepared to alight at Belleville the familiar sound was rising again — but in a volume he could not yet be certain of.

What the Bay of Quinte town gave him that day was, in fact, greater than a Royal welcome — and this its history could prove. In 1861, thousands had trekked to town to welcome the Prince of Wales, the first-ever royal family member to visit Canada's shores. But, noted reporters of the day, the throng surging into Belleville that fall day in 1878, put that royal reception deep in the shade.

Bowell, his man and their money had succeeded beyond their own expectations. John A. alighted in Belleville — and a crowd of more than 15,000 roared their affection for the nation's fallen idol.

Official greetings over, the party mounted the long line of carriages and the procession, estimated close to a half-mile long headed into town.

A halt was called within moments. The crowd, suddenly moved in on Macdonald's carriage, swarming over horses and the traces were taken by a crew of young boys.

In this wordshall fashion, the procession resumed, progressing into the exultant crowds lining the downtown area from early morning.

They stood on streets made dusty by a long dry spell; they strained on creaking wagons and rigs to cheer him. They hung from upper windows and waved from behind plate glass of emptied store fronts. He was a common denominator for the well-to-do and ne'er-do-wells; the prosperous and those impoverished and pauperized by the frightening depression he had already pledged himself against.

John A. reciprocated the enthusiasm. Days later the Intelligencer quoted his letter to a Belleville acquaintance: "It was the most magnificent political demonstration I ever saw. It would be difficult to surpass it in any country."

It took over an hour to reach the spot where the stage had been set for the grand climax — the Fairgrounds.

Here, the customary address of welcome was formally presented the Conservative leader, he replied in kind, and the throng launched into the underwritten hunch with zest.

That sorted away the crowd — turned its attention to the festooned platform, ready for the highpoint of the day — the oration.

Fashions in public speaking have been reversed since those days of mid-Victorian Canada when a reputation could be made, defended or broken on the public platform. They were halcyon days for orators — and this day was no different.

The perorations got their sounds: from Thomas White, editor of the Montreal Gazette, followed by T. N. Gibbs, the Member for South Ontario riding.

Their style was predictable — rich, round phrases that castigated the MacKenzie government, the more magnificent the scorn the greater the cheers.

There were other public men to be heard but, apparently, the crowd grew impatient at this point.

Reported The Ontario: "The people evidently feared they were to be further imposed upon by the committee of management and took matters into their own hands by calling for the man they had come to hear . . ."

John A. picked up his cue. As the crowd burst into prolonged cheering and the band struck up "For he's a jolly good fellow" he strode to the fore and stood — now the conquering hero — acknowledging the huzzahs washing across the grounds.

Many a man, hailing the aging figure up there on the platform, could not remember Canadian politics without John A. And, as he waited for yet another ovation to die out, The Chief may also have recalled that the Prince had, too, in recent times had indicated his years as a detriment.

His first reported words to them, seized the hull by the horns.

Skittily blending in anecdote, he recounted his 61 years, 32 of them consumed in politics. But now, he said, he was "getting old for good or evil" and the day's demonstrations served as endorsation for his political or personal course.

He drew cheers: His cousin who vilified him for seeking sympathy for the "sorrows of a poor old man." Well, he was not ashamed to be had grown old in the service of his country. If his life had been long, it had had its fair share of good.

The assembly was said to flourish by hear and see and he certainly flourished by being attacked Prime Minister Mackenzie either had a bad memory or was "a very great economist of truth."

He was magnanimous: His government had remained in power for nine years, (No, no," they shouted back at him). Yes it had — because both parties should know what were the responsibilities of office.

He was homespun: Whenever he could not hold office with honor he resigned with the consent of his friends. Also among his truest friends were those from the Bay of Quinte.

"You've got them yet," a voice called from the crowd.

He was the last main speaker of the day, before the throng tired, tiper in spots, hoarse and dusty began flowing back down town.

There was more to be seen. With dusk, a great succession of illuminations, gaslight and Chinese lanterns speckled the town.

Macdonald and party notables took a drive through the streets to enjoy the spectacle fireband before the concluding event of the day — a banquet for more than 150 at the Dufos House.

Here, more speeches followed with the interminable list of toasts as beloved of Victorian banquets lasting past midnight.

As the guests departed the streets were falling quiet, their sporting illuminations dying out. For John A. they could still resound with the later bullseyings of 13 hours earlier.

What had begun unexpectedly months before at Uxbridge had swelled to unbelievable proportions in this town.

There would be another session of parliament, but it would see him once again reasserting himself. And then, in 1878, would come another election and he would be returned to good grace and 13 years of power from which only death would remove him.

But, for the present, in this Fall of 1878, there was yet one more picnic, this time at Simcoe. There would be more crowds, more cheering. But in

The Intelligencer Serving The Quinte Area for Over 133 Years

"The Intell" 4th Oldest Ontario Newspaper

By BARRY McCULLAGH
(Staff Reporter)

When The Ontario Intelligencer changed its designation to its present name of The Intelligencer, in August, 1965, another milestone was passed in the history of this newspaper going back more than a century.

The decision to adopt the abbreviated name was dictated by the newspaper's more recent history. In 1930, Belleville ceased to be a two - newspaper city and The Ontario, founded in 1870, merged with the older publication The Intelligencer, founded in 1834.

This merger took effect when W. H. Morton, then publisher of The Ontario, purchased from the shareholders The Intelligencer Printing and Publishing Business and acquired the premises at 257 Front Street where The Intelligencer was published.

In any event the newspaper, as it is today, had become to be known popularly as "The Intell" and that was another factor influencing the change in the name to The Intelligencer as being more appropriate to the day. It is interesting to note, moreover, that editorials from this newspaper quoted by other newspapers are invariably identified as being from The Belleville Intelligencer.

The new designation came with the newspaper's move from Front Street to its present location. For a short period, pending installation of equipment here, publication was maintained in the old building at 166 Front Street. All other phases of the business, including editorial, advertising and commercial printing had been carried out in the present building since May 1965.

A brief history of journalism in Belleville is appropriate at this time.

In a paper presented to the annual meeting of The Ontario Historical Society in Belleville in 1930, J. Owen Herity, manager of the chamber of commerce and editor of The Daily Ontario from 1910 to 1920, recalled that journalism in Belleville had its beginnings in 1831, more than 60 years after the arrival of the first settlers.

In 1834, after several earlier newspaper ventures had failed, George Benjamin founded The Weekly Intelligencer. Thirteen years later, Mackenzie Bowell, who had served an apprenticeship with Mr. Benjamin, became a partner in the business. In 1846 Messrs. Bowell and Moore became proprietors. Three years later Mr. Moore retired and Mr. Bowell became sole proprietor.

In 1873 The Intelligencer Printing and Publishing Company acquired the paper, Mr. Bowell being the principal stockholder. Some years earlier in 1867, The Daily Intelligencer had begun publication and appeared continuously until April 1, 1920. Mr. Bowell was knighted on becoming Prime Minister of Canada on Dec. 21, 1894. He remained in office until April 27, 1896.

The direct progenitor of The Weekly Ontario was The Victoria Chronicle, established in 1841 by Washburn and Sutton. It was published in the Victoria Buildings on the northeast corner of Victoria Avenue and Front Street. The name "Victoria" was used because Belleville was then situated in the Victoria parliamentary division.

In 1843 The Victoria Chronicle was acquired by Elisha Miles and he ran it successfully until 1873 when it was amalgamated with The Weekly Ontario. More than 20 years before (in 1850) Mr. Miles changed the name of the paper to The Hastings Chronicle and it continued to be known by this name.

In 1870 J. W. Carman and Jacob Yeomans formed a joint-stock company, known as The Ontario Publishing Company. On Saturday, March 26, 1870, they issued the first number of The Daily Ontario. The following week the first number of The Weekly Ontario appeared. Mr. Carman became editor and Mr. Yeomans was business manager.

The Ontario Publishing Company had published the paper for five years when T. S. Carman, founder of The Napanee Express, came to Belleville and acquired the property. For a time he retained the services of his brother as editor. Mr. Carman held control until 1910 when W. H. Morton and his brother-in-law, J. O. Herity, purchased the business.

J. O. Herity retired from active editorial work in 1920 and was appointed secretary-manager of Belleville Chamber of Commerce and industrial commissioner for the city.

In 1922 W. H. Morton acquired full control of The Ontario, and F. W. Rathman became editor-in-chief, with A. G. Davis as advertising manager.

Belleville ceased to be a two-paper city early in 1930 when Mr. Morton purchased from the shareholders The Intelligencer Printing and Publishing Business and acquired the premises where the newspaper was published. The merger was completed on April 1, 1930, when the first issue of The Ontario Intelligencer was published.

The Intelligencer, as it is now termed, is one of the oldest newspapers in Ontario, having maintained continuous publication since 1834. The Kingston Whig-Standard has been in existence since 1810, The Brockville Recorder and Times since 1820 and The Picton Gazette since 1820. These four are Ontario's oldest newspapers.

Dr. Gerald A. Morton is the present publisher of The Intelligencer and H. Myles Morton is business manager.

UN No Nearer Mideast Accord

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The emergency session of the United Nations General Assembly, nearing the end of its general debate on the Middle East crisis, remains far from agreement today on its best course to ease the bitter Arab-Israeli conflict.

"Everything is very much in a melting pot—nothing is crystallized yet," said one Asian diplomat close to the search for a resolution that could attract wide support among the 122 UN members.

Eleven countries are on the speakers' list for today's meetings and 15 nations are to present their views Thursday. The general debate is scheduled to end Friday.

The assembly has before it three resolutions — from the United States, the Soviet Union and Albania. But time is given a chance of obtaining—in its General Form — the two-thirds vote necessary for approval.

The assembly is expected to recess after the general debate ends, for perhaps as long as a week, while the private consultations continue.

Russian sources said the Soviets are sticking by their resolution. It calls for condemnation of Israel as the aggressor against Egypt, Jordan and Syria, withdrawal of its troops from the Arab territory it seized in the six - day war that began June 5 and payment of preparations for Arab property destroyed.

The U.S. resolution also calls for Israeli withdrawal but in the context of a broader settlement of the basic issues underlying the Arab - Israeli dispute.

Although there is wide agreement on the necessity for withdrawal of Israeli troops from Arab territory, some diplomats discerned a trend toward greater cognizance of Israel's security requirements than was apparent a week ago.

As one delegate put it, there is a growing awareness of the "need for withdrawal of troops and withdrawal of danger."

The Israelis have made clear they do not intend to pull back their troops without iron-clad assurances that the threat to their nation is ended.

Easier Divorce Advocated

For Details See Pages 24 and 25

OTTAWA (CP) — Highlights of the recommendations of the special parliamentary committee on divorce in its report Tuesday night:

Grounds for divorce in Canada be widened by addition of marriage breakdown, cruelty, desertion for three years, wilful non-support for one year and bigamy.

Retention of current grounds of adultery, rape, sodomy and bestiality.

Recognized causes of marriage breakdown to a mental or physical illness of one spouse; criminality and imprisonment; alcoholism and drug addiction; disappearance for three years; wilful non-consummation; three years of separation with cohabitation and no reasonable expectation of its resumption.

Courts be empowered to deal with such matters as alimony, maintenance and custody coincident with divorce.

County courts be given jurisdiction in divorce equally and concurrently with Supreme Courts of the respective provinces.

Ontario courts be empowered to decree judicial separation — a power possessed by courts of all other provinces.

Deserted wives be enabled to acquire Canadian domicile and authorized to start divorce action in province of residence during previous year.

Condonation and connivance be made discretionary bars to divorce, not absolute bars as now.

Amendment of the Dissolution and Annument to Marriage Acts to widen grounds for divorce applicable to Senate, which hears divorce applications for Quebec and Newfoundland residents.

Negro Leader Unhurt by Bomb

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — The home of J. L. LeFlore was shattered by an explosion early today but the 63-year-old Negro leader suffered only a slight cut over his eye.

It was the third incident aimed at LeFlore.

Police Lieut. Donald Riddle said the blast knocked the six-room frame house off its foundation and left a hole about two feet deep and three feet across.

LeFlore said he was sleeping on the opposite side of the house from the explosion.

"If they had put it on the other side it would have gotten me," he said.

Asked why someone bombed his home, LeFlore said:

"They must be warped in their beliefs."

Buffalo Negroes Set Fires

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP)—Approximately 200 young Negroes roaming in gangs Tuesday night and early today, smashed windows, set fires, looted businesses and buried rocks and beer cans at passersby and armed, helmeted police.

The disturbance on the city's east side quieted down several hours before dawn.

At least two dozen persons were arrested and seven injured, including four policemen. None of the injuries was reported serious.

Police said the outburst was triggered early Tuesday night when a stone was tossed at a bus. A woman passenger was hit in the mouth and lost two teeth.

Big Two Back Curb On A-Arms

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—The United States and the Soviet Union plan to submit shortly to the Geneva disarmament conference a joint proposal for a treaty to curb the spread of nuclear weapons.

When the treaty draft goes before the 17-nation disarmament group—probably within the next few days—it may still be minus a provision for safeguards against violations.

U.S.-Soviet negotiators have been unable for months to agree on the safeguards—or inspection—clause. But U.S. diplomats are hopeful of reaching accord on this soon after submitting the proposed treaty at Geneva, if not by then.

This became known following a dinner meeting Tuesday night between U.S. State Secretary Dean Rusk and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko at the headquarters of the Soviet United Nations mission.

The Rusk - Gromyko session was a follow-up to the conferences last weekend between President Johnson and Premier Kosygin at Glassboro, N.J.

Hong Kong Asks China For Water

HONG KONG (Reuters)—The Hong Kong government plans to renew its appeal to China for additional water supplies as the British colony prepares for severe water rationing, an official spokesman said today.

So far China has not replied to Hong Kong's request for an extra 2,000,000,000 gallons of water up to the end of July, in likely made by later May 22.

Castro Unswayed

Kosygin Fails to Stop Demand for Revolution

HAVANA (AP)—Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin and Premier Fidel Castro have disagreed in their talks, the official Soviet news agency Tass indicated today.

Tass reported from Havana that the two leaders had "a frank exchange" of opinions Tuesday on a number of questions of mutual interest.

Use of the word "frank" in such announcements normally means disagreement. There was no mention of "identity of views" or any other phrasing indicating accord, although Tass called the talks "friendly."

Tass did not disclose subjects discussed.

Disagreement between Kosygin and Castro had been expected. Diplomatic sources said they believe Kosygin's chief aim was to get the Cuban leader to make his demands for the overthrow of Latin American governments with which the Soviet Union is seeking to trade and that Castro was certain to refuse.

Kosygin, who arrived in Havana from New York Monday, said was found by one Israeli battalion at a captured Arab base.

The note, described as written by an Israeli officer, expressed apologies for the "behavior" and called for "peace soon."

Toronto Teachers Settle

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto's public and high school teachers Tuesday climaxed months of salary disputes and threatened mammoth walkouts by approving settlement providing a 11-percent pay increases.

And for the first time, Metropolitan Toronto's separate elementary school teachers will be paid as much as their public school counterparts.

The Metro separate school board Tuesday night approved a pay scale for its 1,300 teachers identical to one approved hours earlier by the Toronto board of education.

The agreement between the Toronto board and its 2,200 high school and public school teachers will cost the board more than $1,000,000 over the life of the contract, which ends in September, 1968.

A teacher with no experience will start this September at $4,800, a $500 increase. An honors degree teacher with a maximum specialist's certificate will jump $2,200 to $10,200.

The Toronto board settled with its 2,000 public school teachers early in the day and with the secondary school teachers at an afternoon meeting.

Blueberry Production Is Social Problem People Are Doing It for Fun of Thing

OTTAWA (CP) — Blueberry production is something of a social problem, the Commons agriculture committee was told Tuesday.

Andre Saumier, assistant deputy minister of rural development, said that instead of being well-organized harvests, blueberry gathering tended to be an occasion "for universal rejoicing."

Most Canadian blueberries grow wild and the department is working to establish controlled production such as is used for growing raspberries and strawberries, he told the hearing studying estimates of the forestry and rural development department.

Gathering has been more "folklore" than industry, he said. As well as research to determine areas with proper soil and weather conditions for production, there was a need to train a work force to handle the crop.

The federal and provincial governments were each paying half the $230,000 cost of 13 projects investigating new growth, marketing and processing methods and half the $1,300,000 cost of 37 projects for acquiring and developing production land.

Drug Worse Than LSD Circulated

WASHINGTON (AP)—An official of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration says his agency is investigating the reported use of a new drug called STP which is supposed to be more powerful than LSD.

The report came from John Finlator, director of the FDA's drug abuse control division, in testimony Tuesday before a House of Representatives government operations subcommittee.

Finlator also indicated the criminal organization known as Cosa Nostra is becoming involved in the distribution of LSD, the so - called mind - expanding drug.

Finlator said that the only word his agency has on STP consists of rumors that the drug is being circulated on the west coast and in New York.

Decision on Lake Pipeline Requested by End of August

Water hungry municipalities in the Quinte area will decide by August 31 whether they are interested in a $15,000,000 proposal by the Ontario Water Resources Commission to pipe water from Lake Ontario.

Yesterday OWRC officials presented the proposal to municipal officials from Belleville, Trenton, and neighboring townships who were given the two-month period to make up their minds.

The proposal, if implemented, would more than double the present cost of water in Belleville, but as Len Owers, assistant General manager of OWRC said "rates day of cheap water are over."

Attending yesterday's meeting, in addition to officials from Belleville and Trenton, were representatives from the Sidney and Thurlow, Ameliasburg and Murray townships.

The plan would be to pump water from Lake Ontario at a point near Wellington and after processing, deliver it by pipeline to terminal storage reservoirs at Belleville and Trenton.

The cost of this service to Belleville consumers — if all municipalities went along with the scheme — would be 40 cents per 1,000 gallons for Belleville users and 45 cents per 1,000 gallons for Trenton customers.

In both instances local distribution costs and pressure pumping would be additional.

The present cost of water for domestic purposes in Belleville is 33 cents per 1,000 gallons.

Mr. Owers said if one or more of the schemes municipalities dropped out of the scheme the rate would increase.

The $15,000,000 project would be constructed by the Ontario Water Resources Commission, with municipalities paying the money back over a 40-year period.

The decision of whether the project goes ahead is entirely up to the municipalities concerned.

John Root (Wellington-Dufferin) vice chairman of the OWRC said his organization had a $72,500,000 water supply and pollution control program consisting of close to 150 different projects in as many municipalities across the province.

"It's not a give - away program. The money has to be paid back over a 40-year period," he said.

The possibility of piping domestic water supplies from Lake Ontario rather than depending on the Bay of Quinte and other sources, was broached about a year ago at which time a survey of the proposal was asked.

For Belleville the matter is a pressing one as the city filtration plant is operating close to capacity and a decision must be made soon whether to pipe Lake Ontario water or enlarge the present plant.

Yesterday Mayor Jack Ellis said Belleville's decision would be ready in two months time.

With this OWRC officials said that the other municipalities involved have their answers ready by the same time.

Three-day Holiday Weekend For Many City Residents

Dominion Day observance will mean a three-day holiday weekend for most Bellevillians —just not everyone is going to be away at the same time.

All stores in the city will be closed on Saturday, July 1, in accordance with a Dominion statute and a local bylaw, while as a result of a government ruling, Monday, July 3 will also be a holiday for bank and government employees.

And some of the local merchants have also decided to take advantage of the Monday holiday and have announced they will remain closed on July 3.

Stores announcing they will remain closed on Monday are men's and ladies' wear outlets, hardware stores and jewellery stores.

But whether stores remain closed on Monday is a matter of individual decision as Mayor J. R. Ellis says there will be no action by council declaring July 3 an official holiday.

To further confuse the issue city hall employees will take Friday, June 30 as the holiday, while many of the local industries are taking the next day off.

The Intelligencer will publish on July 1 and will observe the Dominion Day holiday on Monday.

Charge Not Reduced

Wilmot Kinley Scott will go on trial in Belleville the first week in September on a capital murder charge in the shooting of his wife.

The 37-year-old Maynooth truck driver was ordered on the trial yesterday after Magistrate R. C. Jackson refused to reduce the charge against him.

Scott's defence counsel, Belleville lawyer Robert Temple, sought a reduction in the charge to non-capital murder at the end of a two-day preliminary hearing.

Mr. Magistrate, however, said it was not the hearing's function to anticipate what another court might decide.

Scott, charged May 7 after his wife was found fatally shot with their daughter and son on Highway 62 near Maynooth, is expected to go on trial when the Supreme Court session opens in Belleville September 5.

It will be the first murder case in a Hastings County court in four years.

Only a matter of moments,
Spurred by a million tears,
Then you will be reunited him,
Beyond the reach of fears.

—Lovingly remembered by daughter Linda, grandchildren Allan and Brenda.

CHISHOLM — In loving memory of a dear husband, father and Grandpa Chisholm, who passed away June 28, 1963.

So many things have happened,
Since you were called away,
So many things we want to tell you,
Had you been left to stay.
Every day is filled with sorrow,
Every night is filled with tears,
Though almost you are ever near,
Still longing for you dear.

—Sadly missed and always remembered by wife Ethel and family.

CHISHOLM — In loving memory of a dear father and great grandfather, who passed away June 28, 1964.

Farewell dear Dad, thy work is done,
Thy willing hands will toil no more,
A loving Dad so kind and true,
No one on earth we'll find like you.

—Lovingly remembered and sadly missed by daughter Mary and son-in-law Frank and grandchildren, Dorothy, Kathy, Susan, Brian and Allan.

CHISHOLM — In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, who passed away June 28, 1965.

We can no longer hear,
In our home you are always near,
Sadly missed and always remembered by wife Jean, daughter Marie-Jean and family.

CHISHOLM — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather Alan Roy, who passed away June 28, 1964.

Fond memories of you when no one loved
Precious memories kind and true,
In our hearts you will remain,
Because we thought the world of you.

—Inserted by Lawrence Cerra.

Time takes away the edge of grief,
But memories linger on and on.
—Lovingly remembered by son and Gord and daughter-in-law Audrey and Dorothy and Dave.

MacMILLAN — In loving memory of a dear husband and brother Allan MacMillan, who was killed June 28, 1960.

We do not see you,
We do not hear you,
To bring you home,
For we know it is not there.

Are very hard to find.
—Lovingly remembered by his mother and family.

WHALEN — In loving memory of a dear son and brother, Terry Whalen, who passed away June 28, 1966.

We little knew when we said goodbye
That more,
The sorrow the day would bring,
For the call was sudden, the shock severe,
The grief unending.

—Lovingly remembered by mom, Dad, Brothers and Sisters.

IN MEMORIAM

CHRISHOLM — In loving memory of my twin brother Allan Roy Chrisholm who passed away June 28, 1964.

I don't know when I woke that morn,
The sorrow the day would bring,
And so we sudden, the shock severe,
The grief unending.

To part with one I loved so dear,
Time turns it's sad years to memory,
Why some things have to be,
In His wisdom God has planned,
Beyond my power to see.

—Lovingly remembered by twin sister (Lizzie) Mrs. Simon Roberts, Mrs. Lloyd (Jean) Kimmett, Mrs. Lloyd (Lena) Kimmett.

Schools Close on Thursday

High school students have gone away from classes or finished with exams for a week or more but that long looked for day for elementary school pupils is tomorrow.

On Thursday, June 29, all elementary school pupils in the city will park it up for another semester and it will be one long carefree holiday until after Labor Day next September.

At the secondary schools the exams are over but staff members are still on the job attending promotion meetings and getting out report results.

But officially the secondary school term will also be completed on Thursday.

Golden Hawks Aircraft Turned Over to City

The sole remaining F-86 Sabre jet owned by the RCAF, its throttles wide open and flying at 500 miles per hour, has screamed low over Zwick's Island Centennial Park last night as the Lions Club turned over a Golden Hawks aircraft to the city as a park showpiece.

It was the second last time that a Sabre jet will fly in Canada and was a fitting tribute to the post-war operational jet, later to become familiar across Canada as the plane flown by the RCAF Golden Hawks aerobatic team.

The one remaining Sabre jet in a few days will be flown from Trenton to Chatham, N.B., where the Golden Hawks originated and were trained.

Last autumn the local Lions Club purchased one of the now obsolete Golden Hawks aircraft, had it completely repainted and last week set it up at Zwick's Island.

In a brief ceremony last night Belleville Lions Club president, Art Newsham, turned the pedestal mounted aircraft over to Mayor J. R. Ellis, in his wife in turn handed the plane over to Alderman Donald Williams as chairman of the parks board.

Then as Group Captain A. J. Pudsey, Canadian Forces Base, Trenton, unveiled a plaque to the local Lions Club, the only operational Sabre jet in Canada screamed over in a fly-past into the setting sun. The pilot was Flt. Lt. Ernest Glover, former member of the Golden Hawks team.

Group Captain Pudsey said that in its time there were no better aircraft than the F-86 Sabre jets. The air force was proud of the Sabre. Its top speed of 630 miles per hour had made it "totally competitive".

Airforce personnel experienced a tinge of nostalgia to see the aircraft phased out of operation, he said.

All Together--Everybody Sing!

Music belted into the airwaves at Canadian Forces Base Trenton last night as the big air station continued its week-long calendar of Centennial events. Last night it was the turn of the younger set — like the front line of the base's Sing Out ensemble, entertaining crowds on the parade square.

$1,358,979 in Debentures Sold to U.S. Bond Dealers

The city of Belleville has made a "particularly attractive" sale of $1,358,979 in debentures to bond dealers in the United States.

Mayor J. R. Ellis said yesterday the debentures were sold at par in U.S. funds with an interest rate of six and one half per cent.

In the sale the city receives a premium of $3,000 and also an exchange premium of $108, which will be invested in Canada.

Mayor Ellis said the debenture sale at a particularly attractive coupon rate proved the city's credit was still exceptionally good.

The bulk of the debentures were purchased by two unnamed American insurance firms, the balance being bought by Manufacturers Hanover Trust, a company which has bought city debentures in the past. A small amount in short term (one to six years) debentures was purchased by the Bank of Montreal.

Crippled Children See Base

TRENTON — A special tour of CFB Trenton has been arranged tomorrow for about 50 crippled children from the Quinte area.

The youngsters will be shown the entire air installation where they will dine, see a film program, and hear a private concert by the 52 - piece CFB Trenton Brass and Reed Band.

On Base's Island, a special encore of the evening's search and rescue simulation will be presented for the children.

Tomorrow evening, sport again takes the spotlight in the base Centennial Week program. An exhibition softball game between the CFB Trenton Flyers and a CFB Toronto team begins at 6.30 on the south station sports field.

Architects Retained For Loyalist Campus

Architects have been retained to design the Quinte-area Loyalist Campus of the regional Ontario College of Applied Arts and Technology.

However, this is no indication that final approval of a site is in the offing.

Toronto architects Barnett and Rieder have been signed up for the project, confirms Rev. H. J. Mainey, chairman of the college's board of governors.

But the governors are still appraising a series of sites in the Belleville-Trenton-Frankford area for location of the campus, he added.

"I'm hoping that some day soon this will be decided — in the not too-distant future," said Father Mainey.

Recently, D. J. Fraser, Trenton representative on the board and chairman of the campus property sub-committee, said he hoped a decision on a site would be made by mid-summer.

CARS JUMP TRACK

COCHRANE, Ont. (CP)—Ten cars of a southbound Ontario Northland Railway freight train were derailed 10 miles south of here Tuesday in the ONR's fourth derailment in three weeks. No injuries were reported in the accident, blamed on rail kinks caused by heat.

Y's Activities

Belleville area residents who will be visiting local swimming areas might be happy to know that several of their fellow citizens are now qualified YMCA Senior Life Savers. This award is presented to those people who successfully complete a rigorous swimming examination, written test and Practical pool demonstration.

Instructed by Jack Steadman and Grant Maidment, the following are qualified YMCA Senior Life Savers: Mrs. Elsie Standing, Miss Suzanne Lidscott, Miss Gail Perks, David Ellenton, Richard Morden, Wilbur Purcell, Jack Robson, Michael Margetson, Victor Alves, Albert Globe, Jan Stam and Charles Jordon.

Grant Maidment and Jack Steadman were granted YMCA Life Saving instructor awards. Miss Suzanne Lidscott received her YMCA Aquatic Instructor award.

Promote Fleming

HALIFAX (CP) — Two Progressive Conservative members of Parliament have formed a committee to promote Donald Fleming's candidacy for the party's national leadership. Robert McCleave, MP for Halifax, said Tuesday he and Cumberland MP Robert Coats have hired a full-time organizer who will meet with delegates to the September leadership convention in Toronto.

Youth Drowns Near Cannifton

A 15-year-old youth, described as a strong, avid swimmer, drowned last night in the Moira river at Cannifton—where he regularly went swimming.

Police say they believe Gary Keller, son of Mrs. Fred Keller, 23 Russell street, struck his head on an underwater rock while diving north of the Cannifton bridge.

A family relative said the youth was a strong swimmer and went to the spot almost nightly.

Last night he was with two neighborhood companions when the tragedy occurred.

Provincial police were first called at 9.25 p.m.

With city firemen they began dragging the river and recovered the body at 10:45 p.m.

Meantime, students at Harry J. Clarke public school—where young Keller attended grade 8 —this morning lowered the school flag to half-mast.

"He was a pleasant good-natured lad and it was a shock to the whole school this morning," said principal R. S. Fairchild in a family of four children.

Mr. Fairman said the youth's schoolmates were taking up a collection to send to Mrs. Keller, whose husband died last month ago.

The youth was the second-

Police Patrol Bayside Area For Suspect

The hunt for a suspect in an abduction - rape case — in which three men already have been arrested — continued today without any trace of the wanted man.

Provincial police continued to patrol the Bayside area where the suspect was believed to have fled into dense bushland Monday.

His flight sparked an intensive search by police and an air force helicopter of the area reinfested with mosquitoes and blackflies.

The manhunt for four suspects started Sunday after a Trenton taxi driver, Joseph Gould Jr. - claimed he was beaten on a sideroad near Bayside and a woman companion abducted.

The three now in custody are expected to appear in court tomorrow. They face charges of rape, abduction and assault occasioning bodily harm.

Award Contract For Plant

A Toronto area construction firm, Cok Contracting of Scarborough, have been awarded the general contract for the construction of the new Superior Electric plant to be built in the Hillcrest district south of 401 Highway.

The contract calls for construction of a structure with 34,000 square feet of floor space.

Excavation for the new building is expected to get underway early in July.

Barbecue Planned At Base

TRENTON — The RCAF Yacht Club and Power Squadron and town officials are readying Friday's welcome for the 15 - Expo - bound cabin cruiser that will stop over here that afternoon.

The program calls for an official greeting for the Toronto area boaters at the east end of the Murray Canal Friday mid-afternoon.

Many of the marine travellers will be docking at Base's Island, CFB Trenton, where a barbecue has been planned Friday evening for their enjoyment.

A number of the "Expo Flotilla"—crews will be staying overnight before continuing to Montreal, and they have been invited to Friday's free, open-air dance on the south - side parade square.

Entertainment will be provided by a 14 - piece dance orchestra, the CFB Trenton square dancers, and the station "Sing Out" group.

Highlight of the evening will be the judging of entries in the Centennial beard - growing contest, to take place at 10 p.m.

An Exciting World

It has been said before but it may be said again: that is man's creativeness, as seen in the symbols of his marvelously-gifted imagination, have never been concentrated to such a degree of excellence as they are at Expo.

For all the problems a man faces in his time is a living monument to the best that is in him, to his inventiveness and desire to improve in many spheres of endeavor. Yet the darker side of his nature also comes through. Man is far from perfect and even the Christian pavilion reflects this degree of ambivalence by depicting aspects of the human dilemma that are less than admirable. Man's own dissatisfaction with himself is reflected by the ideas of eminent personalities. For instance, Professor Bruno Zevi of the University of Rome, who gave a Noranda Lecture on Architecture at Expo's Du Pont auditorium last week, discussed the subject from the standpoint of "Progress or Regression."

Architecture of course is a theme that is very much in the forefront at Expo, as it is in all the communities and cities of the world. It will be paramount here in Belleville as the city contemplates plans for downtown redevelopment.

What about mental health? For the most part the best of man's inner powers are reflected by Expo. There too are some of his more undesirable characteristics. What about the people who are finding it difficult to cope with life's pressures, who are withdrawing into themselves and finding they are unable to relate either to people or to external challenges? Supposing they were to visit Expo, would they not be stimulated, excited and shaken out of their weakness and sense of inadequacy?

In this context it is worth noting that early in July the Canadian Mental Health Association is sponsoring a congress on an Expo-related theme, "Man and His Mind." Some 600 delegates from across Canada and the United States will attend and they will examine mental health as it influences and is influenced by politics, government, economics, society, education and the community.

More and more people are entering mental hospitals in Canada. One wonders how much of their trouble is associated with the boredom leading to introspection and other neurotic tendencies. Yet, one of the things you notice at Expo is the good humor of visitors. Crowded the island site may be, but there is a holiday spirit abroad. Strangers smile and help each other with directions. Pavilion hostesses and other Expo staff do their bit with a will. And the general impression is of a world which is a good place in which to live.

Vatican's Stand

Pope Paul's encyclical endorsing the traditional principle of celibacy in the priesthood is a document which should have profound influence on people of all faiths.

At a time when traditional concepts of morality are being questioned and even disavowed, the Vatican's stand on this issue is one that commands respect. The so-called "new morality" is not as new as may be supposed. There were other periods in history when similar liberalizing influences were at work. Today, however, other factors such as population control, family planning and modern methods of contraception, have served to undermine the institution of marriage and respect for codes of behavior between individuals that once were observed more strictly than they are today.

Society will continue to make its own judgments on this matter. Nevertheless, the Pope's stand in an important one that comes down on the side of family life, social order and moral and physical stability.

Aden Terrorism

The Proctectorate of Aden is very much a misnomer these days. Scheduled to obtain its independence from Britain on July 9 the colonial reign made up of Aden itself, and 16 sultanates and sheikdoms on the southwest coast of Arabia has erupted into serious violence.

British troops have been battling Arab terrorists and last week the Aden Legislative Council building was burned down.

Recurring unrest was aggravated recently by a riot of British Arabian Liberal forces in support of officers suspended by the defence ministry and by rivalry between the British trained force and the federal guard made up of former police units and personal troops of the various sheikhs.

Whether Britain decides to postpone independence for the region remains to be seen. One way or another the prospect of stability being maintained in such a highly-charged atmosphere seems remote. For Britain it is Palestine and Cyprus all over again.

Eye on Election

Johnson Showed Statesmanship at Summit Parley

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Johnson has begun his long-distance run toward seeking re-election next year. The summit conference with Soviet Premier Kosygin seems certain to help improve his public image.

The two meetings at Glassboro, N.J., showed the deep-seated desire for peace among the American public. The president's more optimistic and moderated appraisal of the summit conference fruits—and his refusal to make any cheap propaganda out of Soviet difficulties—contrasts starkly with the doctrinaire statement of Soviet rightist gives by Kosygin before he left the U.S.

Johnson may have scored heavily with the voters who have shrewd hunches that the way he has built the American role in Vietnam into a commitment of more than 500,000 troops while trying to bash North Vietnam to the peace table.

He also has an appeal to use to the militant supporters of a tough Vietnam line if the war still is dragging on 15 months from now.

In short, he can't lose both sides of the street by calling for patriotism in a time of war.

He showed how it is done last Friday night at Los Angeles when, a few hours after his first session with Kosygin, he got roaring approval from a fund-raising dinner for saying, "No president has ever been turned upon when he was engaged in trying to protect his country and its interests against a foreign foe."

It is taken for granted that Johnson hopes somehow the war will be over or at least leave easy by November, 1968—election month. Otherwise, his re-election task will be more difficult.

The acid test of any real progress at the summit could be that U.S. decision quietly to slow or halt the bombing and see what happens—whether the Communist pre-condition is valid.

What Johnson showed at the just-concluded summit was his wide style of greater restraint, with less hitting between and more dignity—when he does appear.

He is being credited with points for statesmanship as a result of the summit and also for the veiling U.S. entanglement in the Middle East war.

He also has had the advantage of reduced publicity about the Vietnam war in recent days, although U.S. battlefield losses have been heavy in several engagements.

The Middle East and the summit have reduced the radio, press and television emphasis on Vietnam.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

June 28, 1947

Frank Domenico, who for many years has been an ardent worker in the interests of the Knights of Columbus throughout the Belleville area, was elected Grand Knight of the Belleville branch.

Alderman and Mrs. H. J. Allin left for a two weeks' vacation at "Holiday Inn", Haliburton.

Mrs. Pat Murphy, of Millstone, Sask., is visiting Mrs. Delmer and Mrs. Charles Tice on Bleecker Ave.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Woodley are leaving the city today for two weeks' vacation at Opeongo Lake, Algonquin Park.

30 YEARS AGO

June 28, 1937

The Rev. I. B. Naylor, who has been pastor of the Tabernacle United Church for the past four years, closed his pastorate on Sunday and will leave for Brantford where he will assume the pastorate of Wellington Street United Church.

Miss Kathleen Mcock of this city is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Moore in Kingston.

Mrs. A. Sell, Bridge St. E., is spending a month's vacation at Presqu'ile.

Miss Beau Dolan, Church St., is visiting friends in Chicago.

Miss Bertha Thompson is home from Calgary on a visit to her mother, Mrs. H. A. Thompson, Everett St.

Mr. and Mrs. S. V. Ray, formerly of this city, and for the past five years residing in California, have arrived here to spend two months with friends in the city and district.

G. M. James will leave shortly for Toronto where he will be engaged in writing departmental examination papers. Later he and Mrs. James will take a trip through the Southern States.

Arthur Bird is home from Toronto to spend a few days.

50 YEARS AGO

June 28, 1917

The schooner Ida A. Marsh is in port here with a cargo of coal from Oswego. The vessel is owned by Capt. J. Smith of this city and is one of the best vessels on the lakes.

William Stewart has left for the Province of Manitoba where he will spend several months.

Strawberries of excellent quality were plentiful on the local market today and sold at 15 to 18 cents per box.

'The Cat' Is Back In Antigua

Vancouver Province

The sounds of history are reposing themselves on the romantic West Indian island of Antigua. The swish of a cat o' nine tails, once used in floggings on the decks of British sloops, may soon be heard again.

Coinciding with Antigua's new Independent constitution, a law is to be introduced providing for flogging with the "cat" in cases of armed assault or robbery with violence.

Some Antiguans no doubt will regard this as a strange way to celebrate their new political freedom. Others will regard their government's move to put the clock back as a vindication of history.

Britain's greatest naval hero, Admiral Nelson, once commanded Antigua's dockyard and a squadron of Royal Navy sloops based there. He regarded the cat o' nine tails as an excellent disciplinarian.

Modern Antiguans seem to agree with him.

Court Sentences Vary Greatly

Vancouver Sun

Mary Lynch of the national parole board touched on a weak link in the administration of justice in Canada with her statement that there is too great a variation in the sentences handed out by Canadian judges and magistrates.

What seems to be needed is a sort of judicial board of review to which sentences passed in the courts could be submitted to be examined for uniformity. It may be said that the courts of appeal have such a function now, but an examination of this sort, whether it is done by the appeal judges or by a committee of judicial or quasi-judicial board, should be autonomous.

Miss Lynch cites the example of two rapists held in adjoining cells in an eastern prison, one serving time for the other if he were released. Such a difference in sentences for identical crimes is not always the same, of course. A judge often may be moved by extenuating circumstances and pleas, being human, may differ in their assessment of "extenuating" factors. But, like juries, judges may differ fundamentally from one another in their mental attitudes to various sorts of crime. Nowhere is this difference more visible, at times, than to the layman who reads the reports of "sex crimes." One BC judge, who died only a few years ago, had a reputation for being so staunch while oldtimers will recall that Mr. Justice Hodgins contrasted a charge of rape in particular with the utmost skepticism.

Unequal treatment in the courts, as Miss Lynch observes, can create bitterness among prisoners and interfere with efforts at rehabilitation. But it should also weigh on the public conscience. It is something to which penal reformers and the legal profession generally should give increasing attention.

Our Man at The United Nations

Ottawa Journal

The name of Canada's Ambassador to the United Nations, George Ignatieff, falls strange on many Canadian ears because it is somewhat unusual in itself and because he was appointed to the position only last year.

George Ignatieff, however, has been around, if never quite so much in the limelight before; ordinarily ambassadors aren't supposed to make news. He served the U.N. after being Canada's permanent ambassador on the NATO council in Paris for almost six years. Before that he was assistant under-secretary of state for External Affairs; before that, deputy high commissioner to Britain. He was ambassador to Yugoslavia for two years.

The name Ignatieff is Russian, the ambassador's father being Count Paul Ignatieff, a minister of education under the Russian czars who fled Russia after the Bolshevik revolution. George Ignatieff was five when he arrived in England, 14 when he came to Canada. He is a Rhodes scholar — and one of the handiest in Canadian diplomacy.

Tight Little World

We must recognize that we are living in a much different kind of society from that of even a decade ago. This is the age of computers, television, insurance research, jet travel and nuclear techniques and mass production and exposion have reduced the size of our world and a change in one corner can become a global phenomenon. Look at the worldwide popularity of the Beatles. The same can be said for the miniskirt and other aspects of today's fashions. None of us are immune from happenings on the other side of our planet.—George Hees in an address to young Conservatives in Winnipeg.

Seaway Pollution

Waterloo Times

With more and more attention focussed nationally on the dangers of increasing pollution of U.S. waterways, it seems to be difficult to reach the sensibilities of the only persons who can control it — those using them.

Last weekend, for example, more persons apparently dumped a variety of waste into the upper reaches of the St. Lawrence river than ever before in a comparable period. By the time most of it reached the Narrows, the pollution mess was so apparent it attracted everyone's attention.

The practice can be curbed. This has been proved in the past when personal pride in the waterway gradually brought an end to massive garbage disposal in the river.

If last weekend's dumpage is a sign of what's ahead, it won't be many years before the St. Lawrence will be kindred to almost totally polluted Lake Erie.

Loan Fund

Federal Aid To Housing Limited

Toronto Daily Star

Aside from housing, the federal government's aid to cities and towns is so limited that we must question Ottawa's intention to discontinue entirely its Municipal Loan Fund.

The $400 million fund, born amid federal-provincial controversy in 1963, has undoubtedly served its turn as an antidote to general unemployment, and is no longer needed for that purpose.

But it also helped to speed up municipal works during a period when they would otherwise have slowed down because of financing difficulties.

Toronto's east-west subway, for example, got a timely $29.5 million from the fund, of which Metro was required to pay back only 75 per cent. because the work thus financed was finished before March 31 last year.

All told, over 1,200 Canadian municipalities borrowed nearly the full amount of the fund to build schools, hospitals, roads and sewer mains, transit systems, auditoriums, libraries, parks, recreation centres, street lights and sidewalks.

Projects financed by it, give an estimated 36,000 man-years of work. The only complaint that can fairly be made about the fund is that it is useful mainly for future recessions, when it could be quite possible to turn this tap on and off at once.

But should municipalities at favourable interest rates be confined to periods of general recession? There are parts of Canada, especially in the Atlantic provinces, where high unemployment and municipal poverty are both chronic.

These provinces, and perhaps others, might welcome a permanent municipal loan fund at interest rates slightly above those paid by the federal government.

Before getting out of the municipal loan business entirely — and the next recession — Ottawa should explore this possibility.

Today in History

June 28, 1961 . . .

The Berlin airlift began 19 years ago today—in 1948 some days after Russia had closed all land and water communication between Western Germany and West Berlin. The Soviet action followed protests about moves towards self-government in Western Germany and the introduction of the new Deutschemark which the Russians regarded as a threat to East German currency. The blockade continued until May 12, 1949 and in that time 1,583,686 tons of supplies were flown into the city.

$35,000 Auto Workers?

Inflation — 20 Years From Now

St. Catharines Standard

Walter Reuther, the United Auto Workers union president, is getting ready for new contract negotiations with the big auto makers. In an apparent attempt to prepare the industry for the auto workers' demands for two years to come, Reuther told reporters last week that UAW union members will be paid $35,000 or more a year in 20 years or so.

It seems to us that there are only two ways in which auto workers — or anyone else for that matter — can make such big salaries. One way would be for the worker to triple or quadruple his present productivity. If this could be achieved, auto manufacturers would either have to cut back on production — and employment — or boost car sales to fantastic levels.

It's far more likely, however, that if an auto worker's annual pay hits the $35,000 mark, it's because inflation has pushed it there. And when that time comes, the auto worker's wife may find herself paying a dollar or more for a quart of milk, just the same for a loaf of bread, and $3 a pound for the Sunday roast. An average city tax bill will probably run to $1,300 a year, and house rentals of $400 a month will be rare bargains.

And when all this has come to pass, $35,000 a year might not look as good as all that.

Britain's Foreign Secretary Centre of Political Storm

LONDON (CP)—British politics, lacking a summit and plagued by squalid party suspicions, is going through a bad patch at home and abroad.

Prime Minister Wilson was scheduled to be questioned anew in the Commons today on a maladecous security issue. But Foreign Secretary George Brown is the man with real problems.

Brown, 52, came under intensive questioning in the Commons Monday over his much-criticized United Nations speech on the Middle East last week. Wednesday, he is scheduled to defend at a Labor party meeting an equally-criticized speech on Africa.

Such a barrage of press criticism hit Brown when he arrived here from New York at the weekend that observers feel it was inspired within the Labor party itself. The fear is that Wilson could no longer afford to leave his emotional and rival for the party leadership at the foreign office.

Another theory is that Brown is, as one newspaper put it, the lightning conductor of his party. Being the "most vulnerable figure tends to get hit whenever a ure on the political landscape," storm blows up.

Just now, in this theory, he is paying the price of Britain's Kosygin-Johnson Summit between President Johnson and Soviet Premier Kosygin. Brown's speech with a vague feeling of exclusion and disquet, having themselves been so long at the summit.

Large sections of the population feel affronted in fields as far apart as the Middle East war and the government's proposed location of a new monster jet airport for London in an idyllic countryside.

Brown's Aden statement fired Jan. 1 as the date for independence, with a three-year defence agreement. It delighted Tories as much as it angered Labor MPs. Conservatives saw it as a retreat against Egypt and Jordan. They feel Wilson and Brown talked themselves into trouble with both sides.

On another question, Wilson is accused by some Tory MPs of smearing a civil servant while trying to extricate himself from an argument on whether a newspaper violated a voluntary system of censorship relating to defence matters. The prime minister is scheduled to answer a question on this matter today.

"For highly personal reasons I have every reason for caring about the integrity, the peaceful defence and the right to live of Israel and there is not the slightest chance of my forgetting that."

MPs said later this was clearly a reference to the Jewish attraction of Koestler and Sophie.

It was the sort of homely, down - to - earth statement expected from Brown, who said when he became foreign secretary less than a year ago that he would try to see world affairs from the viewpoint of his constituency town of Swadlincote.

Pulp Mill Town Blossoms in 6 Months

LEBEL - SUR - QUEVILLON, Que. (CP)—A $78,000,000 pulp mill, billed as the largest and most modern in Eastern Canada, is shaking Reedy into full production in this one - time northern wilderness.

Built during the last two years by Domtar Ltd. of Montreal, the mill is the first in the East to include a full-scale plant producing almost all the chemicals needed in pulp production.

When the mill achieves capacity production of 730 tons day—likely this fall—it will produce more than $30,000,000 worth of gross sales annually to Domtar's accounts. About 75 per cent is to be exported.

The project, located 300 miles north of Montreal, includes a company townsite. Started from scratch only six months ago, the town now has 1,500 people, 250 houses, various stores, a school, church and hospital.

By 1970, the site is expected to have 5,000 population.

The mill now employs almost 700 people, backed by a woodlands force of another 1,100 workers.

Domtar officials, who recently conducted a two-day press tour of the site, say there are two basic points that make the mill unique.

First, it is highly automated and designed so the various steps in turning logs into pulp can be controlled through a few large panels. It makes widespread use of closed-circuit television so a few operators can watch several operations.

Then it is at capacity, output will average three tons daily for each hourly rated mill worker—about double Domtar says, the productivity of 10 years ago.

Secondly, the integrated chemical plant should mean lower production costs. The plant will require shipments of only a few sulphur chemicals and salt—which will come from Domtar's mines at Goderich, Ont.

The plant is expected to have some excess caustic and chlorine which will be sold. Parts of the plant were designed by Chemech Engineering Ltd. of Vancouver.

Decision to locate the mill here was based on availability of black spruce, regarded by paper men as the source of the best-quality pulp.

Domtar has cutting rights on about 8,000 square miles of area reaching Reed. More than 80 per cent of cut-over cutting is black spruce.

The mechanized woodlands operation is backed by $2,000,000 worth of equipment, including specially designed, over - size trucks that carry 40 to 50 cords of wood over private roads from the cutting sites directly to the mill.

It is expected the mill will eat up about 500,000 cords of wood a year. Even with a regrowth cycle of 100 years, caused by the climate, Domtar officials estimate they have enough woodland to operate in perpetuity.

The mill is also expected to mark the beginning of a small social revolution in Quebec woods. Traditionally, woods workers have been housed hitchhouses near the cutting areas, getting home every 2 months.

At this site, however, several cottages now are being built in town, driving to work each day in buses. About half of the 30 houses to be built during the next year have been marked for cutters, and an even larger number are expected to become full-time town residents the following year.

Although Domtar has assumed responsibility for the townsite it says it does not plan to keep it a company town. Houses are being sold to employees as quickly as possible, at prices now ranging from $14,500 to $18,500.

Domtar has an agreement by which it will buy back the houses of employees who move out within a specified time.

The town council and school board now are made by appointment, but elections are to be held in November, 1968.

Miss M. Ruth Gaw Director of Nursing

Mr. Philip Rickard, administrator at Belleville General Hospital announced yesterday the appointment of Miss M. Ruth Gaw as director of nursing at the hospital.

A graduate of the Hospital for Sick Children School of Nursing at Toronto, Miss Gaw is presently a nursing consultant with the mental health division of the Ontario Department of Health.

Following graduation Miss Gaw became assistant director of nursing at the Queen Elizabeth Hospital in Montreal and in 1960 became director of nursing at Guelph. In 1964 she resigned her position at Guelph to continue studies in nursing administration at McGill University, where she obtained her Baccalaureate degree in 1967.

Miss Gaw will take up her new duties in Belleville on July 24.

New Road to Prince Edward County

The final concrete pour on the new Deseronto bridge will be made Friday. Officials expect the huge structure will be completed in late August or early September.

Cement Deck on Skyway To Be Completed on Friday

PICTON (Staff) — A spokesman for the construction company engaged in work on the new "Quinte Skyway" bridge said yesterday the work was progressing on schedule. The final pouring of cement to complete the decking will be made this Friday. Curbs and cement railing are following along close behind. Workmen are now operating over Prince Edward County shores with only a few hundred feet to go with the cement deck. The huge span for which rises about 100 feet above the Bay of Quinte will be lighted and the steel supporting the bridge is being painted green. Work also is progressing favorably with the new highway leading from the bridge across Green Point and into Picton. No word has been received, as yet, regarding the official opening date but it is presumed to be late in August or the first part of September before the bridge will be ready for travel.

New Officer For Salvation Army Arrives

PICTON (STAFF) — Lt. Charles Eyre is the new Salvation Army officer, stationed in Picton. He comes from Whitby, is married and has two children.

A service of welcome is being held in the citadel Thursday at 8 p.m. Lieut. Eyre succeeds Capt. and Mrs. Purl Gee, who have officiated here for the past year. Mr. and Mrs. Gee left Tuesday for Oakville. Capt. Gee has secured a leave of absence from his full time service with the Army. A farewell party was held following Sunday night's service and they were presented with gifts to commemorate their fine work while in Picton.

Churches in Madoc Mark Centennial

MADOC — St. John the Baptist Anglican Church celebrated its 102nd anniversary with a centennial service conducted by Rev. J. H. Thompson. Members of the congregation attended in centennial costume.

John Kemp read the lesson and the choir, accompanied by Miss Joan Brennigan, sang two selections.

Awards were presented to the pupils of the church school, who sang three selections during the service. Mrs. Joan Reynolds, superintendent, thanked the teaching staff and the parents for their support and the young people, with the aid of the tennis, of each presented offered prayers for Crusade.

A parish picnic was held following the service.

An inter-faith centennial service, sponsored by the Ministerial Association of Madoc was held in Central Hastings High School Sunday afternoon. The choirs of Madoc and Elzevir also paraded to the school from the Anglican and United Church.

Rev. David Potter, Madoc United Church, conducted the service with the assistance of Rev. M. Heimbecker, Pentecostal Church; Rev. William Millgan, Standard Church; Rev. James H. Thompson, Anglican; Rev. F. J. O'Neill, Sacred Heart Church; Rev. Walter Smith, Wesleyan Methodist. A duet of the voices sang the centennial prayer composed by Miss Joan Brownson of the choir.

Proceeds went to the Canadian Bible Society.

Mutual Fund Insurance Bit Closer

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's second biggest mutual fund moved closer Tuesday to winning parliamentary approval of a new company that will sell life insurance to the fund's shareholders.

United Accumulative Fund Ltd. revealed terms of legislative amendments that will guarantee predominantly Canadian ownership of the insurance firm United Investment Life Assurance Co.

This is a concession to the Liberal New Democratic Party, whose members have threatened to prevent passage of the incorporating bill in the Commons.

John M. Godfrey of Toronto, president of United Accumulative, outlined terms of a 15-year schedule for Canadian ownership in an appearance before the Commons finance committee.

He said after the hearing that New Democrats Frank Howard (Skeena) and Arnold Peters (Timiskaming) have promised to let the bill through, given specific assurances of eventual majority ownership by Canadian residents. They have said in the Commons they want more than a verbal promise.

The finance committee is expected to approve the bill Thursday.

Caravan To Arrive Saturday

PICTON (STAFF) — The Centennial Caravan will arrive in Picton Saturday morning about 10 o'clock. The caravan will pass down Main Street on it's way to the Fair Grounds where it will open to the public from Saturday, Sunday and Tuesday. The caravan will be closed all day Monday. The public may tour the vans, which display a century of progress in Canada, until 11 p.m. Saturday. The same times will hold for Sunday and Tuesday. Refreshment booths for public will be set up by the community centre and one near the main entrance to the grounds. Sunday will see an interesting denominational church service at 3 p.m. in the county centre.

Will Induct New Minister On Thursday

PICTON (Staff) — A special induction service for Rev. Sidney E. Bates will be held at Cherry Valley United Church Thursday evening June 29.

Mr. Bates will be taking over as the new minister of the Athol-South Marysburgh charge from the Rev. George Puttenham as of July 1. Mr. Puttenham will be leaving for Plainfield.

Mr. Bates, while attending college, served as Minister of Shannonville pastoral charge. He along with his wife and daughter are expected to move into their new charge some time in July.

Beef Prices Higher In July

OTTAWA (CP) — Increased demands by Expo visitors will help send beef prices higher in July, agriculture department economists predict.

Their detailed forecast for the month released Tuesday for the month, released Tuesday:

Poultry meat — Prices are likely to remain low with large stocks and increased production.

Eggs—Prices are expected to remain low until the seasonal decline in production begins later in the summer.

Beef — Strong domestic demand, reinforced by Expo visitors, is expected to strengthen prices.

Pork—Supplies are plentiful but prices should stay steady.

Potatoes—Prices are increasing as stocks decline to nearly normal seasonal levels.

Apples — Supplies are still available from cold storage at firm prices.

Other fruits and vegetables—Seasonally-low prices for early summer fruits and vegetables are indicated by favorable crop reports.

No Decision On Scurry Trading

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto Stock Exchange said Tuesday no decision has been reached as to whether trading will resume today in shares of Scurry-Rainbow Oil Ltd.

Trading in the company's shares was suspended last Thursday pending release of further details about the company's announced mineral find in northeastern Saskatchewan.

The company gave some details of tests of drill holes Monday, but the exchange held up trading again Tuesday saying shareholders needed time to assess the impact of the company's report.

The exchange said in its statement Monday night that assays of 11 holes drilled on the property showed nickel values ranging from .08-per-cent to 1.07-per-cent nickel, with three five-foot sections in two drill holes ranging from 2.11-per-cent to 2.5-per-cent nickel.

Copper assays from the drill holes were reported ranging from a trace to .43 per cent.

Mother Feels That Both Girl And Boy Should Read Books on Sex

Dear Doris: We have two teen-age daughters and are all very close. Have had frank discussions about boys, sex, etc. They both date, but are not engaged, and I should appreciate a names of books on dating, etc., recommended by you.

There seems to be so much unhappiness because of poor sex relations in marriage, in fact two of my friends were near nervous breakdowns until they consulted their doctors. In both cases the first thing the doctor did was to call in the husbands, and really discuss the whole thing through.

Doris, I feel that the only way to ensure a happy marriage is for both the bride and groom to read these books; and I felt that if I had them for our girls, they, before marriage, could read them and bring them to the fiance and ask him to read them. (I wonder if they would do this or if they would be embarrassed?)

If you feel that a girl should pass these books on to her fiance to read, perhaps you could say this in your column. — Content Reader.

Dear Content: A lot depends on the girl's own approach to sex. Help like the kind you are giving to your girls can make all the difference.

Embarrassed or not, a girl takes a big step toward happiness when she trusts out this subject for frank discussion with her beloved — provided she knows what she is talking about.

I'm sending you my recommended list on Sex and Dating (and will send it to anyone else who asks for it and sends in 10 cents and a stamped envelope.

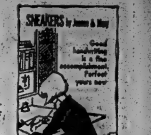
Dear Doris: I am writing in answer to "Balking". My husband once suggested that I get a job. My answer was "Why should I hold two jobs and you only one?"

When a woman gets an outside job she still has all the cleaning, weeding, ironing and meals to attend to. If a man is left alone he not only gets someone to mind the children, he sends his laundry out and gets someone to do the housework.

So why should a woman be expected to hold two jobs and a man only one? — Tired After One Job

Dear Tired: Ever heard of teamwork? Without it, the two-job system fails, causing frayed nerves, ruined dispositions, unhappy and neglected offspring.

I know some high-class homes who wield a clean dish rag and flap a tasty steak.



Dear Doris: Would you please let me know if it is proper for a girl to go out with a boy younger than herself?

I am going steady with a boy 17 and I am 20. I care for this boy. But yet people gossip and make fun of me. Do you think if you care for someone dearly, age should matter? — Mixed Up

Dear Mixed Up: Quite proper — but often far from satisfactory, in the long run.

If people are laughing out loud, maybe the age difference is so obvious it is funny. At 30 and 37 you might match each other better, in maturity. Think about it from this angle, forgetting that strong physical attraction for a minute or two.

Doris reserves the right to ignore anonymous letters. If you have a legitimate beef, sign your name to your note about it. All names are kept confidential.

Salads Will Fill Menu Gaps

By MARY MOORE

If you have one hot plentiful meat dish, salads will fill all the rest of the menu gaps.

For instance prepare a panful of Oven Fried Chicken and serve with it fancy cole slaw, sliced tomatoes and marinated cucumbers and round out the meal with hot rolls. Or put a roast of beef in the oven, let it look after itself. With it serve potato or mixed carrot salad and

Dinner Menu

Baked Stuffed Beef or Veal Hearts with Mushroom Soupsauce; Hashed Brown Potatoes; Broccoli; Relish Tray; Dill Spears, Carrot Curls, Tomato Wedges; Rhubarb Pie; Cheddar Cheese; Coffee.

GREEN SALAD — PROFESSIONAL STYLE
(Serves 8)

3 cups chopped head lettuce
12 medium spinach leaves, torn
¼ unpared cucumber, scored and sliced wafer thin
8 radishes sliced
8 stuffed olives
¼ cup chopped parsley
¼ cup chopped chives or tiny green onions
¼ tsp. accent
2 tomatoes, each cut into eighths
French dressing
Cut clove of garlic
Combine in utility bowl the lettuce, spinach, sliced cucumber, radishes, olives, chopped parsley and chives or onion and accent. Moisten (but do not drown) with French Dressing and toss in cut salad greens. Rub wooden salad bowl with cut side of garlic clove. Turn in salad and garnish with tomato wedges. Serve at once.

I was gratified to hear that my Marinated Mushroom and Green Pepper recipe given here before Christmas, 1962 was popular. Encouraged by your enthusiasm I am repeating it now.

MARINATED MUSHROOMS AND GREEN PEPPERS
(Repeated from Dec. 1962)

¾ lb. medium-small raw mushrooms
1 large green pepper
Onion French Dressing (see below)

Under running water scrub the mushrooms until you are sure they are clean. Cut them in halves down through the stems. Drain and dry. Wash the green pepper and cut in half and remove seeds and ribs. Cut into pieces about 1 x ¼". Combine. Pour over Onion French Dressing:

¼ cup salad oil
2 tbsps. vinegar
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. sugar
¼ tsp. paprika
¼ tsp. dry mustard
1 tsp. onion salt
¼ tsp. Worcestershire sauce (optional),
½ clove garlic, sliced

Combine all ingredients. Shake well, and pour over mushrooms and green pepper in bowl, cover and refrigerate 24 hours, stirring 3 or 4 times. Drain at serving time and serve cold. Delicious as a cocktail snack or with hot or cold beef.

NOTE: If desired you can make an easier Onion French Dressing by using 1 full package of dry mix. Put this into the graduate flask manufactured for the purpose and add vinegar, water and oil as directed. Shake well.

Ann Landers

Simple "I'm Sorry" Enough for Any Funeral

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I just read the letter from the boy whose father died. He wrote to tell you the stupid things people said to his mother at the funeral. I hope some of those ignorant folks will pay attention to his letter and to mine, as well.

Recently we lost our adorable four-year-old daughter. She was retarded, but it didn't matter to us. We loved her just the same. I can count on one hand the people who said, "I am sorry" — and let it go at that. Almost every person said, "She is better off —" or "It's really a blessing —" or "Now you won't have to worry anymore." One woman suggested that now I would have more free time and could join the garden club.

Please, Ann, tell your readers if they attend the funeral of a retarded or a handicapped child, it isn't necessary to remind the parents that their child was different from other children. A simple "I'm sorry" is enough. — TEMPLE TEXAS.

DEAR TEMPLE. Here is your letter and I can add nothing except my thanks to you for writing it. I do hope you understand that these people meant to say something supportive and comforting, but, unfortunately, their remarks were grossly off target.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am sitting home alone watching TV, while my husband is at a party. It is quite an affair I am sure, but he forgot to tell me about it until 5:30 tonight when he telephoned to ask me to make sure his suit was ready and his shoes were shined. Of course it was too late for me to get my hair fixed and find a baby-sitter for the children.

This is not the first time he has pulled this stunt and it probably won't be the last. I am a nice looking girl and can carry on a good conversation. If my husband is ashamed of me I can't figure out the reason. I guess he has a better time at parties when he can behave like a bachelor. Will you please tell me what to do about this humiliating situation? — SUB-BASEMENT BLUES.

DEAR SUB: Party invitations are usually sent to the house, addressed to Mr. and Mrs. or if it's a phone invitation, one wife calls the other. I am mystified as to why you learn of these parties at the last moment.

Hunt up some sitters who can be called on short notice and don't be so fussy about your hair. The next time he pulls this crap, get yourself ready and go with him.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please say something to people who talk instead of eat. Six of us go out to dinner together a couple of times a week. One woman in the group starts to talk the minute the food arrives and she doesn't touch her plate until everyone else has finished. Then we all have to wait for her to eat her main course before we can get our dessert. She is, unfortunately, a very slow eater. Sometimes we have to wait as long as 30 minutes.

This habit of hers always makes us late for the theatre or the card game or whatever we have planned. If you have a cure, please pass it on. — X. ASPERATED.

DEAR X: If no one has told this woman to stop talking and to start eating, someone should. Since you are the one who wrote, I suggest that you be the one to tell her.

One-piece Bathing Suit Popular This Year

MONTREAL (CP) — The tide is turning in swimwear. The one-piece bathing suit that so shocked the fashion world 40 years ago when Annette Kellerman first wore one is edging up on the two-piecer.

Andrew Greene of San Queen, Ont., says that the increase in the popularity of the one-piecer is noticeable this summer. By next year he expects sales will be equal to those of two - piece outfits. From the west coast, Chic of Calgary and Catalina report that the one-piecer is the top fashion news this summer.

The one-piece suit has also been raking in top honors in Canadian competitions. In the annual Collection shown in Montreal, the Dulon Label Award for the best bathing suit while went to a one-piecer, elasticized and shirred, by Pedigree of Montreal. Its coverup for the beach dramatized the scene front shirring in a printed voile cape.

Then in the Ontario Eedee Awards for excellency of design at Expo 67, three of the four nominations in the swimwear category were one-piecers, including the winner, a nylon tricot maillot lamé-laced with gold, by Keyser-Roth of Canada.

Sea Queen, winner of the category in the two previous Eedee competitions in 1952 and 1956, was represented in the nominations by two one-piece suits. One was a mauve maillot with a coverup of silk poodside pyjamas. The other, a jacquard powernet suit with a crosstrack high neckline and bare back, was teamed with a white batwing, ankle-length coverup in nylon cerankle crepe.

The interest in coverups is most evident. Increasingly swim outfits, both in one or two pieces, have their own beach or pside coverups.

It may be merely a see-through voile jacket, such as the short white jacket with wrist-length sleeves worn over the black two-piecer, by Beatrice Peet of Montreal. Another example is the short - sleeved, ankle version of the same fabric falling open from a shoulder collar neckline and worn over a one-piece black maillot.

Or the coverup may be a matching print such as Sea Queen's barren pasta with ankle ties or its tent coverup, to top a matching one-piece maillot or a two-piece bra and hip-hugger pants.

The return of one-piece swimwear does not necessarily mean modesty. A red-and-white polka dot suit by British Jantzen has a plunging neckline that, by unbuttoning three subs, opens to the front farther down to the navel.

Some one-piecers cut abruptly from shirred front halter to expose much of the sides and all of the back. Another cut curves from under one arm back down to a low hip level, exposing a wide horizontal strip of flesh almost to the navel.

Fabrics are fantastic. Practically any fabric now can be used for today's swim outfits. The old bobby knits have given place to such combinations as an Ottoman rib - knit balance stretch nylon. Stretch nylon comes in many patterns, with a jacquard perhaps the most popular choice.

Piano Pupils Give Recital

On Wednesday evening the pupils of Mrs. Emily Veley, R.M.T. presented their annual recital in the auditorium of Prince Charles School. Baskets of flowers and musical symbols provided the stage setting as the performers played for the many interested parents and guests in attendance.

The program opened with the singing of O Canada with James Noakes at the piano, followed by a welcome by Sheldon Ross.

Beginners performing for the first time were: Carlene Martin, Lynda Marry, Lori May and Julie Hancock. They were followed by the advanced beginners: Timothy Rigby, Pamela Bridger, Dawn Joy and Debora Sapley.

Other performers were: grade 1: Wanda Brant and Christine Atkinson; grade 2: Helen Kattuah, Judith Smith and Margaret Lewington; grade 3: Heather Haines, Joel Oliver, Sheldon Ross, Melanie May, Mary Tuckias, Dawn Brown and Susan MacGregor; grade 4: Gordon Smith, Frances Faulkner and Ann MacGregor; grade 5: Debora Grass, Beverly Lewis and Ann Kesinki; grade 6: Carolyn Lewis; grade 7: Catherine Irvine, Jean Wellbridge, Evelyn Terry, Linda Noakes and Patricia Hindleston; grade 8: Penny May, Heather Sutherland and Sheryl Spencer; grade 9: Susan Sweet and grade 10: James Noakes.

The program was highlighted by duets, played by Linda and James Noakes, and Beverly and Carolyn Lewis. Mrs. Veley and James Noakes concluded the musical portion of the program with a duet.

Murrey Atkinson introduced the guest speaker, Rev. Cecil M. Smith, who paid a tribute to the students and their teacher for the evening's entertainment. He presented prizes to the students with the highest number of points for their year's work in each of the grades. Winners were: beginners, Julie Hancock; advanced beginners A, Debora Sapley; advanced beginners B, Pamela Bridger; grade 1-A's, Wanda Brant; grade 1-B, Christine Atkinson; grade 2-A, Helen Kattuah; grade 2-B, Judith Smith; grade 3-A, Sheldon Ross and Susan MacGregor (tied) grad3 3 B Merr Tuckias; grade 4-A, Ann MacGregor; grade 4-B, Gordon Smith; grade 5 Debora Grass; grade 6, Carolyn Lewis; grade 7, Linda Noakes; grade 8, Sheryle Cretney; grade 9, Susan Sweet and grade 10, James Noakes.

At the close of the evening Heather Sutherland made a presentation to Mrs. Veley on behalf of the students and Julie Hancock presented her with a bouquet of red roses.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

The engagement is announced of Barbara Dorothy Brown, only daughter of Mrs. Norman B. Brown, Belleville and the late Mr. N. D. Brown, to Lawrence Harold Worden, Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. Biagi, Haliburton, Ontario. The marriage will take place in St. Michael the Archangel, Belleville on Saturday, July 20 at 4 p.m.

AT HOME

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Desmoreat, Marmora, will be "at home" to greet friends, neighbors and relatives on Sunday, July 9 from 2 to 4 p.m., on the occasion of their 25th wedding anniversary.

* * *

Mrs. Harold Bartrage, St., of Toronto, formerly of Belleville is a patient in Doctor's Hospital, Brunswick Avenue, Toronto.

The worship service, given by Mrs. Settle, stressed the importance of Christian fellowship.

Mrs. Wylie introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. Janette Thompson, supervisor of child care and adoption of the Belleville Children's Aid Society and an officer in the Canadian Mental Health Association.

Mrs. Thompson quoted statistics which emphasized the inadequacy of present mental health facilities, although these have improved greatly during the past four decades. The speaker outlined the part citizens can play in bringing the care of the mentally ill in line with that of the physically ill. Local care, with no separation of home and community ties and shorter hospitalization periods will diminish the need for social readjustment and vocational rehabilitation.

CMHA is at present embarked on a program to have schools provide psychological adjustment service, broaden child care and day nursery services, heighten public awareness of housing needs and the need for special social and educational facilities for the "not quite retarded".

Mrs. L. F. Reid thanked the speaker and a question and answer period followed.

Mental Health Topic At Study Guild Meet

The garden of the president, Mrs. H. G. Wylie, was the setting for the annual supper meeting of the Women's Study Guild.

Mrs. Ralph Ellis read a letter from the Guild secretary, Mrs. Foster child and a $5 birthday gift will be included in the next semi-annual report.

New officers elected are: president, Mrs. R. Settle; vice-president, Mrs. Jerry Cochrane; treasurer, Mrs. Rupp Roelof; secretary, Mrs. G. E. Adams.

Alouette Club Women Honor Teacher

The mothers of children who attended French courses during the school year, gathered at Mrs. Claire Hall's home, 5 Montgomery Blvd., Belleville, last week, to honor Mrs. Jeanette Pilon.

The surprise party had been organized by Mrs. Hall, assisted by Mrs. Rejeanne Morin and other women of the Alouette Club.

After thanking Mrs. Pilon for what she has been doing for the children, devoting much of her time to teaching them French after regular school hours and on Saturdays, for the past five years; Claire Hall made the presentation of a set of cut glassware and a tray as a token of gratitude.

The honoree's great expressed appreciative thanks. Refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed. Last Saturday afternoon, on the occasion of their annual picnic, on St. Jean Baptiste Day, the Alouette Club which organized these courses with Mrs. Pilon's help, also honored its teacher. The president of the club, Mr. J. A. C. Berube, presented on behalf of all the club members a valuable token of appreciation to Mrs. Pilon.

Sunday School Picnic

FRANKFORD FULL GOSPEL CHURCH

FRANKFORD — Frankford Full Gospel Tabernacle congregation held its annual Sunday School picnic Saturday at Trent Park.

A turkey dinner was served at noon, following a ball game in which John Dunlop's team was defeated by Bob Lockwood's team.

Graduating Pupils Honored at Banquet

The Sir Mackenzie Bowell School grade 8 graduation banquet was described by students as "great" and "terrific". It was sponsored by the grade 7 classes of the school in an operation with the Home and School Association.

To raise the sum of more than $100 needed to finance the banquet, the grade 7 pupils held raffles, auction sales and even a dance.

Seated at the head table were school principal, Ron Caswell, Mayor Jack Ellis, inspector Robert Harwood, Mrs. Ruth Walker, president of the Home and School Association; Eugene Pringle, valedictorian; A. J. Austin, naturalist; the teaching staff, Sharon Greenfield, grade 7 student and toastmaster for the evening; Bobbie Laffman, Student Council president.

The class was congratulated the grade 8 pupils on a fine year's work. He urged them to go on to high school and remember Sir Mackenzie Bowell School well in the years ahead.

Mayor Ellis then presented the graduating class to put as much education as possible. The Mayor said he would be closely themselves as well as the taxpayers if they were to quit school before completing their secondary school education. He indicated that the taxpayers have contributed a large sum of money to bring the students to this point in their education.

Sir. Harwood brought greetings from the school board, L. A. Kelly, John Cousins, and all the teachers who taught the graduates from kindergarten on.

"You know in the third graduating class from this school," he said, "of course, you're the class of our centennial year. No one else can claim that honor."

Valedictorian Eugene Pringle expressed appreciation to the staff from the graduating class. To Mrs. B. Reid, he gave thanks for the many hours that she spent in training the pupils for the centennial choir program. He thanked Miss J. Graham and her staff for the production of the school newspaper, the Sir Mackenzie Bowell Cousins. Appreciation was expressed to Mrs. Graham, Ross Jewell and Terry Manning for successful field day held at the fairgrounds.

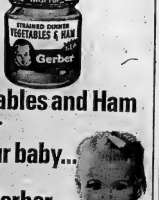
Mr. Caswell presented two awards donated by the Home and School. Each year, these awards go to a girl and boy who have made excellent progress not only academically; but socially as well. The recipients were Jean Anne Taylor and Laurie Burnett. Mr. Hockwood presented the R. D. Hockwood Award for Citizenship, which was donated by the Home and School three years ago, to Leanne Fish.

Mrs. Bailey surprised the staff with a farewell gift.

Sharon Greenfield, a grade 7 pupil, introduced the guest speaker, Jack Austin, naturalist photographer who showed some of his slides. John Wills thanked Mr. Austin.

Rene Burkholder expressed the appreciation of the graduating class to the staff and the Home and School Association for sponsoring the banquet.

Teachers as well as pupils swung to the tune of the sounds of the "No Such Animal" group at a dance following the dinner. Strings decorated with tin foil surrounded the band and flashing geometrical figures from the ceiling, mixed with colored spotlights reflected a dazzling array of colors.



Tea, Showers Held for Bride-to-Be

TRENTON — Mrs. James A. Taylor was "at home" to over 125 guests in the manse to honor her daughter Dorothy Margaret whose marriage to James Sherwood Hughson will take place July 13 in Grace United Church, Trenton.

Those pouring tea at this occasion were Mrs. Daniel Bennett, Mrs. Ronald Leavitt, Mrs. Charles Johnston, Mrs. Walter Edwards, Mrs. Ralph Wister and Mrs. Lewis A. Wilson.

Others assisting in serving and at the tea table were Miss Kathryn Wilson, Miss Barbara Myles, Mrs. Ross Armstrong, Mrs. Kenneth Hamilton, Mrs. Arnold Cronkwright, Mrs. Frank Fark, Mrs. John Duffee, Mrs. John Askue, Mrs. Gerald Pennie and Mrs. Donald MacIntosh.

Mrs. Cy. O'Donnell entertained Miss Fayren at her home in Peterborough as did Miss Allison Liveridge, also in Peterborough. Mrs. Howard McCloskey of Rice Ridge also gave a shower in her honor.

It Is Desirable to Paint Walls White When Furnishing Home

TORONTO (CP)—If you are about to furnish your first home, consider painting the walls white, try to discourage your relatives from giving you an expensive piece of furniture, and remember your kitchen counters and tables will probably change.

John Gallop, an architect who specializes as a consultant on interiors, says you should consider the large areas, walls and floors, first. His approach to walls is basic.

"As far as I'm concerned, you only paint walls white. There is no other color to paint them, and anyone who is usually a red flag to people.

"People consider this way out, whereas white is the safest thing to do. It's not the swinger's approach, it's the cautious approach.

"White gives you the most neutral possible background to do everything else you do. We know almost mathematically that all colors and textures look, I won't say best, but look truest against white. White is the only one that automatically reflects true colors.

"There are people who can do other things, but if you are in doubt, paint white."

Mr. Gallop says you will probably want rugs for comfort and soundproofing, even if your are lucky enough to have floors in good shape.

"Wall-to-wall carpeting is not a wise choice for your first home because the chances are you won't be there a long time and good carpet is expensive.

"If you can think in terms of area carpets they probably won't cost as much money. And you are likely to be able to pick up something distinctive or a small one that is a real gem, and take it with you."

He suggests sisal might be a good choice because it is inexpensive and can be cut up to be used in a small room in another home. If you buy it, he says, you should keep in mind that it won't last indefinitely and it more trouble to clean than ordinary carpeting.

He says a neutral color is the best for a large rug, too.

For drapes he suggests dress goods which are less expensive than drapery fabric and easier to work with. Broadcloth, denim in a solid tone or mattress-ticking type of pattern Mr. Gallop says will look good and be easy to take care of.

"Everything we're talking about is a make-do. You are going to move, and the final solution hasn't come along, so don't do anything that will be a stretch-ket.

"Stay away from definite styles such as Spanish or Chinese. They won't represent the best value. Put your money in comfort. Styles change and become faded."

"In Canada there is very little inexpensive good-looking furniture made, although there is some coming on the market. The best-looking is imported and therefore expensive.

"If you are lucky enough to find a good-looking bedroom piece, spend money on it rather than spreading yourself thin over half a dozen pieces.

"Put dollars into one piece and supplement it with Salvation Army second-hand that you repaint or refinish.

"Stay away from living room and dining room suites. You'll pay a lot for a related good set or a little less for a set that's not well made. People feel furniture must be related and good designers realize this isn't so. Good design goes with good design.

"Try not to get stuck with some fine furniture because of well-meaning friends and relatives. It's so good you can't get rid of it and you'll have to live with something you detest.

"Start with things you can change without too much remorse. It's nice to be surrounded with good things, but one of the nicest parts of living is change. That's why people like house plants, they look lovely, and they're always changing."

Women's Institute

MARMORA WI

MARMORA — The Marmora Women's Institute held its final meeting before the summer recess of July and August at the home of Mrs. William Tindale with 13 members present, and Mrs. O'Neill presiding.

An interesting talk on the motto — "Try to figure out how much you contribute to the world — not how little you can get by with" was given by Mrs. H. P. Hayter, Mrs. R. E. Neal gave a paper on citizenship. Mrs. Joe Murphy, Mrs. E. Neal, Mrs. Percy Carman and Mrs. E. Post attended the ACWW in Guelph, where Queen Elizabeth sent greetings, also Prime Minister Pearson, Hon. Joseph Green, Minister of Agriculture spoke.

Madame Arati Dutt of India, president of ACWW, spoke to an overflow assembly at Guelph.

Following the report from ACWW Miss Grace Warren gave a paper on criticism. Two contests were put on, one naming larger towns and cities in Ontario and historical names of people.

Bethel Church Events Mark Centennial Year

RAWDON — Bethel United Church on the Rawdon charge held an all-day centennial celebration June 18. Former members returned to greet old friends and neighbors and enjoy a day of fellowship.

The Bethel appointment has 27 families and 40 members. Eight members were on the official board when the Methodist church was built in 1874.

The day's events were arranged by the centennial committee of Mrs. Donald Heath, Mrs. Harold Elliott, Mrs. Stewart Hoover and Mrs. Will Heath. Those participating during the day were centennial committee.

Mrs. Will Heath and Mrs. Stewart Hoover welcomed guests at the morning service, Mrs. Francis Reid and Mrs. Oscar Lighle gave out programs and Mrs. Wayne Whiteman was in charge of the guest book. Mrs. Harold Elliott accompanied the choir. Rev. W. C. Cox read greetings from former pastors: Rev. F. G. Joblin, Port Perry; Rev. R. R. Boosted, Oakville, and Rev. W. G. Fletcher, Lansdowne. Mrs. Jim Heath was guest soloist, and Mrs. Carleton Potts, Mount Pleasant, read the history of the church. The Sunday School presented church officials with two flags.

Flowers were placed in the church in memory of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Sine and Reginald; Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Deneke and Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Denike; Walter Werven; H. Elliott; Roy Welbourn; the Green and Tucker families and Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Thompson.

UCW members served a luncheon following the service. A display of old farm tools and other antiques was set up on the church lawn.

Mrs. Edgar McGovern and Mrs. Harry Heath poured at the afternoon tea. Mrs. Marvin Conroy conducted the tea room and Miss Cathy Ketcheson played selections on the electric organ.

Rev. Bruce Small of St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, conducted a sing-song of hymns to open the evening service. Mrs. Harry Crawford, Peterborough, sang a solo and Mrs. Harry Morrow, River Valley, and Mrs. Goldie McInroy, West Huntingdon sang a duet. A social hour was held in the church hall following the service.

Women's Institutes

WALLBRIDGE WI

Mrs. Harry Fisher opened her home for the Wallbridge Women's Institute meeting with the president, Mrs. Ted Evans in charge.

A donation of $10 was made to the Salvation Army and it was decided to discontinue the presentation of spoons to the 4-H Club girls.

Mrs. J. Loshan, convener of historical research reported on the curator's conferences at Guelph.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Father: "It's no hot on the highway. I hate to think of driving to the lake through all the holiday traffic, but the children will be so upset if we don't go."

Mother: "I'll come home worn out, but I guess we have to go."

Parents love rights and needs too — and should not take on an exhausting holiday trip just to appease the children.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League
Eastern Ontario Club

QUESTION: I wonder if you could give me a brief history of each town and city in the Bay of Quinte Region. We are newcomers here and plan to visit historic points of interest.

ANSWER: The following are excerpts from a brochure "Historic Regions of Ontario", published by the Department of Travel and Publicity.

The Tyendinaga Reserve: Although most of the Six Nations Iroquois who had fought for the crown in the American Revolution, settled on the Grand River, a number of the Mohawks, led by Chief John Deserontyon, took up lands on the Bay of Quinte. Their descendants still dwell near Deseronto, and a cairn marks the site where the original landing was made in May 1784. Another plaque at Christ Church on the Reserve commemorates Oronhyekeha (1841-1897), the famous Mohawk Chief, orator and physician who founded the Independent Order of Foresters.

Napanee: In 1792 the governor commissioned Robert Clark, a loyalist millwright, to build a sawmill and gristmill here. Erected 1796-97, the gristmill was the first between Kingston and the Niagara Peninsula. A plaque commemorates these pioneer industries which formed the nucleus of the community. The Allan Macpherson house, built in the 1820's by one of the early leaders of the community is a fine example of a wealthy "town house" of the era. It is situated at the west end of Napanee.

The Carrying Place: Early explorers entering the Quinte region from the west portaged across the narrow peninsula connecting Prince Edward County with the mainland. A cairn commemorates the treaty signed here by the Mississauga in 1787, by which the land now included in metropolitan Toronto was transferred to the Crown.

Belleville: This town was founded in 1790 by Capt. John Meyers, a loyalist who erected a gristmill on the site. Known at first as Meyer's Creek, it was renamed Belleville in 1816 in honour of Arabella, the wife of Lieutenant-Governor Hunter.

Glenora: Beside the ferry landing is an old stone mill which utilized water dropped from a little lake situated high on the mountain above it. This attractive and unusual natural feature has been put to use from early days of settlement, and Peter Van Alstine built Prince Edward's first gristmill here in 1797.

Adolphustown: This little settlement nestled beside the sheltered waters of Adolphustown Reach has been called the Plymouth Rock of Ontario. Here, on Hagerman's Point, there landed from bateaux on June 16, 1784 a small band of United Empire Loyalists, under the leadership of Major Peter Van Alstine. The area in the immediate vicinity of the landing place has been set aside as an historic park and a stone obelisk commemorates the Loyalists. The earliest burying ground in the district is here and several of the early gravestones have been embedded in a memorial wall. An old Anglican church, erected in 1822, stands nearby and is now used as a parish hall. In St. Albans, a more recent edifice, there are a series of tablets commemorating many of the early Loyalists.

Bath: This community, first settled by Loyalists in 1784, was, before the coming of the railway, a centre of importance. The first Canadian steamship on Lake Ontario, the "Frontenac" was launched here in 1816. There are two privately owned homes of considerable historical interest. The house built about 1785 by Jacobs Hawley, a Loyalist veteran of Jessup's Corps, is one of the oldest in the province. The Fairfield House, built in 1796 by William Fairfield Jr., is a splendid example of colonial architecture.

Trial Paroles May Be Tested at New Prison

HALIFAX (CP) — Trial paroles for women offenders may be introduced at the Tyrenda Vanier Institution, Leo Hackl, deputy minister of the Ontario reform institutions department, said here Tuesday that work is expected to start soon on the institution.

He told about 400 delegates to the Canadian Congress of Corrections that an "ever developing, ever progressing" program was being planned by the institution.

"We hope to be able to incorporate the leasing of extramural work permits," he said.

"We hope to have brief paroles and to be able to send women out to take vocational training in the community."

Mr. Hackl said women presented special problems for the planner because of the relatively few women in custody and the great variety of personalities and ages.

The institution has been planned on the "cottage system" to allow for different levels of programs, he said.

Mollie C. Parker of the Elizabeth Fry Society in Toronto told a discussion group the professional women criminal has little desire for help as her associates wanted to receive her when she was released.

"Her desperate need for accepting makes her an easy prey to further criminal involvement," Miss Parker said.

The Elizabeth Fry Society is a voluntary organization which helps women offenders to adjust to society.

Miss Parker said an inmate who kept up her criminal contacts during incarceration may lose enthusiasm when faced with the problem of rehabilitation.

Quebec architect Jacques Bisaonnette, who designed the new $12,000,000 Quebec regional prison, said the architect faced with the task of designing a prison must create a physical environment in which an institutional program can be fully applied.

He said two essential characteristics of the prison are its flexibility and serenity.

Queen Names Prince Charles To Act as State Counsellor

LONDON (CP) — The Queen has officially appointed the Prince of Wales to act as a counsellor of state for the first time during her seven-day Canadian visit beginning Thursday.

The appointment is automatic under regency legislation since Prince Charles became 18 in November. It is not intended, however, that on this occasion he will deal with state papers. During the Queen's absence from Britain he will be preparing for examinations at his Scottish school, Gordonstoun.

The Queen and Prince Philip prepared for the Canadian trip by dining Tuesday night with the high commissioner for Canada, Charles Ritchie, and his wife at their Mayfair home.

Meanwhile, royal aides reported that Princess Margaret and her husband, the Earl of Snowdon, will make a private visit to Canada in October. This means that all principal members of the Royal Family will visit Canada during Centennial Year.

The Snowdowns are expected to arrive in Toronto Oct. 5 to attend the Princess Margaret Ball, designed to raise funds for a new children's ward at the Princess Margaret Hospital.

The Queen's sister and her husband also plan to see Expo 67 before returning to England about Oct. 12.

Charles' appointment as counsellor was announced Tuesday night in the London Gazette, which also listed the Queen Mother, Princess Margaret and the Duke of Gloucester, the Queen's uncle.

Charles, who constitutionally came of age Nov. 14 on his 18th birthday, is appointed as heir-apparent under the code of the Regency Acts.

Counsellors of state do not have to act in concert in dealing with state papers, which normally require the sovereign's signature.

Two are required when it becomes necessary to call the Privy Council during the monarch's absence, or to receive an ambassador when he presents his credentials.

Kingston Bans Swine From City

KINGSTON (CP) — Long-suffering residents here have heard their last pig squeal, as a result of a city council decision Monday night to ban swine from all parts of the city.

The action followed complaints by neighbors of a homestead within city limits which had been exempted from a 1953 bylaw. Council Monday night announced its purchase of the homestead.

City fathers had first outlawed swine in 1927, but the problem recurred after the 1952 annexation of rural land to the north of the city.

Pearson Blames Hanoi For Blocking Peace Bid

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson blamed North Vietnam Tuesday for preventing negotiations to end the war.

He told the Commons that recent statements from Hanoi have demanded the withdrawal of American troops as well as an end to U.S. bombing of the North as pre-conditions for any peace talks.

The issue was asked by New Democratic Leader Douglas to comment on a statement earlier Tuesday by three former officials of the external affairs department, calling for an unconditional halt in U.S. bombing and Communist infiltration into South Vietnam.

—These proposals do not in any way conflict with the government's thinking," the prime minister replied.

President Johnson had communicated similar proposals to Hanoi in February and, they had been rejected by Ho Chi Minh.

Mr. Pearson said he received no open letter on Vietnam from the three former diplomats, Douglas LePan, Escott Reid and A. F. W. Plumptre, now principals of three Toronto colleges.

He had discussed the letter with Mr. Reid, who happened to be in Ottawa. The principals' statement was intended to "reinforce" efforts for a peace settlement by Canada and other countries.

Abortion Changes May Not Be in Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — Abortion may not be included in an omnibus bill to amend the Criminal Code in a number of other areas this fall, Justice Minister Trudeau said Tuesday.

He told members of the Commons standing committee on justice and legal affairs that high priority has been given to severe legislation.

New laws on lotteries and birth control could also be expected when Parliament meets this fall after a summer recess.

However, he was unable to say "yay" whether new abortion laws will be part of the package.

It was proving difficult to reconcile social ethics with the needs of modern society in this area, he said.

Raising another matter, Gordon, Aiken (PC—Parry Sound-Muskoka) said many people are being jailed where only a summons is needed. He advocated a provision in the Criminal Code to allow police to charge someone without locking him up.

Mr. Trudeau said the code allows magistrates such discretion and they should be "advised, even admonished" not to issue a warrant for arrest where a summons would do.

White's District

WHITE'S DISTRICT — Miss Carolyn Miller, in majorette costume, took part in the centennial parade from Kents School, Amelianburg to Robin's Lake Saturday.

Grade 5 pupils of Bayside Primary School, their teachers, John Morrow and Gordon Leslie, and several mothers visited Ottawa Wednesday.

Madoc Junction

MADOC JUNCTION — The last service in Eggleton United Church was held Sunday morning.

Mrs. Maurice Chacey and Mrs. Clarence Pitchett attended the meeting of the Lady Directors of Stirling Agricultural Society Saturday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wilson and family of Brockville were weekend guests of the former's mother, Mrs. Frank Smith.

New York Welfare Recipients Caught in Middle of Strike

NEW YORK (AP) — The young man and his wife sat on the wooden chairs in the sterile grey-and-green room and held hands. He was 22 and she was 18. They'd been married four months. They were being evicted from their apartment and had not eaten for three days.

They were part of the 650,000 persons on the city's welfare rolls.

This month many of them are caught in the middle of the sit-ins headquarters 10 days ago when some 80 per cent of the department of welfare's case workers began refusing to do their assigned tasks in a demonstration to underscore a contract dispute with the city.

To avoid breaking a New York state law prohibiting strikes by public employees, they went to work but did not work, meeting in seminars instead.

A few days later, the city decided that if the case workers wanted to hold seminars, they could hold them just as well on the sidewalk, and permitted only those willing to perform "assigned work" to enter the welfare centres.

At some of the city's 33 centres, those willing to work under the specified conditions numbered only two or three of a normal staff of 100 or more. Supervisory personnel and office help were brought in to replace missing case workers.

It has not been enough. Welfare department spokesmen say that the temporary set-up has been sufficient to maintain at least emergency services.

"This is our third day here," the young husband said. "Each time we come about 10 in the morning and at four in the afternoon they give us our fare and tell us to come back tomorrow.

"They give us numbers to keep us in order. Today I got number 87. About 12:30 they called number 65. They haven't called another number since."

It was then 2 p.m.

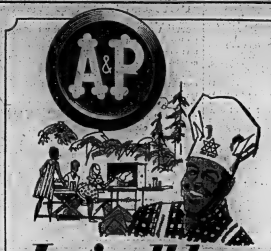
"We owe 3½ weeks rent," the man said. "This morning the landlord told us he couldn't wait any more.

"They've got to help us today."

Outside, six members of the Social Service Employees Union marched back and forth.

"We feel awful about those people in there," said Michael McKain.

"But, I'll quit before I go back in there if the city doesn't honor its promises to us."



The union contract expired last Jan. 15. At that time, the contract dispute precipitated a three-day walkout that ended when the city said it would send the wage issue to fact-finding, open direct negotiations on "other issues" and later send still unresolved problems to fact-finding.

The city, through its director of labor relations, Herbert Bember, now says there are some issues which are "not bargainable"—considered the union's bid for control of what the city considers management perogatives.

Union President Judith Mage says the city promised in January to allow such issues to be decided what was bargainable and what was not and therefore now is going back on a promise.

One of the issues, she said, is whether the contract should provide for a fund to pay case workers full salary while they are recuperating from injuries sustained on the job. This, she said, the city has termed as unbargainable.

The union's action now threatens to spread to the city's three children's shelters.

Let's all have a Centennial Cook-out!

This weekend we celebrate the 100th Birthday of our wonderful country. Like you, we're proud of being Canadians.

We think a great way to celebrate the occasion would be a centennial cook-out for friends and relatives. In anticipation, we've stocked our stores with everything to make any cook-out perfect. Thick, juicy Super-Right steaks and chops, salad fixings, breads, rolls, beverages ... you name it, we have it. And at prices that are worthy of celebration, too.

Here's the best part:
We guarantee everything ... except the weather.
We're sorry about that ... but we'll do this:
With you, we'll wish for a perfect day.
Lots of us will be having a centennial cook-out, too!

Bookies Phone Free

HONEY HARBOUR, Ont. (CP)—Bookmakers foil police and bilk the telephone company by attaching an electronic device to their phones which enables them to make free long-distance, direct - dial calls, a Bell Telephone Co. official said Tuesday.

Donald R. Sutherland, security auditor for the telephone company in Ontario and Quebec, told the Ontario Association of Chiefs of Police that bookies pay from $250 to $5,000 on the black market for the device which short-circuits the company's equipment.

Mr. Sutherland also said Bell loses $24,000 a year in Ontario and Quebec through the use of slugs in coin phones and $54,000 annually on telephone credit card frauds.

In other business, John Murray, Toronto's deputy police chief, outlined a list of proposed changes to the Highway Traffic Act which will be presented to Transport Minister Irwin Haskett and Attorney-General Arthur Wishart on July 6.

Blood Delivery To Be Cut

HONEY HARBOUR, Ont. (CP) — Ontario Provincial Police Commissioner Eric Silk said Tuesday the OPP will only transport blood in extreme emergencies in the future.

The commissioner told the Ontario Association of Chiefs of Police that the OPP will only make blood runs when authorized by a doctor or a senior technician at the Red Cross.

"The business of calling on us to transport blood is greatly abused," he said, "in the past six months there were nearly 200 such requests and very few were dire emergencies."

Chief superintendent William Ithson, second-in-command of the OPP traffic department, said that in several cases they were just restocking hospitals.

"In some cases, the officer had to wait 30 minutes or more before anyone at the hospital could take the blood from him."

Tests May Be Mandatory

OTTAWA (CP)—Justice Minister Trudeau hinted Tuesday that mandatory breath tests for drivers suspected of drinking will be placed before Parliament in the fall.

He said this recommendation by the justice and legal affairs committee has been "processed" by his department and legislation on the question will be placed before Parliament after the summer recess.

The matter was raised in the Commons by Barry Mather (NDP—New Westminster).

Cape Breton Coal Nationalized

OTTAWA (CP)—The minority Liberal government Tuesday won Commons authority to nationalize the Cape Breton coal industry but insisted on leaving steel alone.

An evening of wrangling preceded voice-vote approval of the bill—to establish a government corporation to take over and phase out money-losing Cape Breton coal mines.

All sides were anxious to clear the bill through the House, even though some opposition members wanted some changes. The MPs sat more than an hour overtime to give the bill third and final reading.

The final debate began with Industry Minister Drury's rejection of requests for federal stockpiling of Cape Breton steel. The proposal's objective was to stimulate production at the lay-off-hit plant owned by Dominion Steel and Coal Corp. at Sydney, N.S.

Mr. Drury said stockpiling would provide no solution to Dosco's marketing and other problems. However, he offered to join the Nova Scotia government in a study of the steel industry in the province to pinpoint problems.

As it has since the nationalization bill was first introduced, the government resisted opposition efforts to include a steel takeover by the proposed Cape Breton Development Corp.

It also beat back an NDP amendment that would have empowered the development corporation to start and own businesses in its work of providing an economic alternative to the phased-out Dosco coal mines on the Nova Scotia island.

David Lewis (NDP — York South), who proposed the change, said it was absurd to give the corporation no greater powers than two other government agencies promoting industrial development in the province.

One is the federally-backed Atlantic Development Board. The other is Industrial Estates Limited, a creature of the Nova Scotia government.

The Lewis amendment went down 61 to 27. The Conservatives sided with the NDP against the Liberals. So the corporation was left with the power to promote, but not initiate, new coal-coal enterprises.

With these and other limitations, including the leaving of steel on the outside, Mr. Lewis predicted the development corporation could not achieve its objective of promoting an economic revival on the island.

The government also rejected renewed pleas to extend the scope of the development corporation beyond the island to include a takeover of the McLean mine in Pictou County on the Nova Scotia mainland. Aid through other avenues was pouring into that area.

Earlier, in rapid progress to 1 July 7 adjournment, the Commons approved a series of changes to the Citizenship Act. One establishes a special court to hear appeals of citizenship rejections.

Others make it easier for foreigners to become citizens. Some legal inequalities between naturalized and native-born citizens were eliminated.

An NDP amendment to place the final say on citizenship applications in the hands of the appeal court was defeated 36 to 18. State Secretary Judy LaMarsh said it is essential for the minister in charge of citizenship to have the right to refuse citizenship on security grounds.

Meanwhile in the Senate, Senator Arthur Roebuck, 80, provoked an uproar when he accused the CBC and some newspapers, which he did not name, of spying on the Parliamentary committee which brought down a report Tuesday recommending broader grounds for divorce.

The Liberal senator, co-chairman of the committee, said the news media had published the contents of the report before it was officially made public. This was a breach of parliamentary privilege, he added.

The Centennial Caravan opens locally in Tweed at the Hungerford Agricultural Society Grounds On Thursday the show moves to Napanee where it opens for a two day stand at the district High School Grounds.

The official opening for the caravan in Picton will be held at 12.30 on Saturday, July 1, where it will play until Tuesday July 4 at he County Fair Grounds.

On July 5 the show opens at Zwick's Island Park in Belleville where it will remain until Wednesday July 12.

In Trenton the caravan will be on display at the Community Fair Grounds from July 13 to 18.

The caravan travels to Campbellford on July 19 where it will be set up at the Fair Grounds and from July 20 to 23 the show will be at Donegap Memorial Park in Cobourg.

The caravan opens at 11 o'clock in the morning and closes at 11 hi the evening at all locations.

The Centennial Caravan on the Road

Planning and Production Took Over Three Years

Planning and production of the Confederation Caravan displays took about three and a half years.

The Centennial Commission conceived the idea of the caravans and the Canadian Government Exhibition Commission, a branch of the Department of Trade and Commerce, was appointed to supervise production. Canadian Display and Exhibit Co. Ltd. of Toronto was the major contractor. The tractor-trailers were built by Atco Industries Ltd., of Calgary.

Chief of production for CGEC was Ivan Herbert, a Canadian-born film maker who joined CGEC two and a half years ago. The Confederation Train and Caravan project was his first assignment.

Tom Spaulding of Toronto was design co-ordinator, and Peter Comolos, a 28-year-old, English-born graduate of the Ontario College of Art, was the designer.

The exterior graphics on the huge trailers were done by John Arnold of the CGEC, and Mr. Arnold and Peter Vincent, also of CGEC, created the triadetic structures erected outside at each stop.

Figures in the hand-operated machines of the triadetics were designed by Mr. Arnold and Mr. Vincent, and were made by Yvonne Deeman, of Ottawa.

While the caravans touch on the same subject matter as the Confederation train, the design is handled quite differently. The caravans, on site, will be parked in a quadrangle, so that the visitor will feel that he is crossing byways of history rather than following a straight line.

The designers have not tried to create a travelling museum, nor have they tried to translate a history textbook by their displays. Rather, they have tried to involve the visitor in Canada's history.

Varied Displays in Caravan

Two youngsters check over notices in front of the King's Head Inn as they tour through the Centennial Caravan which arrives in Belleville on July 5. The exhibit will remain at Zwick's Island until July 12.

Trailer Exteriors Display Slice of Canadian Life

The exteriors of the eight jumbo-size tractor-trailers of the Confederation Caravan have their own story to tell.

As the caravan takes its story of Canada's past and present across the country, people en route are able to catch a preview of the exhibits inside.

The graphic designs were conceived by John Arnold, of the Canadian Government Exhibition Commission, producers of the caravans for the Centennial Commission.

The word "Canada" is emblazoned in 20-foot letters on one side of seven trailers, and the word "Confederation" on the eighth. The graphic designs are on the opposite sides which face into a quadrangle when the trailers are parked to exhibit.

Mr. Arnold had color slides of the designs projected onto the trailers so painters on ladders could work to the exact outline.

The eight trailer caravan is painted in bright colors with various scenes depicting Canada's growth to nationhood and the present day. One of the units shows a sailing ship in full sail; a second shows the loaves of Canada's trees and a third trailer displays the country's fish.

The fourth unit illustrates agricultural implements; the fifth Canadian accomplishments; and on unit six a flock of Canada geese are displayed. Trailer seven shows the people of Canada while unit eight portrays Eskimo drawings.

OPP Escort Huge Trailers On Province Wide Tour

Residents of the Quinte area will be able to get a look at the Centennial Caravan as it travels throughout the Quinte area during the next three weeks.

The display opened at Bancroft on June 25 and will tour various districts ending in Campbellford on July 19.

Because of it's size, the colorful trailers will be accompanied by an OPP escort as they travel along the highway. At the site drivers arrange the trailers in a quadrangle, set up the mobile regional exhibits, arrange entrance gangways and bridges between trailers — and the show is finally ready to open.

From 11 o'clock in the morning to 11 at night visitors can experience the development of Canada from primeval times to the present.

Officials say it's not a museum, an art gallery or history lesson. "It's more like a time machine to visit the people of all walks of life who lived and worked in Canada before the present generation came along.

The Centennial Commission project took almost four years to produce. Writers first laid down broad story lines and some of Canada's top artists, sculptors and craftsmen brought the stories to life in displays.

Visitors to the show find the trailers — the largest ever produced in the country — in a quadrangle with an entertainment stage and triadetic displays inside the formation.

The triadetics tell in sound and light the story of the Quinte area in the development of Canada. Several of the movies are equipped with cranks so the visitor can activate miniature shows itself.

The displays inside the caravan take the visitor from the early days when the first settlers arrived in Canada to the present.

Under manager George Moir, this caravan travels 2,391 miles through eastern and northern Ontario ending November 8. It exhibits for 164 days.

Manages Caravan

George Moir, 50, manager of the Confederation caravan touring eastern and northern Ontario, is a native of Scotland who came to Canada at the age of six and grew up in Winnipeg.

After a short stint as a radio announcer and a bank clerk, he joined the RCAF in 1941 and stayed in the service until 1964, when he retired as a squadron leader.

Confederation Fathers'

Visitors will be able to get a look at the miniature collection of the Fathers of Confederation included in the Centennial Caravan displays. The caravan will be travelling throughout the Quinte area during the next three weeks.

It's World War II Again

Mementos of World War II are included in Centennial Caravan displays starting July 5 at Zwick's Island in Belleville. Here a youngster checks over a 500 pound bomb aimed at a distant city.

Caravan Leads the Visitor From Primeval Time to Present Day

Visitors entering the Confederation caravan first face a cave like wall from prehistoric times with the centennial symbol carved deeply into the background.

The cave leads toward a lighted area which brightens and dims with the passage of time. It comes from a lighted mural of sea and sand.

The visitor next sees a dark map of North America glowing as two red shafts creep across the Spring Strait from Asia, through Alaska and down in the heart of the continent — the route followed by the first white men to reach the area — the Indians and Eskimos.

Cave wall drawings depict the primitive art forms of the arts. Basketwork of the Haidas, Eskimo stone carvings and the beadwork of the eastern tribes.

Light comes from two broad apertures in the wall and the visitor looks into miniature settlements of the Haida and northeast woodland Indians. Braves chant and dogs are heard barking.

The white men's exploration era begins with a display of goods from the Orient. It represents the riches they were seeking when they arrived in North America.

Following a series of other displays on the early explorers, cave walls give way to those simulating a river bed. The bright blue ceiling is the surface of the water and through it protrudes the bottom of a birch bark canoe. All around is the sound of the voyageurs' chant.

A series of eight illuminated maps, recessed into the floor, get progressively more accurate through the exploration age.

Among these maps is one of the Canadian railroad in 1907, it marks Alberta and Saskatchewan as provinces, the Northwest Territories as a part of the country and the Canadian Pacific Railway stretching from coast to coast.

The final map in the section is actually an aerial photo of Canada's latest land acquisition — the men made Ile Ste. Helene in the St. Lawrence River — the site of Expo '67.

Following the map display visitors will get a look at a trappers wooden sled heaped lavishly with the wealth the explorers found. Pelts of ermine, muskrat, squirrel, raccoon, fox, bear and mink cover the area. Above a beaver pelt lies taunt on a stretching board.

Representing the missionaries who poured in from the Old World are several wooden ribs supporting a crucifix. Etched on a wall are the routes and names of the early explorers: Cartier, Champlain, La Salle, Joliet, Marquette, LaVerendrye, Frobisher, Hudson and Vancouver.

A display of navigational instruments complete the exploration era — a strong staff used to measure the altitude of the sun, Champlain's astrolabe, a sextant and a binnacle.

The early trapping of civilization become apparent as the visitor walks into a Quebec tallow shop of the early 1700's. It has a polished pine floor, an elaborate dresser, a traveller's brass rimmed chest, rich laces, brocades, velvets and a flickering iron lantern.

A signpost further down the street beckons the visitor into the King's Head Inn — typical Upper Canadian Tavern.

Pressures from without usher in confederation, and the stage is set with vertical panoramas revolving slowly — the harvests of the land and sea, travel by mail coach and the river steamer.

Included in the display are memento's of pre-confederation battles shown in photo and poster.

The pace slows and the noise subsides as the visitor approaches the Confederation Chamber. The walls are lined with photos and paintings of the confederation conferences — Charlottetown and Quebec City in 1864 and London to draft the British North America Act in 1866.

The chamber itself is still — the lighting subdued on its crimson walls and royal blue carpet.

On entering the chamber the visitor's attention is drawn to a spotlighted podium. On display are the miniature figures of the Fathers of Confederation. Around them rotate the people who lived in Canada during the — the pioneer farmer, trapper, Indian, housewife and children.

The first Prime Minister, Sir John A. Macdonald, stands silhouetted against an engraving of the parliament buildings.

After being promised a railroad, British Columbia threw in with the new nation in 1871, a year after Manitoba.

The visitor then passes through montages of the railway building period. The final display in this section shows the driving of the last spikes on the CPR line in 1885.

An 1898 Short Enfield rifle is included among the items depicting the 7,000 Canadians who fought in South Africa in 1899-1902.

Beyond this display a prairie section of golden wheat sways gently under enlarged photos showing some of the thousands of immigrants who poured westward prior to World War I.

Immigration and expansion stop and the boys march off to fight in the "war to end all wars". A huge photograph of a Toronto streetcar turned into a recruiting station looks almost gay.

The war itself is depicted with grimy mementos of the mud the troops encountered throughout.

and sounds of the rifle fire and exploding shells are heard

From the reality of war the visitor steps into the glare and giddiness of the roaring twenties. Peering out at the frivilous decade are the discoverers of insulin — Sir Frederick Banting and Dr. Charles Best.

Another abrupt division occurs with a heedline showing the fall of the stock market at the start of the Depression in 1929. The good times vanish and the great Depression covers the land.

Newspaper headlines again mark the sharp division between eras. The depression vanishes as guns flare anew in Europe.

World War II's fleets of saturation bombers thunder overhead in photos. A 500 pound bomb is poised to join others whining down on a distant city.

Immigration and industrial expansion bring Canada from the war to the present year. A slice of plasticine from the western oil boom forms an archway to today.

An exhibit represents the atomic power plant at Chalk River and Canada's role as the world's chief supplier of uranium.

Many of today's events are displayed in photographs and a mature Canada is illustrated in photos representing foreign aid and Canadian servicemen on United Nations duty.

SPORTS SLICES

By Geo. H. Carver
Sports Editor

A few centuries or so ago, two tanned, bewhiskered Highlanders celebrated something or other by tapping stones into holes with crooked sticks between copious gulps of Island dew.

They splattered and they "gowfed" and thus was born the game of golf.

If the brave Scots could have chanced time a few hundred years they would have flipped their staid kilts in discovery that the holes they were using had turned into gold mines — for a select few, with more to come.

They would have seen the rugged rocky crags, highlands and lowlands where they pursued their sport turn into million-dollar club houses, lush greens, and long fairways with a large pot o' gold at the end of each tournament rainbow.

Professional golf perhaps is the largest spawning ground for millionaires in the realm of pay-for-play athletics. The worshippers of the gods of Jackie Palmer and Nicklaus are millionaires and on their way to becoming multi-fifties. They may not make it all at the box, but the game has been the foundation of fortune to them.

Last year Billy Casper picked up $143,773 to lead the field but pretenders to the throne totalled $118,467 and Nicklaus bettered him with $141,552. All winners do extremely well. One who finished 25th in the list of winners banked over $9,000.

Now you don't have to raise your boy to be a golfer to get in on the rich pickings that professional sport offers.

You can point to Bobby Hull and Gordie Howe and say "Go thou and do likewise." If you want him next-gerged for life. True, their NHL salaries may have crossed a measly $40,000-a-year mark, but brother, look at the fringe benefits being handed. Podunk price of a pack of cigarettes from $100,000 per annum and you won't be far wrong.

If your offspring is a Tiny Tim built on jockey blueprints you must have something there. Reports have it that Eddie Arcaro, Willie Shoemaker and Bill Hartack are in the millionaire bracket. Bones was the lucky in the USA last year, with $2,961,822 in purses. Figure his share at 10 per cent.

He doesn't have to be an outstanding star in major league baseball to pull down a large salary. Three say the average is $22,000 per annum. Of course if he is moulded in the shape of a Koufax, Marichal, Aaron, Drysdale and Frank Robinson he will be good for a yearly stipend of $100,000 plus.

Not too long ago, college football stars were offered fabulous sums to join the pro ranks, such as Don Andersen who got $750,000 for a long year term and others who were bemused in the hundreds of thousands of dollars. But, reports have it, that golden era for rookies is over.

If your laddybuck is pugilistically inclined and shows championship potential, don't hold him back. Jack Dempsey, Gene Tunney, Joe Louis, Canales Clay made millions in the ring, the first two once splitting a neat two-million dollar gate.

Tunney, I believe, is a millionaire today. Dempsey doesn't have to go on the dole. Joe Louis had too many friends whom he helped so he is still well-fixed. Clay, certain people charge, has been milked of the bulk of his huge fight dividends.

Canadian fortunes were not pay bags salaries. It is stated that Serafin Faloney recently acquired by the BC Lions from Montreal is perhaps the highest paid player with a purse of $25,000. A few of the 2nd grid stars drew down in the neighborhood of $14,000.

If your little Joe can stretch upward to near seven feet and drop a basketball into the net with reasonable accuracy he could reach the status of Bill Russell of the Boston Celtics who picks up $250,000 as player coach or Wilt the Stilt Chamberlain of Philadelphia who drags down $100,000 annually.

The next best bet is to develop the offspring into a tapanich horse-shoe pitcher. If the traditional luck attached to the Dobble slippers holds, he can win a sweepstake — and who cares after that.

Peewee Has No-Hitter

John Sprackett turned in another top-notch pitching performance as Barrett's Furniture annihilated Woodland Lumber (Picton) 24-0 in a BMSA peewee contest last night. Sprackett showed his pitching excellence by fashioning a no-hitter.

In the same league the ANAF Vets needed the OAKS All-Stars' pitcher, Smith, while Cony Grill and Booth T.V. fought to an 11-11 deadlock.

TALKS ACROSS BORDER

A grant for educational techniques research allowed the students to set up telephone links with McGill, Harvard, Michigan and Duke University scholars.

Open Course 'Good And Bad'

Boros Aces; Player 66 In Practice!

MONTREAL (CP) — A five-under-par 66, a hole-in-one and diversity of opinion on the merits of the course featured the first full day of practice rounds for the Canadian Open Tuesday.

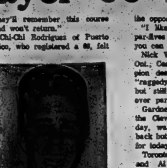
The Open is slated for Thursday through Sunday at Montreal's Municipal Golf Club and this year is worth a record $200,000.

The arrival of Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus and a scheduled practice round between the two promises to highlight today's action.

Gary Player, South Africa's top man, had six birdies and missed par only at the 340-yard 17th—where the green is still rough — for his par - shattering round of 66.

Julius Boros of Mid-Pines, N.C., who has won the Phoenix, Citrus and Buick opens this year, hit for his ace at the 130-yard eight using a six iron.

Doug Sanders of Tulsa, Okla., was critical of the civic layout.



Sanders who won the Open as an amateur in 1956 after a console playoff with veteran Dow Finsterwald of Colorado Springs, Colo., said he would like to "see a better conditioned course, but you have to do the best with what you have.

"I don't like to say its good when I don't feel that way," Sanders said.

"There's no way it can help the prestige of the Canadian Open playing on a course like this. It penalizes the good players rather than the bad.

They'll remember this course and won't return."

Chi-Chi Rodriguez of Puerto Rico, who registered a 69, felt the opposite to Sanders.

GARY PLAYER

"I liked all the holes. The par-fives are birdie holes but you can happy those too."

Nick Weslock of Burlington, Ont., Canadian amateur champion described the course as "raggedy from tee to green", but still managed a 73—two over par.

Gardner Dickinson, who won the Cleveland Open last Sunday, was bothered by a bad back but thought he'd be ready for today's practice round.

Toronto's George Knudson and Al Balding paired off against Kitchener's Gary Cowan and Montreal's Jean - Guy Parlard.

After the round Knudson said he had a 69 and Balding declared himself "around par."

Jim Ferrier, the San Francisco veteran who won the Canadian Open in 1950 in 1951 at Royal Montreal and Toronto's Mississaugua with 271 and 272 score, said he thought the winner would be the golfer who can best avoid hitting into "those little dips in the fairways.

"The greens are really better than they look, except for a couple of them. Anyway, you'll find the players can adjust themselves to any condition. . . ."

Player, garbed in his customary black, told reporters at the 18th green, with a touch of asperity:

"If you're going to ask me what I think of the course I'm going to say 'it's terrific, just terrific.'"

Cornell Crew Favored

HENLEY - ON - THAMES (CP) — Cornell University, strongest American challenger, was to race Kingston Rowing Club of England today at the start of the four - day Henley Royal Regatta.

British rowing experts rate the powerful Cornell crew as favorite to retain the Thames Cup for the United States.

Harvard lightweights won last year, but have not returned to the classic title.

The great mystery crew at the regatta this year is the heavyweight Leipzig eight. The 4th-man East German combined Leipzig squad drew a big crowd on the river bank as they rowed three times over the 1-mile, 550-yard straight course.

Skipper Disqualifies Own Boat

A modern lantern-bearing Diogenes would have had no trouble locating an honest man had he been around the Oakville Yacht Squadron last weekend.

It happened during the Ontario and Quebec Regional Championships for O'Day Day Sailors.

The Bay of Quinte Yacht Club was represented by two boats crewed by Freeman Burrows and Jim Jenkins and Bob Leech and Dick Bird.

Skipper Burrows was on his way to an overall victory in the three-race series when the boat struck a starting buoy as a result of a collision with another boat.

They ended up with third place in the fleet.

Skipper Burrows voluntarily disqualified his boat after the incident.

Messrs. Leech and Bird took first place in the race on Sunday with reds pushing to 40 miles per hour. They finished fourth in the fleet of 18 boats.

The championship was hosted by Bay of Quinte Y.C. last summer.

At Wimbledon
Dark Horse Faces Tough Test

WIMBLEDON, England (CP) Charlie Pasarell, the dark horse of Wimbledon, is aiming today at his second big upset victory in three days at the All-England lawn championships.

The 22-year-old Puerto Rican knocked out reigning champion Manuel Santana of Spain in the first round. This time he faces Bob Hewitt, the powerful Australian who was a member of South Africa's Davis Cup team.

Hewitt is unseeded, but is one of the fancied players here, following South Africa's triumph over France in the Davis Cup semi-finals for the European zone.

Meanwhile, the bookies have made Roy Emerson, 20-year-old Australian who downed Keith Carpenter of Montreal in the first round, odds - on favorite for the title.

In women's singles matches, Billie Jean King of the United States and Marie Bueno of Brazil moved nearer direct confrontation as both scored straight-set victories Tuesday.

Mrs. King, 23, the reigning champion, won 8-6, 8-3 over Ingrid Loffdahl of Sweden. And Miss Bueno, 27, Wimbledon champion in 1959, 1960, and 1964, took only 44 minutes to dispose of Laura Rossouw of South Africa, 6-3, 6-1.

The three Canadian women in the tournament all met defeat Tuesday.

Susan Butt of Vancouver, No. 1 among Canada's women players, lost 6-4, 6-1 to South Africa's Gretz Dehpert. Vicki Berner of Montreal was eliminated 6-4, 9-7 in a hard-fought match with Francoise Gordigiani of Italy. And Wynn Urban of Windsor, Ont., was trounced 6-1, 6-1 in 32 minutes by Noel Truman of Britain.

Only Canadian left in singles play is Montreal - born Frank Tavris, who plays in the second round against Kiochiro Yanagi of Japan.

Canadians also are entered in the men's, women's and mixed doubles play.

Chess Tourney For Winnipeg

WINNIPEG (CP)—The brawn of the Pan-American Games will be followed by the brains of the Canada Centennial Grand Masters Chess Tournament here Oct. 3-15, it was announced Tuesday.

Abe Yanofsky, honorary president of the Manitoba Association and co-chairman of the tournament, is expected to participate in the round - robin event. He is the only grand master of chess in the Commonwealth.

Yanofsky, at a press conference, said the Groundwork for the event has been completed and nine other grand masters have accepted invitations to compete, including representatives of the Soviet Union.

Halloway Blanks Cookston

Ron Denyes hurled Halloway to a 3-0 victory over Crookston in a T. and S. softball contest at Halloway last night. Denyes gave up only four scratch singles and struck out five while not walking a batter for his shutout.

On the opposing mound Wayne Shaw, former B. and D. pitcher for Madoc, allowed six hits while walking seven and walking none.

John Emerson, steamed a triple and single, and Gale Allen a pair of doubles to lead the Halloway attack. Roscoe Morgan and Denyes collected singles.

Doug Finley, Jack Douglas, Wayne Shaw and Tommy Mason had the Crookston singles.

Commercial League
Hotelmen Fatten Lead

Clay Hotel went on a blitzing binge to fatten its Commercial Softball League lead last night, whipping The Club 15-7, while Lightfoots clambed into a second place tie with Black Diamond by nipping the Cheesemen 7-6.

Clay now has 18 points, Lightfoots and the zipping Black Diamond 14 each, Steinson's a close third with 12.

The Hotelmen pounded three Tibi Club pitchers for 18 hits and broke a 5-5 tie with seven runs in the fourth inning. Bill Wickens, Al Pullen and Gary Mahler failed to stem the tide on the Tibi mound, handing them and waiting two. Seven miscues added to their woes.

Gerry Geerssen hurled the victory, allowing nine, hits, whiffing four and walking one.

Doug Murray rapped two doubles and a single, Brian Smith a home run and two singles and Jack Hughes a double and two one-baggers to pace the hit parade. Bob Brooks and Dave Feeney also slammed home runs, Geerssen, Doug Lloyd and D. MacLeod two hits each and Doug Hull one.

For Tibi, Mr. McTaggart led all hitters with two doubles and two singles. Dave Duvall doubled, S. White had two hits, Jim Parks and D. Olsen one each.

Lightfoots bunched their runs into the third and fourth innings to hand Black Diamond their second loss in as many nights.

Don Smith gave up five hits over the first four frames and John French two over the final three on the winners' hillop. They struck out three and walked four.

Don Holoway started and gave way to brother Sonny in the fourth for the Cheesemen. They faoned 10, seven by Sonny Holoway, and walked two, allowing 11 hits, nine by the starter.

Third baseman T. Johnson sparked the Lightfoot hitters with a triple and two other safeties. Bob Smith hammered a home run and single while Doug Rose doubled and singled. Frank "Shiner" Murray also doubled and other base knocks went to Paul Goodfellow, T. Casselman and Gerry Perry.

Ross Empey singled twice, Bob Fraser and Stan Abrens had doubles, Don Holoway, Gene and Jack Francis a hit each, in a losing cause.

Could Block Greenwood Opening

Harness Horsemen Urged To Strike

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Leslie Ehrlick, chairman of the Ontario Harness Horsemen's Association's purse committee, Tuesday urged harness horsemen to strike and block the opening of Greenwood Raceway in Toronto next Monday.

Ehrlick of Toronto, said the harness horsemen must decide ar individuals whether they will unlad with thoroughbred horsera who decided Monday to withhold entries from Fort Erie race track Monday, July 3.

The thoroughbred horsemen decided to withhold entries unless the Jockey Club agrees to a one-year contract calling for a purse schedule based on 46.5 per cent of the tracks' nine per cent share of the mutuel handle.

"Horsemen have a moral obligation to back up their commitment to stand with their oughbred horsemen in my opinion," Ehrlick told a meeting of harness horsemen at the Garden City Raceway here.

The meeting was called when it was learned that a change in interpretation of a Canadian Trotting Association rule might postpone harness horsemen's support of the thoroughbred horsemen's strike action for possibly 10 days.

This rule calls for suspension or expulsion of any owner, trainer or driver who threatens to commit or conspires with others to commit any act intended to impede, hinderance or prevent the conducting or continuance of any race meeting.

CTA president Allan Dickerson of Mount Hope, who was at the harness horsemen's meeting, said:

"The CTA can't force anyone to put in entries at a race meeting that has not started. The horsemen can't stop this meet (Garden City) but as to the next meet, we have no jurisdiction".

Ontario harness racing is conducted under CTA rules and regulations and directives from the Ontario Racing Commission. The commission solely controls thoroughbred racing.

Ehrlick told the harness horsemen to "let your conscience be your guide" in deciding whether to put any entries forward for Greenwood's opening on Monday.

"Personally, I would like to see no entries for Monday," he added. "But that decision is up to each individual."

Ehrlick said the commission was obliged to see that racing continues and he called upon its members to step in and mediate the dispute. He said he would step down from negotiations to "give the commission a chance to mediate."

The Jockey Club has refused to enter into any agreement with thoroughbred horsemen based on a percentage of the betting handle.

Here Tonight

Lombanks Host Beaver

Brockville - Beavers visit town tonight to do battle with the Lombanks in an EOBA Senior game and a mighty important game it is for the Bellemvile boys.

After leading the loop a couple weeks ago, the Lombanks have slipped to third place with a two-and-four record of 5-6. Kingston is well ahead of the field and the Lombanks must win tonight to stay in position for a shot at the top rung.

Belleville and Brockville have split a pair of wins to date and Flort Coogan's boys realize they must win tonight.

The Lombanks should have a choice of three pitchers for this one. Ace Bill Latchford could get the call but then so could Don Masters, just back from a couple weeks holidays, or young Bodger Hunter, who has shown plenty in earlier starts. Hunter, 18 years of age, could be the club darkhorse as the season progresses.

Belleville also signed a couple of key players just before the hitting deadline last week, Gary Goyer and Lee Lewis. Both are available as a part - time basis right now but will be counted on heavily come playoff time.

With good weather and much - needed victory up it grabs, the Lombanks are hoping for their best crowd of the season tonight.

It starts at 8, at the Fox grounds.

Minor Baseball Results

The local minors were busy last night, as five games were played.

Mead Johnson smashed Fuzzell Motors 12-3 in bantam, as Wayne Farrell fashioned a four-hitter and struck out 15. Two games in tyke, saw Little Caen outlast Lions Club 23-17, and DeMille bomb Bolleri Little Giants 21-6. Golden Mile defeated Watkins Texaco 6-3 and CNR beat Bells Food 11-6 in tadpole.

Farrell treated his local opponents much the same as he does his NOBA opposition, in Mead's win. He walked three men, and got plenty of support from his mates, as they lashed out 10 hits. Jim Wood toiled the distance for the losers, fanning 11 and issuing four walks.

Paul Hall stroked a pair of doubles, and Mike Coogan and Dan Wagar a double and single.

Barry Collins, Mike Augur, Richard Griffith and Farrell had singles. Moe Thompson slammed a triple and base hit, Don Bunbury a double, and Jim Wood a single, for Farrell's.

Ricky Bells and Pete Read allowed 10 hits and for Lions Owen Tony Meagher and Rick Collins gave up two less for Lions.

Little Owen was led at the plate by Robert Woodcock's home run, and three singles by Ron Graham. Gordon Male had a two - base hit, and Robert McKay, Bob Holloway and Rick Bellis singles. Lions Club had a one - man powerhouse in Rick Collins, who smashed a home run and pair of doubles. Tony Meagher chipped three base hits, and Dave Wood, Ron Hutchinson and Chris O'Hara added the others.

Dellitte's batting duo of Tim Whelan and Steve Kirby gave up only four hits and tossed third strikes past 20 in a fine performance in the other tyke tilt. The pitchers also slammed seven hits, including two homers by Whelan.

Rick Sweet and Greg Cronkright were combed for 16 hits while getting 14 strikeouts for the losers.

Whelan added a double and single along with his pair of circuit blasts and Kirby tripled, doubled and singled. Scott Sturgeon banged a double and two base hits, and Mark Boyd two doubles and a single, while Glenn Watson had a lone safety. Greg Cronkright was responsible for most of the losers hitting, with two doubles and a single. Robert Delitse also hit.

Glen Andrews and Randy Hutchinson pitched CNR's win while John Dunbrack and Clyde Routley took the loss. The former fanned 18 while the latter blew down 14 on third strikes.

Dean Newman and Steven Moy led the winners' barrage. Also hitting were Tony Sheard, Glen Andrews, Hutchinson and Rick Keegan. Ron Sturgeon, John Doughty, Rick McMurray, Paul Coates, Don McLeod, Brian Cook, Dennis Greer, Brady Mills and Tom Coulson hit for Bells.

Pete Hall and Bob Cunningham threw a three-hitter in Golden Mile's win, Andy Lupenetta took the loss.

Hall slammed a home run, Jim Welch, and Ike Christopher two hits each, while Mike Dean added another. Tom Donovan, Andy Lupenetta and Bill Gow hit for the losers.

Phillies Stop Cubs

Pirates Act Up Then Lose To Mets

BY MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Behind the game, Pittsburgh Pirates put on an act for Walter Matthau and Jack Lemmon. During the game, they put on an act worthy of Abbott and Costello.

The first act proved more profitable. Several Pirates earned $100 each for it. They didn't get anything for the second act except a lot of confusion and a 5-2 loss to New York Mets.

In the pre - game festivities, the Pirates and Mets acted out a triple play for a scene in the movie, The Odd Couple.

In less zany National League games San Francisco Giants blanked St. Louis Cardinals 6-0, Atlanta Braves clobbered Houston Astros 13-3, Los Angeles Dodgers whipped Cincinnati Reds 9-0 and Philadelphia Phillies stopped Chicago Cubs 4-2.

The odd incident in the Pirate-Met game came in the third inning after Jose Pagan cut the New York lead to 5-4 with a two-run double. As Jim Pagliaroni stepped into the batter's box, Mets' manager Wes Westrum, emerged from the dugout.

"That man batted out of turn," Westrum told plate umpire Al Barlick.

"He did!" Barlick asked somewhat surprised.

"Yes," Westrum coolly replied.

Pagan had batted out of turn so had Gene Alley, who preceded Pagan with the second spot in the lineup.

As the puzzle became unraveled, the participants learned that in the official lineup Pagan was listed as the sixth batter and Alley the seventh. But in the lineup listed on the scoreboard, Alley was No. 6 and Pagan No. 7.

The Pirates were following the scoreboard even though the official lineup was posted in their dugout.

Met coach Sheriff Robinson caught the discrepancy, but Westrum let it go through the first two innings when the reversal of Alley and Pagan did the Mets no harm.

"You don't bring it to the umpire's attention until they do something that hurts you," Westrum said.

The turn of events enabled the Mets to hold onto the victory behind a four-run first-inning outburst, capped by Ron Swoboda's three-run homer.

Mike McCormick bestirred seven hits as San Francisco cooled off St. Louis. Hal Lanier struck the big blow, a two-run double with the bases loaded in the fifth inning.

Hank Aaron smashed his 19th and 20th homers, a grand slam and a two-run blast, for Atlanta.

Hotel Girls Blast Out Seven Homers

There's nothing quite as exciting as home runs for offering ball games and City Hall proved the point in last night's Belleville Women's Softball League contest.

City trounced Zeke Price 33-3 and clouted seven home runs in the process. Evelyn Marcia led the way with three round - trippers while Rosie Chapman had two, Mary Boyd one homer and one triple and Sharon Francis a double and homer.

Valerie Brown, J. Holland and Marion Bourcette were beat in defeat.

Donna Barbaretsch pitched well for the victory and Yvonne Mandi was the losing pitcher.

Injuries May Strike Out AL All-Stars Al Kaline, Frank Robinson

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

Carl Yastrzemski, still groggy from the effects of a persistent head cold, is the healthiest member of the American League's top three hitters.

Yastrzemski, who has the outfield, returned to the Boston Red Sox' lineup Tuesday night as the Sox edged Minnesota Twins 3-2.

But Al Kaline and Frank Robinson, the other two-thirds of the AL all-star outfield, are far less fortunate.

Kaline, Detroit's injury-prone superstar, sat but benched himself out of the July 11 classic when he broke his right hand in a race fit of temper during the slumping Tigers' 8-1 loss to Cleveland Indians.

And Robinson, Baltimore's slugger, is nursing a pinched-in sacroiliac after suffering a slight concussion in a baseball collision with Chicago second baseman Al Weis as the first-place White Sox trimmed the Orioles 5-4.

Weis, however, was the unluckiest of all. He's out for the season with torn ligaments in his left knee.

In Tuesday night's other AL games, Washington Senators throttled California Angels 9-4 and New York Yankees edged Kansas City Athletics 3-2 after losing their fourth-in-a-row opener 10-0.

Kaline, struck out by Cleveland's Sam McDowell in the sixth inning, returned to the dugout and slammed the bat into the bat rack, fracturing a meta-carpal bone in his hand. He'll be out two to four weeks, says Dr. Russell Wright, the Tigers' physician.

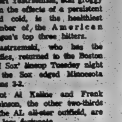
The 32-year-old outfielder, who led the all-star ballot with 342 of a possible 367 votes, was batting .288, with 15 homers and 43 runs batted in. His brash injury, coupled with Detroit's month-long slump, dampens Tiger hopes for their first pennant since 1945.

McDowell mastered eight hits and Chico Salmon drove in four runs with two doubles and a homer as the Indians extended Detroit's losing string to four games.

Robinson and Weis were injured within the Baltimore star's old jerk second base, breaking up a double play in the fourth inning. Robinson lay unconscious for five minutes. Both players later were sent to hospital for X-rays.

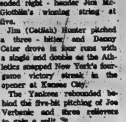
Robinson suffered a concussion and contusions over his left eye brow.

Weis's injuries were diagnosed as a torn medical collateral ligament and a torn sciatal cruciate ligament, both in the left knee.



Rookie Gary Wasserstedt, batting at Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League, posted his first victory in the majors, collaborating with reliever John Wyatt on a four-hitter as the Red Sox slapped past the Twins. Yastrzemski played 5½ innings after missing Monday night's game because of his heavy cold.

Tony Conigliaro clobbered a two-run homer off loser Dean Chance in the first inning and the Red Sox added a run in the seventh on singles by Jerry Adair, Bob Tillman and Reggie Smith. Tony Oliva homered for Minnesota in the second inning and singled across another run in the ninth against Wyatt.



Ken McMullen's three - run homer and a pair of basesempty blasts by Rookie Mike Epstein powered the Senators to 17-hit attack against the Angels. Past Comerback had a single, double and triple for Washington as the AL Wonders ended right - hander Jim McGlothlin's winning string at five.

Jim (Catfish) Hunter pitched a three - hitter and Danny Cater drove in four runs with a single and double as the Athletics snapped New York's four-game victory streak in the opener at Kansas City.

The Yankees rebounded behind the five-hit pitching of Joe Verbanic and three relievers to gain a split.

Outfielders May Dominate National League All-Star Squad

NEW YORK (AP)—When the National League players start voting Thursday for their 1967 All-Star team they are going to have a tough time not filling the lineup with outfielders.

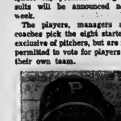
Of the top 10 hitters in the league, seven are outfielders, starting with Roberto Clemente of Pittsburgh Pirates whose added both majors after Tuesday night's games.

Furthermore, outfielders man the lead position in six of the seven individual categories that the statisticians keep. Orlando Cepeda, the St. Louis Cardinals first baseman, who used to play the outfield at times when he was with San Francisco Giants, leads in doubles. All the rest are outfielders.

Hank Aaron of Atlanta Braves is tops in homers and runs scored. Jim Wynn of Houston Astros is top hitter in the league are Cepeda, Tim McCarver, St. Louis catcher, and Richie Allen, Philadelphia Phils third baseman.

Our outfielder, Frank Robinson of Baltimore Orioles, dominates the batting statistics in the American League. The triple crown champ of 1966 appears on his way to a repeat performance. In addition to showing the way in batting, home runs and runs batted in, Robinson also has the most runs and hits.

Cesar Tovar, a ballyman for Minnesota Twins who currently is playing centre field, leads in doubles. Bert Campaneris, Kansas City Athletics shortstop, is the top base stealer. Rick Monday, the Athletics centre fielder, is involved in a three-way tie for most triples.



In the American League's top 10, there are six outfielders, including Robinson, Carl Yastrzemski of Boston Red Sox, Al Kaline and Jim Northrup of Detroit Tigers, Ken Berry of Chicago White Sox and Tovar. The others are Bill Freehan, Detroit catcher Rod Carew, Minnesota second baseman Don Mincher, California first baseman, and Rico Petrocelli, Boston shortstop.

The players vote for three outfielders and do not have to designate any position. Voting results will be announced next week.

The players, managers and coaches pick the eight starters, exclusive of pitchers, but are not permitted to vote for players on their own team.

Camp Borden Wins Forces Track Meet

Camp Borden won the team championship in the Zone 5 Track Meet of Canadian Forces Base in Southern Ontario, with Kingston a close runner-up, at Trenton Monday.

Borden scored a total of 58 points and Kingston was only a shade behind with 55, while third place Trenton placed far back with 13.

Representatives from Toronto and London bases went home empty handed.

Fourteen events were held in the meet, with the winning performers in each going to Ottawa on August 14-15 for the Canadian Forces Championships.

Top individual competitors for Kingston were Wright, who gained a first in the 100 (10.1) and second in the 220, Mogan, 1st in the 220 (:26.1) and second in the mile, and Conroy 1st in the 440 (53.9) and third in the triple jump. Good performers in the discus and shot put.

For the winning Camp Borden team, LaFrance won the mile, and placed third in the 880; and three mile. Connors placed second in the 880 and pole vault, and was third in the high jump. Morisset was placed second in the 100, 1st in the long jump and second in the triple jump.

Beaudin of Trenton gained second place in the discus and javelin, while Jackson ran second in the three mile and third in the mile.

Camp Borden won the mile medley relay in 4:07.5. Kingston was second.

Cookie Back To Denver

DENVER, Colo. (AP)—Denver Broncos and Miami Dolphins of the American Football League Tuesday announced a trade that sends fullback Cookie Gilchrist back to Denver.

General manager Lou Saban of the Broncos said the big man in the trade actually was Miami's offensive guard, Ernie Park, "who will help our offensive line—that's where we need strength."

Saban said Denver also receives quarterback George Wilson Jr., and defensive end Earl Faison.

U.S. NATIONAL DEBT UP

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate approved 60 to 36, and sent to President Johnson Tuesday, a bill raising the national debt ceiling to the highest level in U.S. history—$358,000,000,000 — next Saturday. $365,000,000,000 a year from then. Johnson is almost certain to sign the measure before the present $336,000,000,000 temporary limit expires at midnight Friday. The actual government debt is now about $327,000,000,000.

Leafs Jet Columbus, Wings Lose

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Maple Leafs picked up an important victory in International League action Tuesday night, but they might have lost, so, outstanding pitcher in the process.

Second baseman Syd O'Brien hit a home run and a single to drive in three runs and lead the Leafs to a 6-2 victory over Columbus Jets and to within 3½ games of first-place Rochester Red Wings.

However, Toronto pitcher Dave Vineyard had to leave the game in the fourth inning after pitching the first 11 outs he faced. Vineyard, who pitched a no-hitter early this season, hurt his elbow pitching to Cotton Clayton.

In other games, Richmond Braves blanked Rochester 9-0, Toledo Mud Hens crushed Buffalo Bisons 11-5 and Jacksonville Suns edged Syracuse 3-1 in the first game of a scheduled doubleheader. The second game was rained out.

Cuties Real Clowns

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Sportswriter

Everybody loves a clown!

And when you put 7½ of them together on a softball diamond it adds up to the California Cuties and their always popular combination of softball ability and comedy deluxe.

The Cuties and Belleville Lombanks baseball club performed before about 250 adults and a pack of youngsters at the Fairgrounds last night.

In the entertain part of the seven-inning exhibition, the Cuties topped the Lombanks $-0. This was for the first three innings. The rest of the night is for laughs only.

As far as the Cuties are concerned they scored another win on one of Danny Doyle's comfortable home runs. Dora grabs a pitched ball and flings it far afield and his team mates follow around the bases paths for a six or seven-run homer.

The half part of the team stems from 39-inch tall Little Buttah, the midget second baseman who winds up the show by three illegal strikeouts in the seventh inning.

There was nothing illegal about starting pitcher Casmodo Ball Katy however. Katy gave up two singles and struck out nine batters in the three serious innings, showing a superb up-shot pitch. Then Lisa Jane, a member of the club across 19 years ago, takes the rubber for three clowning frames. They use all the bag of tricks, talking it up for laughs and displaying a fine shadowball performance as well.

Bob Ebtier handled the pitching for the Lombanks. Larry Mavety and Jerry Hill solved Cannonball's slants for base hits. The Lombanks pulled ahead 3-2 during the middle frame clowning as Mavety, Hill, Wolcomb, Ebtier and Boomhower hit off Liza — then came Dora's homer spectacular. Other Cuties include Hefty Helen, Lotta Fanny, Fill the Flirt and Main Street Sally.

Tiger Temper Costly

DETROIT (AP)—All-Star outfielder Al Kaline fractured his right hand Tuesday night in Detroit's baseball game with Cleveland 4th will be lost to the team for two or three weeks.

Kaline, who led the All-Star voting with 342 of a possible 367 votes, probably will miss the All-Star game July 11.

The Detroit right-fielder was injured in the sixth inning of Detroit's 8-1 loss to Cleveland Indians Tuesday night when he slammed his bat into the bat rack after striking out against Sam McDowell.

"He suffered a fractured metacarpal bone in his right hand," said Dr. Russell Wright, team physician, who had x - rays taken immediately after the game.

The exactor of Starlit Girl and runner-up Time Factor in the fourth was worth $30.30 and the exactor of Spike C.C. and Gordian in the sixth paid $37.90.

Robinson Threatened

Battle Of The Bludgeons

NEW YORK (AP) — Frank Robinson, trying to become the first player to win consecutive triple crowns, is meeting stiff competition from three of the American League's most renowned hitters—Carl Yastrzemski, Al Kaline and Herman Killebrew.

Yastrzemski, star outfielder of the Boston Red Sox has rushed up to tie the Baltimore Orioles slugger for the top spot in batting at .336. Kaline, of Detroit Tigers, is four points behind the two. Killebrew, of Minnesota Twins, entered the home run lead from Robinson and closed to within two of the latter's 19 homers batted in total.

Robinson gained one point with seven hits in 20 tries during the week ending Monday.

Yastrzemski soared 10 points with a 9-for-15 performance and Kaline climbed six points to .332 with seven safeties in 17 times at bat.

Killebrew slammed three homers, giving him 21 for the season. Robinson had one last week, increasing his total to 21. The Orioles' outfielder has 58 RBI, Killebrew 57.

Departmental Softball

The Combines broke open a tight game with five third - inning runs and went on to dump the Police Department 16-6 in last night's Departmental League game.

Combines moved into a second - place tie with the victory and have a game in hand on The Intelligencer.

Gary Reid horled the victory and Scotty Reid the loss.

Bob Dafoe cracked a three - run homer for the Combines while Jim Prouty and Bill Ferguson contributed two hits each.

For the Police, Lee Hall smashed the longest home run of the season over the centre fielder's head while Scotty Reid also had a circuit clout.

The league - leading Fire Department and The Intelligencer clash in tonight's 6.30 game at Prince Charles School.

A Record Year

The number of highway deaths for each 100,000 persons was higher last year in Canada and in seven of the 10 provinces than in 1965. Alberta was the only province to show a drop in the number of deaths per 100,000 population in each of the last three years. The death toll has steadily increased in New Brunswick, which has the highest death rate, and in Nova Scotia. For all of Canada, there were 26.26 deaths per 100,000 population, or 5,258 actual deaths, on the highways in 1966. The death rate was 24.9 in 1965.

Athletic Awards Given At School Closing

TYENDINAGA RESERVE — This pupils of Blessing on School, Tyendinaga Township, will have happy memories of their last year in the one-roomed school which will be closed next Thursday for good. In the fall all public school children of the township will attend the new school now being built.

Soon after Christmas the children of this school began practising for the events in the Centennial athletic awards program, completing them as conditions permitted. The program was finished late in May, and the cards given as awards have since been received and distributed by their teacher, Mrs. Ralph Lawlor.

As different standards according to age are set by the authorities for each event, and are uniform across Canada, all pupils in school between the ages of six and 18 have the same opportunity to win the various awards, gold, silver or bronze and red for merely completing.

Susan Jones, 10, was the sole winner of a gold crest in Bleasington School.

Winners of silver crests were: Scott McLaren, 14; Peter Scruby, 11; Jody Genejs, 11; Charlene Quinn, 12; Wendy Jones, 9; and Darlene Thompson, 8.

Bronze crests were won by: Richard Quinn, 14; John Pepper, 13; Kevin Long, 9; John Moir, 10; Doris Sherman, 14; and Maxine Lester, 6.

Red crests for participation went to Michael Lester, Norman Long, George Lester, Andy Quinn, Clayton Lucy, Danny Moir, Bobby Jones, Dennis Quinn, Roger Lester, and Bruce Moir; and to Blanche Lester, Penny Haight, Debby Quinn, Eleanor Muir, Priscilla Haight, and Donna Thompson.

Centennial Tea Held at School

DESERONTO — Mrs. Dorothy McCullough and grade one and two pupils gave a Centennial tea last week, with the parents and a few friends as invited guests. The proceeds went toward the support of the school's foster child in Viet Nam. Tickets were sold on a cake which was donated, and this added to the fund. Douglas Terry held the lucky ticket.

In the classroom the children entertained the guests with a program of Canadian songs and little skits, and a puppet show depicting the landing of the Mohawks on the Bay of Quinte. They had made and dressed the puppets themselves.

Mrs. Bud Meeks, Mrs. M. Reid and Mrs. Michael Smith made up a committee in charge of the tea. The table, set up in the hall, was covered with a cloth which pictured the Centennial rose. A large cake, appropriately decorated, formed the centre piece. It was the gift to the children of Mrs. Isabel McTavish, retiring music teacher.

At the conclusion of the program each of the 31 pupils was given a picnic lunch and a cold drink which each took to the school yard, there the little folk had their own party. The adults helped themselves to tea or coffee and the other refreshments and visited with the teacher and with each other.

Members of the staff of the Deseronto Public School are having their annual luncheon today at a restaurant in the Tyendinaga area. Farewell gifts were presented to Mrs. Isabel McTavish, retiring after teaching music in the school for 17 years; and to Mrs. Eleanor Scheil, secretary, who is moving out of town. Both received gifts from the staff members, and Mrs. McTavish a gift from the pupils.

Stirling

STIRLING — William Little has been appointed manager of the Bank of Montreal branch on Mackenzie Island. John Schnurr of Bobcaygeon has been appointed accountant at the branch in Stirling.

Rev. J. F. McGarvey, who arranged the Stirling Centennial ecumenical hour of prayer, has reported a balance of about $27 after expenses were paid.

Lyle Hay, injured when he fell while applying aerotrough-ing, is now a patient in Belleville General Hospital.

Mrs. Harry Smith, Kingston, spent last week with her sister, Mrs. Wilfred Greener.

Mrs. Dave Lowry and Mrs. Jim Boughen are patients in Belleville General Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Eric Phillips, Kingston, have purchased the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hulin. Mr. Phillips has accepted a position with the Stirling Public Utilities Commission.

Stirling Legion held its annual church service at St. James the Minor Roman Catholic Church. At the close of the service the Legion members paraded to the Cenotaph where a centennial memorial wreath was placed by branch president, Elwood Wilson.

Thirty - seven members of district Women's Institutes went by bus to Guelph to attend the fourth national convention of the Federated Women's Institutes of Canada.

Mrs. Harry Clarke entertained her family at a reunion dinner in honor of her son, Seymour Ashley of Frankston, Australia, who is in Ontario attending production conferences at Bstawa and Toronto. Guests included F/O Robert Clarke of Winnipeg, Manitoba, and Miss A. Clarke of Windsor.

Mrs. Herbert Wood spent the weekend with Dr. and Mrs. Fred Eggleton and family in Hamilton and attended a ceremony at which her nephew, Brian Eggleton, received his Queen Scout badge.

Rose Adams, Cloverdale, conducted the installation of officers for St. Paul's AOTS Men's Club. They are: honorary president, Rev. J. B. Small; past president, Elwood Bateman; president, John L. Good; vice president, Arthur Lodge; treasurer, Harold Hagerman; secretary, Arthur Anderson. Don Williams gave a talk on Camp Quin-Mo-Lac and Wendell Carman conducted the devotional.

BNA Act Redraft Vetoed by Trudeau

OTTAWA (CP)—There is no consensus on constitutional matters within Canada and any attempt to redraft the British North America Act now isn't advisable, Justice Minister Trudeau said Tuesday.

He rejected for a suggestion that Ottawa produce a white paper on the constitution.

"If there were a specific constitutional issue, I would be glad to give it high priority," he told the Commons standing committee on justice and legal affairs.

"But this is not the case."

Mr. Trudeau pointed to differing ideas within the Liberal party itself on constitutional matters as an indication of the lack on consensus.

Various proponents of a new constitution had suggested a unitary state, a kind of common market, a two-nation structure, a loose federation of associate states, and particular status for Quebec.

Mr. Trudeau said some provincial governments have used the constitutional issue to divert attention from difficult problems within their own jurisdiction. But the constitution should not be used as a political football.

"In the circumstances, I feel it is much wiser to keep repeating that the constitution must be obeyed . . . that we do not feel it advisable to disrupt the fabric of the country by sitting down now and attempting to redraft it . . ."

Some South American countries had had hundreds of constitutions and France had had 17 in 170 years.

Canada wasn't wealthy enough—not only in terms of money but in stability and resources—"to embark upon this kind of constitutional game."

If there was general agreement on the kind of change wanted, the constitution could be changed tomorrow. But there wasn't.

Real Evils of This World Come From Lusts of Spirit

BY SYDNEY J. HARRIS

One reason that the so-called moral reformers fail to interest me is that they pay far too much attention to the lusts of the flesh, and not enough to the lusts of the spirit.

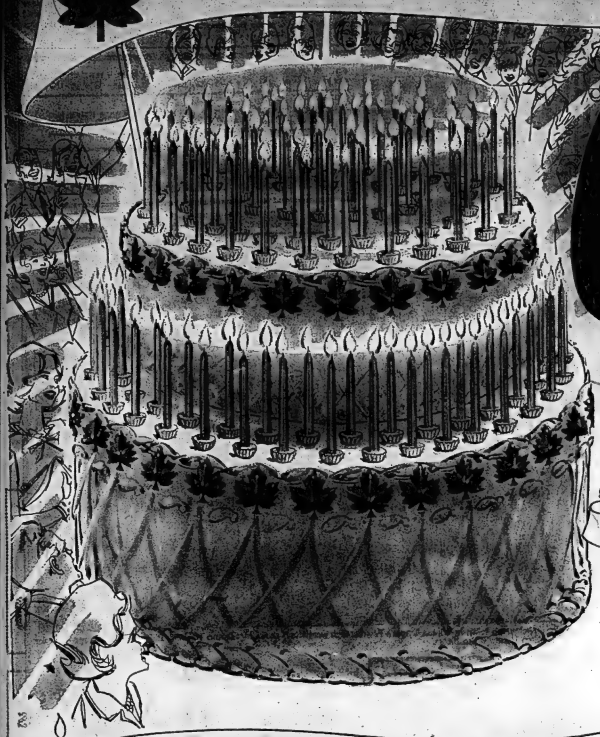
Drunkenness and lechery and the exhilaration of the senses by fast living are usually foolish and pathetic endeavors — but the real evils in this world come not from these appetites, but from the lusts of the spirit.

Alexander the Great was proud of his chastity — proud that, contrary to the custom of his times, he refused to violate the wives and daughters of his captives. Yet Alexander's over-vaulting ambition to conquer the world was a much greater and deeper flaw than incontinence.

Hitler was a model citizen, so far as the reformers are concerned. He was sober, continent, a vegetarian, and lived a Spartan personal life. But no more sick and evil man has existed in history, for the mortal sins of the spirit were his.

Men with a lust for power, with an insensate desire for fame and glory, with a desperate need to manipulate and humiliate and harm others who get in their way, are the ones who cause all the trouble. The weak men — those who easily succumb to their physical appetites — are scarcely worth bothering about.

One reason the reformers — and so many religious leaders — have failed to alter the scheme of things is that their conception of "vice" is so narrow. They fritter away their energies in fighting alcohol and pornography — while the real evil-doers sit in the front pews of the congregation and applaud their harangues.



In his topography of Hell, Dante (who really understood the essence of religion and morality) placed the lechers and the topers in the milder circles of purgation, reserving the hottest places for those who had sinned against the spirit — hypocrites, traitors, exploiters, the hard of heart and narrow of mind.

It is no accident that Jesus was accused by the "respectable" citizens of his day of "consorting with publicans and harlots." He was pointing out by His action that such people are often more worthy and saveable than those who called Him "Master" and secretly violated most of the basic tenets of Christ.

Physical sin merely proves that we are partly animal in origin; but spiritual sin is a repudiation and perversion of our distinctively human nature. It is this perversion that had brought mankind to the edge of catastrophe time and time again; not a thousand drunkards, wastrels or libertines can do as much damage as one bigot, one zealot — or one misguided reformer.

County Court Jurisdiction Proposed for Divorce Cases

OTTAWA (CP)—Divorce procedures would be less costly and more effective if county courts were given the right to settle them, the special parliamentary committee on divorce recommended in a report made public Tuesday night.

But it rejected as unworkable the present three proposals it had received for placing divorces in the family courts run in some provinces.

Also turned down were suggestions advanced by the United Church of Canada, Canadian Roman Catholic bishops and other bodies that special courts or marriage counselling agencies be created to assist broken marriages.

In all provinces except Quebec and Newfoundland, divorces are now handled solely by the provincial superior courts.

Divorces from Quebec and Newfoundland must use the federal procedure.

"The procedure of the superior courts is costly and involved," the committee said.

These courts already were burdened with more serious matters and tended to dispose of their long lists of divorce cases in a perfunctory manner.

They lacked the assistance of social workers and counsellors.

County courts were more local, less formal in their procedures, more available and less costly.

The report cited the views presented to it by James McRuer, retired chief justice of Ontario, in support of giving divorce jurisdiction to county courts.

"Divorce litigants should have access to the Supreme Court if they wished a high court trial . . . but the great advantage of the county court should not be denied them," it said in a summary of the former judge's proposal.

In another recommendation designed to ease the financial burden of divorce actions, the committee suggested that a wife be allowed to file for divorce in any province after one year's residence.

Federal Control Urged Over Alimony, Support

OTTAWA (CP)—Financial aspects of divorce—alimony, child support and the division of property—should be brought back under federal jurisdiction, the parliamentary divorce committee recommended Tuesday night.

The committee called for federal legislation that would authorize the Senate and provincial divorce courts to make provision for the welfare of the mother and the children when each divorce is granted.

The Senate's new powers would apply to residents of Quebec and Newfoundland, which have no divorce courts and no laws to protect the interests of divorced women and their children.

The committee challenged the widespread view that such rights ancillary to divorce decrees are exclusively under provincial jurisdiction. It quoted legal opinions by E. A. Driedger, former deputy minister of justice, and Maurice Ollivier, Commons law clerk.

The report said Parliament exercised jurisdiction over alimony and property settlements in passing individual divorce bills in the early years of Confederation, but this power had gone into disuse.

Over the years, most provinces passed laws regulating alimony, child custody and support and property settlements.

The committee recommends that these issues be left to the discretion of the divorce courts or the Senate and that they be settled at the same time as the divorce is granted.

One exception would be that the Senate would not deal with the division of marital property between the divorced parties.

The original orders relating to the amount of alimony and provision for the custody, financial support and education of the children would not be final.

The report urged that such orders be subject to repeal or changes by provincial courts to meet changing circumstances.

Committee Co-chairmen

Roebuck Reformer At 89

OTTAWA (CP)—Senator Arthur Roebuck for the first time, you would never suspect he was a social reformer.

The eldest member of the Senate at 89, he regularly wears a wing collar, morning coat, golden pheasant and a black homburg. He speaks slowly and moves slowly.

You could easily mistake him for one of the long-retired politicians who populate cartoons about the Senate.

Instead, Senator Roebuck remains one of the most active and influential men on Parliament Hill. He was the moving force behind the year-long parliamentary inquiry that produced Tuesday's sweeping recommendations to overhaul Canada's Victorian - era divorce laws.

For him the report culminated a political career that began in 1911, a legal career dating back to 1907 and a tenure of 23 years in the Senate, including 13 years as chairman of the divorce committee.

Tuesday was his day.

After serving as co-chairman of the special Commons-Senate committee on divorce laws and drafting most of the 200-page report, he supervised printing and distribution arrangements.

He spoke for 20 minutes under hot TV lights to explain the recommendations and findings at a press briefing. When the Senate met at 8 p.m., he tabled the report and again spoke for more than an hour with only a few words scrawled on a small piece of paper to refresh his memory.

Senator Roebuck began work in Toronto as a 21-a-week elevator boy around the turn of the century. He took the last three years of high school in a six-month "cram" course and worked for 15 years as a newspaper reporter and editor.

Newspaper work led him into law practice and politics and when the Ontario Liberals took office in 1934, he took on the portfolios of attorney-general, labor and hydro development.

He simplified the court system by eliminating 10,000 justices of the peace and 99 magistracies, cut hydro bills by $7,000,000 a year to help those hard hit by the Depression and was a friend of the budding labor movement.

When Premier Mitchell Hepburn decided to break the General Motors strike in Oshawa in 1937, he resigned in protest.

He entered the Commons in 1940 as MP for Toronto Trinity, Liberal leadership in 1943 and moved to the Senate in 1945.

His watch-word might be: "What, me retire?"

What Is Cruelty Is Question Best Left to Judge's Wisdom

OTTAWA (CP)—Cruelty, both physical and mental with no restricting definition, is among proposed new grounds for divorce in a special parliamentary committee report made public Tuesday night.

In a defence of its recommendation, the Senate - Commons committee said:

"Canadian divorce law has not changed with the times. Society now believes that cruelty is sufficient ground for the dissolution of a marriage.

"Husbands are no longer thought to own their wives nor to possess the right to beat and ill use them. Nor does modern society tolerate brutality on the part of the wife."

Nova Scotia now is the only province where cruelty is accepted as a ground for divorce. In most provinces it is recognized as a ground for judicial separation; which does not allow remarriage.

The report said the definition of cruelty, whether mental or physical, should be left to the "learning, good sense, responsibility and wisdom of Canadian judges. . . ."

Judges would have available for guidance the precedents set in Nova Scotia and also in England where the ground of cruelty has been accepted for 30 years.

Discussing English experience, the report commented:

"Actual physical violence is not necessary to establish cruelty. The matrimonial relations between the spouses must be considered, particularly in cases where the alleged cruelty consists not of actual physical violence but of persistent and injurious reproaches, accusations and nagging."

A claim of cruelty would not be valid, however, if the spouse seeking divorce had provoked it. The provocation "must be such as to deprive a reasonable person of self-control."

The committee noted that some witnesses at its public hearings had warned that the introduction of cruelty would only leave the door open to abuse. They urged a careful definition.

There were references to certain divorces in the United States where "mental cruelty" had been expanded to cover almost any type of complaint.

"However, in Canada, we have a bench of judges upon whom we may rely and, moreover, there has been built up over the years a body of jurisprudence which all Canadian judges would be expected to follow and would follow," the committee said.

Thousands of Couples Would Be Able to Wed

OTTAWA (CP)—Thousands of unmarried couples and their illegitimate children could have legal family status if wider divorce laws are adopted by Parliament.

The report of the Parliamentary divorce committee said Tuesday that if desertion for three years was made a ground for divorce, "many thousands" of deserted wives and husbands would be saved from forming "common law" unions.

Desertion was recommended as a ground for divorce where there was little likelihood of the couple living together again "within a reasonable period of time."

A period of up to three months, in which the couple might live together to try the "psych things up", would be allowed within the three years necessary for the ground of desertion.

The report said some witnesses claimed desertion was the most common of marriage offences. The husband was most often the deserting partner.

The committee said the spouse who remained at home might in fact be the deserting party, if his or her conduct had driven the other partner away.

The committee noted that most of the complaints about the present law were made by women who found it impossible to get a divorce although they had been deserted by their husbands.

Separation Clearest Proof Of Failure of A Marriage

OTTAWA (CP)—The clearest proof of the failure of a marriage is the decision of husband and wife to live apart.

Working on this theory, the parliamentary divorce committee recommended in its report Tuesday that couples who had lived apart for three years before divorce proceedings were begun should be granted a divorce "provided:

—"There was no reasonable expectation of the couple living together again in a reasonable length of time.

—Provision had been made for maintenance of wife, children and in some cases, husband.

—The decree was not against the public interest or unduly harsh on one spouse or the children.

The report said separation was the best indication of marriage breakdown, a ground approved by most witnesses heard by the committee, and existing in many European and Commonwealth countries.

Another ground suggested in the report was 'wilful non-support of his family by a husband for one year.

The report said when the husband fails to discharge his duty as breadwinner, the home is disrupted, and may be better off without him.

Five MPs Will Fight Report As Not Wide Enough in Reform

OTTAWA (CP) — Five MPs who figure the Commons-Senate committee on divorce stopped short of the ideal solution to divorce plan to carry their fight to the public and the Commons for the marriage breakdown principle as the essential ingredient of judicial dissolution of marriage.

Blocked by the rules from submitting a minority report to either Commons or Senate, the MPs rallied a press conference to say that the committee's recommendations fall short of what they believe most Canadians believe.

"We believe the public is way ahead of the legislators," said Andrew Brewin (NDP—Toronto Greenwood), one of the five.

"With the aid of an enlightened press and many organizations which endorse the marriage breakdown idea, we hoped this will be thoroughly canvassed and made a national issue," said G. W. Baldwin (PC—Peace River), another of the group.

Gordon Fairweather (PC—Royal) said the group had hoped the committee of which all were members would pioneer by accepting marriage breakdown as the ground for divorce without attaching such things as adultery, desertion, etc.

"If people thoroughly understand it, it should be easier for them to accept this idea than an extension of the grounds for divorce because marriage breakdown is more humane and sociologically more sound," he said.

Gordon Aiken (PC — Parry Sound-Muskoka) said that while the wider grounds proposed by the committee represent a "tremendous improvement, the committee is doing half a job when it would be comparatively simple to do a whole job."

He predicted conflict between the committee extension of specific grounds for divorce and its partial acceptance of the breakdown idea with respect to lengthy separation, criminality, alcohol and drug addiction, disappearance and wilful non-consummation of marriage.

The group noted that the committee's recommendations have been the grounds for divorce in Britain for 30 years and found unsatisfactory. It was out of dissatisfaction and study by a committee of prominent Britons called together by the Archbishop of Canterbury that the marriage breakdown idea was born, and now was gaining wide acceptance in Britain.

Canada, without a major change of divorce laws in 100 years, had a chance to move to the forefront by accepting the urgings of the Anglican Church, United Church, National Council of Women, Canadian Mental Health Association and Canadian Jewish Congress and replace specific divorce grounds with the marriage breakdown principle.

"Instead of being 130 years behind the times, we're only going to be 30 years behind the times if the committee's proposals are adopted," they agreed.

Mr. Baldwin and Mr. Brewin interviewed Prime Minister Pearson who, they said, agreed that the question is one that should be handled through a free vote in the Commons, a vote where party discipline is lifted and MPs vote according to their personal views.

In a joint statement, signed also by the fifth member of the group, Arnold Peters (NDP—Timiskaming), the five argue:

"The breakdown concept suggests a way from the concept that the dissolution of a marriage must be based upon misconduct of the husband or wife.

"The step also allocates blame for the failure of a marriage results in recrimination and bitterness and does not correspond with reality. . . .

"The marriage breakdown concept puts the emphasis where it should be, on the question of whether the marriage is dead and whether there is hope of reconciliation. . . .

"The adoption of this theory would prevent some of the hasty or 'quickie' divorces which are granted under the present system, and would still be available under the committee's report."

Separation, Non-support, Alcoholism, Cruelty Proposed as Divorce Grounds

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's archaic divorce laws should be brought up to date by permitting dissolution of marriage for such things as cruelty, desertion, non-support and drug and alcohol addiction, says a joint Senate-Commons committee report.

The committee submitted draft legislation Tuesday night embodying these and other changes laws virtually unrevised for more than 100 years.

The government is expected to use the committee's draft as the basis for parliamentary action this fall.

The work of the 36-member committee came under immediate fire for not going far enough by five veteran MPs who vowed to campaign publicly to get Parliament to accept the idea of marriage breakdown as the basic reason for dissolving a marriage.

The marriage breakdown concept was urged before the committee by the Anglican and United churches, Canadian Mental Health Association, Canadian Jewish Congress, National Council of Women and the Canadian Committee on the Status of Women.

Roman Catholic bishops told the committee the church would not oppose broader grounds for divorce in the civil courts, provided facilities to reconcile estranged couples were made available.

On this question, the committee's report said that "while the adoption of marriage breakdown as the sole cause of action in divorce is neither practical nor desirable, at least not at present, the idea is not without merit."

So, in its recommendations, it adopted the idea in part by associating marriage breakdown with several new grounds—disappearance for three years, separation for three years due to mental or physical illness, imprisonment for three years, "gross and protracted addiction to alcohol or drugs . . . subject to the absence of substantial prospect of cure."

The committee recommended adding several other specific grounds to adultery, rape, sodomy, bestiality and non-consummation for physical or mental reasons, only legal grounds at present being adultery.

The proposed additional grounds:

In practice, most present divorces are granted for —Cruelty "of a substantial character" with application of this broad description to be left to the wisdom of the judge.

—Separation or desertion for three years where there is no reasonable prospect of reconciliation.

—Wilful refusal or neglect by the husband to support his wife and family for one year.

—Bigamy by either husband or wife.

Wilful refusal to consummate marriage for a year.

The committee would also give county and district courts the same powers in divorce matters as now are exercised by provincial supreme courts. This would not apply to Quebec and Newfoundland, whose residents obtain divorces through the parliamentary divorce commissioner and Senate resolutions.

The committee suggested Parliament re-assert a long-dormant right to legislate on alimony, custody of children, maintenance and support.

It recommended the provincial divorce courts and, for Quebec and Newfoundland, the divorce commissioner and the Senate, make orders dealing with these subjects as a divorce is granted.

The orders could be revised later to allow for changed circumstances by provincial courts, which now exercise such functions with respect to separation orders.

The committee left undefined cruelty as a ground for divorce, saying:

"A comprehensive and satisfactory definition of marital cruelty is not possible nor is it desirable for the good reason that acceptable conduct within the home differs from time to time and from place to place and among differing classes of society.

"On the other hand, a competent judge has no difficulty in recognizing cruelty for what it is when the circumstances are before him."

On separation as a ground, Senator Roebuck said the committee applied some "pretty harsh" limitations besides the three-year period.

Senator Roebuck estimated 60,000 couples are living together as man and wife because one or both cannot get a divorce.

The report said "it is better for society that the divorce rate be higher, if the number of common law or bigamous unions be thereby reduced."

Senator Charges Spying

OTTAWA (CP)—A rare upset broke out in the Senate Tuesday night when Senator Arthur Roebuck accused the CBC and unnamed newspapers of "spying" on a parliamentary committee.

He charged that news reports broadcast and published last week about the report of the Senate-Commons committee on divorce laws constituted contempt and a breach of the privileges of Parliament.

Senator Roebuck, co-chairman of the committee, made his comments after tabling the 260-page report. He immediately ran into a barrage of Opposition complaints that he was criticizing the press and the CBC unfairly.

Senator Roebuck, 80, a Toronto Liberal, said senators are entitled to receive committee reports before their contents are disseminated by news media.

"To spy on a committee when it meets in camera is like eavesdropping on a jury during its deliberations."

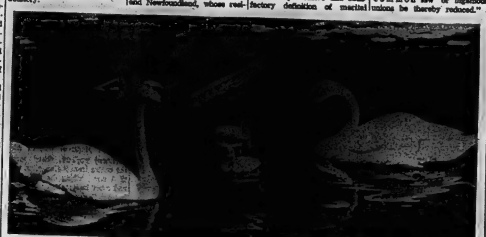
Four Conservative senators jumped to their feet with sharp questions and objections.

Senators Gaetan O'Leary and David Walker repeatedly asked Senator Roebuck to name the newspapers he was accusing of contempt of Parliament. He refused.

"You're attacking the whole press," shouted Senator O'Leary, editor emeritus of the Ottawa Journal. He said it was obvious the divorce report had been "leaked" to reporters by members of the divorce committee, which grouped 24 MPs and 12 senators.

He added that Senator Roebuck should discuss the matter with other committee members instead of making blanket accusations against newspapers.

"I'm not a detective,' snapped Senator Roebuck. He had heard accounts about the report on the CBC and read them in several newspapers, starting last Wednesday.



Senator Allister Grosart (PC—Ontario) said it was unfair to single out the CBC and not name any newspapers. Senator Gunnar Thorvaldson (PC—Manitoba) said the accusations against news media should not be made without supporting facts.

Senator Roebuck replied that if reporters obtained information from persons who breached confidences about secret committee meetings, they had a responsibility to withhold publication until the report was tabled.

Parliamentary committees could not function properly if information leaked out about their secret meetings.

Senator Roebuck did not propose any action against news media. He felt duty-bound to make his comments to warn future parliamentary inquiries to be on guard.

New Coaches for Fleets

Bus Lines Hope to Retain Large Percentage of Expo Trade

TORONTO (CP)—Three Canadian bus lines are taking a minimum of 1,000 people a day from Toronto to Expo this summer.

Uncounted other passengers are taking charter bus trips to Montreal from all over the continent. From Ottawa alone, 36,000 school children have gone to Expo on special bus charters.

The bus companies couldn't be happier.

"As in last year's rail strike a lot of people have turned to us because other ways of traveling are difficult," says T. B. Burke, general traffic manager of Colonial Coach Lines in Toronto, which has the Toronto-Montreal bus franchise.

"A lot of them will travel regularly by bus from now on."

Larry Needler of Trailways of Canada, a suburban Ontario line whose charter work now is the major part of its business, says he expects Expo to make a permanent difference to his company.

"A lot of people haven't travelled any distances by bus since the war. They're thrilled to see how buses have changed. A bus is a coach now, with air-conditioning, washrooms and even stereotaped music."

Trailways bought 12 buses to add to its 50-bus fleet this season, and hired 25 extra drivers. Colonial bought 22 buses and leased 50 more from Greyhound Lines. It also hired 115 extra drivers to help its nine daily express trips and average of eight daily charters to Montreal. Gray Coach Lines bought 15 new vehicles.

"Our business is up 50 to 75 per cent from last year," says Mr. Burke. ". . . But we haven't turned down anyone yet, and don't expect to."

Its estimates his line may keep about half its Expo passengers as regular customers.

The Toronto board of education gave a big boost to Gray Coach's summer business. It responded so enthusiastically to the offer of W. C. Kelly, the company's charter superintendent, to carry school children to Expo that Gray Coach could not handle the business.

So it shared the charters with Colonial and Trailways. Between them they have taken 7,400 children to Montreal each week since May 1. Gray Coach says its charter business is up 250 per cent over last year.

"Most of the passengers are children," notes Mr. Kelly. "But today's child is tomorrow's teacher or scout leader. Our charter business will probably drop a little next year, but will still be up over 1966."

Greyhound Lines does no direct Toronto-Montreal business. But it says its Expo charters from all over Canada and the United States have increased business on other runs, particularly to Niagara Falls.

A Greyhound official at the company's Calgary head office, asked whether he expects to retain the Expo business, said: "We'll be in trouble if we don't. We bought 50 new buses this year at about $55,000 each."

Greyhound says its most popular Expo trip from the west is in operation with Air Canada. One group takes a bus east and returns by air, while another flies to Expo and takes the same bus back.

Royal Yacht on Way To Expo for Queen

MONTREAL (CP) — The royal yacht Britannia sails up the St. Lawrence River to Expo 67 today prior to next Monday's visit to the world's fair by the Queen and Prince Philip.

Arrival of the Britannia from Halifax will mark the final phase of security preparations for the royal visit which will take place following the Queen and Prince Philip's visit to Ottawa.

The royal party will participate in Canada's centennial celebrations July 1 in the capital before making a one-day tour of part of the Expo site. The party will be brought to the world's fair aboard the Britannia following the Ottawa ceremonies.

The Queen and prince will tour only that section of the fair situated on the western end of Notre Dame Island, site of the British, Canadian, French, Ontario and Quebec pavilions.

Today is India's national day at the fair and President Zakir Hussin heads that country's delegation at flag - raising ceremonies in Place des Nations.

Premier Josef Lenart of Czechoslovakia and Premier Todor Zhivkov of Bulgaria made separate and unofficial tours of Expo Tuesday.

Uganda, a country of 7,200,000 in the heart of Africa, celebrated its national day Tuesday with ceremonies at Place des Nations where African dancers performed in the morning as well as in the afternoon.

Alexander Ojera, Uganda's minister of information, broadcasting and tourism, headed his country's delegation at the ceremonies and described Expo as "a masterpiece of organization and co-ordination."

Youngsters No Trouble It's Lost Adults

MONTREAL (CP) — There's a spot at Expo 67 where bewildered youngsters keep pouring in throughout the day and where they find comfort until they are reunited with their parents.

Mrs. Janina Muria-Scott, coordinator of the visitors' aid centre on St. Helen's Island, said Tuesday that between 200 and 300 lost children are brought to the centre daily—and most are reunited with their families in less than two hours.

On hand to welcome and reassure the youngsters, who often are apprehensive and tearful, are Montreal welfare department workers. They man the centre from 9 a.m. often until 4 a.m., taking down names and other information and seeking out the parents.

"What is the matter?" asked the department's Jean - Marc Poupart as one little girl was brought in by a hostess from a nearby pavilion.

"I'm lost," the girl whispered. "Never mind," Mr. Poupart reassured her. "Your mommy will soon be here to fetch you."

TEARS DRY

The child's tears began to dry and other youngsters kept coming in.

Mrs. Muria-Scott said a playroom provided for the lost youngsters has between a dozen and 40 children awaiting reunion with their families at any one time throughout the day.

Mrs. Muria-Scott said that since the fair's official opening April 27 more than 10,000 children have been looked after at the centre which also handled nearly 3,000 wandering adults.

Visitors to Expo use the centre as a sort of base in cases of separation and, said Mrs. Muria-Scott, the number of husbands and wives reported missing is about equal.

"Usually, separated husbands or wives or the adults use the centre as a spot where they can leave a message saying just where at the fair they can be reached later in the day."

But there was the case of a 75-year-old woman from the United States who came to the centre one evening because she felt forgotten the menne of her motel.

The centre was able to locate the motel within 1½ hours.

Mrs. Muria-Scott said children are surprisingly level - headed when they get lost.

"They usually get in information centre at the site or approach a security guard almost immediately. Sometimes the security guards spot children obviously lost and bring them to the centre."

"But it's the parents who walk in circles for an hour and a half before thinking of checking with us for help."

Gee! Thanks Mister

Eight-year-old Norman Hill, Grove Street, is all smiles as he thanks Elks Lodge member Al Whitney for new bike won at Elks Lodge picnic held at Zwick's Island last weekend. More than 500 people attended picnic which saw Senior Citizens' club members as special guests. That's Norman's mom getting a first ride on the new bike.

Organist Returns For Two Encores

MONTREAL (CP) — There's always something happening at the pavilions at the world's fair but when a young aspiring organist gets a lightening his talents — then pavilion staff really have their hands full.

Sizzling with the persistentit organist at the pavilion of Man the Producer was just one of many unexpected problems that kept popping into the hair of those in charge of the pavilions.

Allen Hutchinson, manager of the huge Expo 67 theme pavilion on Notre Dame Island, said Tuesday night it took some doing before he and his staff finally convinced the 11-year-old organist lad of the danger of sneaking up to the elevated organ platform to make music.

A professional organist performs in the afternoon above the staircase at a large electric organ mounted on a platform reached by a ladder and this was where pavilion staff found Christopher one morning.

The youngster who, said Mr. Hutchinson, played very well, was brought down and warned of the danger of falling 40 feet to the floor below should he slip off the platform.

But he came back twice more. Each he returned for the fourth time — 9.30 p.m. — pavilion officials felt they had had enough.

They called security guards and asked the boy where his parents were.

"Right over there," the youngster replied, pointing down toward his parents, whom he himself had invited by telephone earlier in the day to hear him play.

The parents explained to Mr. Hutchinson and the security guards that the boy meant no harm. They also had a small organ at home and when he discovered the large electric organ he couldn't resist the temptation to play it.

Mr. Hutchinson said the parents promised that the youngster wouldn't make a nuisance of himself in future but that he had the organ platform reinforced anyway to make it safer.

The Dean Martin Show Given $34,000,000 Cut for 3 Years

HOLLYWOOD AP — Dean Martin turned 50 this month, and NBC handed him a gift to add to the celebration: a television contract amounting to $34,000,000.

How much of the $34,000,000 will be take-home pay for Martin is a matter for his lawyers and accountants. But the new contract will push him beyond his current annual income of $5,000,000, a total which already makes him the highest paid entertainer in the U.S.

This month marks another momentous anniversary in the life of Dean Martin. It was just 11 years ago that he walked out on the comedy partnership he shared with Jerry Lewis.

"The two most important events in my career," says Dean, "were when I met Jerry and when I left him."

Now that 11 years have passed since the much-publicized schism, Martin can view it with candor. The break came when the team of Martin and Lewis was riding high and both were making millions from movies, television and nightclubs.

"Those years were fruitful as far as making money was concerned," said Martin. "But there was no satisfaction for me in my work.

"I couldn't get anywhere. Everytime I started to sing in a picture, they cut it to shot of Jerry."

Lewis was assuming more and more control of the act, especially in their film work, and Martin was getting a reputation for laziness.

Friction continued to grow, and the whole thing came to a head after Jerry had written the script of The Delicate Delinquent. Dean read it and had a suggestion to make: "I don't mind playing a policeman, but can't we change the character from a uniformed cop to a plainclothes detective."

"No, I'd much rather have you play him as a cop," Jerry replied with finality.

Martin's Italian temper flared, and he told Jery what he could do with the script — and their partnership.

He was determined to go it alone — "I knew I could do something better than I had been doing with Jerry."

Possibility TV Set Owners May Form National Academy

By GENE HANDSAKER

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The man who was founding chairman of the Emmy awarding Television Academy 21 years ago now has a new idea: a National Academy of Television Receiver Owners of America.

Syd Cassyd sees it as a service organization comparable to an automobile club. But instead of promoting better highways for motorists, it would: "Try to implement the laws of Congress that say television shall be in the public interest, convenience and necessity, and provide a viewers' voice directed toward sponsors and programming."

Cassyd, 58, is a Hollywood trade-magazine writer who in 1950 was president of the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences.

He argues: "Receiver manufacturers are organized, broadcasters are organized, phonograph record technicians are organized, broadcasters are organized. Why shouldn't owners of the 55,000,000 receivers be organized?

"The question is, is the public getting the maximum benefit out of its investment of $300 to $1,000 in a set? How can it best express itself as to what it wants?"

If the 700 U.S. TV stations grossing $2,000,000,000 a year ply Cassyd says, "there would be no need for educational TV channels."

James Bond Will Have New Style

LONDON (Reuters)—The new James Bond will know more about Great than French food, use the right vermouth in a vodka martini and even feel an occasional pang of conscience about killing.

This is how novelist Kingsley Amis, known up to now as the author of Lucky Jim and other best-sellers, is re-casting famed British Secret Agent 007 in a book called Colonel Sun, scheduled for publication in 1968.

The publishers own the copyright of the late Ian Fleming's dashing super - spy, and they asked Amis, as ardent Bond fan, to resurrect the death-defying agent.

But Bond's new literary patron, a former Cambridge lecturer and no expert on Bentley cars, gambling, life-saving gadgets or underwater swimming. So Bond will change accordingly, Amis said in an interview.

But Amis, who has almost completed the new book, is just as meticulous as Fleming in checking details.

"I've just got to ring up London airport and check on airplane timetables and things like that, and then it will be ready," the 45-year-old author said.

The novel opens with Bond coolly holing a long putt on the last green of the posh Sunningdale golf course near London and moves Bond - style to a fictional Greek island.

The revived Bond, still a gourmet, has become an expert on French food. He knows the best kinds of retsina wine, wouldn't dream of eating an olive unless it was a kalamata, and knows where to find obscure drinks.

Leading Freemasons Attend Installation of Grand Master

LONDON (CP) — Leading Freemasons from many parts of the world attended the installation of the Duke of Kent, 31-year-old cousin of the Queen, as grand master of the United Grand Lodge of England, in Albert Hall Tuesday.

Grand Lodge also celebrated its 250th anniversary.

In becoming grand master, the duke restores a long and traditional link between the Royal family and freemasonry.

His father was grand master, which in seniority is premier post in world masonry, from 1939 until his death in an air crash in Scotland while on active service in 1942.

High - ranking Masons from around the world — including Australia, New Zealand and South Africa as well as Canada —participated in Tuesday's ceremony which was followed by dinners and receptions.

The duke is the first member of the Royal family to fill the post since the death of his father, who was succeeded by the 10th Duke of Devonshire, the 6th Earl of Harewood and the present Earl of Scarborough, a former lord chamberlain.

The duke becomes the 10th grand master since the inception of the lodge in 1813.

The installation ceremony was conducted by Lord Scarborough, who told the 8,500 masons in the vast hall, including 64 overseas delegations, that this was the most representative gathering of Freemasons ever held. There now were 7,300 lodges under the English constitution, with more than 600,000 members.

Outlining the organization's charitable institutions, Lord Scarborough said the anniversary was celebrated by making a gift to support surgical research by the Royal College of Surgeons.

The Queen, replying to a loyal message, sent her congratulations on the 250th anniversary.

Negro Outbursts Hit Buffalo Area

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Police, wearing helmets and armed with tear gas and riot guns, patrolled a large section of a predominantly Negro section of the city's east side today following an outbreak of fires, vandalism and looting.

Police described the Tuesday night outbursts in the east side area as rampages.

At least 15 persons were arrested and seven were injured. Stones and bricks were thrown at buses and automobiles, police said, and some gasoline bombs were tossed into business places.

Police said one gun store was entered and some weapons taken.

At the height of the violence, a flying wedge of more than 25 policemen moved along Sycamore Street to break up one gang. Tear gas was fired.

Shortly after midnight, Police Commissioner Frank Felicetta said the "rampage was slowing down" and that he did not need help from other police agencies.

Couple Get Settlement

TORONTO (CP)—A Toronto couple shot at by mistake by policemen three years ago will get an out-of-court settlement of $5,000, Metropolitan Toronto council agreed Tuesday.

The shooting occurred Feb. 29, 1964, when Kurt Hansen and his wife took the receipts from their restaurant to a night deposit box at a downtown bank.

Three policemen, in plain clothes and an unmarked cruiser, had staked out the bank because the deposit box had been ripped by a thief so their deposits could be removed from the street.

The police cruiser blocked Mr. Hansen's car as he pulled away. Mr. Hansen reversed and a shot was fired, shattering the windshield. No one was injured.

Mr. Hansen had asked for $15,000 damages for assault and another $10,000 for false imprisonment.

Northern Electric Staff Rejects New Wage Offer

MONTREAL (CP) — About 5,000 striking employees of Northern Electric Co. Ltd. Tuesday rejected a new wage settlement offer from the company.

The decision came at a noisy strike meeting. No vote was taken.

The strike began May 25.

The latest offer provided for pay increases of between 62 cents and $1.19 in the hourly rates of male workers on various shifts, in a three-year contract.

The offer would have raised the pay of different groupings of female workers from their present $1.72 and $1.79, to $2.40 and $2.50.

The company also offered five weeks' vacation for workers with 25 years' service and a protective clause for those with 19 years' service whose jobs are threatened by automation.

Inquest Criticizes Hospital

BRANTFORD (CP)—A coroner's jury Tuesday criticized Brantford General Hospital for allowing conditions to exist which led to the June 15 death of Mrs. Elizabeth Chapin, 79, of Brantford.

The jury found that Mrs. Chapin died of crushing head injuries received in a three-storey fall down an unused laundry chute at the hospital.

The jury said that the hospital was "remiss in its responsibility in permitting such a condition to exist by not having the unused chute securely locked before the accident."

The hospital was also criticized for allowing a 17-hour interval from the time of the death to the time police were notified of the accident.

Back Stanfield

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Ivan Kerry, president of the Prince Edward Island Progressive Conservative Association, said in an interview Tuesday he believes most P.E.I. Conservatives want Premier Robert Stanfield of Nova Scotia to seek the national party leadership.

Drug Specialist Claims Pharmaceutical Profits Oppose Medical Goals

WASHINGTON (AP)—A university drug specialist said Tuesday that the profit needs of the pharmaceutical industry are diametrically opposed to the health goals of medicine.

"It is an unsavory . . . fact that medical expenses still reduce people to destitution in the United States while the large drug companies make enormous profits," Dr. Dosi F. Magee, chairman of the department of physiology and pharmacology at Creighton University, Omaha, told a Senate small - business subcommittee.

He said it is proper for drug companies to make reasonable profits and engage in large-scale research.

"I would question, however," he added, "whether it is proper for them to make excessive profits from the sick and whether it is proper for the sick to be required to foot the bill for all medical research."

Magee said it is improper for drug companies to lavish gifts on physicians "that in effect say that some poor patient is paying three times as much as he should" for some specific medicine.

"Every pharmacologist in the country, myself included," Magee asserted, "benefits financially in one way or another from the big drug companies."

Astrological Forecasts

By SYDNEY OMARR

Actress Decapitated

Jayne Mansfield Dies In Louisiana Accident

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Actress Jayne Mansfield, her lawyer and a Mississippi youth died today when their car struck a trailer-truck on a narrow highway in eastern New Orleans.

Three of the 34-year-old Hol-

JAYNE MANSFIELD

lywood star's five children were taken to Charity Hospital. A police spokesman said the children — Marie, 3, Mikko Jr., 4, and Zoltan Hargitay, 6 — were "not hurt too bad." Two other children were not with her.

Police identified Miss Mansfield's male companions as Samuel Brody, her lawyer, and Ronnie Harrison, 20, of Mississippi City, a small town on the Mississippi Gulf Coast.

Miss Mansfield had left Biloxi, Miss., about midnight and was en route to New Orleans where she was scheduled to appear on a television program at noon.

Police said the actress was decapitated.

The accident happened about 30 miles east of downtown New Orleans on a winding, narrow stretch of the two - lane route known as the Old Spanish Trail.

Richard Rambo, around 40, of Pensacola, Fla., driver of the truck, said the car appeared suddenly from the rear and ran beneath the truck's trailer. Rambo was not hurt.

A doctor at Charity Hospital said Miss Mansfield's children were undergoing x-rays.

"None of them seems critical," he said. "We want to keep them here for observation, pending arrival of some relatives."

The hospital said Miklos suffered a fractured arm, while the other two were bruised for abrasions.

Miss Mansfield had been appearing at a supper club in Biloxi. Her engagement began June 23 and was scheduled to end July 4.

Brody's wife had accused him in a divorce action recently of committing adultery with Miss Mansfield, who was separated from her third husband, Matt Cimber, a stage director. Miss Mansfield and Cimber had a child, Antonio, 1.

Miss Mansfield was born Vera Jayne Palmer. Later she moved to Texas and graduated from Highland Park High School in Dallas and attended the University of Texas and the University of California at Los Angeles.

Her career to fame came when a press agent managed to get her on a publicity junket to Florida for a Jane Russell movie. She happily posed for photographers in a skimpy red bikini and stole the show from Miss Russell and other glamor girls on the trip.

After a few small roles, she struck it rich in a Broadway show, Will Success Spoil Rock Hunter? in which she made a startling impression attired solely in a towel. After the run of the play 20th Century-Fox hired her for the film version, in which she gave an impersonation of the studio's reigning star, Marilyn Monroe.

Her style seemed to be almost a caricature of the open-mouthed, insinuating Monroe style, and she slithered through such films a The Wayward Bus, The Sheriff of Fractured Jaw, The Hot to Handle, and It Happened in Athens.

Miss Mansfield early evinced a passion for publicity. She posed indefatigably in all varieties of dress and undress and her 40-22-36½ figure was a delight to photographers.

She was married at 16 to a public relations man, Paul Mansfield, and was divorced early in her career. A romance with musician Mickey Hargitay was publicized before the pair was married in 1958.

Buffalo Shotgun Blasts Wound 11 in Racial Riot

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — At least 11 persons were injured by shotgun blasts as more than 1,000 Negroes, most of them youths, rampaged through this city's lowest east side for the second straight night.

Lack of jobs and recreation facilities were cited as causes of the trouble.

Windows were shattered and stores looted in the turmoil Wednesday night.

The disorder spread to neighboring Niagara Falls today. Police Chief John J. Collins rushed 50 helmeted policemen to the northeast section of that resort city following the smashing of several windows.

The disturbances mark the first major outbreak of racial unrest in northern New York state since the Rochester riots of 1964.

The Buffalo streets quieted near dawn.

Crowds of several hundred rock - and - bottle - tossing youths, ranging from pre-teens to their early 20s, kept 400 police busy firing dozens of volleys of tear gas shells along the four strife-torn blocks of Sycamore Street.

Many of the youngsters vanished after dark, leaving the streets to looters and arsonists.

More than 30 persons were arrested. At least a dozen fires were set. Eleven persons, including two policemen, were hit by shotgun blasts. Windows were smashed in more than a dozen cars belonging to white persons who tried to cruise through the troubled area.

Police said the two officers were shot accidentally by a third policeman.

Spokesmen at Emergency Hospital said they had treated nine persons with buckshot wounds. The two officers were treated elsewhere. Numbers of others suffered cuts and bruises.

Police Commissioner Frank N. Felicetta refused, as he had Tuesday night, to call the outbursts a riot.

"Let's change the word to-night," he said, "and call it disturbances, looting and down-smashing."

Assistant Detective Chief Floyd J. Edwards, highest ranking Negro in the police department, called Wednesday night's outbreak "more intense" than Tuesday's but this feeling was not shared by street workers who fanned into the mile-square trouble zone dispensing advice to both Negroes and police.

"Mom! School's out!"

Canadians Draw 280 Horses

DUBLIN (CP)—A total of 280 Canadian - bred tickets were drawn Wednesday in the second Irish Hospitals Sweepstakes of the year, based on Saturday's running of the Irish Derby near Dublin.

Tickets in the international lottery set up to aid hospitals in the Irish Republic were drawn on all 50 horses eligible for the Irish Derby, but only about 20 are expected to start. A final call-over Friday will name the starters.

Israel Annexes Old Jerusalem Amid Protests

JERUSALEM (AP)—The Israeli sector of Jerusalem and the Arab Old City, which Israel seized from Jordan in the six-day war, became part of Israel today.

Interior Minister Moshe Sharpiro issued a proclamation reuniting the Israeli and Arab sectors of the 2,000-year-old city of David for the first time since Jordan seized the walled Old City and Israel occupied the new sector in the 1948 Palestine war.

Israel acted despite warnings from the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and the Vatican and increasing pressure at the United Nations.

The U.S. state department which does not recognize the action, says:

"The hasty administrative action taken today cannot be regarded as determining the future of the holy places or the status of Jerusalem in relation to them."

Earlier Wednesday, the White House appealed to Israel to avoid quick annexation of the Old City.

Davis May Seek PC Post

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The Free Press quotes reliable sources as saying William Davis, Ontario's education minister, will announce this week-end his intention to seek the national leadership of the Progressive Conservative party.

The paper does not identify the sources.

If Mr. Davis, who also holds the portfolio of university affairs, commits himself to the race, he will find himself up against Davie Fulton, George Hees, Donald Fleming, Alvin Hamilton, Sen. Wallace McCutcheon and Michael Starr, all former federal cabinet ministers, and John P. McLean, a Brockville businessman.

Tourists Crowd Ottawa to See Queen

OTTAWA (CP)—There was a forecast of possible showers today as Ottawa prepared to welcome Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip for their ceremonial visit to Canada, a busy seven-day affair centred almost entirely in Ontario.

The Queen's BOAC jet from London was due to roll up to the reception area at Uplands RCAF base at 3 p.m. EDT.

As the hustle of last-minute preparations neared an end, thousands of tourists poured into the capital hoping to have a look at the royal visitors at a variety of weekend events.

Special spectator areas are to be provided at all the open-air events, roped off from the official area. The weather outlook for the weekend was generally good.

Many were hoping to get their first brief glimpse of the Queen late today during her 19-mile drive to Government House after a 15-minute welcoming ceremony at the air base.

But the first real opportunity for the public is scheduled at 2:15 p.m. Friday when she and the prince arrive at the National War Memorial near the Parliament Buildings. The Queen will be there 35 minutes to inspect a guard of honor, place a wreath and meet officials of veterans' organizations.

She then will go to a one-hour folk-art pageant presented by groups from across Canada. It will take place on a special stage in front of the Parliament Hill lawns with a large area set aside for the public.

Friday evening is taken up by a diplomatic - corps reception and a state dinner at Government House.

Saturday's program, marking the 100th anniversary of Confederation, has been designed as a highlight of the visit.

Weather permitting, the Queen will attend an open-air session of Parliament on the Senate side of the Parliament buildings. It will begin at 10:30 a.m. with an ecumenical religious service, followed by addresses from the Speakers of the Senate and the Commons.

The Queen's formal address of royalty, in effect a speech to the nation, will be given about 11:15 a.m., carried live on national radio and TV networks. It is expected to be brief.

There will be a late-afternoon reception at Government House for senators, MPs and government officials before a dinner at Prime Minister Pearson's residence across the street.

Saturday night the Queen will watch a performance of the opera Les Huguenots—sound and light spectacle from Nepean Point, a documentary hitting into the Ottawa River near Parliament Hill. It will be followed by a ceremonial fireworks display.

Sunday she attends service at Christ Church Anglican Cathedral and in the afternoon drives south to Cornwall on the St. Lawrence River where the royal yacht Britannia is waiting to take her to Expo 67 at Montreal.

Monday is set aside for Expo, where six pavilions are to be closed until the Queen has toured them.

Gregoire Angers Colleagues

OTTAWA (CP) — An address to Queen Elizabeth expressed "our deepest loyalty" was opposed by the Commons Wednesday after separatist MP Gilles Gregoire angered his colleagues by opposing the motion.

The address will be read by Speaker Lucien Lamoureux Saturday before the Queen speaks to an open-air joint session of the Commons and Senate, marking the 100th birthday of Confederation.

Mr. Gregoire was hissed and heckled bitterly when he spoke against the motion. He said he had nothing against the Queen personally, but objected to making her the Queen of Canada and opposed the whole system of monarchy.

Shouts of "get out" and "sit down" flew thick and fast when the diminutive independent MP for Lapointe said "on division" to record his opposition to the address.

Charles - Arthur Gauthier (Creditiste - Roberval) referred to the royal visitor as "the Queen of England" and criticized the monarchical system, but did not oppose the motion.

Prime Minister Pearson praised the monarchy at length when he moved the adoption of the address, seconded by Opposition Leader Diefenbaker.

Young Liberals and many other groups in Quebec have campaigned for a presidential republic form of government and called the monarchy a vestige of British colonialism.

Belleville Man Will Meet Queen

OTTAWA (CP) — Seventeen officials of Canadian veterans' organizations are to be presented to the Queen Friday afternoon after she places a wreath at the National War Memorial. It will be the first public ceremony of her centennial visit to Canada.

Those on the veterans' presentation list include J. C. Lundberg, Belleville, president Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans in Canada.

Ottawa Plans Royal Hullabaloo

OTTAWA (CP) — A strange mixture of square and hip teenage entertainment will be put before Queen Elizabeth during July 1 celebrations.

About 10,000 teen-agers are expected to attend what is billed as a Royal Hullabaloo arranged by the centennial commission.

'Previous Date' Says Johnson

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Daniel Johnson of Quebec said Wednesday he has had to decline an invitation to a dinner given by Queen Elizabeth July 4 because of previous engagements.

He said he will meet the Queen in Ottawa and will be present to welcome her to the Quebec pavilion at Expo 67 Monday.

Centennial Parade to Park Shaping to Glittering Success

Belleville's gala Centennial parade is speedily shaping into the smooth outlines of a glittering success.

The parade, which heralds the city's Centennial Year highlights — the opening of Zwick's Island recreation grounds July 5 — is sending activity impulses into a multitude of areas as the big day nears.

In fact, if all the participants were making preparations in one place for the parade, the noise would probably empty a whole city suburb.

Bands would be blaring, carpenters constructing, majorettes marching, mechanics mobilizing motors, nags neigh ing, runners grunting as they rehearsed an artillery salute.

Topping it all might be the roar of aircraft practising a flypast.

In all, there might be more than 1,500 different people with one thing in common — the big parade.

An idea of the scene can be had for the seeing the night of the event, when the parade, as a finished product is marshalled at the East Hill playground starting point.

The glittering rendezvous is scheduled for 8 p.m., starting 30 minutes later on the trek across town to Zwick's Island. "Floats, bands, the armed forces, more floats, and bands, community organizations and any individual or group who cares to add color with an inspired exhibit; will be watched by thousands of Bellevillians and district residents.

Some of the statistics already gathered by parade chairman, Hastings County Sheriff Ross Bailey, indicate the parade's proportions.

Some 300 girl guides and as many cubs and scouts are expected to participate. The Salvation Army is in for 100 members and "it looks like 400 from the armed forces," says Mr. Bailey.

Sprinkled throughout the procession will be the floats of community and commercial organizations, together with gay mobile displays any group or individual may enter.

Float chairmen, W. N. Hurst, already has issued the public invitation for any and all with an inspired idea to get on the band wagon and stress the community spirit of the parade.

Breaking the parade midway along the route will be a salute log base on Bridge Street East opposite the city armory.

Immediately after, the dignitaries will board a bus and follow the parade to Zwick's Island for the second half of the evening's celebrations.

Program for Opening

Centrepiece for the Zwick's Island recreation project opening July 5 will be the Centennial Caravan now touring eisewhere in the Quinte district.

But there'll be plenty more to see — and hear — as the evening's program rolls into production with the arrival of the curtain-lifting, across-town parade.

This is the program, as its presently scheduled:

8.30: Opening ceremonies, with official guests.

8.30: Armed Forces salute — bugling flypast, gun salvos and rifle salutes by Royal Canadian Artillery and Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

8.40: Second flypast.

8.45: Centennial Caravan opens.

8.30: Giant fireworks display.

Parade Paddler

One of the floats — replica of an old paddle-steamer — now is nearing completion, ready for its part in Centennial parade. The float is the fire department entry which, parade officials hope, will be one of many in the July 5 city Centennial highlight.

Simulated 'Search and Rescue' Operation Most Successful

TRENTON — Corporal Sandy MacDonald was the centre of attention at CFB Trenton last evening. He moved his small dinghy out from the centre of Bahee's Island into the Bay of Quinte, then nonchalantly tipped it over!

But there was method in his madness — Cpl. MacDonald was the object of an elaborate "search and rescue" operation simulated by the air base's 102 RU rescue team.

An Albatross amphibious aircraft "sighted" a flare from ted when one of the personnel Cpl. MacDonald, and dropped a was picked up by a small boat rescue kit, which included two one by a Labrador helicopter, large yellow life rafts. Circling and the other by the Albatross.

EFFIE M. ECKERT

The funeral of the late Effie M. Eckert (the former Effie M. McMullen) was held from the W. Theodore Lutz & Son Inc., Funeral Home, Ridgewood, N.Y., on Friday, June 23, with the Rev. Alan B. Chaver, First Presbyterian Church of East Williamsburg, officiating.

Mrs. Eckert was born in Thirlow Township and has resided in New York City for the past 40 years.

After a sudden and brief illness she passed away at the Elmhurst Hospital on June 19, 1947.

She is survived by her husband, John Eckert, of Ridgewood; two brothers, Roy McMullen of Kent, New York and Kenneth McMullen of R. R. 1 Halloway, and one sister, Bessie McMullen of R. R. 1 Halloway.

Interment was in the Mt. Olivet Cemetery.

MRS. ALICE NORTHCOTT

Mrs. Alice Northcott of 360 Pinnacle St., died yesterday at her residence following a four - day illness. She was in her 94th year.

Born in the Oak Hills, she was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Connor and widow of a well - known physician, the late Dr. Emma Connor.

Mrs. Northcott lived in Belleville for 63 years and her garden at the corner of Pinnacle and Campbell Streets was a city show - piece. Mrs. Northcott cultivated her garden as much for the enjoyment of the public as for her own personal pleasure and she was honored by the Horticultural Society for her contribution to civic beautification.

She was a member of Bridge Street United Church and a member of the Red Cross. During the last war she was head of the Bridge Street United Church Red Cross.

Mrs. Northcott is survived by one nephew, William Connor of Belleville and by two nieces, Miss Dorothy Connor and Miss Grace Connor of Belleville. Her husband, Walter Summerfield Northcott, predeceased her.

She is resting at the John R. Bush Funeral Home where the service will be held on Friday, Dr. H. M. Davis, assisted by Rev. Gordon Woodcock, will officiate. Interment will be in Belleville Cemetery.

More Floats, People Wanted To Add Color to Big Parade

There's still plenty of room for participation in Belleville's Centennial parade July 5.

Ross Bailey, Hastings County sheriff, who is parade chairman, is hoping for a colorful response from Bellevillians to emphasize the community spirit of the big event.

County Registrar W. N. Hurst, in charge of organizing floats, has similar aims.

"I'd hoped we would have 2,000 people in the parade," says Mr. Bailey. "We're still looking for people."

Much of the target total already is accounted for from the groups participating — the armed forces, girl guides, scouts and other community groups.

"We're hoping that more groups will get into it with wagons or old cars and such like, to add color to the parade," says Mr. Bailey.

Mr. Hurst is also aiming to encourage the entry of floats from smaller community groups who would not normally participate in a big Centennial event.

"This is their chance to play a part in our community event and have their own memory of a Centennial activity," he says.

Floats need not be expensive — all that's needed is imagination to participate in what will be one of the biggest parades in the city's history.

Kosygin's Heart In White House Declares Peking

PEKING (Reuters) — The Peking People's Daily today attacks Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin for holding a "family reunion" with U.S. President Johnson.

The newspaper says Kosygin "squirmed with delight" when seeing Johnson at Glazsboro, N.J., and denounced his reported remark that he had got so used to coming there that "it is like coming home."

"It was indeed a homecoming for Kosygin," the People's Daily says, "Johnson and Kosygin, the managing director of Washington monopoly capital and the general manager of the Moscow bourgeois privileged stratum, have become members of one family because they share a common class nature, common interests, common loves and hates and a common destiny. . . .

"While physically residing in the Kremlin, Kosygin and his like have their hearts in the White House."

Inquest Adjourned

Air Crash Evidence to Inquiry Refused Publication at Inquest

Hastings County Coroner Dr. J. Russell Scott must wait nearly three months to discover if national security regulations will intervene in an inquest into the fatal crash of an airforce Hercules transport plane near Bayside.

The coroner adjourned the inquest last night until September 20 after revealing minutes of an airforce board of inquiry into the crash that killed six airmen were restricted from publication.

None of the 12 witnesses listed to testify was called to the inquest — believed the first of its kind under new Ontario legislation.

Immediately after impaneling his five-man jury, Dr. Scott told the jurors he had attended the airforce inquiry at Canadian Forces Base Trenton.

He said he now has the minutes of the inquiry but an armed forces administration order prohibits them from being made public or used as evidence.

"Unfortunately, or fortunately, this matter has to have a public pronouncement at some time," said the coroner.

The Ontario Coroner's Act makes it "almost compulsory" to hold an inquest into any death from unnatural causes, he added. Once it was called the inquest could only be set aside by a court ruling, Dr. Scott also emphasized.

"I want to make it quite clear that the only way this can be done is by a judge's order," he stressed.

After the adjournment Dr. Scott was asked if the fact the airforce report was classified would restrict testimony when the inquest resumes, but replied there was "no intimation of that kind of thing."

"If they want to get behind the Official Secrets Act they are going to come here and say so," he added.

Dr. Scott told the jurors he had assumed full authority at the scene of the crash under amendments to the Coroner's Act.

"This was probably the first instance in the province of Ontario under the new legislation that this has happened in a major catastrophe," he added.

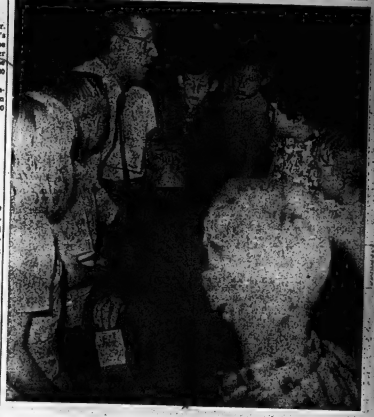
However, it was later agreed the airforce would take over investigation of the crash with the coroner in attendance.

"In other words," said Dr. Scott, "to co-operate completely to save public expense."

Tests still had to be made on parts of the plane's wreckage and an adjournment was required to complete assembly of all the facts.

Dr. Scott said there might be "some difficulty"—in summoning representatives of Lockheed Aircraft, Georgia—manufacturers of the plane — since a summons had "no legal power across the border."

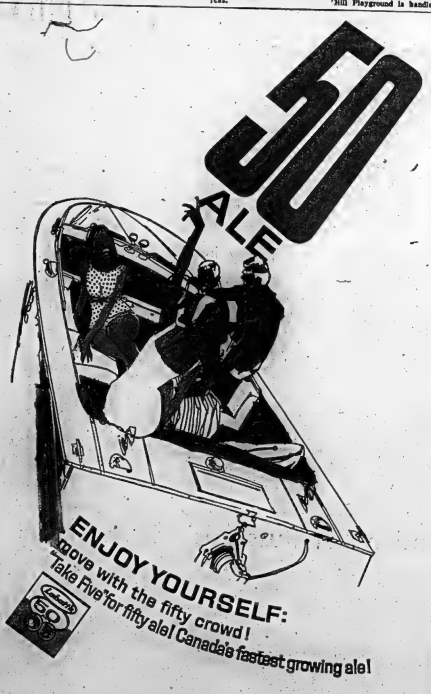
If the witnesses did not appear "I can issue a warrant which can be posted at border crossings," he warned.



The coroner also revealed postponement of an inquest verdict had delayed financial settlements for the widows of three of the dead airmen.

However, he secured permission of the Registrar - general to issue certificates showing the medical cause of death.

"They have all been issued by myself so that no one shall suffer any hardship by us not holding this immediately," he said.



The jurors were placed under a $100 recognizance to ensure their re-appearance when the inquest reconvenes.

Foreman of the jury is Hartleigh Hamilton, chairman of the Belleville General Hospital board of governors.

When It Comes to Security Too Much Can Be Too Little

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — The Queen and Prince Philip fly in today for a Royal Week-end Dominion Day visit and a day at Expo, with the Federal Government pitching everything in low key.

You don't hear so much this time of security.

And how different this is from three years ago when such fantastic RCMP elaborate security precautions were taken — not entirely successfully, either — against the lunatic terrorists of the kook element in Quebec Separatism.

Security is being played in low key against the background of two safely lessons learned in the last Royal Visit.

Lesson One: No matter how sweeping the safeguards may be, the Federal authorities simply don't care to take any chances with the Queen in Quebec.

Lesson Two: Regardless of how casual precautions might be, the same officials have found them too elaborate and perhaps altogether unnecessary in the National Capital.

Now for Lesson One:

In Quebec City in October of 1964, never anywhere in Canada before had security been so massive.

It was three layers thick—the RCMP, the Quebec Provincial and the Quebec City Police.

Altogether it may have been 5,000 men deep.

And what men . . . especially the Quebec Provincials, mobilized in picked squads, by the then Quebec Justice Minister, toughminded Claude Wagner, in an anti-riot army, uniformed in fluorescent orange slickers and safety helmets and armed with good stout billy-sticks.

But it wasn't enough.

Hordes of young punks swarmed around the Queen's car the afternoon she visited the Quebec Legislature.

They booed, spat at the car, and screamed obscenities at her that many of them might have hesitated to scrawl on their own college washroom walls.

And finally, after sight fell, they came in bowling waves down the street in front of the Chateau Frontenac where the Queen was dining with their Premier, and fought it out, in Parisian "riot" after "pocket riot" with the police.

A few heads were lumped, but none broken or even cracked.

And then a funny — or not-so-funny thing happened.

When the dust began to settle, who do you remember was blamed for the whole disgraceful show?

The separatist punks, the obscenity - mouthing hoodlums? Don't be silly. They were only "students," as you'll recall, who had been "provoked," then "pushed around," and would you believe it, "mistaken."

And who was to blame?

The police, of course — and maybe even the Queen who really caused it all by coming to Quebec City.

This time she is not going to Quebec City — or even to Quebec Province— spending only a few carefully insulated hours at Expo which, while occupying three islands in the St. Lawrence just offshore from Montreal, is regarded by Quebec nationalists as an international enclave.

When she goes to Expo, the public will be barred from those pavilions and the areas around them that she views.

Only after she has departed will they be re-opened.

And she will set foot only on international Expo, approaching it and leaving along the St. Lawrence aboard the Britannia. (Anybody think to lay on frogmen?)

In these three years since the last Royal Visit, it has become fashionable in some Federal circles to be anti-Queen and anti-British.

In Parliament, this anti-royalist style is set by Liberal MP Augusta Choquette who, periodically preaching what he terms "republicanism," invites Prime Minister Pearson to "get rid of the Queen."

Now Lesson Two:

Three years ago when the Queen came to the Capital, except for riot police, the security precautions almost could have matched Quebec City's.

There was a bullet-proof car.

The streets were lined by thousands of armed servicemen. The RCMP were concentrated from all over Eastern and perhaps parts of Western Canada.

It must have been a bit overwhelming for the one Scotland Yard man who, hovering discreetly in the background, continually keeps a protective eye on the Queen at all public occasions, at home and abroad.

For it was all so unnecessary, and it left the Capital and probably the rest of the country, too in a cool fury, squirming uncomfortably in a prickly sort of embarrassment.

Queens and kings have been able to stroll Ottawa's parks in unguarded privacy, arrive ministers to saunter along its streets, and presidents, even American presidents, to golf, drink whiskey and hrench water under a tree, all of them able to relax and feel snugly at home.

Quebec Day

Quebec Premier Daniel Johnson visited Expo last Saturday and staged what an English-speaking Montrealer, with more than a hint of cynicism in his voice, termed "one-upmanship."

It seems Mr. Johnson decided to take a leaf out of the security arrangements for the forthcoming visit of the Queen and have the Canadian Indian pavilion closed and cordoned off by police so he and his aides could tour the pavilion privately.

It was the St. Jean Baptiste holiday of course, and this was a natural choice for Quebec Day at the exhibition. For all that, the 315,890 visitors fell below the 343,910 forecast for Saturday.

So why all the precautions for Mr. Johnson? One thing that is most noticeable at Expo is the good-humor and orderly behavior of the crowds, and Mr. Johnson could have been shown around the pavilion with ease and never been noticed let alone threatened.

But there they were, the police — and the public excluded and Mr. Johnson putting on a big act. Likely it was all carefully rehearsed. There are good reasons for the precautions over the Queen's visit, regrettable as they are, but Mr. Johnson could have done better for himself and won more friends had he regarded himself as a citizen like anyone else and made the tour without excluding the public.

However, putting on a big act is in the grand tradition in Quebec these days. It is practise of the art of being noticed, or "one-upmanship" as English humorist Stephen Potter called it.

And you have got to hand it to the Quebecers — and the Montrealers in particular — they are a lively lot. The second-largest French-speaking city in the world has a character and vitality that are unmatched anywhere else. And with Expo, more than ever, Montreal is where the action is.

Kosygin Cuba

Cuba is one of the political phenomena of our day. Once a vacation playground and a Latin outpost of American business, it has been transformed by revolution into the one and only communist-run country in the western world.

And like many a small country over the years it does not confuse its dependency on the Soviet Union with subservience. Russia of course could drop Cuba at any time, just as it could withdraw its support from the Arab states in the Middle East. But Russia cannot afford to do this, for its prestige is at stake. And having suffered political defeats in both regions (in the missile crisis of 1963 when Cuba was involved, and in the recent Arab-Israeli war) Moscow has to salvage what it can from the ashes.

Cuba knows this too (and so do the Arab states) and thus can say what it likes on the subject of Soviet policy. Besides, as long as Cuba remains communist it poses a problem for the United States and the other countries of South America where Castro would like to foment similar revolutionary movements.

But Soviet Premier Kosygin must have wondered what sort of a banana republic he had come to, for on arrival in Havana following his summit meeting with President Johnson he was greeted with little fanfare.

Certainly Russians and Cubans make strange bedfellows, just as the Chinese and Albanians are an oddly-assorted lot at the other end of the Communist ideological scale. For Kosygin — the first Soviet premier to visit Cuba — the meeting with the flamboyant Premier Castro may well have been an uncomfortable one, like a father trying to placate his enfant terrible!

Corby Park

What a transformation has come about in Corby Park. Flower beds merge with areas of lawn. There are shady trees and a delightful fountain which is lighted at night.

The park is an artistic achievement. Moreover it has atmosphere, a sense of spaciousness and yet is only minutes away from downtown. Here is a retreat where a sense of calm prevails, a place to take a quiet walk and come close to nature at its best.

Corby Park will be opened officially this evening, although not surprisingly many have paused to admire and walk through the area in recent days.

Driver Training

Montreal Gazette

The statistics showing the number of young drivers, between the ages of 16 and 25, who are involved in highway accidents are well documented.

Young drivers are responsible for 25 per cent of the accidents, although the age bracket makes up only 15 per cent of the motoring population. At the present time a classroom of young people die on the country's highways every week.

The statistics disturb the insurance companies as much as anybody and this fact is seen in the week-long Conference of Young Drivers being held at Carleton University, Ottawa, this year, from August 7-11. It is sponsored by the All Canada Insurance Federation.

The conference will bring together about 100 young drivers from across the country. They will bear experts in the field, including racing driver Stirling Moss.

The conference could be and should be the beginning of a major program to educate the young driver in Canada. If any significant dent is to be made in the horrifying accident statistics, the job to begin with is the young drivers.

Louis Riel In Spotlight Out West

Regina Leader-Post

Anyone who has attended school in Saskatchewan knows history as something heavy with age, happening in the misty past in places other than this province. If a school child runs across the name of Louis Riel, a phantom is created and not a historical character. When the child grows up, he may chase down the phantom to discover a genuine folk hero or anti-hero depending on his own judgment.

We can be proud the Canadian west was settled with law and order and perhaps our history is still too young to be other than tales told by a grandfather, but is it not coming near time that we should be aware such tales are history?

Riel, the famous leader of Indian and Metis, was the central figure in much of the drama in the beginning here and—intentionally and unintentionally—spurred the development of the prairies. His life ended after a trial for treason which echoed all the way up to the reigning monarch, Queen Victoria.

In Centennial Year, the local Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a re-creation of the trial with productions scheduled three days each week until near the end of August. The play does not cover the full trial but the author, John Coulter of Toronto, has picked the high points in the testimony to raise some questions for those wishing to pursue answers.

The play is being staged in the ballroom of Saskatchewan House—which in itself is another example of how little we seem to value the past. The house is the former residence of lieutenant-governors, built shortly after the trial of Riel.

It seems a shameful waste to see perhaps the only historical building of this type going to ruin.

The first performance of the Riel trial, given Wednesday evening, was an outstanding success. It reflected great credit on those Reginians taking part and on all those who worked so arduously behind the scenes to "get the show on the road."

Now is the time to give thought to the suggestion that perhaps the performance could be put on every year as a summer attraction for tourists — something like the Black Hills Passion Play in South Dakota.

Today in History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

June 29, 1967 . . .

Eight Canadian Jesuit martyrs were canonized 37 years ago today—in 1930. The first saints of North America, they were the 17th century Jesuit fathers Jean de Brebeuf, Gabriel Lalemant, Charles Garnier, Antoine Daniel, Noel Chabanel, Isaac Jogues, Rene Gougil and Jean de Lalande. All met their deaths at the hands of hostile Indians while bringing Christianity to Canada during the early days of French rule.

1939 — First commercial flight across Atlantic reached Lisbon.

1958—Ike died in Columbia River floods.

1960—Red Army crushing, was an outstanding success. It reflected great credit on those Reginians taking part and on all those who worked so arduously behind the scenes to "get the show on the road."

Now is the time to give thought to the suggestion that perhaps the performance could be put on every year as a summer attraction for tourists — something like the Black Hills Passion Play in South Dakota.

The streets were lined by thousands of armed servicemen. The RCMP were concentrated from all over Eastern and perhaps parts of Western Canada.

It must have been a bit overwhelming for the one Scotland Yard man who, hovering discreetly in the background, continually keeps a protective eye on the Queen at all public occasions, at home and abroad.

For it was all so unnecessary, and it left the Capital and probably the rest of the country, too in a cool fury, squirming uncomfortably in a prickly sort of embarrassment.

Queens and kings have been able to stroll Ottawa's parks in unguarded privacy, arrive ministers to saunter along its streets, and presidents, even American presidents, to golf, drink whiskey and hrench water under a tree, all of them able to relax and feel snugly at home.

Minister's Captive Audience

Brantford Expositor

A speech one hour and 50 minutes in length is a test of endurance for speaker and audience. Minister of Education Davis would probably have been inwardly pleased to compare with Liberal Leader Robert Nixon's subsequent suggestion that he should have tabled his spending estimates instead of reading and explaining them at such length to the legislature the other day.

However, Mr. Davis may have felt that tabling would have created a dangerous precedent. There is a certain form to be observed in these matters and the education minister would have been aware that his fellow politicians if he had forgone the chance of making a speech. Instead of being a debating forum, the Legislature could become a literary society if the written word was allowed to prevail over the spoken.

Moreover if speeches generally were to be taken as read, the banquet circuit, the lecture tour and the club luncheon would become silent affairs. In some instances the muzzling of bores would be an act of mercy but silent service clubs and muted meetings would probably prove just as wearisome.

Summit Eases Tension But Russia Is Still A Threat

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A nagging feeling of emptiness has accompanied the euphoria of the Johnson-Kosygin talks.

Though frequently disappointed, the public expects great things when world leaders meet and many a Western statesman has learned the hard way that summits are best scaled after success is assured in the diplomatic valleys.

It now is clear that Premier Alexei Kosygin held no Soviet mandate for negotiations when he met with President Johnson in New Jersey. However the meeting was a great relief to the Western world since it helped to dispel some of the dark clouds of crisis swept up by the crusading Egyptian defeat in the Middle East war.

Johnson felt doubly elated since he demonstrated to the hordes of angry critics at home that he could still talk to the Soviet leader despite Vietnam and despite repeated Kremlin statements that there could be no discussions while American planes continued to bomb the North.

The two leaders sized each other up and Johnson appeared to emerge from the talks with the feeling that Kosygin was the kind of man with whom he could bargain. Kosygin has that kindly, fatherly approach so sharply different from his more boisterous and threatening predecessor, Nikita Khrushchev. But when it comes to reciting the Soviet line, Kosygin shows no deviation. He is a statesman who has done his homework, even though his voice is soft and his manner gentle.

Johnson may have suggested to Kosygin that for the sake of peace, both the Asian peninsula and the Middle East should be neutralized but there is nothing to indicate that Kosygin would buy that kind of deal. The U.S. must simply vacate the premises in Vietnam.

As for the Middle East, the Russians lost heavily when the Arab armies fell. There was a feeling among many Western diplomats that the Kremlin would wash its hands of the Arab leadership and certainly not waste more arms and the possibility of another shattering military escapade.

But these diplomats now concede that Soviet arms are finding their way back into the Middle East. They conclude these arms are meant only to provide the minimum of Egyptian and Syrian protection and not the massed power required to challenge the Israelis once more.

Not to be dismissed, however, is the possibility that Soviet Premier Kosygin, who has just returned to Moscow, was just a curtain behind which the Kremlin may be planning that kind of Soviet-backed missile protection for the Middle East that it provided for Cuba. Those forces shattered, the Arabs must depend more than ever on Soviet power and the Soviet Union is unlikely to give up the chance of gaining increasing autonomy and influence in a region that holds the strategic balance in the vital world battle for peace.

Dumping Code Questioned

Import-Export Tariff Concessions to Be Known Tonight

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians learn today of the savings, sacrifices and opportunities they can expect as a result of a world-wide tariff bargain among more than 50 nations.

Results of the so-called Kennedy round negotiations, which have produced the most far-reaching multilateral tariff reductions in history, will be revealed at 8 p.m. EDT.

Each of the simultaneous announcements in the capital cities of members of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, will fall neatly into two significant parts.

Consumers and businessmen will be told what their countries have won abroad in lower barriers to their exports, and what they have conceded at home in easier access for imports.

But the documents are so complex and the changes so extensive that the 15,000 sets being distributed by the finance department to Canadian industry will alone weigh 25 tons.

As one of the most active traders for its size in the world, Canada had an immense stake in successful conclusion of the three-year negotiations at Geneva.

Canada's two main targets have been a new cereals agreement with higher prices for its wheat exports, and as big a reduction in American tariffs as possible.

Terms of the cereals agreement, announced May 27, involved substantially higher minimum and maximum prices and provision for a multilateral food aid program.

The 1½ months in detailed form for the official signing Friday.

Canada has made the general announcement that one-quarter of Canada's exports to the U.S. will enjoy tariffs and that tariffs on sales to other countries will be reduced broadly.

This may permit Canadian exporters to expand their operations and in some cases it may mean new industries for the country.

Describing the concessions Canada offer in return, Finance Minister Sharp said in a speech at Jasper, Alta., Monday:

"We have negotiated a series of tariff bargains based on the principle of full reciprocity for concessions in the Canadian tariff and based on the requirement of balance for the major sectors of the economy and for the major regions of our country."

He promised that firms who have found their tariff protection reduced will also find the cost of their raw materials and components reduced at the same time.

Spokesmen for the Canadian Manufacturers Association have said some of their members are more concerned about GATT's new anti-dumping codes than about tariff concessions Canada may have made.

The federal government now applies an automatic duty when it judges that foreign goods are entering Canada for sale at prices below the prices of the country of origin.

It is understood that in agreeing to sign the new code, Canada has finally lost the automatic provision. It will be obliged in future to prove that Canadian producers are damaged by the low-price dumping, which will involve elaborate procedures of investigation.

High School Students Take Western Trip

TRENTON — Go west, young folks, go west! That's what 30 high school students from the Quinte area are doing today as part of the Federal-Provincial Centennial Youth Travel Program.

At 1 p.m. today, the students left Belleville en route to Leduc, Alberta under the supervision of John Kaine, a Trenton High School teacher, and Mrs. Kaine.

The group is one of 35 in Ontario to participate in the program this summer. Students taking part are chosen by their schools, one to each, except Trenton, which was given an allotment of two students because the town was chosen as the site of an unit.

The program is to be distinguished from a student exchange. Under the youth travel scheme, the Trenton unit has a two-week stay in Alberta, but students visiting Trenton in August will come from Quebec.

The travellers are billeted at private homes, but do their official touring as a group.

Arrival in Edmonton is scheduled for around noon Saturday, and from there the party will travel by chartered bus to Leduc for a week-long stay.

Including 1967, the program has been sponsored by provincial and federal governments for four years, and a total of 12,600 students will have travelled as participants by the end of Centennial year.

Each unit across the country consists of 12 girls, 13 boys, and two escorts.

Each traveller gets a free, but informative holiday, and is provided with every accessory down to luggage stickers and even song books.

Trenton High School students taking part along with Dale Carl, 77 Lorne Ave. and Beverly Parks, 17 Shuter St.

Participating students from Belleville High schools are Marion Molaski, 115 Goldale Road, Mickey Gardner, 33 Greenlawn St., Sharon Dalton, R.R. 1, Corbyville, Dale Soble, 8 Southwood Cr., and Robert Grant Woodcock, 152 William St.

The group will arrive back in Belleville July 12.

TORONTO (CP) — Taxpayers would be saved $700,000 a year in taxes in the borough of North York in Metropolitan Toronto if the proposed Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's new communication centre was built in the Don Mills area, Mayor James Service said Wednesday.

TORONTO STOCKS TODAY

TORONTO (CP) — Prices backed off in light morning trading today on the Toronto Stock Exchange as the market headed into its sixth consecutive daily decline.

Inco and Falconbridge lost 1 each to 104½ and 85, Imperial Oil ⅛ to 61¼ and Walkers ¼ to 33¾, Acklands gained ⅛ to 10¼.

Dome Petroleum slid 3 to 54 in western oils. The exchange said requirements of an amalgamation between Dome and Provo Gas have been met and that Provo shareholders are entitled to one share of Dome for each eight shares of Provo.

Trading in Scurry — Rainbow had not resumed by late morning as traders attempted to match buy and sell orders.

The company announced Wednesday that exploration at its nickel-copper prospect in northeastern Saskatchewan had established the existence of a commercial orebody.

The exchange said trading in Scurry would resume today when buy and sell orders were matched.

The stock was suspended last Thursday after 2¼ days of hectic buying had pushed the price up 11¼ to 42¾.

On index, golds were up .44 to 179.78 while industrials fell .34 to 164.80, base metals .40 to 100 and western oils 1.98 to 178.41. Volume by 11 a.m. was 907,000 shares compared with 642,000 at the same time Wednesday.

The exchange went through another sluggish session Wednesday.

The industrial index, fell .36 to 165.14.

Jefferson Lake fell 1 to 38½, Consolidated Paper ¼ to 36½, Distillers ¼ to 38¼ and Moore Corp. ⅝ to 31¾.

Western oils were sloshed in profit taking as Dome declined 1 to 57, Hudson Bay ¼ to 36¼ and Canadian Superior ⅛ to 46¾.

Trading in shares of Scurry-Rainbow remained suspended. Trading was suspended Thursday pending a detailed report from the company on its mining find in northeastern Saskatchewan.

Traffic Load To Be Tripled Over Holidays

"The triple traffic load on our highways this weekend will multiply normal traffic hazards," Hon. Irvine Haskett, Minister of Transport, reminds motorists.

"It is up to individual drivers to reduce these hazards by exercising special care and courtesy. I urge everyone to drive like a good host — to show extra consideration for other drivers."

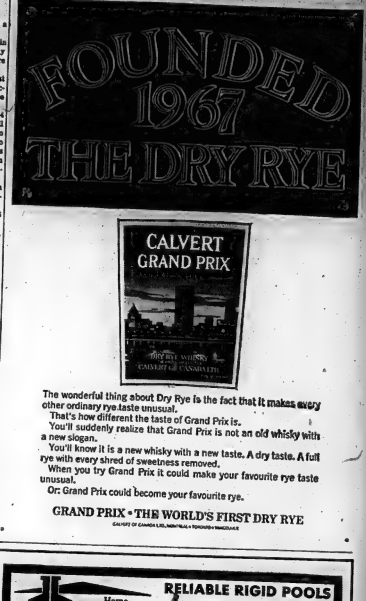
Mr. Haskett made the statements as a result of Monday being made a national holiday. The traffic caused by the long weekend, Expo and the American July 4 holiday will cause complicated driving conditions.

Last year's July 1 holiday took the lives of 30 persons and injured 43 in 17 fatal accidents. Nearly all the accidents took place when road conditions were good.

Mr. Haskett suggests that motorists take frequent rest stops while they're travelling, that they keep their car well ventilated and that they allow themselves sufficient time to reach their destination and relax hours ahead.

Highway travellers should consult maps before they leave and plot their route ahead. Other drivers should be treated with courtesy. Care with rubber boats and trailers should be exercised. There should be a clear field of vision.

Dismiss Town's Appeal



TRENTON — The Ontario Court of Appeal has dismissed an appeal entered by Trenton concerning a strip of property once used by the town as an alternate route to the Community Gardens.

The disputed property extends from Ontario St. past the southern side of the arena building.

He awarded R. W. Powers and Son Ltd., and a parent firm, the Rochester and Pittsburgh Coal Co. damages totalling $1,123.

The coal firm had issued a writ against Trenton shortly after the town opened the strip for public use in September, 1964.

As the result of legal advice obtained on the matter, town council decided last June to appeal Mr. Justice Landreville's decision.

The wonderful thing about Dry Rye is the fact that it makes every other ordinary rye taste unusual.

That's how different the taste of Grand Prix is.

You'll suddenly realize that Grand Prix is not an old whisky with a new slogan.

You'll know it is a new whisky with a new taste. A dry taste. A full rye with every shred of sweetness removed.

Or: Grand Prix could become your favourite rye.

U.C.W. Meetings

ST. MARK'S UCW

CANNIFTON — The June meeting of Canniffon UCW Evening Unit was held in the Sunday School rooms with a large number in attendance.

This was in the form of a get-acquainted dessert tea for women of the new congregation of St. Mark's United Church.

The president Doris Ellsworth welcomed the women at the door.

The meeting opened with a sing-song led by Dorothy Hobbs followed by a poem by Mary Avery. Margaret Shorey and Helen Holgate also assisted.

Marion Branton introduced the guest speaker, Miss Mansfield who gave an interesting talk on missionary work in Northern Alberta. Miss Mansfield began her work in this district about 40 years ago and she told of the many changes that have taken place both to the people and work of the missionaries.

Her talk was thoroughly enjoyed by the group.

Vera Mitchell played two selections on the accordion.

The group partook of the beautiful desserts in the tea and a social hour was enjoyed.

SLAVERY RULED OUT

The Lateran Council prohibited selling prisoners of war as the great spanking. Miss Mansfield began her work in this district about 40 years ago and she told of the many changes that have taken place both to the people and work of the missionaries.

Her talk was thoroughly enjoyed by the group.

Vera Mitchell played two selections on the accordion.

St. Andrew's Holds Centennial Service

WEST HUNTINGDON — Centennial Sunday was observed at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, West Huntingdon, on the Sunday before Canada's 100th birthday when former members and members of neighboring churches were invited to worship at a service at 11 a.m. Rev. D. C. McPherson conducted the service.

Flowers were given by the Haggerty family in memory of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Haggerty, Warren and Donald, and Mrs. Margaret Clancy; by the McIlroy family in memory of Mr. and Mrs. Alex McIlroy, Andrew McIlroy and Mr. and Mrs. Roy McGee and by the Thompson family in memory of Harry Thompson.

Special music was sung by the Explorers accompanied by Mrs. Arthur Hassell. Fourteen young people, accompanied by Mrs. Lindsay Sills, sang a selection.

Following the sermon, Rev. MacPherson, assisted by the elders, Morley Haggerty, John Walters, Harold Thompson and Milton Shaw, dedicated two new flags, Centennial and Canadian, donated by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Harper and two wicker flower stands and a rug for the choir loft, gifts from West Huntingdon United Church.

About 150 guests were invited to the Sunday School rooms for luncheon. They were welcomed by Mrs. D. C. MacPherson, Mrs. Harry Thompson and Mrs. John Wallace. The tables were attractive with linen cloths and summer flowers. Mrs. John McIlroy, president, of the Ladies' Aid and Mrs. William Donnan, planned the menu. Several members were in centennial costume.

Greetings were read from Rev. and Mrs. W. H. V. Walker and Harper Rollins, who were unable to attend. Flowers were sent to Mr. Donnan, an elder, who is ill in Belleville. In the evening about 45 members enjoyed an evening meal at the church.

DONOHUE — McCARRIDGE

The Church of the Assumption, Erinsville, was the scene of the recent marriage of Anne Monica Elizabeth, daughter of Mrs. Michael J. Donohue and the late Mr. Donohue and Joseph Leonard McCambridge, son of Mr. and Mrs. James McCambridge of Marysville. The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. J. F. Feeney, assisted by Rev. John J. O'Neill of Marysville. Patrick Ambrose Kidd was organist and Harold Davison was soloist. Acting as acolytes were Paul Dean and Larry Way, nephews of the bride.

Given in marriage by her brother, the bride wore a floor-length gown of organza over taffeta with elbow-length sleeves of Chantilace. The sheath, skirt with detachable chapel train had the same lace finished with small bow trim. Her matching shoulder length veil was arranged on a crescent of lily-of-the-valley and she carried a bouquet of blue and white carnations and baby's breath.

Miss Hilda Barrett of Ottawa was maid-of-honor and Mrs. Michael Walsh of Kingston, sister of the bridegroom was bridesmaid. They were gowned alike in floor-length dresses of pale blue rippled crepe with trains at the back. White lace trimmed the elbow-length sleeves and Empire waist. They carried bouquets of blue and white fashioned carnations and baby's breath. The flower girl, Miss Maureen Donohue, niece of the bride, wore a floor-length gown of matching organza with Peter Pan collar and puffed sleeves trimmed with white lace. She carried a basket of blue and white mums.

Bernard McCambridge of Chalk River, brother of the bridegroom and Patrick Donohue, brother of the bride, were groomsmen. The ushers were Vincent Donohue of Whitby and Ambrose McCambridge of Marysville.

At the reception at the Tamworth Legion Hall, the bride's mother received the guests, wearing a peacock blue dress with navy accessories and a shell pink rose corsage. The bridegroom's mother wore a turquoise suit with pale pink accessories and a corsage of matching baby roses.

For their wedding trip around the western end of Lake Ontario the bride chose a white brocade dress and coat ensemble accented with blue accessories and a corsage of blue and white feathered carnations.

The couple will live in Napanee.

Church Groups

ST. ANDREW'S WOMEN'S GUILD

The final meeting for the summer months of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Women's Guild was held at the church Tuesday evening.

President Mrs. V. Weir opened the meeting and welcomed all. Mrs. R. Jones led in devotions.

Mrs. J. Craig gave a report from the Christian education committee stressing the need for a church school, superintendent and Sunday school teachers.

Some trees and shrubs have been planted at the front of the church as a centennial project by the members of the choir. Mrs. M. Barber reported plans are now underway for the fall bazaar in November.

Some interesting and colorful pictures were shown by Mrs. T. Auger and Mrs. P. Renouf of the Welcome Group.

Mrs. W. Mastis from the Happy Group served refreshments.

Mother Would Like Part Time Work at Home

Dear Doris: How do you maintain such an optimistic attitude after rewading your daily mail? I would have given up on the human race a long time ago.

I expect to be in financial difficulties for about three years, until my daughter has completed nursing training and my son is out of nursery three areas in which I have any particular skill — bread-making, oil painting, and typing combine them, therefore I have chosen typing as the area in which I can offer the best service with the most return.

How do I go about getting into work I can do at home? I have at least two hours to spare in the mornings without robbing my family of my time.

Thank you for the stress you have unknowingly helped me long. The three are so far apart it would be impossible — in the past your column has given me the courage to do what I knew I should do; has helped me to face facts and see things as they really are and not as I wished them to be. — Mary Widow.

Dear Mary: It may take some buning — but others have done it and so can you. And I wouldn't be too sure that talent for broadmaking was not saleable. I'm sending you my ten-cent leaflet "Part Time Work at Home or in Community."

About typing. You can: (1) Canvass the neighborhood store; (2) advertise in the classified section; (3) send copy typing at your school or university.

One girl got started by sending out mimeographed bulletins to stores, plants, and offices showing the work she could do. And she talked — to everybody. You can't be blackhearted about talking yourself up.

Glad I've helped before. I find the only satisfying way to operate in this world is to take the optimistic approach. A pessimist is beaten before he gets fairly on his way.

Dear Doris: What makes a child steal? I discovered that my nine-year-old daughter had stolen some money that I had been saving in a jar. Neither her father nor I have been able to get home for lunch the last few weeks, but I leave soup and sandwiches for her and her brother.

I told them both that I was one of them had taken the money, and I'm afraid I broke down completely and cried. I was so hurt and disappointed that they would steal money from me.

Within a few minutes my daughter came crying to me and said that she had taken it, and she wanted me to punish her. I asked her what she had done with it, and she said she had bought writing books, and gives some of it to her friends.

Doris, what do you think her punishment should be? — Shocked.

Dear Shocked: Reasons vary. Perhaps your girl is lonely at noon when you aren't there, and the money represented something interesting to do; or, (2) feels out of things with her friends, and the money buys their friendship.

The punishment has already started, hasn't it? The shock of your reaction, and the humiliation of confession, have impressed her deeply. If any restitution by paying it back out of her allowance would be the thing.

Make her very sure that you have not stopped loving her; and get home and be with her whenever you possibly can.

Confidential to Mixed Up: Lucky girl to have three nice boys to worry over! Which one you choose — if any — depends not only on how he feels about you, but on how you feel about him. Which you haven't said.

Ann Landers

Young Mourner Tells Of Teenage Tragedy

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Last weekend five teen-agers from our town were killed in an automobile accident. Four of them were friends of mine. One was an only child, and two were brothers.

The driver was going at a high rate of speed and he lost control of the wheel. The car went through 25 guardrail posts and down a 40-foot embankment. Every kid in the automobile had a broken back. The funerals were like nightmares. You can't imagine the grief of the parents and grandparents and brothers and sisters of those kids who were killed. Classmates and friends felt awful, but it's been weeks we will get over the sadness and think about something else. For the families of the kids who died, the pain will go on for a long, long time — maybe forever.

I just hope you will urge all teen-agers everywhere to ask themselves, "Could this terrible thing have happened to me?" I admit I've been guilty of speeding and I have been in cars when the driver was going too fast, I was just luckier than the kids in the death car.

Please print my letter. If it will wake up just one teenager and make him realize that a few minutes of excitement could end in five funerals, I will feel it was worth the effort it took to write to you. — A YOUNG MOURNER.

DEAR YOUNG MOURNER: I have received dozens of letters about this same accident. Yours said it best.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband bought me a parrot for Christmas. The bird is not only dirty as a pig but makes an awful lot of noise. I can put up with the dirt and the noise all right, but lately that crazy bird has started to imitate the door bell and I am half nuts running to the door and finding nobody there. Whenever this happens the parrot gives out a dirty laugh, as if he knows he put over a fast one.

Please tell me how to get rid of this miserable but clever bird. — NEW ORLEANS MOANER.

DEAR MOANER: Replace the doorbell with a heavy knocker. They are not only decorative but practical. The bird may be clever but he'll have one heck of a time imitating that.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am in love with a wonderful girl and I want to marry her. She is 17 and just finished high school. She wants to go to college and has won a scholarship which means she will surely go.

I am 18 and never had a chance to go beyond high school. The girl insists she loves me but she doesn't want to accept an engagement ring before she goes away. I am beginning to think she wants to run around when she gets to college. It seems to me that an engaged girl would pay more attention to her studies, which is what she is supposed to be in college for.

We have gone steady for two years and so far as I know she has been faithful. Please advise her to accept my ring so she will not be tempted to fool around. Thank you. — MR. X.

DEAR MR. X: Why are you so eager to tie her up? Afraid she might meet someone else who is more appealing?

College means more than studying! It means meeting people and making acquaintances and learning how the world works. A 17-year-old girl who would accept an engagement ring before she goes off to college has to have rocks in her head.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Reader Offers Highly Recommended Recipe

By MARY MOORE

In April while I was in Esquimalt, Doris N. offered to mail a highly recommended recipe to us when we accepted.

Today I got around to testing the recipe for 48 bar cookies and it is a dandy. All but four are on their way to Marianne and family via my sister Peady who is leaving by air today for Victoria.

CHEPNUT BARS

½ cup butter (room temperature)
½ cup shortening
(Or omit butter and shortening and use 1 cup soft margarine)
2 2-3 cups light brown sugar
2 eggs
1 tsp. vanilla
2 cups stirred but not sifted all - purpose flour
2 tsps. baking powder
1 tbsp. instant coffee powder
½ tsp. salt
1 cup chopped walnuts or pecans
1 cup (6-oz. pkge) chocolate chips
Into heater bowl measure butter and shortening (or margarine), brown sugar, eggs, vanilla, flour, baking powder coffee powder and salt, and beat on low speed until blended, scraping down sides and bottom of bowl once at half-time. Remove beaters. Add ½ cup nuts and ½ cup chocolate chips and stir in. Have buttered a 10 x 15 x 1" pan (like jelly roll pan). Turn this stiff batter into it in mounds and with spatula spread smoothly to edges and corners. Sprinkle evenly with remaining chopped nuts and chips. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. about 20-25 min. Mine were done in 23 min. Be sure not to burn these for they are delicious and will burn easily so watch them.

Dinner Menus

THURSDAY

Chicken Wings Cacciatore; Fluffy Hot Rice; Asparagus; Green Salad—Professional Style (see Wed.); Custard Cups Halves with Ice Cream; Tea.

SUNDAY
(Guests)

Sliced Smoked Tongue; Raisin Sauce or Marijo's Mustard Sauce (see Sat.); Roasted Spuds; Minted Green Peas; Stuffed Tomato Salad with Cottage Cheese Dressing; Prize-Winning Chocolate Cake (see Tues.); Coffee.

With a knife, using a long ruler as your guide, mark into 1¼ x 2½" bars with an up and down motion. Do not drag knife straight along or it will dislodge nuts and make edges jagged.

I wrapped each of mine in squares of saran to send to Esquimalt. I can just see Marianne's kids dipping into that cookie box from Grandma.

Odd Fellows And Rebekahs Hold Picnic

Cloudy cool weather failed to dampen the spirits of Oddfellows, Rebekahs, their families and friends at Cove Beach, Sunday for their fifth annual IOOF picnic. Host Lodges, Belleville No. 81 and Quinte Rebekah Lodge No. 123 welcomed those who came from district'er.

Races and contests of all kinds were held with everyone given an opportunity to participate. Dash, wheelbarrow, egg throwing, shoe kicking, ball throwing, marble and spoon and women's nail driving brought prizes to the winners. A gen. assortment of drinks and ice cream were given to the children.

Winners of the C. P. and T draw were Mr. H. Ungar, Desoronto and Mrs. Ethel Semple, 843 Bathurst Ave., Toronto, 13.

After these events all sat down to a picnic supper followed by a ball game.

Women's Institutes

SPRINGBROOK WI

BONARLAW — Mrs. Gerald Broadsword, opened her home Wednesday afternoon for the Springbrook Women's Institute meeting, with Mrs. Clayton Burkitt, president, in charge.

Mrs. James Spry reported on the centennial tree planted at the township hall. Mrs. Arthur Reid reported on improvements being made at the ball park and it was decided the WI would donate $50.

Mrs. George Withkens gave a talk on setting a good example, Mrs. Cyril McKeown gave a reading and a contest was conducted.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Orrie Bacon.

His secret gin recipe isn't a secret anymore.

In 1769, a Highland Scot named Alexander Gordon arrived in London. And started, of all things, a gin distillery.

Soon, Mr. Gordon was making the finest gin the English had ever tasted.

From a secret recipe known only to him. (And later, only to his descendants.)

Now, 200 years later, Gordon's Gin is still made exactly the same.

Only now, it's the largest selling gin in the world. Made in nine countries, including Canada.

To make sure its wonderful taste never varied from place to place, however, we had to let nine other people in on the secret.

We hope you won't hold it against us.

After all, Alexander Gordon didn't keep his secret either.

WEDDING

DUNCAN — DAVIS

Bridge Street United Church, Belleville was the scene of a wedding on Saturday, June 24, 1967 at 1 p.m. when Helen Jean Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Davis, Belleville was united in marriage to William Donald Duncan, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Duncan of Niagara Falls, Ontario.

Rev. H. M. Davis officiated at the ceremony and wedding music was rendered by organist Mr. S. Alec Gordon.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a full-length A-line dress of silk and lace with a chapel train. A three tier elbow-length veil was held in place by a headdress of lace and seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of white carnations and stephanotis.

The maid of honor, Miss Eileen Davidson and bridesmaids, Miss Judith Little and Miss Jane Misener were identically attired in full-length dresses of blue crepe with Empire waist. Each carried a bouquet of white Shasta daisies.

Mr. Gilles Roy was groomsman, and Mr. Paul Ryan and Mr. Kenneth Newcombe were the ushers.

At the reception at the Sun Valley Motor Inn, the bride's mother received the guests wearing a sheath dress of beige lace with accessories to match and a corsage of pink carnations. Assisting was the bridegroom's mother who wore a coral crepe dress with white accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

For the wedding trip to points east the bride wore a yellow silk knit dress, white accessories and a corsage of yellow carnations.

Upon return Mr. and Mrs. Duncan will reside at 473 McDonnel Street, Peterborough.

The Past and the Present

Dressed in modern attire, Mrs. J. D. Robertson is greeted by past president of the UCW Presbyterial executive Mrs. F. J. Smith in costume of yesteryear at the Centennial tea held Wednesday afternoon at Holloway Street United Church. Looking on wearing similar apparel are Mrs. T. W. Spear and Mrs. J. A. Payton (doorway) both of Trenton.

Presbyterial UCW Executive Holds Tea at Holloway St. Church

On Wednesday afternoon Holloway St. United Church was the scene of a most successful Centennial tea, sponsored by the executive of the Belleville Presbyterial United Church Women for all the women of the United Churches within the Belleville Presbytery.

The members of the executive appeared in Centennial costumes as did many of the guests.

Over 200 guests were received at the door by the Presbyterial president, Mrs. Kenneth Weaver and the past president, Mrs. F. J. Smith and were invited to sign the guest book.

After the women had assembled, Mrs. Kenneth Weaver welcomed the guests and a short program followed, consisting of two vocal solos by Mrs. V. E. R. Zufelt of Picton and Mrs. Hugh Ramsey of Napanee.

The tea tables on each side of the front of the room were tastefully decorated with floral arrangements and candles. Between the tea tables was another table which held a beautifully decorated cake in the shape of the centennial emblem, and two candles, one of which was lighted. At this time Mrs. F. J. Smith said that the lighted candle represented the faith that has burned during the past 100 years, and lighted the second candle "as a symbol of our hope that our faith will burn brightly throughout the next century."

Mrs. Ken Weaver proceeded to cut the cake and all joined in singing "O Canada".

Pouring tea during the afternoon were Mesdames R. C. Ellis, J. Hobbs, H. Y. Kennedy, Sidney Bates, Don Williams, Maurice McLeod, W. Sedgwick, Wilbert Cox, Gordon Apps, R. Crooks, W. McDowell, F. Wilson, Douglas Miller. The guests were served by the Presbyterial executive.

The balance of the afternoon was spent in visiting.

Appreciation by the executive was expressed for the tremendous response in making the day a most memorable occasion.

Mr., Mrs. J. Milligan Mark 50 Wedded Years

Mr. and Mrs. John C. Milligan, Melrose, were at home to over 200 friends and relatives Sunday afternoon at their home to mark their 50th wedding anniversary.

Greeting the guests on the lawn were their two sons and their daughters-in-law received guests at the door.

The house was decorated for the occasion with gold and white streamers, white bells and baskets of flowers. The table, covered with a white linen cloth, was centred with a three - tier wedding cake and gold candles in silver candelabra.

Mrs. Art King and Mrs. Richard Milligan, Toronto, nieces of Mrs. Milligan, were in charge of the guest book. Those who poured were Mrs. Russell MacFarlane and Mrs. Gladys Osborn of Belleville; Mrs. Damon Hinchey, Shannonville, and Mrs. Percy Ray, Hallowey, both former school pupils of Mrs. Milligan from the second concession of Tyendinaga; Mrs. Fred Jeffrey and Mrs. Leslie McLaren, cousins of Mrs. Milligan. Mrs. William Nelson, Montreal and Mrs. Earl Bagley assisted in serving and Mrs. A. L. Gnaedinger was hostess for the afternoon. Mrs. C. Slater jr., Mrs. S. Denville, Mrs. C. Milligan and Mrs. A. Engisis were in charge of the kitchen and young women of the church served.

During the afternoon Mrs. Lorne Weese read an address and Elliott Forsey presented a gift to Mr. and Mrs. Milligan. Telegrams and messages of congratulation were received from the Governor General and Mrs. Michener, L. B. Pearson, John Diefenbaker, John Robarts, Lee Grills and Clarke Rollins. A congratulatory scroll was received from the Provincial Secretary, Robert Welch, greetings were sent by Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Stevens, Wakerico, and flowers were presented by Melrose United Church Women.

Mr. and Mrs. Milligan have lived all their married life on the same farm, where Mr. Milligan was born. They have a son, William, of Indianapolis and John Stuart of Port Credit, six grandchildren and one great - grandson.

Quintebelles' Chorus Fete Kingston Chapter

The Quintebelles' Chorus entertained the Kingston Chapter of Sweet Adelines at the A.N. A.F. Hall Tuesday night.

Everywhere the theme, Yorkville, was present - in the bright tablecloths, candles, and stage settings. It was the mood and dress of the women themselves which made the party. They wore typical Yorkville garb, bright colors, high boots, leotards, and fantastic wigs of long hair.

Quintebelles president Doreen Reynolds welcomed the guests and was master of ceremonies for the evening.

A humorous skit on the Middle East situation was sung by Norah Evans, Marion Connor, Jane Wilkens, Kathy Dolan, Joan Anderson, Mary Binnie, Grace Clemens and Pam Pickle. The part of an Egyptian dancer was played by a volunteer from the Kingston Chorus, Eva McCarthy.

Director Betty Sorenson and her Kingston girls gave the Quintebelles a thrilling example of their singing which has captured for them championships in past Regional competitions.

Three quartets showed their different styling: the Chantelles, Quartet, Kingston, composed of Olive Higdon, Gwen Laidlaw, Pat Eardley, and Wykene Weatherson; the Trillium Quartet, Belleville composed of Joan Hale, Nora Barber, Gladys Gelsthorpe, and Nina Thacker; and the Merry Hello's, Belleville, composed of Marion Connor, Helen Asselstine, Lorraine Emerson and Marianne Bust.

Regional director Eve Sands led the combined choruses in numbers requested by those present.

A skit, Yorkville, was the hit of the evening. It featured a long - haired quartet from Yorkville trying to qualify as Sweet Adelines while strumming guitars and going on trips. Actors were Mary Binnie, Joan Anderson, Kathy Dolan, Norah Evans, Helen Asselstine and Nora Barber, all of Belleville, and Lorraine McGinnis, Betty Sorenson, Phyl Niell, and Lilian Armstrong of the Kingston Chorus.

Pat Albon danced as the Quintebelles Chorus sang the Charleston.

Betty Sorenson directed the two choruses in They All Call It Canada as the program concluded.

The fun was topped off by a supper served by Helen Corinaldi and her committee.

Family Reunions

HOLMES FAMILY

QUEENSBORO — On Saturday about 70 members of the Holmes families held their 43rd annual reunion at Tweed Memorial Park.

In spite of bad weather dinner was enjoyed at noon.

Because of the rain there was no business meeting.

Gifts were given to: the husband and wife coming the farthest, Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Fardyce, Farwell, Michigan; the longest married couple, Mr. and Mrs. William Holmes, Queensboro; couple celebrating their anniversary, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Holmes, Madoc, their 38th anniversary; newly-married couple, Raymond and Thornton Declair; the youngest baby boy, Gregory, son of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Jones, Pickering; the youngest girl, Kimberly, daughter of Leonard and Beverly Holmes. John Holmes of Stirling, one of the older members of the family, was unable to attend because he is a patient in Belleville General Hospital.

Powder Puff Smoke Eaters Had Call

PORT ALBERNI, B.C. (CP)— Their first emergency call was more or less routine, but it provided an adventure for powder puff smoke eaters of the nearby Sproat Lake women's fire brigade.

And when the first call came for them to take Mabel, their fire-engine-red jeep, out on an errand of mercy, the girls were ready.

The call came from a boarding house and volunteer Mrs. Bud Bishop had momentary visions of smoke, flames and elderly victims.

"But it's not a fire . . . one of our residents is locked in a second-story washroom," said the voice at the other end of the line.

Mrs. Bishop swung into action. She called fire chief Anne-Marie Krikke and Mrs. Wall, another volunteer. They left their children with another member of the brigade and headed for the firehall.

Mrs. Bishop coolly remembered to take her husband's extension ladder with her because the department's ladder reaches only one storey.

After considerable persuasion, the jeep's motor started and the trio were on their way.

They climbed through the washroom's window and released the resident by removing the door from its hinges. The victim had been trapped by a faulty spring-lock.

The excitement was just too much for Mabel. Two of the women ended up pushing the jeep while the third steered on the way back to the firehall.

Imports Would Reduce Prices of Drugs Doctor-MP Tells House of Commons

OTTAWA (CP)—More competition among manufacturers and importers of cheaper drugs were suggested in the Commons Wednesday as ways to lower drugs prices in Canada.

Harry Harley (L — Halton), speaking during debate on health department estimates, said also he has found no evidence—with one exception—that there have been or will be increases in drug prices before the 12-per-cent federal sales tax is lifted Sept. 1.

The co-chairman of a special parliamentary drug - prices inquiry, Dr. Harley quoted from the inquiry's report that cost might be inclined to conclude there would be a reduction of from five to 10 per cent, depending on the pricing method used.

The Oakville, Ont., physician said that while lower drug prices are important, they are of no use if the drugs are not prescribed.

"We must do what we can to bring down prices, but we cannot do that by sacrificing the safety of the drugs or the quality. . . ."

Dr. Harley said he is convinced drug prices can be brought down by imports.

Grace MacInnis (NDP—Vancouver-Kingsway), said the increase in the health department's spending since the Second World War "is one of the most important that always has definitely we are working toward a reasonable standard of civilization in this country."

She said the department is one which, to a measure at least, was trying to get people co-operatively to build an acceptable standard of income and living across the country.

"It is a way of redistributing income and services across the country in a planned and co-operative manner," Mrs. MacInnis said.

Howard Johnson (SC—Okanagan-Revelstoke) said the supplement to old age pensioners is affecting veterans' and provincial allowances despite assurances from the government this would not happen.

He said that when the Commons was debating the supplement—a maximum of $30 a month for persons receiving the $75-a-month old age pension—Health Minister MacEachen said those receiving it would not suffer cuts in their allowances subject to a means test.

Earlier in the Commons, extra spending estimates gave cash advances totalling $95,509,226 were approved to finance new programs and meet rising costs in others.

The supplementary estimates include an extra $8,000,000 this fiscal year for the federal highway program in the Atlantic provinces, $11,000,000 more for rehabilitation of harbors and $16,000,000 for Expo 67.

The House also passed an address to Queen Elizabeth expressing "our deepest loyalty" which will be read by Speaker Lucien Lamoureux Saturday before the Queen speaks to an open-air joint session of the Commons and the Senate.

A proposal by Eric Stefanson (PC—Selkirk) for a 1,200-mile Prairie waterway was tabled in the hour set aside for private members' bills.

Mr. Stefanson suggested the government consider building a shallow - draft waterway from Winnipeg to Edmonton via the Red River, Lake Winnipeg and the Saskatchewan River.

People Outraged by Fashions Unmoved by Serious Things

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Thoughts at Large:

One of the silliest and most-abused metaphors that people use to justify violence or retaliation is that "you must fight fire with fire"; but when fire is used to fight fire, it is for the purpose of isolating the uncontrolled fire — if the new fire were simply joined in battle with the old fire, it would only make a larger conflagration.

• • •

People who become easily outraged at long hair on young men or short skirts on young women are incapable of treating serious matters with suitable attention, since they expend so much moral energy on trivialities and social ephemera.

• • •

Listening to a couple of Irish politicians mangle the language in a television interview one realizes that nowhere else in the world is English spoken so beautifully as in Dublin, and I wondered what happens to those sweet and lovely Anglo-Irish tones when they are transplanted to America.

• • •

Only natural growth contains possibilities for permanence and value; things sudden and violent defy the natural process, and thus in the end do more harm than good.

• • •

A man said to me at lunch today, "I divorced my wife after 30 years, and I couldn't have cared less what happened to her; now that we've been apart for many years, I'm concerned when I hear she is ill — funny how it often takes time and distance to make us aware of intimacy."

• • •

Religion and national ism are absolutely incompatible concepts, unless the latter is subordinated to the former; and when religion fails to preach and practise universal tenets, then nationalism becomes the true religion of the people.

• • •

Standing water soon becomes poisonous; and so do standing thoughts which are not fed regularly from fresh sources.

What most diplomatists do not realize, especially in times of war or crisis, was trenchantly expressed by Dean Inge long ago: "You can generally get success if you do not want victory."

• • •

Passivity is never at a loss to justify itself; even a stopped clock, looking around at the ticking timepieces which are either too fast or too slow, must pride itself on the fact that it, at least, is absolutely right twice a day.

Royal Swans Now Home

Laurier Lapierre Aims At Seat on NDP Council

OTTAWA (CP) — The New Democratic Party next week will size up a restive newcomer with strong views on reshaping the party's image and policies.

Laurier Lapierre, university professor and former television interviewer, frequently makes an impact with his determined stands. He's expected to try to make one at the July 3-4 NDP convention in Toronto.

Observers expect his own future in the party and the direction it will take now and later may be influenced by his degree of success.

Mr. Lapierre, the NDP candidate in the federal riding of Montreal Lachine, says he may try to get elected to the party's ruling federal council, which has 60 members.

At the same time, he acknowledges that he hasn't been in the party too long and won't aim too high. He has no intention of trying to unseat President Eamon Park or the associate president, Robert Cliche, the party's Quebec leader.

Mr. Lapierre has made it clear he will be highly vocal at the convention. He's concerned about the party image.

The party, in his view, must be more alive and alert. It must communicate, not indoctrinate. There has to be more professionalism and less amateurism.

As leader-ish himself, Mr. Lapierre says the party must be made more appealing to youth. It must present the picture of an organization searching for answers and not be satisfied with the status quo.

Mr. Lapierre's presence is not lost upon the party hierarchy, particularly at a time when the top people are thinking about who will eventually succeed leader T. C. Douglas.

There's no suggestion that Mr. Lapierre or anybody else for that matter will try to take the leader's mantle at this convention or in the forseeable future. But Mr. Lapierre's performance next week should give some indication about his future chances.

Juvenile Delinquency Law May Be Changed

HALIFAX (CP) — Solicitor-General Pennell said Wednesday juvenile delinquency in Canada is a "real and immediate" problem and his department is considering new laws regarding delinquency.

Mr. Pennell, speaking to the Canadian Congress of Corrections, said the department "has been working in earnest on a complete revision of the Juvenile Delinquency Act."

He was "hopeful" a draft of the new act could be drawn up by the fall for consideration by the provincial governments.

Dean D. G. Feeney of the University of Ottawa is to present a brief today on compensation to victims of crime.

Solicitor-General Pennell also said his department expects to establish a youth and delinquency research and advisory centre before the end of the year.

The centre would direct research and act as a clearing house for information about corrections, with its headquarters at Ottawa in the hour not set aside for private members' bills.

Medical Care Approach Is Backward Is Claim

TORONTO (CP)—Dr. James Meivin, president of the Ontario Medical Association, Wednesday warned the federal government that it is attacking the medical care situation backwards and said the medical profession has a right not to practise if it feel the law is bad.

"There is a tolerance beyond which humans cannot be put; there are limits beyond which doctors will not go," he told the Ontario committee of the hearing arm Wednesday after presenting a brief.

The brief called for legislation to restrict further the activities of chiropractors and optometrists.

It said persons "not qualified to make a sound diagnosis" should be prohibited from treating patients unless the patient has seen a physician first.

The brief also called for legislation to prevent optometrists from prescribing contact lenses. The government should promote "medical eye care to more people" by giving more financial assistance for the training of ophthalmologists—physicians who are eye specialists.

Promotions for Belleville Public Schools Are Announced

Promotion and placement of elementary school students to school opening September 1967, Belleville Public Schools.

In response to developing trends, Belleville Public School children will be placed in classes from which they should derive maximum benefit. In general, all children in the primary and junior divisions will have new locations and work will not be repeated. So-called promotions will be made when the age of twelve or thirteen will no longer be publicized.

Reports of the school principals showing movement of children from the Junior division to the intermediate division, and promotion and transfer from Grade VII to Grade VIII and from Grade VIII to Grade IX are here listed. Included are those children who will be working on the non-academic occupational programs.

School principals will be pleased to have any inquiries regarding the above information.

Police Chiefs Talk in Secret About Laws Governing Strikes

HONEY HARBOUR, Ont. (CP) — Delegates to the conference of the Ontario Association of Chiefs of Police met behind closed doors Wednesday to discuss laws governing strikes.

No notes were made by the recording secretary and no texts used.

After the meeting, one chief said many of his fellow chiefs deplored the difference in applying the law in one municipality compared with another.

No resolutions concerning strike laws were passed.

Tuesday, Joseph Thurston, director of the Toronto port police, told the conference that the Liquor Control Act should be changed to permit police to search people for liquor without suspecting them.

Allan Clarke of Cornwall, incoming president, disagreed with Mr. Thurston, saying permission for search is an attempt to use the act to search people for other items.

The delegates did not act on the suggestion.

The convention also was told that deals made by prosecutors and defence lawyers in impaired driving cases are demoralizing police who lay charges against second offenders.

Judge Bruce Macdonald, former Ontario Police Commission chairman, said police officers with the rank of inspector and higher should be taken out of police associations for bargaining purposes.

Judge MacDonald represents the Association of Municipal Police Governing Bodies.

"With every labor relations setup that I know of, those in management or supervisory roles are not in the bargaining unit," he said, "They cannot serve two masters."

Bank Accountant Trails Thug Until Police Join in Pursuit

TORONTO (CP) — Bank accountant Roger Durfy ignored the threats of a gun-wielding bank robber Wednesday and followed the bandit through a subway, shops and alleys until police joined the chase and made the capture.

The chase started after the bandit entered a downtown branch of the Canada where Durfy works and forced a teller to hand over $1,000.

Durfy followed the robber out the door and down into the subway. The robber jumped into a subway car, then discovered it was stationary and jumped out again.

When Durfy caught up with him on the stairs, the man turned and pulled out a gun and shouted, "I'll shoot you. I'll shoot you."

The accountant followed close behind him up the street, hailed a passing police car and with the constable, pursued the man between houses. The man disappeared.

Squad cars and motorcycles searched the bank neighborhood. Police ran up lanes, looked over fences and under autos.

When they walked into a nearby conservatory building, Louis Tudor, a clerk, told them "There's your man, going out our front door!"

The man was walking in a leisurely fashion toward a restaurant on the opposite side of the street. The police pursued him through the restaurant and out the back door where he was cornered by a constable.

A few minutes later, a detective found a loaded automatic pistol in the basement men's room of the conservatory building.

Charged with robbing the Royal Bank of Canada, Bloor-Bedford branch, of $1,000 was Donald Dodd, 37, a guest at the Royal York Hotel.

Armed Forces Recruits Climb

CHATHAM, N.B. (CP)—Defence Minister Hellyer said Wednesday recruiting for the three armed forces during the first five months of this year increased 73 per cent over the same period last year.

Mr. Hellyer said in an interview that the "phenomenal increase" was accomplished without any increase in recruiting staff.

He said re-enlistment rates among the armed forces were also higher this year than in previous years.

The high rate of recruiting and re-enlistment is enabling Canada to keep up its commitments overseas and in air defence command, he said.

Now that he unification bill is through parliament, "everyone is putting their shoulder to the wheel and getting the job done."

Mr. Hellyer, here to address the Northumberland County Young Liberals Association, said his doubts whether Canadians would be included if the United Nations sends a peace-keeping force to the Middle East.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, THURSDAY, JUNE 29, 1967

Several years ago at a sports celebrities dinner in Toronto I met one of baseball's goofiest guys, Senor Lefty Vernon Gomez, a member of the Yankees when the Bronx Bombers always looked up in the league standing and saw nothing was there.

El Senor clowned as much as an after-dinner speaker as he did occasionally on the diamond and most of the time in the off moments.

The senor, oldtimers will recall, was one of the hitless wonder pitchers of the major leagues at that time. He is the originator of the story of the player who reached third base and said to the coach "the diamond looks different from here."

"It should," snapped back the third-back mentor, "It's the first time you've been here in years."

Left was reminiscing with a Pacific Coast reporter the other day and recalled the time when he made a bet with Babe Ruth. The Babe put up $250 to Lefty's $50 that Gomez would not get five base hits all season.

On opening day against Washington the southpaw won and got four hits for five. He had Ruth's money mentally spent. That much dough meant a few nights on the town.

But he appeared in 41 more games that season and didn't get a measly single. Asked how his hitting was, he replied, "Sad, Saddor and Saddest."

But "El Goofo," as he was dubbed, had a major lifetime record of 189 wins, 102 losses and a lifetime earned run average of 3.3. He had four 20-game seasons and in 1928 went 24-6. He was with the Yankees 11 years and in that time they won seven pennants and six world series. He had a perfect 6-0 record in series competition.

Gomez could ask his clowning to almost every occasion. Once when the Yankees were riding the same train as the genius Albert Einstein, the famous man became the topic of conversation.

Gomez was asked, "Did you ever invent anything?" The southpaw never blinked an eye. "Sure," he said, "I invented the revolving goldfish bowl."

His interrogator walked into the trap. "What in the name of Job is the use of a revolving goldfish bowl?" he asked.

"Longer life for goldfish," came the reply. Then leaning forward and whispered to the friend's ear, he said, "You see, the fish can save itself, instead of swimming around and around the bowl all day and tiring himself out it can just stand still and my bowl goes around him."

Gomez told the reporter, "I got a kick out of baseball. I played it hard but I always liked to have some laughs. But a lot of the stories that established me as a clown happened by accident.

"Like the time I was going up to bat and was knocking the mud off my spikes with my bat. Frank Crosetti called to me and accidentally I hit myself a hell of a whack on the ankle. I'm hopping around the plate holding my ankle and finally I'm flat on the ground and they take me off on a stretcher."

"As I'm going off the field the crowd roared with laughter and I could hear them saying, 'That Lefty, he's such a clown.' "

Men who know him said that the southpaw was never at a loss for an answer. He was quick with a quip and lightning with repartee.

Like the time he had a shutout going against the Detroit Tigers with men on first and second and one out when the batter hit a drive over the left of the second. Lefty picked it up and lobbed it to Tony Lazzeri who was on his way to back up first base.

Tony couldn't make the play anywhere and angrily asked Gomez why he had made such a stupid play.

Gomez put on his straightest face and sincerest manner, "Tony," he said solemnly, "yesterday I read in the papers that you are the smartest player in baseball. Now I didn't know what the hell to do with that ball, but I figured you would."

Hits 2 Homers, 2 Singles

Mays' Bludgeon Leaves Red Faces

By RON RAPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer

Willie Mays left a couple hundred embarrassed all-star electors in his wake Wednesday. A few hours after the announcement that he had been left out of the National League's starting lineup for the first time since 1954, he hit two homers and two singles in San Francisco Giants' 9-1 pounding of St. Louis Cardinals.

The Giant slugger finished fourth in the voting for outfielders, receiving 30 fewer votes than Lou Brock of St. Louis. Willie is virtually certain to be named to the team, but for the first time since 1954 he won't be a starter.

In other National League action, Chicago Cubs won a doubleheader from Pittsburgh Pirates, 4-3 and 3-1, Los Angeles Dodgers overcame Cincinnati Reds 7-5, Houston Astros beat Atlanta Braves 4-2 and Philadelphia Phillies edged New York Mets 6-5.

Both of Mays' singles came in the third inning when the Giants scored six times, giving Ray Sadecki a commanding lead.

The first homer was delivered in the sixth inning and the second—No. 555 of his career—came in the eighth.

The amazing Cubs made it nine victories in 10 outings with their pair of triumphs over the Pirates. Ferguson Jenkins of Chatham, Ont., won the opener, his 10th of the season, and Ray Culp allowed just three hits in the nightcap. Adolfo Phillips hit a three-run homer in the first game and ignited the go-ahead rally with a double in the second.

WILLIE MAYS

The Dodgers spotted the Reds five runs, then came back on homers by John Roseboro and Jim Lefebvre, a two-run double by Lou Johnson and three runs on Cincinnati errors.

Jimmy Wynn came in on a wild pitch by Phil Niekro with the bases loaded and two out in the ninth, spurring the Astros to their victory, which broke an eight-game losing streak. Dave Giusti held the Braves to five hits, striking out 10.

Rich Allen's three-run homer in the seventh followed by Bill White's solo blast won the game for the Phillies.

National League All-Stars

Mays Selected; But Is Non-Starter

NEW YORK (AP) — Willie Mays will be among the missing when the National League all-stars take the field to oppose the American League July 11 at Anaheim, Calif., because the Players, managers and coaches failed to name him to the starting lineup.

Mays, a super performer who had been a starter for 13 straight years, undoubtedly will be on the team. Manager Walt Alston of Los Angeles Dodgers will pick the pitchers and the rest of the 25-man squad.

The 36-year-old outfielder who is second to Babe Ruth in career home runs finished fourth among the outfielders in the voting. Under a change in the rules, effective last year by commissioner William Eckert the first three outfielders are the starters, regardless of their positions.

Roberto Clemente of Pittsburgh Pirates polled 248 votes, Hank Aaron of Atlanta Braves got 218 and Lou Brock of St. Louis Cardinals got 116. Mays' total was 77. Both Clemente and Aaron normally are right fielders and Brock is a left fielder so Alston probably will shift them to centre.

Gene Alley, Pittsburgh shortstop, drew the most votes with 250 for his position. Players were not permitted to vote for their own team-mates.

Pittsburgh put three men on the starting eight. Bill Mazeroski, Alley's double - play partner at second base, received 218 votes and won an easy winner along with Alley and Clemente.

Orlando Cepeda, St. Louis Cardinals' first baseman, outdistanced the competition with 218 votes, joining outfielder Brock as Card representatives.

Joe Torre, Atlanta catcher, won by a comfortable margin with 127 votes to runnerup Tim McCarver of St. Louis with 62.

The closest fight was for third base where Richie Allen of Philadelphia Phillies was the winner with 148 votes over Tony Perez of Cincinnati Reds who had 75.

Alston will announce his pitchers Friday and the rest of the squad July 8.

Brock was the only left-handed batter in the starting lineup. He and Alley were the only newcomers who had never started. The three repeaters were Aaron, Clemente and Torre.

WILLIE HORTON

nota Twins shaded Boston Red Sox 3-2, Detroit Tigers rapped Cleveland Indians 7-4 and California Angels rallied to defeat Washington Senators 4-2.

Ron Hansen and Don Buford opposed the Chicago eighth with singles against Baltimore's Bill Dillman, who was working on a shutout. Dillman a retired pitch - runner Jimmy Stewart set the plate on Tommie Agee's step.

That left runners at first and second, setting the stage for Causey's shot.

Bert Campaneris started two Kansas City rallies and scored both Athletic runs as Lew Krausse, Tony Pierce and Jack Aker combined to shut out the Yankees.

Campaneris rode home on Mike Hershberger's single in the third and scored on a pinch single by Ken Harrelson.

Dave Boswell pitched a four-hitter and Cesar Tovar drove in the winning run with a seventh inning single as the Twins squeezed past Boston.

Jerry Adair and Reggie Smith homered for the Red Sox.

Orlando Pena walked four men in the sixth inning, forcing the tie-breaking run across, and then Willie Horton delivered a two-run double that helped the Tigers stop Cleveland.

Bob Rodgers delivered a two-run double with two out in the eighth inning that lifted the Angels past the Senators. Singles by Jim Fregosi, John Werhas and Rick Reichardt had tied the score before Rodgers' blow.

Frank Howard accounted for both Washington runs with his 18th homer.

Victims of Two-Hitter

Beavers Dam Lombanks 6-1

By ROBERT SNEJDELLA

Belleville Lombanks collided with a trio of Brockville Beavers pitchers at the Fair Grounds last night and were routed 6-1.

The visiting mounddmen gave up only two singles early in the game, and without four errors by the Beavers in the field, Belleville wouldn't have come close to scoring.

The loss dragged Belleville back to .500, with five wins in twice as many tries. However only 10 players, including three pitchers, dressed for the game.

Wayne Amyotte stopped the home team for the first three frames, as he allowed both hits and scored three. In the fourth, Bill Dobbs took over pitching duties and promptly struck out five in a row, walked one, fanned another, and left the game. Duke Murphy toiled for the rest of the way, giving up no hits but being plagued by four errors by his mates. He struck out three.

Bill Latchford was amicable toward his former teammates as he took the Belleville loss. He gave up eight solid hits, and struck out 10, while walking four. His fielding support was far below par, at six errors.

The winners had 1-0 after the second inning, and never looked back, adding three in the fourth and two in the fifth. Six of their hits came in these two frames.

Belleville grabbed a lone marker in the sixth when Wayne Woods reached first on an error and later came home on Moe Hosier's ground ball.

Second baseman Don Dexter, batting cleanup for the visitors, slammed a triple and single and scored twice. Duke Murphy stroked a double and single and Jack Coughlin two singles, while catcher Brian McRobie and Art Pearce added lone base hits.

Mike Hoskey and Don Masters hit for Belleville.

Belleville's next contest is Saturday at Kingston and on Wednesday Peterborough visits the Fair Grounds.

Handsome new decanter. Smooth, light flavour.
Now you know why Hiram Walker's Gold Crest is the hit of every party.

When a whisky is as smooth as Gold Crest, you've got something good going for you. Because everybody likes it. And since a whisky like this doesn't happen very often, we've decided to celebrate this Centennial year by putting Gold Crest up in a new kind of decanter. Tall and cylindrical. Clean, clear, and slim. With a cut glass sunburst in the base. It lets you show off just a bit. Because it looks great, and tastes so smooth and light. It's the kind of whisky that goes well at any kind of party. Try it at your next party and see. Gold Crest. The Party Whisky.

Pasarell Scores Second Wimbledon Upset; Canadian In Running

WIMBLEDON, England (CP) — Montrealer Frank Turvin toyed his way into the third round of the men's tennis singles at Wimbledon Wednesday and Japan's Yutaka Nagai of Japan 6-1, 9-7, 2-6, 6-4.

Turvi, 23, who intends to return to Montreal after eight years in Florida, won a place among the last 32 of a original 128 contestants in the men's championships on his first trip to Wimbledon. He is entered as a Canadian.

He harbors doubts about his ability to survive the next elimination round, later this week. He meets Charlie Pasarell of Puerto Rico, who scored an upset Monday by eliminating defending champion Manuel Santana of Spain.

Pasarell, 22, ranked fourth in the United States, beat Bob Hewitt of South Africa in a four-set match Wednesday. Tutvin has bowed to Pasarell in two previous encounters in the U.S., once in the 1964 Western Championships and again last year at Indianapolis.

"Pasarell looks pretty good here," Tutvin said. "I am just going to have to be at my best."

Tutvin had to work his way through two pre - tournament qualifying rounds to make Wimbledon. He beat Sergio Tacchini of Italy in his opening Wimbledon match Monday.

Against Yanagi, Tutvin used an attacking style at the net against the Japanese player's tendency to stick to the baseline.

In the first set, Tutvin lost his initial serve, then made a clean sweep. The Canadian fought from behind a 4-3 deficit to win the second set.

Tutvin dropped the third set through what he described later as "carelessness—I lost my concentration just when Yanagi started to return my services well."

Tutvin faltered again in the final set when serving for the match at 5-3. Yanagi broke the serve; but Tutvin broke back in the next game to win 6-4.

Yanagi has twice been a victim of Canadians this month. He lost in the final of the Carpet championships in Keith Carpenter of Montreal, who was eliminated in the first round here by Australia's Roy Emerson. Emerson is favored to win his third Wimbledon title.

Meanwhile, the Americans—who became laughing-stock of the tennis world last week following their Davis Cup defeat by tiny Ecuador —have shown signs of becoming heroes here. Three U.S. players — Cliff Richey, Marty Riessen and Pasarell —have toppled seeded stars when none of the experts gave them a chance.

Richey Wednesday defeated Tony Roche, the Australian lefthander who was seeded No. 4. After four hours of slugging and sweating, Richey won 3-5, 2-6, 18-17, 14-12, 6-3.

Riessen demolished the Danish left-hander Jan Leschly, seeded No. 7, 1-6, 6-3, 3-6, 6-1, 6-4.

Their victories came after Pasarell defeated Hewitt 6-3, 6-4, 6-2, 6-4.

Some 30,000 fans jammed the grounds here to see Wednesday's matches, bringing the attendance on the first three days to 75,000.

Minor Baseball Results

A two-hit performance by a pitching duo led IBEW to a 10-2 victory over Bartrages in BMBA peewee last night. Fountain Park scored heavily in the middle frames to defeat Bad Boys 7-4 in another peewee battle.

Mike Burley and -Al Wood combined to pitch the IBEW win. They struck out 11 and walked 10.

Greg Duffy, Bob Moore and Tom Coughlin hurled for the losers, giving up seven hits and fanning seven.

Bill Coughlin slammed two doubles, and Terry Ray collected a pair of singles for the winners. Mike Burley, Terry Collins and Allan Wood also bat.

Mark Coates and Brian Duffy hit safely for Barrages.

Fountain Park's mound duties were taken by Jim Richardson, John Mulvihill and Andy Lupenette. They struck out seven and gave up four hits.

Dan Coulson and Tim Whelan gave up five hits in losing. They struck out 11.

John Mulvihill banged a triple, Jim Richardson and Fred Moore had doubles, and Dan Lupenette and Mike Kavanaugh singles for the Park.

Andy Ricketts slammed a homer for Tim Whelan, Dan Coulson and Mitchell Yott stroked singles for Bad Boys.

Death Claims Carnera

SEQUELS, Italy (AP)—Primo Carnera, the towering Italian known as The Ambling Alp when he won the world title in 1933, died today in this mountain town where he was born. He was 60.

His huge body wasted from cirrhosis of the liver. He was in a coma for almost a week before death came.

His passing ended the life of one of the most unusual, colorful figures in the history of boxing.

Carnera was champion less than a year. He won the heavyweight title when he knocked out Jack Sharkey in the sixth round June 29, 1933, in New York.

Women's Softball

Gilly's Express out - clobbered Dixie Lee 18-16 in Women's softball last night.

Grace Vanderhaat hurled the victory while Sandra Claus toiled for the losers.

Sharon Lumsden and Bev Gillies each provided power at the plate for Gilly's and Joan Gudgeie and Doreen Cook were best for Dixie Lee.

Horsemen Dispute Settled

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Ontario horsemen and the Jockey Club settled their disputes Wednesday and then started another one with the provincial government.

The horsemen and the Jockey Club agreed on a settlement stipulating both thoroughbred and harness horsemen will receive 46.5 per cent of the revenue derived by tracks from their nine-per-cent share of the pari-mutuel handle.

The settlement ended say chance of postponement Monday of the openings of the summer thoroughbred meeting at Fort Erie and the harness meeting at Toronto's Greenwood Raceway.

Following the settlement, the three parties involved issue a joint statement blaming the province government for making the agreement difficult.

Four Enter Boxing Tourney

HOUSTON (AP)—Four fighters will participate in an Astrodome doubleheader Aug. 5 to launch a tournament to select a new World Boxing Association heavyweight champion.

The two 15-round fights will match Ernie Terrell against Thad Spencer and Jimmy Ellis against Leotis Martin.

Terrell is ranked No. 4 by the WBA, Spencer No. 5, Ellis No. 8 and Martin No. 9. Other first-round elimination matches are expected to have Karl Mildenberger of Germany, ranked No. 1, against Oscar Bonavena of Argentina, No. 3; and former champion Floyd Patterson, No. 2, against Jerry Quarry, No. 7.

Dates and sites of these bouts have not been announced.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP) — Carodana, ridden by Tak Inouye, won the featured seventh race at Woodbine Wednesday by more than a length.

Carodana defeated Snow Time and Little Bullfrog and paid $11.00, $3.60 and $2.70 across the board. The exactor of Carodana and Snow Time paid $31.80.

The daily double of Charleran and Robin Whirpool paid $28.20. Solomstreet and Vics Turn combined for a $6.40 exactor in the fifth.

Win 14-0 Romp
Kingston Dunks Ellis Srs.

Kingston Lakes Bus Service have discovered a formula for beating Ellis' Seniors, league-leaders in the Quinte-KASA. All that's necessary is a 15-hit inning, three homers and a 19 strike-out, two-hit pitching performance, and you can't lose.

The Kingston team disposed of Belleville's 14-0 using the before mentioned formula last night.

The Lake Bus, currently running in second place behind Ellis', needed the win to remain within striking distance of the top. The loss was Ellis' first of the year, compared to seven wins and a tie.

Third baseman Bill Stewart pushed the Kingston scoring machine into motion when he smashed a bases loaded home run in the third inning. Seven errors had helped Kingston put their men on base.

Stewart connected for another round tripper next time up to begin a seven-run inning for the winners. Three consecutive hits and an error followed by Brian Porteous' home run shot accounted for much of the damage.

The winners added three more runs that didn't matter in the eighth.

Ken Lewis fashioned a sparkling two-hitter for Kingston and blew third strikes past nineteen while not walking a batter. In nine full frames of mound chores.

Bob Ethier was not as successful on the loser's mound, racked for 13 hits, walking six and blowing down seven on third strikes. Five errors by Belleville in the field did not make things easier.

Kingston's batting practice was led by Stewart's pair of home run shots, and Brian Porteous' homer and two singles that knocked in five runs. Pitcher Lewis stroked a double and single, and Tom Cashman and Toby Sandis two base hits each. Bob Jackson and Tom Hollingsworth added singles.

Belleville pitcher Bob Ethier and left-fielder Bob Moon had Belleville's hits.

Beverley Klass, 10, "Too Young"

Pro Golf 'Cats' Want To Bar Kitten

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP)—Children should be seen but not heard and not on the golf courses with grown-ups, the lady pros say, so they're taking measures to bar their youngest disciple —Beverly Sue Klass, aged 10.

Beverly is no upset she could cry. Her pop is furious. Her mom is kind. Her two sisters, Sherree, 13, and Valerie, 7, just look and listen. They don't know what it's all about.

All they know is that Beverly, the youngest entrant ever, is playing this week-end in the National Women's Open golf championship. After that, things look bleak.

"There's really nothing against the game—it's terrific for her age," said Leonard Wirtz, tournament director of the Ladies Professional Golfers Association. "Our players simply decided she is too young for the tour. They complain in our tournaments."

Beverly, no taller than a golf bag, created a sensation when she teed up the ball earlier this year in a women's LPGA tournament in Dallas. Later she had an 82.

To make the situation even more bizarre, the terrific tot registered as a pro—a 10-year-old pro.

"We had nothing in our rules to prevent it," Wirtz said, "but we received some criticism. It was said we were using the little girl to sensationalize the tour and draw bigger crowds. This was not so."

Beverly's father, Jack Klass of Thousand Oaks, Calif., a building contractor said:

"This is sheer discrimination. Golf is a game for all ages. Why don't they bar 80-year-olds? This girl don't hurt anybody out there. She can hit a ball and keep it moving. She wants to play. It will break her heart."

Beverly won the pee wee championship at Orlando, Fla., by the margin of 87 strokes at the age of six and soon was beating many adults. She was barred from public courses in California, however, because she wasn't 14.

So the father turned her pro and put her on the tour, playing in summer months between Grade 5 arithmetic and geography.

Beverly is four feet-9½, and weighs 98 pounds. She has close-cropped black hair, wears thick lens spectacles and chews gum constantly.

She says she wants to be the world's best golfer, but the Ladies Professional Golfers Association says she'll have to wait.

37 Top Riders

Motorcycle Races Here

For the seventh consecutive year Belleville, Ontario will host the Ontario Championship TEAM - Mile Track Motorcycle Races on Friday night. Thirty-seven top riders have entered the 500cc and 350cc events mentioned by the Canadian Motorcycle Association.

Heading the Expert Class is Canada's Number "1" Dirt Track rider Yvon DuHamel of Montreal, Quebec who hopes to break into the high power veterans' circle this year with his new Jawa 500cc Speedway machine which weighs a mere 175 lbs. ready to race. Unable to win the 500cc class at Belleville since 1954, he has won every 350cc Championship held, however.

Top rankings, United States expert, Doug Shooker of Cleveland, Ohio, the winner of the last three Expert 500cc events held, is expected to bring the most up to date American made racing bike in an attempt to make it four wins in a row! Other top title winners in the Expert Class include, Don McHugh of Brampton, Ont., Sandy Freeman of Hamilton, Barry Whitmore of Willowdale, Ont., Bill Bailey of Cleveland, Ohio, Lucien Lamoureaux, Iberville, Quebec, and Tom Keaight of Tracy, Quebec.

Major contenders for the Senior 500cc Class include, Dave Sell of Watertown, Ontario, Maurice Fraser of Hamilton, and Claude Ferland of Quebec City. Eighteen Junior or Novice riders make up one of the largest Junior Class entries ever received for the Ontario Championship. They hail from New York State, Quebec and all parts of Ontario.

The event is organized by the Picton Pusbore Motorcycle Club of Belleville and the Belleville Agricultural Society under the sanction and rules of the Canadian Motorcycle Association Inc.

Red Wings Continue Plunge

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

A string of rained out games like the one scheduled Wednesday in Columbus, could wreck to the advantage of Toronto Maple Leafs' International League pennant hopes.

Rochester Red Wings could find a full slate Wednesday, although still in the lead, by losing 5-2 to Richmond Braves. Richmond now is just 1½ games behind the Wings and only a ball game up on the Leafs.

But, while Richmond has played only one more game than Rochester, Toronto has a big fistful of games in hand over both clubs—six over Rochester and eight over Richmond.

In other games played Wednesday, Toledo Mud Hens clipped Buffalo Bisons 6-3 and Syracuse Chiefs spoil a pair of Jacksonville Suns, losing 6-5 and winning 9-8.

Kinsmen Clip Clippers

Ken DeMille's steady pitching, Picton Kinsmen's strong point in the Quinte-KAHA softball loop all season, paid off with a much-needed victory in "Little Spain" last night.

Picton defeated Kingston La-Fontaine Clippers 3-1 as Don Mills fashioned a superb three-hitter.

DeMille fell behind 1-0 in the second inning on his only walk, two stolen bases and a fly ball. Over the remainder, he struck out 14, helped his own cause at the plate and scattered three singles.

The Kinsmen scored twice in the sixth. Weese singled and with two out, Kingston elected to put DeMille on base and pitch big Warren "Moose" Ostrander. If was a mistake. Ostrander drove both runners home with a solid base hit.

They added the clincher in the eighth to bring their season's record to three wins, four losses and a tie.

D. Hartman and Ed Wood Hughes in the sixth pitched for Kingston. They gave up nine hits, struck out three and walked but one.

Warren Ostrander collected three singles, DeMille and Merve Hicks two each and the single each to lead the Picton hitters. Ron Weese and Leo Weiner of St. Denis also had base knocks.

D. Porteous, Stu Little and K. Hall singled to defend.

Picton's next start will be at home against the leading Belleville squad next Wednesday.

"Open" Gold Rush Off, Shooting

MONTREAL (CP)—The 1958 Canadian Open golf championship, with a pre-tournament background of course criticism, hot and cold practice—round gets under way today.

The field of 155 plus four amateurs. An unprecedented $200,000 is at stake. First prize is $20,000 and the Seagram Gold Cup.

Play begins at 8 a.m. EDT, over Montreal's public Municipal course and Canadian amateur champion Nick Weslock of Burlington, Ont.

Today's format for the opening round called for sunny weather with cloudy periods and possibly showers in the late afternoon. The temperature should reach 80 degrees.

An amazing 10,000 to 12,000 persons turned up for the practice round featuring Palmer and Nicklaus.

Palmer said afterwards it was the largest crowd he recalled showing up for a practice session.

Minor Softball

The squirts were busy in the BMSA last night, as the Bombers started the Reds 14-4, Kiddies' Korner outlasted the Browns 11-8, Vaughan Automotive wiped out the Redskins 20-3, Indians nudged the Seals 21-14, Ernie Tuck stopped Stevenson Ford 12-11, and the Cubs and Peacock Plastering tied 9-9.

Hotelmen Up Lead

S. Warner Shakes Slump

Stewart Warner ended a league leading streak with a 9-3 victory over the Tiki Gods while City Hotel topped Stinson's 4-2 to stretch their league lead to a full eight points. Commercial Softball double-header.

City's third victory in as many nights opened up a six-point bulge atop the standings.

The Hotelmen received fourhit pitching from Dave Feeney while Tiki Gods' Ron Boyle clouted doubles, Frankie Donovan and Larry Potter a single each.

The Hotelmen now own an impressive 10-1 record.

Stewart Warner used a five-run eruption in the fourth inning to erase a 3-2 deficit for the club's initial win in seven tilts.

Hits were scarce in this one with Jim Meeus pitching three-hit ball on the winners' rubber. Bill Wickens four-bit ball for Tiki before A. Pullen came in to get the final out. Meeus struck out five and walked five. Wickens sported a 2-2 mark.

While Stewart Warner had only four hits, all were for extra bases with clean-up batter Lyle Wannamaker doing most of the slugging. He hammered two home runs and a triple. R. Demaré completed the attack with a double.

W. McTaggart hit a Tiki triple, S. Hansen and Bob Wickens a single each.

Al Lee's three-run homer capped a four-run explosion in the bottom of the seventh and gave the Intelligencer a 9-8 squeaker over the first-place Fire Department last night.

The setback kept the Firemen within striking distance of the loop's other four clubs and the win boosted the Intelligencer back into sole possession of second place.

The Firemen led 8-5 early; the Intell went ahead 5-4 in the fifth but the redskirts scored four in the top of the seventh for an 8-5 lead. The first four men in the bottom of the seventh scored with Lee's lined shot skipping past the outfielder to end it.

Ron Culloden tossed eight-hit ball, including four hitless innings, for the victory. Bob Davenport was combed for 13 hits in defeat.

Terry Hiddleston and Don Wood banged out three hits each; Merv Parsons a long three-run homer and a single and Al Lee his game-winning blast and a single, 45 spark the Intelligencer.

Bill MacCormack tripled and singled, Craig Rump doubled and singled and Bob Zimmerman hit a two-run homer for the Fire Department.

Americans Dominate At Henley

HENLEY-ON-THAMES, England (AP)—A powerful Cornell squad and four other United States crews won their first-round races in a big American assault at the Henley Royal Regatta Wednesday.

Cornell, favored to win the Thames Challenge Cup for eight-oared boats, scored a six-length victory in seven minutes, 38 seconds over England's Kingston Rowing Club, and impressed experts with its smart rowing along the 1-mile, 550-yard River Thames course.

Cornell meets Durham University today in a second round clash.

Smythe Flies Ensign

TORONTO (CP) — Conn Smythe's flag will fly in the infield at Woodbine racetrack for the next year, but it won't be his familiar blue and white maple leaf emblem.

His hockey players have worn the maple leaf to 11 Stanley Cup championships; his jockeys have worn it into the winner's circle in two Queen's Plates.

But when it came time to run up his maple leaf house flag on 1957 Plate winner at Woodbine, it was the Canadian Red Ensign that Smythe hoisted.

"Those are my colors," he said, "They're going for me."

Smythe served in two wars under the Canadian Ensign, which was replaced two years ago by the now-familiar Canadian flag.

Saturday Nationwide "Swinging Party"

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The centennial drum-roll is quickening. Palaces are rockers. Adults are self-consciously told to hum "Ca-se-da-ga-da . . ." in emulation of children.

The celebrations follow the year as it brings Jury 1 to the country across even time zones and more than 3,000 miles.

Newfoundland, where July 1 hooks the province's dead, will add to real celebrations, barring Premier Smallwood's attendance at graveside ceremonies for two Fathers of Confederation.

Nova Scotia will play the first gay note at Happy Birthday with a clan and fishermen's regatta in Pugwash, a Maritime fishermen's field day in Dartmouth and a picnic at Barrington.

In Quebec, it is Samuel de Champlain Day and some of the population will gather at the explorer's statue in Quebec City to hear the traditional historical oration.

Charlottetown will get a swinging early start with a Centennial ball beginning Friday night.

A navy helicopter will fly Premier Alex Campbell, Lieutenant-Governor W. J. MacDonald and T. Earle Hickey, chairman of the P.E.I. centennial commission from party to party around the island provinces July 1.

Confederation Day ceremonies will be held on the steps of Centennial Building in Fredericton, N.B. Highlights will be an address by Premier Louis J. Robichaud and, as afternoon fireworks display.

Huge crowds are expected in Ottawa in response to State Secretary Judy LaMarsh's invitation to come to a swinging party.

The Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh will take part in the festivities. Among other things, the Queen will cut a giant birthday cake on Parliament Hill and attend a teen-age jamboree at Lansdowne Park, called a "royal hullabaloo."

Toronto will salute the centennial with a 100-gun salute and the peal of church bells at midnight Friday night.

Expo will use the international setting to advantage with a ceremony of Place des Nations in honor of the birthday.

In Moscow, the biggest Canadian reception ever staged in the city will be held with between 500 and 700 persons expected.

Out West, Weyburn, Sask., will rename Rastt Crocus, boosting home-town author W. O. Mitchell's fictional Prairie town.

Cowboys will ride the range and bite the good Canadian dust at Swift Current's Frontier Days rodeo.

The biggest holiday event in Manitoba will be the national swimming and diving championships and Pan-American Games trials at Winnipeg July 1-8.

At Regina, an expected 100 riders will ride to Saskatoon, on a six-day 370-mile trail ride.

Calgary will open its $1,250,000 centennial planetarium and Lethbridge its Japanese Garden.

Saturna Island, B.C., plans a lamb barbecue, only one of thousands of campfire feasts to be devoured in a practical tribute to the rugged outdoor life.

But the truly international attitude is being demonstrated at little St. Paul, Alta. There, amid the Prairie grass, the citizens have erected the first flying saucer pad. Undoubtedly a hopeful few will watch to see whether the Martians too are coming to Canada's birthday.

WANT CANADIAN PLANES

THE HAGUE (Reuters)—The Dutch second chamber—lower house — Wednesday authorized Defence Minister W. Den Toom to order 100 Canadian - built Northrop F-5 jets for the Dutch Royal Air Force. The new planes will replace the air force's Thunderstreaks and Jet trainers which will be outdated by 1970.

Mr. Meltzer on Real Estate

"What's Your Problem"

Often, development plans will show plotted recreation, park and other public areas. Is this so much "sales puff" or does a buyer have a right to rely on getting these improvements?

Dear Mr. Meltzer: We've been taken! Please tell us what to do. I'm the spokesman for 85 other neighbors who are just as disappointed.

My neighbors and I bought our homes because this development was supposed to be "a year-round vacation paradise." The recorded plot plan and the brochures indicated a large area for a park, a 54-acre golf course and a country and swim club along the banks of a 12-acre lake.

None of this will now come about. The developer is now selling lots in the middle of the park, the golf course section has been sub-divided into more lots, and the lake has become a pretzle swim club.

The developer met with our group and all he would tell us was that "he had changed his mind about how to develop the property." Where do we stand? We bought, relying on these projected improvements. Do we silently steal away or do we fight? — Mr. H.

ANSWER: This case is rather involved, but, in my opinion, if the parties engage competent legal counsel, I believe they will prevail. I know of several similar cases.

In each instance, the recorded plot plan and the advertising literature designated parks, recreation areas, or other public areas. The prevailing opinion now is that any lot owner in the sub-division has a private right to have the area used as plotted and may obtain a court order forbidding any other use.

In summary, it appears that the buyers in this instance relied on these recorded improvements and the developer does not have the right to unilaterally change the development plans.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I have personally planted every rose bush and shrub on the property. I have given them loving care. When I sell, which will be within the year, I want to take them with me. My real estate agent tells me I cannot do this. I then told him I would write to Mr. Meltzer, and he would tell me how I could provide for taking my rose bushes and shrubs. — Mrs. L. F.

ANSWER: Although bushes and shrubs are part of real property, they can be excluded from the sale by specifically mentioning them in the agreement of sale. In this way, our correspondent will be able to take her rose bushes and shrubs without dispute.

Sentiment aside, however, the removal of the rose bushes and shrubs makes no sense. The price of the property if we use similar situations as a guide, will probably decline 5 to 10 times the removed value of the bushes and shrubs.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: My neighbor has a peach tree that is his pride and joy. The tree is near the property line and, in season many peaches fall into my yard.

My neighbor comes into my yard each morning and gathers up the fallen peaches. He misused yesterday and my 12-year-old boy and his friends, while roughousing, stepped on about two dozen. My neighbor insists that I or the boy pay for the smashed peaches or there will be trouble. Can he cause me trouble? — Mr. D. T.

ANSWER: Your trouble is not in the form of peaches. The peaches lying in your yard are your property. Tell your neighbor that unless he minds his manners and behaves, his pride and joy will end up as your dessert.

Farewell Bid S.A. Officers

NAPANEE — Napanee is reluctantly bidding farewell on Thursday to Captain and Mrs. Frank Phelps who have been transferred to Sherbrooke, Quebec. Salvation Army officers here for two years, they came here from Peterborough with the rank of Envoy, and have since been promoted to Auxiliary Captains. In Peterborough their work was entirely in connection with welfare. Both had felt the call of duty when living in Oshawa, and had given up good positions to enter the Army. Captain Phelps had been a member of the Oshawa Fire Department for 13 years.

Mrs. Phelps stated Tuesday that they came to Napanee in trepidation. Neither has had any training in the Salvation Army colleges in Toronto, and consequently no training in theology, nor in conducting meetings, nor in management of a corps. They have had to learn as they have gone along.

Captain Phelps has been a constant attendant at the courts, and has been of service to many a person in trouble with the law. He has also been an active member of the Rotary Club. Membership of the corps has grown and the usefulness to the community has increased greatly.

Mrs. Phelps has been equally helpful. In addition to her work as a Salvation Army officer she has taken an other work, noticeably as a volunteer hospital worker with the Hospital Auxiliary. In addition, she has organized the League of Mercy, made up of women who work at home and provide comforts, and of uniformed Salvation Army members who visit the sick, principally in the hospitals and nursing homes. Membership in the Home League has tripled through her encouragement.

The Citadel was packed Sunday evening for the farewell service.

Captain and Mrs. Phelps will be replaced by Lieut. Connors, who graduated last Saturday from training college in Toronto. He has had experience with the corps in Windsor, his home town.

Combined Youth Groups Hold Tea

DESERONTO — Although the Church of the Redeemer has few adult members, it has a handful of active, enthusiastic women who keep things going, and carry out work with children, many of whom belong to other churches. During the year these groups combine, sometimes all together and sometimes in pairs, and produce fund raising projects.

Such a project was promoted last Saturday by the Explorers, and the COC (Children of the Church), with members five to eight years old. The Explorers are nine to eleven and include three boys and 12 girls.

Leaders of all four children's organizations combined to assist in the tea and sale Saturday: Mrs. Blake Moore, Sunday School superintendent; Mrs. Charles Reid, leader of the CGIT; Mrs. Kay Hood, leader of the Explorers; and Mrs. Charles Griffiths, who leads the COC children, assisted by Gale Reid of the CGIT.

The Centennial theme was followed with flowers. Everyone participating wore Centennial dress.

Receiving at the door was 11-year-old Chief Explorer Frances Claver. Pouring tea, in turn, were four adult leaders. The four small tea tables were centred with story log cabins made of sticks, the work of the children.

Guests patronized all four of the sales tables, with Explorers Kathy Pringle, Margo Morey, and Kim Fraser in charge of baked goods. A table of odds and ends was in charge of Explorers Alan Claver and James Gordanier. Explorers Donna Hutchison, Roxanne Foster and Janet Claver sold the articles, made by their group, and proceeds went to the Explorers. The COC received the funds from the fish pond, which was in charge of assistant Gale Reid. All other proceeds which totalled $46 to date, were shared.

With The Trotters

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Lynden Dodger and Sharp 'n Smart each won a division of the featured $4,250 three-year-old Sportest pacing stakes at Western Fair Raceway Wednesday night.

Lynden Dodger was clocked in 2:07 4-5, fastest time of the night. Sharp 'n Smart was timed in 2:10 3-5.

Secondary events on the program were the five divisions of the third leg of the City of London Pace series.

The first division went to Good Time Henry. Breckinridge was second, Armbro Bluethird, Terry Ann fourth and Dream Castle fifth.

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—Sharp Hoot won the $6,363 Simcoe Futurity at Garden City Raceway here Wednesday. It was the trotter's first victory in three season's outings.

Wee Shindig finished second in the mile test and Little Sketch third.

Mr. Flintstone made his second career start a winning one in the first race and Chuck Nardis won in the second for a daily double of $96.90.

ALS OPEN CAMP

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference opened their training camp Wednesday with a total of 38 players showing up for the first workout. The Alouettes immediately went to work on their offence as the veterans joined rookie candidates at Jarry Park, the club's training quarters in the north end of the city.

Expo Attendance Follows Fair Graph

MONTREAL (CP)—With visitors to Expo 67 running nearly 5,000,000 ahead of estimates, officials of Canada's world's fair have research firms out seeking information that will help them plan the remaining four months of the exposition.

But one thing certain is that the pattern of attendance will follow that of previous world's fair.

"If you draw a graph of attendance at the world's fair in New York in 1939, in Seattle in 1962 and again in New York in 1964, you will see they follow the same shape and dowas in the same places," an Expo official said. With top fair officials now considering a possible attendance of 80,000,000 before Expo closes in late October, a spokesman explained how the fair arrived at the total figure of 50,000,000 on which current daily estimates of attendance are based.

"To attract exhibitors, we had to tell them how many people would come. This was necessary for the construction purposes — to determine floor needed, the speed of escalators. We also had to know what we would need in the way of mass transit."

So five years ago a research firm was called in. It asked questions from a sampling of people within a radius of 400 miles of Montreal and also in California, because it is considered a state of travelling people.

The firm came up with the figure of 50,000,000. This figure was later jumped to 30,000,000 and a year ago to 35,000,00.

But Expo's information manual, printed in the spring of last year, says tables were prepared on the base of 50,000,000 visitors so that concessionaires and exhibitors could "base their calculations on conservative figures."

One thing that has upset calculations so far, and apparently was not considered in early research, which had to be completed at the end of 1965, was the admissions system.

"The other fairs had fixed prices for admission," a spokesman said.

"But we have different categories and then we expect to bring 1,500,000 school children into the fair.

"As a result, while Expo is following the same peaks and valleys as in graphs of the other figures, we are at a higher level."

A statistican said that 1,132,- 684 had visited the Seattle fair in its first month while New York in 1964 had 3,490,000. But Expo pulled in 7,306,957 in the corresponding period.

Madagascar Day at Fair

MONTREAL (CP) — The republic of Madagascar, a huge island off the east coast of Africa, celebrates its national day at the world's fair today at Expo 67 heads lois its third month.

Louis Rakotomalala, Madagascar's ambassador to Canada and the United Sites, will represent President Philibert Tsiranana at his country's flag-raising ceremonies at Place des Nations.

The royal yacht Britannia arrived Wednesday at Cite du Havre with many on part of the aite of the world's fair and will depart during the weekend for Cornwall, Ont., where she will pick up the Queen and Prince Philip for a visit to Expo.

The royal party will arrive in Canada by plane Monday and will participate in a round of ceremonies in Ottawa July 1 to mark Canada's centennial celebration. The Queen and Prince Philip will spend Monday at Expo before sailing aboard the royal yacht for Kingston, Ont. The royal couple will leave Canada July 5.

The weekend promises to attract record-breaking crowds as Canada celebrates Dominion Day, July 1, and the United States celebrates Independence Day, July 4.

Visitors to the world's fair went over the 16,000,000 mark Wednesday and as many as 1,- 500,000 are expected to go through the turnstiles during the holiday weekend.

The pavilion of Nationalist China whose interior was destroyed by fire May 30 will be reopened to the public today following the arrival of new exhibits from Formosa and elsewhere.

India celebrated her national day at Expo Wednesday with President Zakir Husain heading the country's delegations at flag-raising ceremonies and at other Indian festivities.

Dr. Husian described the concept of Expo as "a major contribution to human understanding and goodwill."

To Your Good Health

Psoriasis' Cause Is Still Unknown

Dear Dr. Molner: I have had psoriasis since I was 17. It has worsened. I am now 47 and it covers 85 per cent of my body. Any information would be appreciated. Doctors have told me it was incurable, but that was many years ago. — Mrs. A. L. M.

Psoriasis affects some 4,000,000 people in the United States, and while it does not endanger life, it is not only an ailment is a nuisance to many and an abomination to some. It has been studied intensively, and yes, some new information has been found.

Not, however, the cause. Hereditary factors are suspected, and a disorder of the metabolism of the skin is thought to be the immediate cause — that is, there is a rapid reproduction, or turnover, of skin cells on the surface, causing the surface layers to slough off rapidly. This accounts for the scale, if this theory is correct.

Over the years there have been dozens of "cures" for psoriasis. Perhaps even hundreds have been tried. Unfortunately, what helps one person does another a good. While the ailment sometimes clears up spontaneously, this merely confuses things, not artificially speaking. When some sort of salve is in use and the psoriasis clears, what did it? The salve? Or nature?

Now that I've outlined what we don't know about psoriasis, here are some things we have found out.

Milder types of psoriasis are known to improve in summer, get worse in winter. Sunlight helps.

Emotional tensions are a suspected factor. Thus control of nerves sometimes helps.

Many psoriatics are heavy meat - eaters. This raised a theory that tension, one of the amino acids, is involved. This is in most meat.

Therefore low-tension diets have been tried, but this is very difficult to achieve since protein is necessary in the diet, and to leach out the tension means boiling the meat first.

Many treatments revolve around the use of tar ointments. In some, steroid ointments are used. In something like 20 to 30 percent of cases so treated, the lesions may disappear but, as I explained above, it isn't easy to be sure just what brought the success.

The Goeckerman regimen appears to have met with considerable success. This is used in extensive and extreme cases (such as Mrs. M.'s) and is best started in a hospital. It consists of painting the affected skin areas with a weak coal tar ointment at night, removing it in the morning, and then exposing it to ultraviolet light. Later the treatment may be continued at home.

Another treatment, used only in the most extensive and resistant cases, involves use of the drug methotrexate, a so-called metabolic antagonist. This has to be used under close scrutiny by a physician. The medicine is given once a week, but frequent blood counts are mandatory because the white blood count can become depressed.

My advice to people with small patches of psoriasis generally is to have a dermatologist prescribe an ointment which will keep the skin soft and, prevent itching and get sunshine in summer.

For those with severe cases more intensive treatment must be undertaken. If the condition is not completely cured, some degree of relief is usually possible. Self treatment may aggravate the condition, as so often is the case with skin disease.

Dear Dr. Molner: A speaker at a convention said that psoriasis is a phase of, or closely akin to, leprosy. Is this true? — T. W.

I don't know what he was talking about and don't think he knew, either. What was he selling?

To Mrs. H. H.: There is no reason why having taken the birth control pills for six years should have any effect on having a baby now.

Claim Death Quick on U.S. Ship Contradicted by Survivor's Tale

An Associated Press writer, Bob Horton, aboard the USS America as June 11 and there interviewed a survivor of the Israeli attack on the American ship Liberty three days before. Here, in excerpts to a U.S. defense department account of the attack published Wednesday, is the way one survivor remembers it.

By BOB HORTON

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. defence department's account of the Israeli attack on the USS Liberty presents a picture of almost mercifully quick deaths among the crew. One survivor remembers it differently and tells how at least one man was sealed in flooding hatches.

In a condensation of the U.S. Navy court of inquiry's findings on the attack, which killed 34 men, the defence department reported 25 died instantly from an Israeli torpedo blast.

"Those few not killed outright escaped from the compartments," the department said Wednesday.

"The court," the department said, "heard testimony from witnesses . . . that beyond a shadow of a doubt those who died there were killed instantly by the blast."

"Those could have survived, trapped in the compartment, to die of suffocation or drowning."

But one of the Liberty's wounded crew members told correspondents aboard the carrier U.S.S. America June 11, three days after the attack, of a young marine who tried to rescue companions from flooded areas of the ship.

Seaman Kenneth Ecker the marine helped some crew members from water - swept hatches and returned below deck to assist others. The implication was that others were alive.

"He never came back," Ecker said.

The Pentagon's list of the dead names two marines, one Cpl. Edward E. Rehmeyer of Railroad, Pa. The other marine was a sergeant.

The navy court of inquiry refused to speculate on whether Israeli jets and patrol boats knew they were attacking a U.S. vessel when they rocketed, machine-gunned and torpedoed the Liberty.

A summary of the court's findings also made no mention of reports the ship was engaged in electronic spying on Israeli and Egyptian communications when she was hit June 8 about 15 miles north of the Sinai Peninsula.

The summary, prepared from a secret report, said witnesses before the navy court testified to "significant surveillance of the Liberty on three occasions" by the air force before the mid-afternoon attack.

The navy court affirmed the vessel's right to be where it was, in international waters and produced evidence the Israeli armed forces had ample opportunity to identify Liberty correctly," the summary said.

The Israeli government apologized and has offered to make amends.

Israelis Assert Flag Not Carried

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli naval sources said today the U.S. communications ship Liberty carried no flag when she was attacked by Israel's planes and torpedo boats June 8.

This contrasts with a U.S. Navy court of inquiry report that the Liberty was "properly marked so as to her identity and nationality and in calm, clear weather when she suffered an unprovoked attack." The attack killed 34 Americans.

The Israeli sources assert that when asked to identify herself, the Liberty blinked back an "A.A." signal meaning "identify yourself first."

Since the Egyptian destroyer Ibrahim al Awal attempted by similar means to avoid an Israeli attack off Haifa in the 1956 war, the Israelis said they mistook the ship for Egyptian.

The Israeli air force was called in and strafed the Liberty with rockets. Smoke from the hit ship obscured the scene as torpedo boats closed in and put the Liberty with a torpedo.

Only when torpedo boats made a second run at her did an Israeli skipper realize that she was not an Egyptian ship, one source said.

Water-lot Leases Protested

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) Seven, regional tourist councils along the Trent and Rideau canal systems from Lake Simcoe to Ottawa are joining together to protest the federal government's administration of its water-leasing scheme.

Tourist operators complain that the leasing, in effect a form of taxation on property built into federal waterways, is being administered in a haphazard and unfair manner.

They say some commercial operators are being taxed and some are not, and complain that private operators pay nothing to erect wharves and marinas.

A Trenton spokesman for the Highlands of Hastings Tourist Association says his organization has yet to issue any formal statement on the matter.

Chairman N. M. Sprague said this morning the association "is expected to discuss the water-lease policy at the next meeting."

"Highlands of Hastings" territory includes Trenton.

Today's Youth Skeptics

VICTORIA (CP) — Today's student is neither cynical nor disillusioned but skeptical of the world around him, says Ronald Jeffels, dean of student affairs at the University of Victoria.

"He knows from his father that war is the most abhorrent of all human afflictions," Dean Jeffels said in a lecture. Yet he knows what is happening in Vietnam.

He enjoys a high standard of living, yet knows that one-third of the world goes hungry. He hears brotherhood preached, yet sees the struggles of the Negro.

"All of these events combine in the student's mind to make him a reluctant authority—the establishment.

"He seeks new missions but is often imposed by others or by agencies over which he has no control."

He has a deep, penetrating faith.

"Basically, he believes in the community and the communion of man."

Astrological Forecasts

By SYDNE TOMARE

For June 26

ARIES (Mar. 1 — Apr. 19): Stress on personal responsibility. Accent self-reliance. People you trust you lay their cards on the line. Live up to potential. Realize many want to follow your example.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): What appears on the surface may not be true. Don't stop trying, looking for what you need. Excellent for attending theatre, being with exciting people. Come out of shell.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Obtain hint from Taurus message. Be realistic in connection with friends, wishes. Money deal can be consulted if you are persistent. Sell your ideas. Build on solid base.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Nail down agreements. Adhere to counsel of wise individual. Be sure of legal aspects. Don't flout rules, regulations. Know what you're doing — and why. Be specific.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Promises others make concerning money require serious consideration. Fresh outlook proves beneficial. Work toward long-range goal. Be ready for step up the ladder.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Follow through on hunch. Give full play to intuitive intellect. Applies especially where investments are concerned. Exchange ideas. Share knowledge with mate or partner.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Stress on working with material at hand. Stick with experience. Don't rock the boat. You are impatient. But a little self-discipline works wonders. Much gain shown. Be happy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Face facts of life connected with children, love, romance, adventure of change. Some freedoms may be restricted. Strive for maturity rather than rebelliousness.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Environment at home may appear somber. You can take steps to lighten load of loved one. Do so . Applies especially to one who has worked for you in past.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Hold back on ignorance which prove costly, accomplish nothing. You tend to see person, situation in nonrealistic light. Study implications contained in special communication.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Stress possession, what you own and earn. Doing the right thing today may not be easy. But if you live up to obligations there is ultimate reward. Avoid extravagance.

If today is your birthday . . . you love to entertain at home. You have ability to bring diverse groups together. Often you successfully play role of cupid. Current cycle favors change, travel, romance.

General Tendencies: Cycle high for Aries, Taurus, Gemini. Special word to Aquarius: Diarrhetic may have some value to transmit.

CATCHES HIS MAN

HALIFAX (CP) — Lieutenant-Donald LeBlanc, chairman of the Halifax centennial committee, has been touring community leaders out of bed early to get their support for centennial programs tomorrow over breakfast. If you make a date with a man for 7 a.m., says Ald. LeBlanc, he can't say he's busy.

Plain Pete Is Sure All Voters Know Name

YELLOWKNIFE, N. W. T. (CP)—The longest ballot bore no signature and the simple heading: "Pete presents platform."

"If I am re-elected," it said, "I will give my full time and energy to this office as I have done in the past."

Of the 17 candidates in the July 4 Northwest Territorial Council election, none matched Peter Baker in his professed confidence that his voters needed no prodding to remember him on election day.

In the six-constituency being contested—a seventh was decided by acclamation when nominations closed June 5—Mr. Baker's bold effort to establish one-upmanship at the expense of his three opponents in Mackenzie North, was one of the few colorful campaign gestures.

A retired trader, Mr. Baker, 79, faces lawyer David Searle, mill operator Charles Sanders and airline pilot Gordon Hornby, who countered Mr. Baker's gambit by forming a "youth for Hornby" group.

Simonie, only Eskimo member of the last council, had a controversy on his hands in the Eastern Arctic constituency, where he is opposed by Bryan Pearson.

Mr. Pearson, a businessman who worked with Simonie in a Frobisher Bay co-op for several years, said there had been a sharp increase in drunkenness as a result of Simonie's successful effort to abolish a Tuesday waiting period before customers could pick up their orders at territorial liquor stores.

Mr. Pearson also complained that a 18-per-cent increase in liquor prices threatened to lure Eskimos into wine addicts.

Little activity was reported in the other two Arctic ridings, where candidates who won their first term by acclamation are involved in two-way fights.

Duncan Pryde, a Saint in Esther trader, faces a challenge by James Kavana, manager of the Eskimo co-op at Cambridge Bay, for the Western Arctic seat. In the Central Arctic, outspoken anthropologist Bob Williamson, the three-member, faces Ray Mercer, assistant manager of a Hudson's Bay Co. store. Both are from Rankin Inlet.

A vigorous four-way contest shaped up in Mackenzie South, where Bob Porritt of Hay River seeks a fourth term.

Bob Gauchie, the bush pilot who was removed last April after 58 days in his downed plane in the arctic; former mayor Don Stewart of Hay River and Anne Enge, a Fort Smith housewife, are Mr. Porritt's opponents.

Mr. Gauchie, who recently returned to the territory after having five toes amputated following his ordeal, campaigned with a cane and an 11-point platform including a northern labor code, subsidized public recreation and legal aid facilities and measures to attract industry to the north.

Three newcomers were contesting the seat in Mackenzie River, where 77-year-old John Goodall announced his retirement after serving 13 years on the council. The three were Bill Berg, a big-game outfitter from Fort Simpson; Dick Turner, an outfitter from Nahanni Butte, and Fort Simpson businessman John Kidd.

Lyle Trimble of Atlavik was given acclamation by acclamation in the Mackenzie Delta constituency.

Bells and Bonfires Ready to Greet Canada's Second Century

It all starts at midnight.

Bells and bonfires will herald Canada's 100th birthday around the Quinte district tonight.

And — depending on public response — the bayshore area could present a spectacular salute to Canada's Centennial Conflagration.

There still are hopes that residents on both shores of the bay will link the area from Belleville and Trenton with a string of bonfires.

The plan was originally launched by Trenton's Mayor James MacDonald who hoped all municipalities involved would help organize the birthday bonfire bonanza.

Ameliasburg township did not actively participate in the plan.

A township official said today there were many small residents along the bayshore area and this "would take a lot of organization."

However, Mayor MacDonald says he is still hopeful his inspiration will stimulate enough property owners to participate of their own accord.

In Belleville, a monster blaze is planned by the city on the reclaimed land area east of Zwick's Island, says Centennial events co-ordinator Les Shore.

A second bonfire is planned by harbor master Don Barrett on new parkland, immediately east of the harbor oil tank farm.

City churches have been canvassed to peal their bells as the birthday begins. Local industries also are expected to add to the salute with factory sirens and whistles, says Mr. Shore.

And, of course, there'll be a multitude to private parties to toast the nation's past, present and future.

But the servicemen at Canadian Forces Base Trenton have gone one better — in the public interest.

Biggest public event of the night likely will be a free open-air dance at the base's south-side parade square, starting at 9.30 p.m.

Among its highlights will be a board-bulging contest with about 70 entrants.

For the nation, the celebrations will begin in Ottawa tonight where Queen Elizabeth will see a folk arts pageant on Parliament Hill.

They continue Saturday morning with the Queen attending an inter-denominational religious service followed by addresses of loyalty from the Speakers of each of the houses of Parliament.

Expo 67, where attendance figures are expected to soar, has scheduled official ceremonies honoring Canada. Pierre Dupuy, Expo's commissioner-general, and Jacques Chevrier, who has been in charge of welcoming foreign chiefs of state to Canada, will be among speakers at the ceremony.

Quebec City will celebrate its traditional Samuel de Champlain Day with a procession around the explorer's statue on Dufferin Terrace to hear speeches.

Memorial services will be held at Causapscal, near Kingston, Ont., for Sir John A. Macdonald, Canada's first prime minister, and Sir Alexander Campbell, another of the fathers of Confederation.

Similar services will be held at the graves of 35 other fathers in six other provinces.

Toronto - begins its celebrations with a 21-gun salute at midnight tonight. The Ontario government will officially mark the centennial with two military pageants Saturday, a daylight fireworks display and the traditional 100-gun salute.

Buffalo Riots Resume

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP)—Twelve persons were wounded with shotgun pellets, 18 others injured and more than 100 arrested as roaming Negro youths rioted in this city's shabby east side for a third successive night.

Four hundred helmeted police, armed with shotguns and tear gas, moved in quickly to disperse crowds. Again and again, clusters collected and were broken up. Each time a police van carted defiant Negroes to headquarters for booking on mostly minor charges.

Lack of jobs, educational and recreational facilities have been cited as reasons for the unrest.

Reporters described Thursday night's disorders as sporadic, despite the violence, and more subdued then Wednesday when large gangs rampaged through the predominantly Negro streets, looting, expanding and burning.

The subtle difference was in the attitude of the police, reporters said.

"They were on the offensive," a veteran reporter said. The neighborhood cop on the agnes Falls also was affected for a second successive night. At least four persons were arrested and a policeman was struck by a thrown rock.

Police moved quickly into the troubled area, however, and quelled the disturbance early today.

Bands of Negroes in their late teens and early 20s caused the disorder in the city Thursday night. On Tuesday and Wednesday nights, many of those who took to the streets were children not yet 13.

Police estimated that about 1,000 Negroes—some carrying rocks and others armed with knives — roamed the streets of the tale-square area with the heaviest concentration in the Jefferson - Ferry - Madison avenues section.

In three nights of rioting, the fire department estimated that about 150 fires had been set deliberately, many of them with home-made gasoline bombs. At least 30 fires, some of them minor, were touched off Thursday night.

Firemen said two gasoline bombs had been used to destroy a two - storey frame house occupied by Mrs. Jean McClure and her five children.

Police reported that looting did not pose a serious problem Thursday night, as it had Wednesday, when scores of business places were ransacked.

Isn't This Something?

One of 50 Quinte area crippled children treated to a Yukon flight at CFB Trenton yesterday, 5-year-old Tim McKinney of Belleville was given an additional surprise — a ride on the knee of co-pilot F/L John Sied. (story inside)

Tariff Walls Fall For World Trade

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada and its trading partners sign agreements today that will smash many barriers to world commerce and challenge industrialists to think big.

For Canada alone, tariff changes wrought by the Kennedy Round negotiations affect exports worth $3,000,000,000 last year and imports worth $2,500,000,000.

The 47 members of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade have altered the terms of negotiations at Geneva.

Trade Minister Winters said the Kennedy Round "may in future be regarded as the turning point for Canada from a resource-based economy to a major industrial country."

Documents were tabled in the Commons Thursday night and Mr. Winter's departmental spending estimates were to be called today, providing an opportunity for debate on the Kennedy Round.

The trade minister said he will convene a meeting of Canada's export advisory council Tuesday.

Both Mr. Winters and Mr. Sharp put emphasis on the performance of Canada's manufacturers as the key to Canada's long-term benefits from the tariff changes.

With the chance to sell more abroad on better terms, they said manufacturers should be able to cut their per-unit costs on longer production runs.

To sweeten this all-important pot, Canada has made its most impressive tariff reductions in a catch-all item that includes imported machinery in general, with accessories, attachments.

The changes come down to is used in connection with machines.

Some $550,000,000 in 1966 trade is represented by this category, in which existing tariffs of 22½ per cent and 20 per cent will be cut to 15 per cent. The tariff is being lowered quickly—before July 1, 1968—to encourage rapid expansion.

Besides this consolidated rate, Canada will establish a board empowered to remit duties on machines not available in Canada. This will take the effective rate on imported machines to nine per cent or less.

Canada also offers big tariff cuts on imports of forest products, agricultural goods, fish, sophisticated chemicals and metals.

In general terms, reductions averaging 34 per cent are applied on more than half of Canada's $4,800,000,000 dutiable imports, taking the average bite of Canadian duty to 13 per cent.

The changes come down in stock consumer items on whisky, $43,500,000,000 in annual trade, fourth-fifths of the world total.

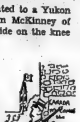
Detailed schedules were released Thursday night, containing columns of bell-ringing tariff reductions for Canadian exporters already thriving in world competition.

Any industries that have been satisfied to live behind comfortably-high tariff walls and sell only at home face the prospect of stiffer competition from foreign products.

For them, the alternatives appear to be to specialize in products they can sell successfully around the world, or to go under.

GATT members make the first of their tariff cuts next Jan. 1 and the rest by 1972.



The Canadian consumer should start watching for price reductions during 1968. Importers have a chance to pass along savings on the foreign goods they buy. Canadian manufacturers may be able to cut prices because the imported materials that go into their products and processes will be cheaper.

Finance Minister Sharp declared Thursday that "no country in the world has more to gain than Canada" from the results of more than three years of negotiations.

U.S. Admits Soviet Ship Possibly Hit

Montreal Strike Pinches

Layoffs Will Follow Vacations at Northern

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Northern Electric employees in Belleville will be laid off July 31, following the plant's annual vacation period.

The company's 850 employees last evening were given notice of the shutdown — caused by the failure of negotiations at Northern's big production complex.

Employees at the Belleville plant go on vacation in two weeks' time. They will remain out of work for an indefinite period.

Formal notice of the layoff, signed by general manager W. J. Gall, said a return to work will start "as soon as possible" after settlement of the Montreal deadlock.

The notice added:

"Recall will depend on employees' qualifications for the work available and will be based on the availability of parts and the volume of orders. Employees will be advised individually of the date of their recall."

The layoff was not unexpected. Two weeks ago Mr. Gall took the precaution of calling the workers together to warn them that continuation of the drawn-out Montreal strike could precipitate a shutdown in Belleville.

By timing his decision to the holiday period, the company has deferred closing its Belleville plant — which relies on Montreal production lines for components — as long as possible.

Neither would any settlement of the Montreal strike between now and July 31 defer the layoffs here, Mr. Gall said today.

"We're not anxious to keep the operation closed," he added.

But the production problem involved is a complex one, and it would take "some time" to get manufacturing flowing again, he said.

Yesterday's notice said essential services at the Belleville plant will be maintained by designated employees. Workers currently scheduled for duty during the vacation period "will report as planned."

56 Plucked From Sea As Thai Jet Crashes

HONG KONG (Reuters) — Twenty - six persons were feared killed today when a Thai International Caravelle jet airliner with 62 persons aboard crashed and sank in Hong Kong harbor.

Rescue officials said 36 persons survived the crash, plucked from the harbor by rescue boats. But by tonight six bodies had been recovered and 10 other persons were still missing.

An airline official said 40 Americans were among the passengers. It was not known if there were any Canadians aboard.

The plane was on a flight from Tokyo to Hong Kong via Osaka and Taipeh and had on board 66 adults, six children, a baby, and nine crew members.

A fire department assistant chief at the scene said of the 23 people by now landed on the airport runway, rescue helicopters only two were dead.

Several persons according to quite good condition and, several were walking.

Queen Sets Out on Brisk Schedule of Centennial Activities

OTTAWA (CP) — The Queen and Prince Philip set out today on a brisk schedule of centennial - visit activities, starting with a tribute to Canada's war dead.

Security officials were braced for massive crowds after the turmoil late Thursday afternoon that greeted the royal visitors following their 7½-hour jet flight from London. A senior RCMP officer estimated there were at least 60,000 persons lining the winding 10-mile route from Uplands airport to Government House.

The Queen was greeted by Governor - General Michener, Prime Minister Pearson and their wives. Prince Philip followed her with a jaunty wave to 1,600 persons seated in a cavernous hangar for the welcoming ceremony.

Waves of cheers and applause followed them down 140 feet of red carpet laid on the concrete floor of the hangar.

The Queen wore a brilliant yellow coat over a silk print dress in pink and citrus yellow. Her hat was of pink and yellow petals.

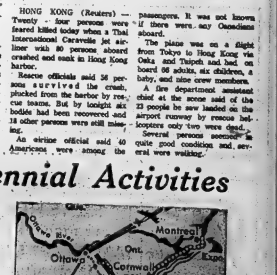
Prince Philip wore a dark brown lounge suit and carried a brown hat.

The half-hour drive from the airport was almost blocked by two accidents. The first was near the airport exit road when a press bus piled into the back of an army truck loaded with soldiers from the Bytown Gunners, an Ottawa militia unit. Six were taken to hospital but released after treatment for bruises.

A tail - end crash occurred farther along the route when two persons were collided with the almost unprecedented traffic jams that developed with the rush of sightseers, including thousands of out-of-town tourists.

Sgt. L. E. Hembruff of Ottawa, the Queen's driver, said he had no difficulty getting around the accidents and doubted if the Queen realized what had happened.

Today the Queen and Prince Philip were to make their first public appearance at the National War Memorial where she will place a wreath.



From the war memorial they go to a one-hour folk art pageant on Parliament Hill followed by a governor-general House reception for the diplomatic corps and a glittering state dinner.

Saturday, the exact 100th anniversary of Confederation, is a jam-packed day in the capital for the royal guests. The outlook is for fine, dry weather and even more visitors.

It opens with an ecumenical service on the lawns of Parliament Hill before a joint open-air session of the Senate and Commons. The Queen will address the parliamentarians in a ceremonial speech to the nation.

Two huge Queen's parties are slated Saturday afternoon, one on Parliament Hill for those under 18 and another for teenagers in Lansdowne Park, the newly - expanded football field two miles south of the Hill.

There is another formal reception in the late afternoon, this time for senators and MPs, followed by a dinner at Mr. Pearson's residence. The evening is taken up with a performance of the sun et lumiere on Parliament Hill and a fireworks display.

Corby Park Becomes Garden in the Rain

Belleville's latest civic surprise item briefly became just a garden in the rain last night.

But what a garden!

Fickle weather may have drenched the ceremonial rededication of Corby Park, cutting attendance to a sodden handful, huddling under umbrellas.

Still their presence in the downpour was public acknowledgment of the project's transplanting of just another piece of greenbelt into a glowing, pocket-size beauty spot.

Everything went according to plan to mark the occasion — except the weather.

But the official ceremonies were pressed on regardless, with the dignitaries, special guests and musicians crowding under a canvas marquee as the rain belted down.

Even the park's marking fountain played on, although its glitter was lost in the downpour.

It was the kind of enthusiastic community spirit that the park's namesake donor would have admired.

The one-acre area between Ann and William Streets was originally given the city in the name of Senator Harry Corby, whose style in community philanthropy still stands unmatched today.

Examples of his public endeavors included the city's public library, halls and a pavilion at Victoria Park; a charitable fund for the underprivileged; a pleasure yacht Massassaga Point and promotion of the original bridge across the Bay of Quinte at Bellleville.

Corby Park was donated the city by his widow in 1961.

A reminder of the senators community record now stands for all time on a plaque unveiled at last night's rain soaked ceremonies.

The event also provided a link with the original occasion when the area first was given the city.

Assisting Mayor Jack Ellis in the unveiling was Miss Helen Soliman, who, as daughter of the then mayor, presented Mrs. Corby with a bouquet — of roses.

Also in the marquee last night was Miss Ida Thompson, niece of Senator Corby.

Bringing tradition up to the moment was Rosa Herrington, president of St. Corby Distillery, and members of his board of directors.

They contributed in large measure to the redevelopment of the street — as Mayor Ellis emphasized:

"Words cannot describe the beauty of the park or the pleasure that will be derived from it," he said. "This is almost entirely because of a generous donation once again from the H. Corby Distillery."

"The no-going contribution of these men is something we must never overlook, and it gives me a great deal of pleasure to publicly acknowledge it at this time."

Almost everything in the new park is rosy. There are 2,700 roses of 60 varieties, and each year will see new introductions.

The fountain, lit by amber floods, is controlled by time clocks.

Water, Water...

... everywhere you looked there was water, as Corby Park was rededicated last night. Park fountain splashed out its own watery supplement to the scene as downpour drenched the hardy few umbrella-huddlers.

IN MEMORIAM

ADAMS — In loving memory of a dear grandpa, Ebenezer Adams who passed away so suddenly June 30, 1966.

Always tender, fond and true,
Always loved and dearly missed,
By those that think of you.
— Lila, Jean, Ebenezer, John Jr., Richard.

ADAMS — In fond and loving memory of a dear father Ebenezer Adams who passed away so suddenly June 30, 1966.

Today recalls the memory
Of a loved one dear to me,
And those who knew of him so well
Can tell
How true, how kind he was,
How ever ready to help us.
The flowers we lay on his grave,
Are tokens of our love,
But the love for him who lies beneath
Will never fade away,
— Wife Ethel, daughter Jean and son-in-law John Hagarma.

ADAMS — In loving memory of our dear husband and father, William Harvey Clifford who passed away June 30, 1961.

God saw him getting weary,
He his old work He thought best,
He came and stood beside you,
And whispered come with me.
You wished no one a last fare-well,
Not even
A goodbye,
You had gone before we knew it,
God took you home quickly,
—Always remembered by your wife Lila.

CHISHOLM — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, William Harvey Clifford who passed away June 30, 1961.

A leaf in the book of memory,
Is a thought of you today
Sadly missed by wife and family.

HOLLINGER — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother Inez M. Hollinger who passed away June 30, 1958.

Dear Lord, you took her,
In your own way to do,
To hold your lonely heart,
And comfort you.
Memories are golden treasures,
Through
The hands we had with you,
Each time we see your picture,
We love you more.
Sadly missed by husband Jim,
We will meet again some day,
— Sadly missed by husband Jim Hollinger, and family.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of a dear father Ernest Hollinger (Judge) who passed away June 30th, 1958.

In our hearts your memory lingers,
As it dawns another year,
Days of sadness and thinking,
Of the days you are over here,
— Lovingly remembered and sadly missed by Marion, Ivan and Wayne, Ottawa.

CARDS OF THANKS

The family of the late Albert Gaffer wish to thank all the wonderful friends and relatives for their many kindnesses shown to us in our recent sad bereavement. The beautiful floral tributes and the gifts of food were very much appreciated. Special thanks to Rev. Dr. Rinker, Mrs. Rinker and the members of our church and to the men of the Belleville Fire Dept. for all of the help they have done for us.
— Mrs. Albert Gaffer and family.

We wish to thank our family and his brothers and sisters.

The family of the late Lillian Mae Thompson wish to express their appreciation to their relatives, friends and neighbours for the kindness and sympathy extended in the sad loss of a beloved wife and mother, grandmother and great grandmother. Special thanks to Rev. Dr. Rinker, Mrs. Rinker, members of the choir, organist and prayers which have brought such much comfort, and very much grateful to the supervisors and nurses of the 3rd floor for the wonderful care they gave her during her illness. Also to the pallbearers and family for their kindness and assistance at the funeral home. Thank you.
— Arthur A. Ketchabaw.

The family of the late William James Bowerman would like to express their deep appreciation to all his friends and neighbours, neighbourhood, and organizations for their kindness and sympathy shown during his illness and passing. Special thanks to Dr. Blakelee, nurses and orderlies of the 3rd floor, Belleville General Hospital, for all the kindness and care from Mr. and Mrs. Harold Yorke, Ontario Street, and the Tuesdawns of Hastings Manor, Whitby, for their many kindnesses. Our grateful appreciation to the Thompson Funeral Home, Carman Wright for his prayer service, and Mr. Wesley Chumbley for the beautiful solo. Your kindness will never be forgotten.
— The Bowerman family.

Sandra and LeRoy Turner would like to thank all their friends on the Second Line for the community shower held in honour of their recent marriage and special thanks to all those who helped in the nice manner.

Mail Service Curtailed

Mail services in Belleville will be curtailed over the three-day Centennial Confederation holiday.

Postal authorities today issued this roster for the long weekend:

There will be no city letter carrier service or rural deliveries Saturday or Monday.

The post office will close Saturday with no wicket service available.

Monday's wickets will be open for two periods — 8.10 a.m. and 4-6 a.m.

Green Thumb Merchants

Front Street merchants and businessmen have volunteered to become part time horticulturists for the summer months.

A couple of weeks ago the city parks board spotted a couple of dozen small planters along the sidewalk in the downtown area.

But to keep the flowers blooming some sort of regular tending had to be worked out.

And this is where the downtown merchants have come into the picture.

Nineteen merchants or places of business have agreed to water from one to three planters to keep the plants blooming.

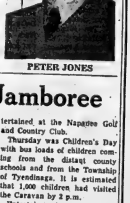
Two Air Cadets Honored



Two 17-year-old members of the 808 Royal Canadian Air Cadets Squadron (Belleville) will be leaving July 3rd; Flt. Sgt. Don Matthews has been accepted for flying training at Oshawa Flying Club and Peter Jones has been appointed a member of the Corps D'Elite, the Honor Guard for Expo.

The Corps D'Elite consists of 67 cadets chosen from across Canada. They were picked from the Senior Leaders Course held at Camp Borden last year. The boys will be staying at Ste Claire dien Forces Base at St. Jeome and will be returning on September 2nd.

Don Matthews, by passing a qualifying examination with high marks was awarded a six-week flying scholarship in Oshawa. Over the past sixteen years one out of every six private pilots trained in Canada has been an Air Cadet and it looks as if Flt. Sgt. Matthews will help keep that ratio stable.

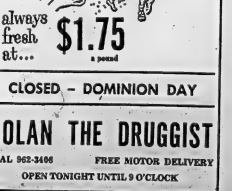
Parade Leads to Jamboree

NAPANEE — Napanee saw two parades Thursday, one at 11.00 a.m. to the site of the Centennial Caravan and the second at 7.30 p.m. to the community arena, where the Lions Jamboree is opening for three days.

The Centennial Caravan is set up on the former Gibbard Ball Park, now part of the property of the NDSS. It was officially opened when Mrs. Gordon Langton pressed the button. All local dignitaries who were on the platform, were afterwards entertained at the Napanee Golf and Country Club.

Thursday was Children's Day with bus loads of children coming from the distant county schools and from the Township of Tyendinaga. It is estimated that 1,000 children had visited the Caravan by 2 p.m.

Entertainment was scheduled for the evening. Miss Patricia Kay and many others volunteered to keep the crowd amused while they are waiting their turn.



The Centennial Caravan will remain open until 11.00 p.m., and will reopen at 11.00 a.m. Friday, closing again at 11.00 p.m.

Visit to Air Base

Youngsters "Flip" Over Air Trip

By MAURICE SWITZER
(Staff Reporter)

TRENTON — Gregory didn't know how old he was. In fact, he wasn't really sure about F ; last name. Had ne ever flown before?

"No, I'm too little."

Gregory was one of 59 Quinte area crippled children treated to a genuine "flip-plane ride" yesterday afternoon by CFB Trenton's 437 Transport Squadron as part of a day-long tour at the massive air installation.

And as 437 commanding officer Wing Commander R. G. Hnsch put it: "The visit of yes children here today will be remembered by us all as the highlight of this week's Centennial activities."

The children had gathered yesterday morning at Belleville's Shrine Club and were transported to CFB Trenton by base buses accompanied by St. John and air force nurses. From then on, it was as if they were in a new world.

To start with, base commander Group Captain D. R. Adamson put the children at ease by comparing himself to "a principal of a school with 4,000 pupils."

After their initial welcome, the children were shown movies.

The only event scheduled for the day that had to be cancelled because of weather was a planned outdoor barbecue, which had to be moved indoors. But this didn't take the edge off any appetites.

Two-year-old Chris McCasson of Belleville was unofficially judged as the gourmet of the visitors. His priteewinning count? — four hamburgers, one hot dog, seven helpings of ice cream, along with milk and juice, Squadron

437 members later presented Chris with a new leather wallet to commemorate the

And how many kids ever get to load a 52-piece band? Sgt. Howard Kel- of CFB Trenton's Brass and Reed band gave seve.... of the populair Leonard Bernstein ah opportunity to do just that.

All eyes turned upward after dinner when an air show was performed over Base's Island — a command performance for the special guests.

It was different to see who were the most pleased — the children watching the large Yahoos zooming overhead, or the 437 Squadron hosts observing their young charges.

But the best was saved until last.

What was to be a static tour of a Yukon's interior turned out to be an actual flight, originally planned for over Niagara Falls, but rerouted to the Kingston area because of weather conditions.

Once airborne, the children could hardly wait to unfasten seat-belts and clamor around portholes to see what they could recognize from above.

Janice De Shane, 6, Belleville, didn't really think it would do any good to write to her mother. "She didn't know I was coming."

On ground again, the children were given souvenir goodies, including CFB Trenton pendants to help them remember a day they will likely never forget.

Look What I See!

As soon as they were airborne in a special Yukon flight, 50 area crippled children could scarcely wait to clamber around portholes to see what lay below. The flight was one event of yesterday's day-long program planned for the children by 437 Transport Squadron, CFB Trenton.

Boaters Affected

Trent System Overflowing

TRENTON — Near-torrent conditions on the Trent Canal system could affect the number of boats from that route expected to meet the "Expo Flotilla" today at Trenton.

About 150 cabin cruisers from the Toronto area were to be officially welcomed at the east end of the Murrey Canal this afternoon, and to be joined by a number of boats exiting at the Trent River mouth from the Trent-Severn system.

An official of the Trent authority, Operations Superintendent L. G. Begg, said from Peterborough this morning that near-flood conditions in the area were discouraging owners of smaller cruisers from continuing their journey to Trenton.

His said 20 boaters had passed through Peterborough Tuesday who indicated they were Expo - bound, but it was not known whether they had intended to meet the flotilla at Trenton.

Only about four boats were docked at the mouth of the Trent this morning. The rendezvous with the Toronto area boaters was to take place around 3 p.m. today.

Mr. Begg said this month's high precipitation has caused extraordinary flows on the Trent and Otonbee rivers, and throughout the Kawartha Lakes in general.

The average flow this time of year is 1,000 cubic feet of water per second. At the present time, the flow stands about 6500 c.f.s., he said.

Subsequent buoys in the wake of rising waters are adding to navigation hazards.

Trent-Severn superintendent William Bell announced today the northern portion of the waterway, between Lake Couchiching and Georgian Bay, closed to traffic since last week-end, will remain shut until at least Thursday. It is not known if any boaters affected by the closing had intended to rendezvous at Trenton today.

Mr. Begg said Trent lockmasters were issuing warnings to the boating public of the risks posed by the turbulent waters.

Sherman Tank To Be Placed In New Park

That former Golden Hawks Sabre jet and vintage CN steam locomotive at Zwick's Island Centennial Park are going to have company as museum pieces.

This week Lieut.-Col. Ken Willcocks, Hasty Pres commanding officer, said that a Canadian Army Sherman tank of the type used in World War II would also be placed at he island park.

But the tank will not be in place for the official park opening on July 5—in fact the actual location of the tank has yet to be decided on by the parks board.

Divorce Laws

The recommendations of the parliamentary committee on divorce are in line with the thinking of many Canadians that the time has long since come for a broadening of the law to include other grounds for divorce besides adultery.

If adopted by Parliament Canada's divorce rate it likely to rise. But this is seen as the lesser of two evils — the other being the fact that an estimated 50,000 couples are living together as man and wife because one or both cannot get a divorce.

"It is better for society," the report notes, "that the divorce rate be higher, if the number of 'common law' or bigamous unions be thereby reduced."

The recommendations are aimed not so much as making divorce easier (although that will be a natural sequel) as at recognizing the fact that human beings are not perfect, that for compassionate reasons alone there are instances when it is undesirable that two people should go on living together, and that society at large would be better served by their going their separate ways or their being afforded the opportunity to marry again.

Some feel the committee has not gone far enough. For example the "marriage breakdown" concept, the sole cause of action in divorce, as urged by the Anglican and United churches and the Canadian Mental Health Association among other organizations, was deemed "neither practical nor desirable, at least not at present. . ."

At the same time the committee feels the idea is not without merit and goes along with it to the extent of associating marriage breakdown with mental incapacity.

A disturbing element is the committee's rejection of suggestions advanced by the churches and other bodies that special courts or marriage counsellors be established to assist broken marriages. But this likely stems from the fact that counselling is already available to anyone who wishes to take advantage of it. Such counselling is best obtained at the family level, rather than having to take one's personal problems and griefs before a public arbitrator.

While divorce in Canada may soon be an easier proposition, the proposed liberalization of the law should not be regarded as a disavowal of the concept of marriage at its best. Marriage is a serious business which should not be entered into lightly, or with the idea that when things get too hard it will be easy to deny the vows which have been taken.

Water and Pollution

To what extent is the public to blame for pollution? It would be safe to say, a great deal.

Consider the matter of litter alone. People are very prone to toss it around, decorating the landscape in a manner they would not tolerate in their own homes.

So it is with water. Any area of water is fair game for waste of every description, whether it be contributed by cosmopolitan vessels into the Seaway or by home careless individual into the Moira River. Stand on the footbridge and take a look at the river as it flows into the bay and at the junk that lies on the bottom. It is not a pleasant sight.

Pollution is a serious problem, whether it affects water or air or comes in the form of contamination of food by insecticides. Where water is concerned, costly purification plants are needed to keep the supply fit for human consumption. These are financial charges on the public and the question arises, what a saving could be effected, by citizens and by industry, if everyone would play a personal part in avoiding any action that would tend to aggravate the problem. In other words don't be a litterbug and don't toss waste of any kind into water.

Public co-operation will be necessary, for example, in the establishment of any future water supply for the increasing needs of the Quinte area. At the moment an Ontario Water Resources Commission report is under the Belleville-Trenton area, using Lake Ontario as a source, is under consideration.

Belleville currently is getting water from the bay but with the rapid industrial growth make it imperative that alternative sources be sought. Wherever supplies are obtained for the expanding Quinte region the spectre of pollution remains.

The Lake Ontario Regional Development Council which views it as "a real threat against one of our most cherished natural resources," is currently conducting a "Clean Water Campaign" with special emphasis on the summer months when thousands of tourists are on the move. The public is being urged to play its part by keeping lakes, streams and rivers clean and free of pollutants.

The principle is the same as that of an anti-litter campaign. People must be taught to respect the natural resources of the country, by keeping them in their natural state and free of contamination.

"Mr. Canada"

Centennial Commissioner's Tireless Enthusiasm

OTTAWA (CP) — Centennial Commissioner John Fisher this week had the satisfied mien of a man who has brought a big job under control.

With the 100th anniversary of Confederation arriving Saturday, most Canadians will be engaged in the biggest national celebration the country has ever had.

"Only last fall . . . all over the country I got the same story —Canadians won't respond. We kept saying they would."

And they have.

"The thing that fascinates me is to see people enjoy discovering Canada," the chief of the federal centennial commission said.

"I don't know where they've been all this time," he said in an interview. "I've been hammering away at it for 20 years."

A law graduate of Dalhousie University, Halifax, he has been a reporter, broadcaster, writer and lecturer. He was executive director of the Canadian Travel Association before serving a stint as press secretary to former prime minister John Diefenbaker and then tackling the centennial job in 1953.

Long before it became fashionable, the 54-year-old Fisher was seeing Canada. In fact, he became known in the 1950s as Mr. Canada for his CBC radio series John Fisher Reports.

All this, and an ancestry that includes Charles Fisher, one of the 23 Fathers of Confederation, made him a logical choice in 1953 as the centennial promoter.

A square - cut unpretentious native of Frosty Hollow, N.B., he has become something of a national institution.

Premier Daniel Johnson of Quebec flowingly describes him as "Mr. Canada who symbolizes in the premier a feeling for all Canada."

In St. Paul, Alta., a $40,000 mansion has been named John Fisher House and reserved for his visits and those of other VIPs.

Mr. Fisher is an honorary chief of the Sioux and four other Indian bands, holds the key to innumerable towns, and has a genuine welcome throughout the country.

Commission employees as a gag once bought an eight-foot bus constructor for their boss who turned it over to the Granby, Que., zoo.

He proved his dedication by posing for a publicity photo with the spitting, writhing snake draped about his neck.

Anything but deskbound, he has also shot rapids in voyageur canoes and taken part in other back-gasping centennial ventures.

Nevertheless, after-hours critics are said find the commissioner's blissful answering the constitution.

With the work of the centennial commission gradually ending, he will be looking for another job by the end of the year.

But at the moment his eyes are firmly fixed on his present job.

He'll spend much of Dominion Day on Parliament Hill with Queen Elizabeth.

Next week he will meet a group of American school children who wrote winning essays on Canada and built a century-old feather golf ball to inaugurate a centennial golf museum in the Golfland Museum.

Then it's off to the Calgary Stampede and a flight in a helicopter to start a cuboid race over the Prairie.

He'll hope the holds of honoring July 1 will be free of difficulties, just as many of the things we've learned to do together will be behind Canadians.

"But we're feeling ourselves — we think the Centennial has solved problems.

"It's shown politicians that people do have a feeling for Canada."

West Blamed for Near East Crisis

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The British historian, Arnold Toynbee, has given his view of the Arab-Israel trouble (Toronto Telegram, June 17).

Both Arabs and Jews, says Toynbee, have historical claim to Palestine, but by 1942 when it was partitioned, Arabs had been living there for more than 1300 years. Practically, the Jewish claim had lapsed.

Throughout the centuries, however, the Jews had been persecuted by the "christians" among whom they had to live. This persecution culminated in the crime of genocide by Hitler's Germany. From the beginning of this persecution, says Toynbee, Britain, the USA (and surely Canada) could and should have given Jewish refugees asylum. But did not.

The Jews have an urgent need for a homeland and an irrefutable claim against the Western nations for reparations and territory. But Toynbee believes that they should have been given German territory for example, the Rhineland. Instead, when Britain threw in the mandate she had held since War II, a UN Commission advised the partition of Palestine. About three quarters of a million Arabs fled from the area allotted to the Jews. Today the Arabs insist that Israel permit them people (now increased in numbers) to return to their former homes, and pay full compensation to those who do not wish to return. Israel believes that to admit such a mass of refugees, indoctrinated as they are with hate against her, would be to admit a fifth column.

Joseph A. Ruskay, a N. Y. lawyer writing in The Minority of One, May 47, proposes much the same solution as Toynbee—that probably a majority of the refugees who have huddled for nearly 20 years in the Gaza Strip, existing on a seven cent a day UN dole, will have to be re-settled elsewhere than in Palestine. Western nations should co-operate and several Arab states could help materially if they would give up using the camps as propaganda against Israel. "Syria, for instance, has vast areas of unoccupied fertile land which needs farm labour to be made productive. Iraq, with millions of acres of cultivable land susceptible to irrigation from the Tigris and Euphrates, could support almost twice its present population. In Saudi Arabia the productive inland area could easily be doubled by modern techniques."

The original and basic wrong against both Jews and Arabs was committed by the West. The Israelis necessarily accepted the poor area given them and have worked heroically to make it viable. Israel cannot now be considered non-existent, and she has the same moral right of access to waterways that any business being has to a rly. The Western nations should willingly provide the Arab refugees with the best possible living-room and educational opportunities. Above all, they should work sincerely to establish goodwill and normal trade relations between the races that they have selfishly helped to antagonize.

Co-ordinating Education

OTTAWA Journal

The education ministers of the provinces have agreed to establish a national body supported by provinces to coordinate educational policies in various parts of Canada.

This new organization — called, accurately, the Canadian Council of Ministers of Education — is not a national ministry of education. As some reports have said. Education remains the responsibility of each province. The education ministers have become aware of the gaps in the exchange of knowledge about Canadian education; they know that while jurisdictions are desirable — may be pointedly divisible, education itself is not.

The new council is a healthy off-shoot from a committee of ministers which had been meeting regularly as part of the Canadian Education Association. The CEA is too loosely-knit and diverse a body to take on the specific functions of the council of ministers, though coming closer than any other organization to serving the purpose.

The transmission of information about curriculum developments, teacher training and qualifications, educational TV, data processing in education, has been a haphazard process. For some education in the main stream and attending meetings of many organizations across the country) it has been impossible to keep generally informed on key developments. But there has been too much of a time-lag in spreading information; too much left to individual enterprise and pure chance.

The council should not aim to become a super department of education which in useful purpose by being essentially a clearing-house for information and a liaison body with the federal authorities in Ottawa whose activities are having an increasing impact on education.

Ottawa would be the ideal location for the council's offices, and the annual meeting the Canadian Medical Association has finally come around to seeing. The Canadian Education Association itself which will be working closely with the ministers' council should consider moving to Ottawa from Toronto and perhaps share part of the mezzanine floor and staff.

Nurses and Matrimony

Peterborough Examiner

There are no reliable statistics to support this contention, but it has long been our belief that trained nurses make very good wives and mothers. This reflection is prompted by the recent graduations at the St. Joseph and Civic Hospitals in Peterborough. Dr. D. G. W. Cameron, former deputy minister of health, pointed out the reasons why in his address to the graduating nurses at the Civic Hospital last week.

Nurses, he observed, are people who have had to deal with the major crises of life from birth to death before their time, and have had to learn to control their emotions. Canadian nurses," he said in an address recommended to distinguish themselves in ability and common sense."

The fact that nurses are so marriageable—some, in fact do not wait for graduation—is of great value to the nursing schools and hospitals. A nurse's training is expensive—from start to finish it will exceed $3,000 if there is a steady drain of newly-graduated nurses down the drain, the annual cost of training permanent nursing unit (as hospital administrators are apt to put it) rises accordingly.

There is no solution to this problem that we know of. A remedy, however, is to encourage nurses to return to their profession when they have tired of Civic Hospital and matrimony. This occurs after about 18 years of leaving the altar, in most cases, according to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

4-H Clubs

Montreal Gazette

The 4-H Club movement has trained thousands of young Canadians how better to use the soil and other resources of the country. It has trained many generations of farmers and conservationists.

There is discontent among the farming population, particularly in Western Canada, as is evident to anyone who has witnessed the demonstrations and meetings in the last few months.

But contentment is not only a matter of better prices and more permanent shelter and more efficient farms and farmers.

The 4-H movement has played a key role in spreading better farming techniques and educating young men and women to be better farmers and conservationists. It has also played a vital role in educating the rest of the population about the importance of farming and conservation.

Arabs And Israelis Related

Vancouver Province

The long-standing Arab-Israeli dispute leads many to overlook an historical fact: Arab and Jew, far from being hereditary enemies, are close racial relatives.

Both are Semitic and in countries past lived comfortably together. Some observers believe that the two races actually complement one another. The Jewish vigor, love of organization and ability to concentrate on fixed objectives could help to speed up the Arab's rather relaxed attitude to progress in the world around them.

Neither is religion a cause of basic friction. Moslems are one of the few peoples without a history of discrimination against Jews.

Until modern times, while Christians persecuted the Jews, Moslems and Jews have lived in peace and even held high offices.

All that was changed when the United Nations General Assembly on November 29, 1947, approved the partition of Palestine and created the new Jewish state. It is interesting to recall that the United States and the Soviet Union joined in voting for the partition. So did France. The entire Arab bloc in the UN voted against it.

Since then the Arabs have seethed with resentment.

UK Security Involved

Censorship Not Unknown in Western Countries

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Censorship still stifles free dom of expression and information in many parts of the world.

In Britain a civil servant is muzzled by the government for being too free and easy with the press. In the Soviet Union, two writers languish in jail because they sought to express in books their disillusionment with the official government line. In South Africa, editors face charges because they published stories of prison brutalities.

In Greece, the gag by the military government is so tight that even the performance of time-honored classical plays is banned at a summer festival.

In Egypt, the public still hasn't been told the full story of the disaster that befell them in the Sinai Desert.

Aspects of a current British security case suggest Col. Leslie Lohan, the civil servant, involved, was forced to quit under fire mainly because he failed to persuade a newspaper to kill a story that would embarrass the government.

Lohan was secretary of a committee that advises British newspapers on information that should not be divulged because it might compromise British security. Over the years there have been so many breaches that many security-minded observers acidly question whether there really are any British secrets left to divulge.

In any case, Lohan failed to persuade a newspaper not to publish a story that the government had been secretly probing at all private telegrams and cables sent out of Britain.

Thereafter Prime Minister Wilson, charged by critics with smearing a civil servant, hinted darkly that there had been trouble in high places about Lohan's suitability many months ago. He had not been fully cleared for security; he had been too free and easy with certain newspaper men, and there were other things about him that could not be divulged.

One British newspaper commented that no country could afford to be running a system of speech because freedom was hard to win and only too easy to lose.

Manufacturers Must Prove Business Hurt to Prevent Dumping

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's contentious automatic levy against goods dumped in the country for cheap sale will be abolished next year under terms of the Kennedy Round agreements.

By signing an international anti-dumping code, Canada is obliged for the first time to set up economic tests measuring damage by dumping.

The impact on manufacturers and fruit and vegetable growers is almost impossible to assess yet. But they are concerned that the new terms will allow American exports to cut unfairly into the domestic market.

Canada's existing anti-dumping legislation allows the government to impose an automatic levy against goods entering Canada for sale at prices lower than prices in the exporting country.

Canada applies a series of legal tests to establish that dumping has occurred. When these tests indicate it has, levies are immediately be assessed.

All other members of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade except New Zealand carry out much more elaborate tests, requiring proof that the dumping causes actual damage to their home producers.

Specific guarantees incorporating this feature are included in the new code announced Thursday.

The means Canada will have to propose and pass legislation by July 1, 1968, providing means to determine whether dumped imports are causing or threaten to cause injury to domestic industry.

It must incorporate a whole series of measuring devices, covering among other things the competence of the Canadian firms which may be hurt.

Canada will be allowed to assess levies provisionally before investigations are complete, but even at this stage hard evidence of injury must be available.

Canada has argued in support of its automatic levy that irregularities produce most dear in the U.S. are capable of dumping their leftover goods at will.

It has been argued that the dumping can occur so quickly any delay in investigation makes effective remedies by Canada impossible.

The new code permits anti-dumping levies in cases where the dumped goods retard establishment of industry. It requires "convincing evidence," such as advanced plans or actual construction, to make this provision applicable.

Canadian industry will have to reveal to government its profit and price structures, its export performance, employment and productive efficiency when it makes a complaint.

Evidence of lack of competition at home or fading consumer interest in local products must be considered and will work against domestic producers.

While some of this information can be kept from the public, the government will be obliged to publish its decisions.

Canada's fist assessment of the difference between export selling price and value for duty may also go out the window.

The code says it is "desirable" to make the anti-dumping duty less than the margin if this would be adequate to remove injury.

The government says the code will help Canadian exporters by assuring them their products will not be exposed to arbitrary action in other countries.

A committee of federal officials will be set up to hear views of the business community on how the code will be translated into Canadian law. Committees will be held beginning in mid-September or early October.

Construction Start on Superior Electric Building

Mr. B. W. Darwin, partner with Colt Contracting, general contractors for the new Superior Electric building in Hillcrest, checks levels as excavating for new structure gets underway. Building, costing close to half a million dollars will have floor area of approximately 34,000 square feet.

Start Work on Site For New Industry

Heavy earth moving equipment went to work in the north Hillcrest area this morning as Colt Contracting of Scarborough, general contractors for the new Superior Electric building commenced site preparation and excavating.

On the job were two bulldozers and the same number of heavy earth movers as the site was being cleared of sod in preparation for actual excavation.

The contract calls for construction of a building with approximately 34,000 square feet with a fall completion date being aimed at. The construction contract is for close to $500,000.

Superior Electric, with Canadian sales offices in Toronto and headquarters in the United States are manufacturers of precision type electric motors for use in highly mechanized production plants and other uses demanding high precision motors.

The new plant is being constructed on a 96-acre site north of Adam Street and immediately south of 401 highway.

A skeleton road already leads into the property. This will be rebuilt and widened. Stakes marking the route for hydro, water and other services are in with construction of the services expected to commence soon.

Tariff Walls Fall

Canada bargained all the way for a maximum reduction in the American tariff. In the end, the U.S. will be making top 50-per cent cuts on $1,000,000,000 of the $1,800,000,000 worth of Canadian goods affected by its tariff changes.

By 1972, the average level of U.S., European Common Market and Japanese tariffs for Canadian manufacturers will be less than 10 per cent. This is regarded as insignificant, when natural advantages such as supplies of power and raw materials are considered.

Common Market countries will be applying cuts averaging 20 per cent on Canadian goods worth $160,000,000 in 1968 trade. The Japanese tariff is reduced on a fifth of its Canadian purchases, which totalled $177,000,000 last year.

On the basis of 1968 trade volume, the federal government would forego tariff revenues of $130,000,000. But officials expect the cuts to encourage so much more trade that the actual realized loss will be substantially lower.

On the multilateral basis of the Geneva bargaining, concessions by any country are automatically extended to all others.

New rates become part of the "most favored nations" rates of duty, and Canada will apply its new schedule to the other non-Commonwealth members of GATT. They will be extended a special treaty to some non-GATT countries, including Russia.

Commonwealth members of GATT extend special concessions to one another under the 25-year-old Commonwealth preferences, and substantial differences between the MFN and preferential rates remain.

This is particularly true of Canadian exports to Britain, 85 per cent of which now enter free of duty.

The Kennedy Round reached beyond tariff problems to encompass two areas of special interest to Canada — a new world cereals agreement and an international anti-dumping code.

The cereals pact improves maximum and minimum prices for trade in wheat by 21 per cent and sets up a $300,000,000 food aid plan for underfed nations.

By signing the anti-dumping code, Canada commits itself to abandoning its much-criticized automatic levy against foreign goods that enter Canada for sale at prices below the prices of the exporting country.

For the first time manufacturers and producers will have to establish that they are being damaged by dumped goods before the government can take action.

Some manufacturers claim the procedures involved will not stem dumping by U.S. interests and will hurt them more than the tariff concessions.

Canada and the U.S. chose to match up many of their tariff changes, notably in agriculture, fisheries and forest products.

They will extend free trade to one another in fresh, frozen and salted fish, lumber, and many agricultural products including apples, turnips, maple sugar and maple syrup and milling by-products.

Canada has overhauled its schedule for chemical tariffs and has guaranteed that its levies on sophisticated chemicals will not be more than 15 per cent. Final rates are to be set by July 1, 1968.

Most Canadian chemicals going to the U.S., which last year bought $95,000,000 worth, will enjoy the 50-per-cent lower tariffs.

Textiles, perhaps the most sensitive of the import sectors, will encounter a minor reduction of only 30 per cent. Most other countries are reducing their duties by 50 to 70 per cent.

Canada also had Japan's pledge to continue a voluntary restriction on textile exports to Canada.

As part of a general recognition of the special problems of the developed countries, Canada will allow easy entry for tropical products.

WEDDING

EVERDINGEN — READ

Rev. J. A. Dunlop officiated at the wedding ceremony in St. Margaret's-in-the-Hill Anglican Church, Belleville, on Thursday, June 29, 1967, when Penelope Alma Read, daughter of Mrs. Isabel Read of Ottawa, was united in marriage to Peter Gerard Everdingen, Richmond Hill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. van Everdingen of Belleville.

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle Wing Cmdr. W. G. Dever of Ottawa. Miss Joan Nesbitt of Ottawa attended the bride, while Mr. William A. Green of Belleville was the groomsman.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Sun Valley Motor Inn.

Vaughan — Fraser

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES GORDON VAUGHAN

A candlelight ceremony was solemnized at 8 p.m. June 24, 1967 in St. Paul's United Church, Stirling when Rev. J. Bruce Small united in marriage Joan Eleanor, daughter of Mrs. Albert Fraser of Stirling and the late Mr. Fraser and Charles Gordon Vaughan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Vaughan, Belleville. Mrs. Harry Brown was organist and Miss Joy Randall, Cobourg, was soloist.

Given in marriage by her mother, the bride wore a floor-length A-line gown of white crystanette with silver-length bell sleeves. The bodice, sleeves and skirt were trimmed with lace appliques and the four-tiered train was edged with matching lace appliques. Her shoulder-length tulle veil was held with a lace headdress enhanced with seed pearls and she carried a cascade bouquet of coral roses.

Mrs. Ross Anderson was her sister's matron of honor and Miss Elizabeth Fraser was bridesmaid. They wore sleeveless coral chiffon floor-length gowns with high necklines encircled with roses and leaves of the same material. Their headpieces and veils were of the same material and they carried bouquets of white carnations.

William Vaughan was the bridegroom's attendant and the ushers were Ross Anderson and Robert Booth.

At the reception in St. Paul's Church parlors, the bride's mother received the guests, wearing a sleeveless flowing green chiffon gown with bodice of iridescent sequins and white beads, matching accessories and a corsage of white gardenias.

The bridegroom's mother was attired in a sleeveless rose silk gown with matching accessories and a corsage of white gardenias.

For her wedding trip to the east coast the bride chose a white net dress embroidered with green over white taffeta and white accessories. On their return the couple will live in the Regency Towers, Belleville.

Modern Recital Presented by Music Pupils

The annual recital of the Boyce Music Studio was held on Tuesday evening in the Memorial Chapel of Albert College, with the students of Mrs. Egerton Boyce and Mrs. Gerald Scott participating.

In welcoming the parents and friends, Mr. J. MacKay, vice-principal of Albert College, explained that due to the losing Canada's Centennial, all of the members played, with the exception of two quartettes, were by Canadian composers, among these, Belleville's own Dr. Elizabeth Scott and Mr. S. Alec Gordon.

An all Canadian program contributed to a most modern recital.

The audience joined in the singing of one of the Centennial hymns chosen by the Canadian Inter-Church conference, the words having been written by Mrs. Roy Bush, of Stirling.

Following the program, Mr. Gerald Boyce presented the awards for the year to each of the following students: to Mrs. Boyce's student first prize to Anne Kerr; second prize to Sheila Cameron; to Mrs. Scott's students: first prize to Penelope Reid and second prize to Denise Sutherland.

On behalf of the parents, Mr. Leslie F. Reid paid tribute to Mrs. Boyce. Mary Carol Black presented Mrs. Boyce with centennial pieces of china. Cathy Bunkard presented centennial china also to Mrs. Scott. Mr. Carl Bateman expressed the thanks of the parents for her untiring efforts.

The names of those taking part in the program are as follows: Brenda, Denise and Joanne Sutherland; Lori Anne Allore, Penelope Reid, Nilar Leslie; Jeffrey Cass; John Smith; Wendy Julia and Margaret Ann Bateman; Catherin and Cynthia Rawson; Nancy and Susan Jess; Duncan Boyce; Jennifer Morris; Kirk Kelly; James Cameron; Jill McCreary; Cathy Nesbitt; Heather Morris; Susan Riedel; Mary Reid; Cricket Robbie Burton; Linda Bunkard; Janice Burn; Carol Woodcox; Shirley Quast; Cathy Nesbitt; Heather Morris; Lisa Pudwell; Cynthia Wellbanks; Roddy Bateman; Anne Acton; Fred Cass, John McWatters; Linda Lewis; Christine Scott; Carol Ann Reid; Beverley Zauner; Fred Cass; Marlene Reid; Angela Murray; Robert Gronk; Jim Thompson; Debbie Clark, Barbara Haywood, Marlene Reid; Marilyn Eagle; Penny Bateman; Laura Jenkins; Brenda Scott; Ken Williamson; Karen Bateman; Marylu Taylor; David Leslie and Laurie Hill.

Wilke — Gray

MR. AND MRS. BOYD ALLISTAIR WILKE

Christ Church, Belleville was the setting for the wedding ceremony on Saturday June 24, at 2 p.m., when Mildred Anne Grey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Wesley Gray of Belleville became the bride of Boyd Allistair Wilke, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Wilke of Elliot Lake.

Rev. A. W. Lauder officiated at the ceremony and the organist Mr. J. Whitney played the wedding music and accompaniment for selections by the choir.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an Empire styled bridal gown of satin black crepe featuring a Guipure lace bodice with short sleeves and scoop neckline sequins adorning the neckline. Matching sequins also adorned the waistline from which extended a flowing train. An elbow length veil was caught to a deep brimmed chapel cap headdress and she carried a bouquet of white daisies and pink roses.

Miss Carol Gray, only sister of the bride as maid of honor was gowned in Empire style floor length dress of pink floral voile over taffeta with matching picture hat. The bridesmaids Miss Judy Trusler and Miss Lynda Digins were similarly attired but in blue and yellow respectively. Each carried a bouquet of white daisies.

The bridegroom's father was best man and the ushers were Mr. Ron Gray, brother of the bride and Mr. Donald Mahoney of Elliot Lake, brother-in-law of the bridegroom.

Transportation from the church to the reception at the Belleville Sheiks Club was in a 1929 antique touring car. Here, the bride's mother greeted the guests wearing a coral pink brocade dress and jacket ensemble, matching pink floral hat, white accessories and a corsage of white and pink tinted carnations. The bridegroom's mother assisted wearing a beige lace ensemble with white accessories and a corsage of yellow carnations.

For the wedding trip to points in southern Ontario, the bride chose a turquoise travelling dress, white accessories and a corsage of yellow carnations.

Upon return Mr. and Mrs. Wilke will reside at 236 Albert St. E., Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario.

Automation Will Not Lessen Challenge Says Minister

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Although the benefits of the future will have much of her domestic drudgery automated out of existence, the challenge of women will not be any less, Miss Secretary Judy LaMarsh said Thursday.

Addressing 600 persons at a luncheon marking the start of the ninth annual Detroit-Windsor Freedom Festival, Miss LaMarsh said the harnessing of developments of the 20th century will provide women in their family setting with an ever-more challenging and crucial responsibility."

"In the face of the prospects that lie ahead the task of maintaining the family as a stable and meaningful basis for our social structure will require all the dedication and all the ability which women can bring to bear," she said.

She said she could not imagine, "even in this jet age, automated, computerized society of ours, that this most basic role (the homemaker) will diminish.

"If the house is mechanized now, think of the computerized home of the future. Think, too, of the equally-universal problems of widespread day - care centres, of 12-month education systems which will mean that, should the mother so wish, facilities will be available almost from birth to provide adequate care for her children during daytime hours when she might wish to pursue a career outside the home."

Miss LaMarsh said it appears that the day of the feminine breakthrough is finally over — because it has already occurred and now it is up to the individual women to choose her own way of life.

"In the field of social work, voluntary and professional, any number of social problems cry out for more attention; attention which not only well-meaning women but women with skills and knowledge could easily provide."

"The opportunities have never been brighter, the challenge never more exciting."

McKibbon — Weese

MR. AND MRS. JOHN CHARLES McKIBBON

Janet Celia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Weese, R. R. 1, Carrying Place, and John Charles McKibbon, Belleville, son of Mrs. Jeanette McKibbon, Brockville, were married by Rev. J. M. D. McLeod in Albury United Church, June 24, 1967, at 3 p.m. Mrs. McLeod was organist and Mrs. June Reid was soloist.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore an A-line gown of white peau de soie with yoke, sleeves and cathedral train of Chantilly lace. Her headpiece was a cluster of satin roses and stephanotis with a shoulder length veil of silk illusion and she carried a cascade bouquet of white gardenias and ivy.

The maid of honor, Miss Susan Beacock, Belleville, was bridesmaids. Miss Mary Ellen McKibbon, Kentville, sister of the bridegroom and Miss Ruby Allen, Lindsay and Miss Patricia Johnstone, Toronto, were floor length dresses of flowered voile sheer over yellow taffeta. They carried bouquets of yellow roses, Shasta daisies, baby's breath and ivy.

The train bearer, Miss Cindy Weese, Carrying Place, wore a floor-length dress of flowered voile sheer over yellow taffeta.

Byron McKibbon, Brockville, was his brother's attendant and the ushers were Max McKibbon, Ottawa, cousin of the bridegroom, Wesley Weese and Stephen Weese, Carrying Place, brother of the bride.

At the reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mrs. Weese received the guests, wearing a dress of white on blue sculptured nylon, with black and white accessories and a corsage of pink carnations. The bridegroom's mother wore a blue crepe sheath dress, black and white, blue and black accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

For her wedding trip to Montreal and eastern points, the bride chose a dress and jacket ensemble of blue heather-tone linen, black accessories and a white gardenia corsage. On their return the couple will live at R. R. 1, Carrying Place.

25th Anniversary Marked

On Saturday last, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Fudge, celebrated their silver wedding anniversary, at the Salvation Army Citadel in Belleville. Mrs. Harry Stebbings and Mrs. Madelian Brown (mother and sister, respectively, of Mrs. Fudge) were co-hostesses for the occasion.

Previous to a reception, which was held in the church parlors, the couple participated in a service of renewal of their marriage vows, which was conducted by Brig. John Smith of Ottawa, who was the officiating clergy at their wedding, June 20, 1942.

Also present for the event, were almost the entire bridal party who had participated at their wedding and these included Mrs. William (Margaret) Brown; Mrs. Alfred (Anne) Morris; Mrs. Robert (Mary) Howes and Capt. Wm. Brown.

Mrs. Edwin (Gwyn) Reid officiated at the organ and accompanied the soloist, Mr. Stanley Lessels.

During the reception several telegrams and letters of good wishes were read by Mr. George Hardy, who was master of ceremonies.

Guests were present from Guelph, Listowel, Toronto, Oshawa, Peterborough, Montreal and Ottawa, as well as Belleville and surrounding district.

Mr. and Mrs. Fudge have two sons, Gordon and Donald, both of Montreal.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

The handle of a pan sticking out from the stove is tempting to a curious small child. It doesn't take much of a pull to overbalance the pan and spill the contents into a toddler's face.

Cooking goes on day after day and is full of potential hazards to a child. Be alert to the obvious dangers in the kitchen.

Always turn handles of pots and pans around, backward or sideways, when something is cooking on the stove, so a child cannot pull the pan over, and so you will not catch the handle in a loose sleeve.

Ann Landers

Parlor Game Proves Embarrassing to Hostess

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a 22-year-old career girl who gave a party for several friends recently. I planned some kid-style parlor games, mostly for laughs.

As a gag I agreed to sleep with one of the men if he could guess the number of pennies in the jar. (I've been a penny saver for years). It was a 5,032 to. - I chance — pretty darned safe odds as any gambler knows.

ANN LANDERS

Well, Ann, when he said "5032" I almost died on the spot. I had the number written on the paper, so I was stuck.

The winner has telephoned me twice in the last three days wanting to know when I'm going to pay up. I tried to laugh it off but he is dead serious. There is no denying that he won the bet but I feel he should let me off the hook. When I told him so he said, "Way should I?" Please advise me. — HOODA-THUNIT?

DEAR HOODA: It was a gag to begin with and it should end on a gag note. Send him, via special messenger — the jar of pennies and enclose a note saying you want him to have the pennies as a souvenir of "The Great Copper Cop Out." That should settle it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Two and a half years ago some relatives borrowed $3,000 from us for a down payment on a home. They were having a third child and needed to get out of a crowded apartment. They promised to pay us $125 a month and turn over his Christmas bonus which usually ran about $500.

The four months they paid right on the dot. When Christmas came they said they needed the money to clean up some old debts. The next month they said they could not pay the $125 because they owed us back taxes. For two years they have not said one word about the money they owe us.

They have bought new carpeting and a new car. Sunday they announced that they are going to Montreal for Expo 67. The trip is what tipped my husband over. He says they have no character and he wants nothing more to do with them. How do you feel about it? — SKINNED.

DEAR SKINNED: I think your husband's approach is a poor one. He should telephone the relatives and make a date to discuss repayment of the debt. He should make it clear that he feels they are honorable people and he wants to give them every opportunity to do the decent thing.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband and I are planning a cross-country motor trip. We have two sons, 8 and 8 years of age. Last year we took them on an extensive motor trip and it was a horror. The boys hit each other all the way from Tucson to Chicago.

A neighbor told me that you printed a very good solution to this problem some time ago. I didn't see it, and she couldn't remember the way you worded it. Will you my it again please? — FRACTIONED MOTHER.

* * *

DEAR MOTHER: I do indeed remember the letter and I am happy to repeat my advice. When kids get bored they love to play, "Let's Aggravate Our Parents." Before you set out on a motor trip, buy plenty of puzzles, crayons and games to keep the kids busy. Make it plain no fighting will be tolerated and that the minute a fight starts, the driver will pull over to the side of the road, both kids will be spanked and that the procedure will be repeated as often as necessary.

Success and Living

One With No Ambition Looks at Future

DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I am 19. I don't seem to have any ambition. Right now I am working in a bank but I don't like it much. I have no desire to be a teacher or nurse or secretary or any of the other popular jobs.

My worst problem though is that I am overweight, and I eat even when I'm not hungry. I am pathologically shy and self-conscious and I've got to be the world's worst conversationalist. I have few close friends.

The future looks absolutely hopeless. I don't know if you'll be able to give me any helpful suggestions but I thought it wouldn't hurt to try. — No Future.

Dear No Future: You aren't the first one to eat for comfort, then lack ambition because of overweight. I'm guessing this not-so-merry-go-round started away back. Childhood efforts to slim were not praised enough; or you grew up in the shadow of an older brother or sister. Think back.

Whatever it was, it may take a trained counsellor to get you started off on the right track again. And you'd be surprised at what a good vocational assessment might unearth in the way of hidden talents.

Get your chin up from between your knees and go after the kind of personal guidance which can help you find yourself.

Dear Doris: Being a patient in hospital for six weeks and on a 600 calorie diet I lost 28 pounds. Now I am at a nursing home, my diet is to be 500 calories.

I was to be supplied with a diet sheet, which did not follow me. — Please Help.

Dear Help: Not my dish. A 500-calorie affair is very specialized; calls for detailed, nourishing ingredients geared to your individual condition. Calls for your doctor.

Write, wire or telephone him for instructions and don't delay your own cure by writing around to anybody else.

Dear Doris: I am at my wit's end. Every time I do anything my husband finds fault. This is my second marriage. If my children come to visit me he takes off.

I've been doctoring for my nerves. I don't know what to do; leave him and make him keep me or stay. We own our own home and I hate to give it up. I give in to him if it is his fault, just to keep peace.

I love him, Doris, but a person can only take so much.

On Sunday he sleeps all day and doesn't say two words. This irritates me too. I threaten to leave but maybe this is what he wants.

Hope you publish this soon as he reads these columns. — Disturbed.

Dear Disturbed: Is your message for me or for Mr. Disturbed

Ask yourself:

(1) Do I ever compare him unfavorably to my first husband?

(2) Do my children make him feel like an outsider?

(3) Do I ever tell him I love him (except through a newspaper column)?

I don't go for fault-finding husbands, but a little self-examination sometimes gets an unhappy wife on a new track, when it comes to improving things.

There is a fine marriage counseling service right where you are and I'd suggest an appointment, pronto, whether or not he'll have anything to do with the place.

Are you in doubt about the proper etiquette to use for your special occasion? Ask Doris, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for her reply.

Quick Raisin Bread

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: The whole family loved your Raisin Minitue Muffins made with some biscuit mix as the base. They were so easy to make — made them in the time it took me to warm the baby's bottle! Give us more! Also now that I have poppy seeds on hand from the muffins how am I going to use them up? — Pat. E.

ANSWER: We thought they were wonderful too. Right now, as I write, a loaf of Quick Raisin Bread is cooling on the counter — minus one slice that we tasted fresh from the oven. It is equally quick and good.

SEED STICKS

(poppy, sesame or caraway — reprinted from May, 1961)

6 tbsps. scalded milk
½ cup shortening
1 tsp. granular yeast (½ pkge.)
2 tbsps. lukewarm water
2 cups sifted all - purpose flour
2 to 1¼ tsps. salt
¼ tsp. sugar
1 beaten egg (for topping)
Seeds — poppy, sesame or caraway (see below)

Add shortening to scalded milk and let stand until lukewarm. Soak yeast in lukewarm water in large mixing bowl. When milk and shortening mixture is lukewarm add to yeast liquid, then add the flour, salt and sugar. Mix as well as you can then knead for 5 min. Return to greased bowl, cover and let rise for 2 hrs. or until doubled. On lightly floured board punch down and knead dough for 1 min. Pinch off pieces of dough about 1" in diameter and roll between your palms to form "sticks" 4 x ¼". This dough is pliable and easily handled like plasticine.

Place touching on uncreased cookie sheets. I made 50 little sticks. Beat the egg and neatly brush all of the touching sticks with it to coat with egg as well as you can. Now while they are still wet and touching sprinkle generously with seeds to cover tops. Choose the seeds you like best. Now pick up every other one and transfer to another cookie sheet, shifting them all so that they are 1" apart. Bake at 325 deg. Fahr. about 20 min. or until golden tan and crisp, switching and turning pans in oven at half time. These keep well.

QUICK RAISIN BREAD
(One average loaf)

¼ cup granulated sugar
1 large egg
1¼ cups milk or orange juice or apple juice
2 2-3 cups unsifted biscuit mix
¾ tsp. cinnamon
1 cup raisins

Into beater bowl measure first 5 ingredients and beat barely enough to blend. Remove beaters, stir in raisins. Line loaf pan with one sheet of wax paper but wide enough to fit four sides and bottom of loaf pan. Butter it and ends of pan. Turn in batter. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 50 min. Turn out on cake rack, peel off wax paper. Cool.

Relaxing Anti-dumping Rules Will Help U.S.

'Special Benefit' Will Help U.S. Firms Increase Exports

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canada is going to relax its anti-dumping machinery and thereby provide "special benefit" to the United States, it was announced Thursday in a joint declaration by representatives from the concluded Kennedy round of tariff negotiations.

Canadian industry, in applying for future anti-dumping restrictions on imports, will have to be export seek of an item at cost lower than in the exporting nation's own market—and prove injury from foreign competition.

In the past, Canadian firms producing 10 per cent or more of the Canadian consumption of a product have been able to require automatically-higher duties on imported competitive goods.

"The lack of such an injury requirement has impeded U.S. exports for many years," the U.S. statement said of Canada's concession.

The concession is part of an international anti-dumping code worked out at Geneva.

Canadian industries in the future apparently will have to prove that injury has occurred, or that jobs have been lost, before a protective higher tariff can be applied to competitive foreign goods.

A general statement on the three-year negotiations at Geneva, Switzerland, completed in the Swiss capital in May, was issued here Thursday but will not be withheld until next week.

The U.S. says it has agreed to cut tariffs on goods valued at between $7,500,000,000 and $8,000,000,000 in terms of 1962 trade. Tariff concessions have been obtained by the U.S. "on about the same amount of exports." The reductions on both sides average 35 per cent, the U.S. says.

The details in printed form won't be available until mid-July, said the office of the president's special representative for trade negotiations. It will run to more than 4,000 pages.

President Johnson Thursday ordered the U.S. representative in Geneva to join in the 53-nation signing of the new tariff agreements.

The signing ceremony is scheduled for 10:30 a.m. today Geneva time—8:30 a.m. EDT.

Approval by Congress is not needed. The legal authority was given in advance, in the Trade Expansion Act of 1962, to the late president John F. Kennedy. The negotiations were given his name in recognition of his leadership.

However, a two-thirds vote of the Senate will be needed to ratify a new world grains arrangement also negotiated at Geneva.

U.S. merchandise exports last year totalled $30,596,000,000 including $6,681,000,000 to Canada, the host U.S. customer.

Imports totalled $25,850,000,000 with Canadian sales again the largest single-country item at $6,125,000,000.

An American official, told Canada was releasing the full details of its Geneva bargaining, said this fact hadn't been known before—at briefings given on a bilateral or country-to-country basis.

The U.S. statement says little new about how the U.S. did at Geneva.

It says it has achieved tariff cuts of 50 per cent on a wide range of manufactured items but a lower range of 35 per cent—on the farm front.

It says a U.S. tariff cut of 20 per cent on aluminum ingot is of "benefit primarily to Canada and Norway."

The Canadian decision to amend the anti-dumping machinery to require proven injury from imports "is of special interest to U.S. aluminum exports."

Canada and the Scandinavian nations made "significant concessions on paper products exported by the U.S. and the U.S. made "comparable" concessions.

The statement repeated that Canada and the U.S. negotiated substantial farm - trade tariff cuts.

Signing Begins

GENEVA (CP) — The Kennedy Round of tariff-cutting negotiations officially concluded today after representatives of 46 governments began signing the biggest international trade package of modern times.

As a result of the agreement two-thirds of the imports of industrial nations taking part, except for meat, cereals and dairy products, will either be duty free or have their tariffs cut by at least one-half.

The cuts will apply to tens of thousands of products ranging from canned plums and shirts to cars and steel girders, and they may bring down the prices of imported goods in the countries.

The countries which signed the agreement account for nearly four-fifths of the world's trade.

The agreement will benefit mainly the large industrial nations of the West. Developing countries already are calling for a new round of negotiations to lower barriers to their trade.

Canadian Firms Get Big Chance In U.S. Market

OTTAWA (CP)—United States tariff changes announced Thursday may well give Canadian manufacturers their best chance in history to expand, to specialize and to crack the American market in a big way.

The world tariff negotiations in Geneva have resulted in lower U.S. duties on a range of Canadian exports worth $1,920,000,000 in terms of 1966 sales. Of this total, manufactured goods make up $700,000,000 or 36 per cent.

A detailed list shows 188 major categories of manufactures affected. All but a handful will carry duties of less than 10 per cent when the U.S. completes stage-by-stage reductions Jan. 1, 1972.

Federal officials say the remaining barriers are insignificant, given Canada's advantages in power resources and access to the raw materials.

They suggest that the big reductions, generally 50 per cent, can fundamentally alter conditions of competition in North America.

The changes may well wipe out relative disadvantages created by American commercial policy, disadvantages that have distorted Canadian industry, forcing short production runs for the restricted domestic market.

On Canada's part, tariff concessions to the U.S. cover about $2,000,000,000 of the $2,500,000,000 worth of imports involved.

The concessions on manufactures will be less strenuous than those of the U.S.-generally establishing rates of 17½ to 20 per cent compared with existing levels of 22½ to 25 per cent.

Canada makes its largest cuts on production machinery and other producers' equipment, which will move to 15 per cent and help the expansion plans of domestic manufacturers who purchase abroad.

Other major changes will reduce duties on European and Japanese motor vehicles and parts, on electrical and electronic apparatus, and on furniture, perfumes and toilet articles, watches, cameras, musical instruments and toys.

In terms of 1966 trade, the Canadian tariff changes on electric apparatus, motor vehicles and parts, and on manufactures of iron and steel including machinery, will apply to more than $1,000,000,000 in imports.

The relative advantages enjoyed by the manufacturers are expected to extend to producers of paper and wood products, petro - chemicals and other chemicals, and refined metals and minerals.

Fifty-per-cent tariff cuts by the U.S. are made on these items. Eventually, all Canadian lumber will move into the U.S. duty-free. Forest products due for 50-per-cent tariff cuts or duty elimination were worth $363,000,000 in 1966 trade.

In agriculture, Canada and the U.S. have made important parallel changes in their tariff structures.

They will provide free entry both ways for oysters, herring, maple sugar and maple syrup, many grass and forage seeds and hay and straw.

Both make duty reductions of 50 per cent on fresh pork and fresh carrots. Cut-of - season rates are reduced or removed on several fresh fruits and vegetables.

Commonwealth Trade Will Be Less Important

OTTAWA (CP)—Changes in world trading patterns resulting from the Kennedy Round of trade talks probably will reinforce an already obvious Canadian trend—less starting with the Commonwealth, more wooing of other countries.

It's not that the talks will make it tougher for Canadian exporters to sell in the Commonwealth, but rather that tariff reductions by other countries should open more doors to their customers.

Britain was the dominant Commonwealth trader at the talks, but Australia, New Zealand, Jamaica, Trinidad, India, Pakistan and Nigeria also participated.

The successful conclusion of the round does not upset the preferential tariff rates now existing among Commonwealth countries, but they generally lower the difference between these tariffs and the most-favored-nation rates to all signatories of the Kennedy agreement.

This narrowed difference will mean some increased competition for Canadian exporters in Commonwealth countries as other nations try to move in, but Canadian officials say they expect only marginal effects on sales.

Entry for Canadian goods into Commonwealth countries will improve only slightly compared with the significant gains that should be available in other countries. So exporters are naturally going to concentrate their attention in those fields, officials say.

They note that while the share of Canada's export trade going to Britain and other Commonwealth countries has remained fairly steady during the past decade at about 30 per cent, it has climbed six percentage points to 26 per cent with countries other than the United States.

Canada sold $1,122,500,000 worth of goods to the United Kingdom in 1966, down slightly from $1,174,300,000 the previous year as Britain sharply bought import controls to help its balance-of-payments situation.

In 1966 Canada bought $644,741,000 worth of goods from the U.K., compared with $618,000,000 the previous year.

Exports to other Commonwealth countries in 1966—the last year for which detailed figures are available — totalled $483,871,000 and imports $405,818,000.

Terms of the Kennedy agreement will not affect about 35 per cent of Canada's exports to Britain which now enter that country duty free anyway.

On Canadian products where Britain still applies preferential tariffs, it will reduce these in proportion to the amount it has lowered rates for non-Commonwealth countries. This is a special concession worked out by Canada and Britain during negotiations.

Some of the concessions Canada granted other Commonwealth countries during the negotiations apply to certain commodities. These should help some of the less - developed Commonwealth nations.

Produce of Farm and Garden To Move Easily Across Border

OTTAWA (CP)—Freer access to United States and other foreign markets for Canadian agricultural products, and cheaper entry into Canada of foreign specialty products and out-of-season produce, is promised in the Kennedy Round tariff cuts announced Thursday.

About $85,000,000 of the $425,000,000 worth of Canadian agricultural exports to the U.S. last year will be affected by the new tariff cuts as they come into effect Jan. 1, 1968, and 1972. Some $28,800,000 of this will be free of duty, instead of facing a tariff of up to five per cent, and most of the remaining farm products will have their duties halved.

The tariff concessions gained from other countries, particularly the United States, are being reciprocated by Canada in lower import duties. There will be free trade in such products as maple sugar and maple syrup, berries of various kinds, many grass and forage seeds and hay and straw. Duties are being cut by half on fresh pork and fresh carrots.

In addition, out-of-season rates are being reduced or eliminated on many fresh fruits and vegetables, including brussels sprouts, corn on the cob, parsley, radishes, green onions, apricots, sour cherries and plums.

In the Kennedy Round, as in other multilateral tariff negotiations under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, lower rates of duty granted by any country to another are available to all GATT members.

The U.S. reduced its tariff on dairy cattle to 3½, per cent from seven, and this will affect $5,900,000 worth of Canadian exports.

The European Common Market countries — France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg—reduced the tariff on canned wax beans to 22 per cent from 24, affecting $2,300,000 of Canada's 1966 exports.

Other ECM reductions were fancy meats, to 12 or 14 per cent from 20; raw tobacco, to 23 from 28 per cent; seed potatoes, to nine from 10 per cent; hollow, to free entry from a two-per-cent tariff; sowing seeds, to four and six per cent from five and eight per cent; dried peas and beans, to 4½ per cent from nine, and canned cherries, to 24 per cent from 25.

A number of important Canadian agricultural exports to the Common Market, including oil seeds, already go there free of duty.

Canada will permit free entry of cottonseed, linseed, peanut, soybean and other vegetable oilcake and oilcake meal starting next Jan. 1. At the same time it will cut to 10 per cent this country's tariff on crude vegetable oils, and reduce the tariff on refined vegetable oils to 17½ per cent. The present rates vary according to product.

Tariffs Cut Up to Half On Canada's Minerals

OTTAWA (CP)—Tariff cuts of 20 to 50 per cent are in store for Canada's export - minded, $3,000,000,000-a-year mineral industry.

In some cases, where industrialized countries urgently need raw or semi-processed materials, tariffs are going to be eliminated as a result of the Kennedy Round of trade talks.

Canada generally has matched the tariff reductions offered by other countries. Officials say the upshot is that established trading patterns will not be seriously disturbed.

The domestic iron and steel industry, which has been critical in recent months of competition from Japan, will likely face still more pressure domestically as a result of reductions ranging from 12½ to 20 per cent in the protective barriers it has worked behind.

However, officials say that equivalent or greater concessions granted Canada in this area by the United States and countries of the European Common Market will offset compensating markets.

Concessions granted Canada by the U.S. involve some cut in $200,000,000 worth of mineral sales, based on last year's figures.

Tariffs on specialty steels, which represented sales of $94,800,000 in 1966, are being cut to eight or 10 per cent from 12 or 14 per cent.

In ordinary steels, where the U.S. traditionally has had lower tariffs, cuts will be to six or eight per cent from nine or 12 per cent.

The U.S. also is eliminating its low tariffs on pig and sponge iron. Canada's exports in these areas were worth $22,100,000 last year.

A 20-per-cent reduction in the tariff on aluminum ingot, to one cent a pound from 1¼ cents, was agreed on. Sales last year were worth $174,000,000.

A similar reduction will be made on semi-fabricated aluminum products.

The existing 1.5-cent-a-pound tariff on copper will be halved, affecting sales worth more than $100,000,000 last year. The tariff on much of this, however, had been temporarily suspended previously by the U.S. because of a shortage of the red metal.

The existing tariff of 2½ cents a pound on nickel and nickel powders—also suspended previously—will be removed. Canada's sales to the U.S. last year in these metals were more than $162,000,000.

Nickel plates and sheets will be assessed at a rate of 12 per cent instead of 15.

The U.S. is eliminating its tariff on cadmium and bismuth and cutting the tariff on molybdenum—an increasingly valuable metal used in hardening steels—to 10 cents a pound plus three per cent from 20 cents a pound plus 15 per cent.

The tariff on molybdenum scrap, also temporarily suspended by the U.S., drops to 10½ per cent from 21 per cent.

Major U.S. reductions in non-metallic minerals will see free entry for cement and lime, worth $8,300,000 last year. The tariff on cement now is 2½ cents per 100 pounds and on lime 2½ cents per 100 pounds.

Pageant Saturday

Beauties to Parade Before Envious Eyes

Tomorrow night, much to the delight of Belleville area males, a Centennial Beauty Pageant will be held in the city armory.

The event, beginning at eight o'clock is sponsored by the Kinsmen Club. The pageant will last until nine and then there will be dancing until midnight. The dress for the event is "optional."

The contest has been in the planning stage for about six weeks.

Each girl in the contest is being outfitted by her sponsore in a gown and bathing suit. The contestants will be, chosen on the basis of personality, poise and beauty.

The winner, as well as receiving $150 will wear a tiara, a sash and will be presented with flowers. The second and third place girls will be awarded $100 and $50 respectively.

CJBQ radio personality, Dick Lovering, will be the master of ceremonies. Dave Charles, Mayor Jack Ellis, Joy Wonnacott and Kenneth Bradford ,now principal of Loyalist College, will be the judges.

The eight contestants are Sharon Fraser, Carolyn Van Horne, Carol Ann Brant, Joy Elizabeth Martin, Sherry Graves, Linda Nex, Pam Smith and Monica Scarth.

The lead guitarist of the Wayword, Tim O'Brien, combines singing talent with his instrumental ability. Here he concentrates on a new song while the group gets together for a practice.

The Belleville Sound

It's A Hard Beat to Make Musical Living

Rock 'n' Roll music has now been around at least 12 years. But with the invasion o fthe Beatles, many new of the Beatles, many new classification have been born.

A different style of rhythm and blues, folk-rock and psychedelic types of music are examples of this.

With the ever-increasing popularsky of group-oriented music came the desire for many group formations. Belleville not unlike any other city, had its wave of musical groups.

Two of the many groups in Belleville have played for years now in relation to the short-lived average of existence that surrounds a rock 'n' roll band. They are the Five Below Zero, formerly the Intruders, and the Wayword.

The Five Below Zero is the oldest of the two. The quintet, which is made up of John Logue on drums, Jim McCarey on bass guitar, Bill Keeley on lead guitar, Brian Yeolland on organ and Vince Reed the vocalist, has been around for about four years.

The group began when John Logue, Bill Keeley and Jim McCarey were invited to play a few instrumental numbers for their friends. The whole thing was just a casual get-together.

Presumably surprised by their talent together they made the arrangement a lasting one. Then a few weeks later the singing talent of Vince Reed was accidentally revealed.

After frequent personnel changes the group broke up for a short time, but was reborn in the summer of 1966. It has remained intact since then.

"We really started to roll then," remembers John Logue. "A fan club started up. It had 45 members."

"We began with strictly rock 'n' roll instrumentals. Then we switched to vocals when Vince joined. We had a comedy act for awhile as well."

Then the group worked on harmony and developing an original sound. They now play rhythm and blues, soul and "a sprinkling of psychedelic."

When on stage the Five Below Zero could best be described as uninhibited. Their mood is not faked but reflected by the music they play.

The group finds it a tedius business running themselves. They solve the problem by letting the member who gets a playing date be responsible for it.

The other group, the Wayword, plays from Brockville to Toronto.

Robert Bateman, the bass guitarist, Tim O'Brien, the lead guitarist and vocalist, John Armstrong, the drummer, Jeff Mouck, the organist and two saxophone players, Donald Riddell and Wayne McFaul make the music.

Like the Five Below Zero the boys play rhythm and blues which is a music characterized by a half fast and a half slow beat.

They also play soul, the Toronto sound, and the brass sound.

"We try to suit our music, not our hair," says Rob Bateman. This explains their emphasis on sound and their tidy appearance.

"When we play we play for one reason, enjoyment." And enjoy themselves they do. An engagement is characterized by assorted harmless pranks on one another and light banter. On stage they often ad lib and this results in uproarious laughter among themselves and the audience.

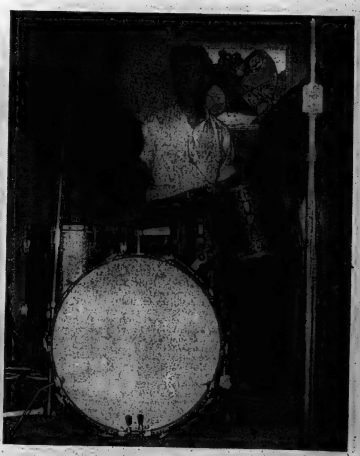
"We make it look like we're enjoying what we're doing. We don't put on an act like we're wierdos or beatniks."

Rob Bateman realizes the importance of good management in a band.

"It's a hard job. We have to find time when everyone can make the practices. All the boys are students. There is the sending of contracts and the haggling over prices."

They have promotion chores as well. They autograph pictures of themselves which are handed out by their road manager.

"We also have to buy equipment and keep it repaired." The Wayword have about $6,000 wrapped up in equipment.



"And that's exactly how it works," says Rob Bateman. "It's a lot of fun."

The rest of the Wayward agree and so do the Five Below Zero.

Saxophone Section

Unlike many modern bands the Wayword have saxophones in their group. Wayne McFaul and Don Riddell play the instruments. However, to keep with the times, both amplify their saxes.

Percussion Sound

A band is not a band without a drummer. Here, maintaining the beat of the song, is John Logue, a member of the Five Below Zero.

SPORTS SLICES

By Geo. H. Carver
Sports Editor

Now that the Master Showman has retired, perhaps for five years, Boxing's Big Circus hits the road again.

And from the looks of the dramatis personae, it will be a helluva long way from being the "Biggest Show on Earth."

The World Boxing Association announced the other day it is conducting a tournament to decide its version of the world heavyweight boxing champion.

"Knowns and Unknowns" have been cast in this four-act "drama" of the nuclear clerks. Two of them at least have been unsuccessful understudies of perhaps the greatest leading man of them all, one Cassius Clay.

Ernie Terrell, the glitter-twanging songbird of Chicago night clubs who was clobbered by Clay in Houston last February and subsequently underwent eye surgery, meets one Thad Spencer, with Jimmy Ellis tangling with someone called Leotas Martin in the two-brawl tournament opener.

Later on, the German Karl Mildenberger Number One in the WBA ratings meets Number Three Oscar Bonavena while former world champion and another Clay victim Floyd Patterson looks up with Jerry Quarry. This pair is Numbers 6 and 7 in the WBA rstebook.

The publicity blurbs of the WBA loudly blurt that the tournament will provide the detergent that will cleanse boxing of the dark stains of the past. The new champion will rise Phoenix-like from the ashes of a sordid era and boxing will emerge shining and triumphant to again take its place with other competitive sports.

But even in the small print there is not a word of two other exponents of the manly art, who decided the proposed tournament was strictly for the proverbial birds and kraks away from its premeditated clutches to conduct a two-man campaign of their own.

In case you missed the point they are Canada's George Chuvalo and Joe Frazier, one of the toughest youngsters to come boxing tripdi in some time. Their respective managers planned to let the low to the edicis of a brace of promotional gaggies and decided to stage a two-man tournament of their own.

So instead of one world champion emerging from the tournament hassles it would seem that the people is back in the same old rut with two title-claiming headbusters in the field.

Cassius Clay has been stripped of his title because of refusal to be inducted into the United States army. You can take away the petals of a rose but that doesn't change it into a cauliflower.

Like the way story of the colonel whose groom had broken every law in the army book and had been on the carpet so often he wore two holes in it.

In his latest appearance the colonel said "Smith, I have taken away from you everything possible, — money, leaves, promotion, etc. What have you got to say for yourself?"

The groom straightened up. "Beggin' pardon sir, there is one thing you can never take away from me."

The colonel bristled. "And what might that be?" he asked.

The groom never batted an eyebrow.

"Me military appearance sir," he said.

That goes for Clay, Mrs, magazines and organizations can take away his crown on paper. But in my book and of a good deal of sane-thinking boxing fans there is nothing standing on two feet in this world that can take it away from him in the ring.

And that goes especially for the WBA picks and choices as to who will compete for a title.

And whoever emerges as the White Knight of the elimination tournament and is acclaimed the "world heavyweight champion" should remember he has won it through force of circumstance and by that only.

For none of this crop and that includes Chuvalo and Frazier will be a true champion in the sense they have defeated the world's best.

Guilty or not guilty; fall or no fall, crowniess with his own thoughts, Cassius Clay stands above the title-seeking ringwise pack, like a beacon over a dark valley.

And the new champion, whoever he is, will have to pause and think when his grandson asks him: "What champion did you beat, grandpa when you won the title?"

Hammer Pounds A 66 To Lead Open

MONTREAL (CP)—He considers himself a rabbit but looks more like a hawk—a hungry one.

That's 24 - year - old Laurie Hammer of Sarasota, Fla., who suddenly plummeted himself into goldcon's spotlight with a five-under-par 66 and the first round leadership of the Canadian Open Thursday.

A rabbit on the tension-packed pro golf circuit is a newcomer who has to chase the field for a qualifying rest in the big tournaments. Hammer qualified last Monday.

With only 18 months experience behind him and just $2,163.59 in earnings this year, the 6-foot-4, 205-pounder took a tip from veteran Gary Player of South Africa which apparently paid off.

"He (Player) told me that tall players have a tendency to decelerate on the downswing because of their long backswing," Hammer said. "That's bad because you should accelerate on the downswing to have maximum club speed at contact."

Hammer said he was concentrating on this for "my best round of the year." It included five birdies and no over-par holes.

Meanwhile, Player, who had burned up the course with practice rounds of 66 and 65 Tuesday and Wednesday, found himself far back at 75.

Tied behind Hammer in second spot with four-under-par 67's were two other relative unknowns — Roger Gienberg and Steve Reid, Veteran Art Wall joined them there.

Dave Stockton and Gardner Dickinson each registered 68s.

Both are recent tournament winners, Dickinson won the Cleveland Open last Sunday and Stockton won the Colonial Invitation tournament at Fort Worth several weeks back.

Bunched at 69 was a mixture of old faces and newcomers.

Lebron Harris, Jack Nicklaus, Argentina's Roberto De Vicenzo, Hugh Royer, Jr., and veteran Billy Casper.

Arnold Palmer, whose rivalry with Nicklaus never falters, finished with a 72. He said he hit "a couple of bad drives . . . worse today than in a long time."

Nicklaus said he missed five putts inside five feet and "I hit a lot of half-sloppy shots, but I'm pleased with a 69 in an opening round because I'm not a fast starter."

Stockton counted seven birdies in putting together his 68 and had 10 one-putt greens.

Unlike most of the contenders, Stockton stayed out of trouble on the controversial 17th. The 320 - yard, par - three hole has been described as "undesirable" and a disaster area since the precipice rounds started Monday.

Two men, Luc Brien of Montreal and Steve Opperman of San Francisco, five - putted the hole.

Worried tournament officials decided treatment is needed after an astounding 31 players missed par on the hole, 21 others missed it by two strokes and five went beyond.

Overnight they hoped to smote the green as best they could, water it to soften the ground and move the tee up to shorten the hole.

Wm Hancocuik of Winnipeg was the leading Canadian with a par 71, while Toronto's George Knudson, playing with Palmer, ended with a 76.

Another well - known Canadian, Bobby Gardiner of Toronto, went out in 40 and came back in 38 for a 78.

Five yellow cards were forked to withdraw before the first round got under way. Jim Ferree of Savannah, Ga., underwent an emergency appendectomy Thursday morning and was reported in satisfactory condition at Maisonneuve Hopital.

Bobby Nichols withdrew because of his wife's illness, while Dutch Harrison, Dave Hill and Fred Haas were reported they were ill and unable to start.

Today the weathermen called for cloud, some rain showers and a risk of thunderstorms late in the day.

Indy 200 Tomorrow

May Use Rain Tires At Mosport

MOSPORT, Ont. (CP)—A two-week postponement of the $85,000 Indy 200, now set to be run here Saturday, may have been all for the best, if U.S. drivers have learned to handle the new equipment they have had installed in their Indianapolis-type cars.

When the race was postponed June 19 because of rain, a number of the cars entered had not been equipped with the four-speed gear boxes essential to running the hill-and-hollow 2.5 miles of a road racing course.

Nor had some of them had their steering balanced to make easier the left and right turns encountered on a road track.

This led to a number of spectacular, though injury - free, crashes during time trials and practice runs for the race.

The postponement also has led to some serious discussion about the possibility of equipping the cars with rain tires—readily available—so they will not be rained out again. Sports cars and Grand Prix road racing cars always have sets of rain tires available and seldom have their races postponed.

Of the 30 drivers entered in the two-heat event, Mario Andretti of Nazareth, Pa., U.S. Auto Club champion, and A. J. Foyt, this year's Indianapolis 500 winner, are all for using the rain tires. But Lloyd Ruby of Wichita Falls, Texas, wants no part of driving in the rain.

Holding the pole position after qualifying at 106 miles an hour is Al Unser of Albuquerque, N.M., who toured the course in one minute, 23.1 seconds—about 104 an hour—to shade Ruby, who won the second spot, outside of Unser, at about 102 miles an hour.

Jenkins Selected

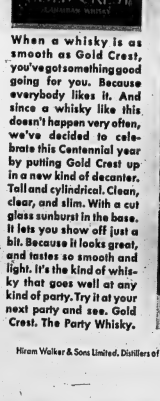
Alston Names NL Hurlers

CINCINNATI (AP) — Manager Walter Alston of Los Angeles Dodgers named two of his own hurlers today to the eight-man National League pitching staff for the annual All-Star game to be played at Anaheim, Calif., July 11.

They were Don Drysdale and Claude Osteen.

Alston, who will manage the National Leaguers, picked five righthanders and three lefthanders. They have a combined won and lost record of 67-40 through games of Thursday night.

In addition to Dryadale, the righthanders named were Juan Marichal of San Francisco Giants, Chicago Cubs' Ferguson Jenkins of Chatham Ont., Bob Gibson of St. Louis Cardinals, and rookie Tom Seaver of New York Mets.



The southpaws, in addition to Osteen, will be Denny Lemaster of Atlanta Braves and Mike Cuellar of Houston Astros.

The starting lineup, named by a vote of players, except for pitchers, was announced Thursday and Alston's choices for batters leave only Chicago Natl Reds without a man on the squad thus far.

All-Star Game Rules require at least one player on the squad from each club so a Cincinnati player will have to be selected later by Alston when he names extra players to go with the starting lineup and the pitchers.

Handsome new decanter. Smooth, light flavour.

Now you know why Hiram Walker's Gold Crest is the hit of every party.

When a whisky is as smooth as Gold Crest, you've got something good going for you. Because everybody likes it. And since a whisky like this doesn't happen very often, we've decided to celebrate this Centennial year by putting Gold Crest up in a new kind of decanter. Tall and cylindrical. Clean, clear, and slim. With a cut glass sunburst in the base. It lets you show off just a bit. Because it looks great, and tastes so smooth and light, it's the kind of whisky that goes well at any kind of party. Try it at your next party and see. Gold Crest. The Party Whisky.

American Tops Traps

ST. JANVIER, Que. (CP) — George Soellenberger of Angora, Ind., smashed 282 of 300 targets Thursday to top the field and win the high over-all title in the opening event of the 12th Canadian trapshooting championships.

Harry Barr of Riverside, Conn., was runner-up in the warm-up shoot with a score of 278. The event consisted of 100 singles, 100 doubles and 100 handicap targets.

High Canadian was Errol Duke of Kitchener with 277.

Lucy Epstein of Lake Forest, Ill., topped the women's division with 260 of 300, followed by Mrs. Doug Wigle of Waterdown, Ont., with a score of 235.

Shooting for the Canadian championship gets under way today and continues through the weekend.

Letter To The Sports Editor

Sailing might well be one of the few bestions left where sportsmanship in its original sense is the code and bond.

Belleville has its group of sailing enthusiastic and a small force journeyed to Oakville to compete on June 24th and 25th for the Ontario-Quebec Regional Championship in the "Da,-dalter" Class. It is a pleasure to report an instance where two of Belleville's citizens brought credit to themselves and their city by a most unselfish and gentlemanly act.

Following two races on the first day Mr. Freeman Burrows and his crew held a commanding lead in the standing for the Canada Yacht Trophy awarded to the leading Canadian skipper. The final race on Sunday brought the wildest conditions for sailing seen in that district in years. Almost a third of the competing craft in various classes capsized. Despite the conditions Mr. Burrows proceed on full sail and drove his boat to win the race, aided by a top performance from the crewmate. The committee placed the boat as overall winner and the trophy appeared destined for Belleville. However, our congratulations were stilled when the accepted winner announced that in the effort of keeping his boat under control he had touched a course marker and therefore should be disqualified. The committee had no alternative but to accept. It must have been heartbreak for such a fierce competitor to come forward with that information. To all present the two seemed suddenly to be head and shoulders above us.

A crew member accepts his workhorse role with but little thought of reward. I can only guess what the true feelings of my skipper, Ted Toner of Oshawa, were when we stepped up to receive the trophy but the magnificent gesture by Freeman Burrows thrilled me and made me feel prouder than ever to be associated with such fellow members of amateur sailing.

For some time to come that will be reward enough.

Reds Bomb Dodgers; Cubs Nip Bucs; Pinch-Hit Homer Trips Tigers

By MIKE RECHT
Associated Press Sports Writer

Fred Whitfield left the once high-flying and healthy Detroit Tigers beaten and bruised again.

The Cleveland Indian first baseman relaxed on the bench for seven innings, Thursday night, watching the Tigers roll merrily along with thoughts of victory dancing in their heads. Then stepping off the bench, he dashed down unmercifully with a pinch-hit, three-run homer in the eighth inning that gave the lodgers a 5-3 triumph.

The loss was the 13th in 21 games for the second-place Tigers, who led the league until June 11. Detroit also lost another outfielder, Gates Brown, who joined all-star Al Kaline on the sidelines.

Brown suffered a dislocated left wrist trying to make a catch and will be out two weeks.

Bill wore, the Tigers missed a chance to pick up a game on Chicago White Sox, who never had much reason for hope as Baltimore's Tom Phoebus cut them down on three hits, 4-1, in the only other American League game.

The Tigers remained 3½ games behind Chicago and only 2½ games from second Cleveland.

Vic Davalillo, batting for winner Luis Tiant, had doubled with one out and Max Alvis had singled him home. When Leon Wagner followed with another hit, Fred Gladding replaced Denny McLain on the mound and Whitfield took over for Tom Demeter at the plate and hit a 400 drive to the upper deck in right field.

The Tigers had taken a 3-1 lead on a solo shot by Dick McAuliffe and a two-run blast by Mickey Stanley in the seventh.

Phoebus had things well under control against the White Sox with home run help from Paul Blair and Russ Snyder accounting for three runs.

Ken Berry touched him for a homer in the second. Tommy Agee's single in the first and J. C. Martin's double in the fifth were the only other Chisox hits off the Orioles ace.

"I'm surprised he only had 11 strike outs," said Pete Ward of the Sox. "I thought he struck out 15 or 16 on the way he threw."

It wasn't exactly an all-star night for Bob Gibson and Don Drysdale, both of whom were chosen for the National League team shortly before taking their regular pitching turns Thursday night.

Gibson, the ever-powering St. Louis right - hander, was manhandled for nine runs in less than one inning as San Francisco scored 11 first-inning runs and walloped the Cardinals 12-4.

Drysdale suffered a similar fate against Cincinnati, lasting into the second inning and allowing six runs on seven hits as the Reds bombed Los Angeles Dodgers 14-0.

Eisenhorn is the National League, Jim Bunning, who wasn't picked for the all-star staff, shutting out New York on three hits as Philadelphia Phillies nipped the Mets 1-0, and Chicago Cubs moved within 2½ games of first place by topping Pittsburgh Pirates 4-3. Houston's game at Atlanta was rained out.

The first eight Giants to bat against Gibson reached base, and seven of them scored. San Francisco bunched 10 hits in the 11-run inning against Gibson and reliever Nelson Briles with Jim Hart's three-run homer climaxing the assault.

It wasn't quite as bad for Drysdale against the Reds. He was charged with six of the runs as the Reds charged to an 11-0 lead in the first three innings.

Tony Perez, Don Pavletich and Deron Johnson each slammed home runs and drove in three runs apiece as Cincinnati raked four Dodgers pitchers for 18 hits.

Mike Peppas hurled a five-hitter and breezed to his eighth victory.

Running relieved the first 19 batters and 14 of the last 15, striking out seven and walking two.

Ernie Banks becomeered his 15th homer of the season, lifting the streaking Cubs to their victory over Pittsburgh.

The victory was the 10th in the last 11 games for the second place Cubs.

Heavy Rain Cancels Ball Games

Rain washed out the local ball pitchers last night although at least one game did get started.

Trenton Cann's Cleaners and the Point Anne Cementmen, first and second place clubs in the Trent Valley League, played one inning at the Point. The game started in a sprinkle of rain but it turned to a pour at the end of the first frame. Point Anne led 7-0, on Glen Marocki's run-scoring safety, with Pat Maracle pitching for the Cementmen and Bob Lott for Trenton.

Efforts are being made to have the game played Monday evening at 6:45 and definite word is expected today.

The Kingston Pilots George-Belleville Ellis Quinte-KASA game was also washed out, along with the Commercial game, Lightfoots vs Brent's-Mountain View at Amelisburg and the Departmental contest between Police Department and Electric Motors.

Sports Hall Of Fame

Three Athletes Named!

TORONTO (CP)—Golfer Gary Cowan, wrestler Earl McCready and marathon runner Johnny Miles Thursday were elected to Canada's Sports Hall of Fame for 1967.

Cowan is an outstanding amateur golfer from Kitchener, Miles of Sydney Mines, N.S., and McCready of Amelet, Sask., were prominent during the 1920s and early 1930s.

The three topped a list of 15 submitted by the 11-man selection committee.

Cowan, 29, won the U.S. amateur championship last year.

McCready, born in 1905, won every wrestling title available during his era except the world championship.

He captured the Dominion title in 1927, 1928 and 1930 as well as the U.S. heavyweight title three times while attending Oklahoma A and M.

He won the U.S. national title, twice won the British Empire championship and, in 1930, won every amateur championship in the world.

Now a resident of Seattle, Wash., McCready is the only Canadian member of both the Oklahoma and the U.S. Wrestling Hall of Fame.

Miles set a record for the Boston Marathon in his first marathon race April 19, 1926. His second victory came in 1929.

Miles now resides in Chicago, Ill.

Tiger Cat Quarter Defects

HAMILTON (CP) — Coach Ralph Sazio's problem of selecting his quarterbacks for the coming Canadian Football League season ended Thursday with the defection of rookie Tom Stafford from Hamilton Tiger-Cats' training camp.

His departure leaves Sazio with Joe Zuger, the team's regular quarterback, and Bill Redell as backup man.

He was the U.S. national title-holder in the British Empire championship and, in 1930, won every amateur championship in the world.

Now a resident of Seattle, Wash., McCready is the only Canadian member of both the Oklahoma and the U.S. Wrestling Hall of Fame.

Miles set a record for the Boston Marathon in his first marathon race April 19, 1926.

Houston Ties Hibernians

HOUSTON (AP) — Fernando booted in the tying goal for Houston Stars at 3:55 of the second half Thursday night to give the Stars a 1-1 deadlock with Toronto City Hibernians in a United Soccer Association game.

Either team could have moved into a first place tie in their respective Western division with victories.

Toronto opened scoring with an unusual goal that was loudly booed by the 15,371 fans in the Astrodome. Peter Cormack, Hibernian forward, took a shot from 25 yards out that never got more than two feet off the ground. No Houston player hindered the surprise shot.

Houston goalie Ubirajara didn't see the ball until the last second. He dove for it, but it slipped under him and into the goal at 28:10.

TO GAMES

PELHAM MANOR, N.Y. (AP)—John Van Ellen of the Long Beach, Calif., Rowing Association, James Dietz of the New York Athletic Club and Jim Storm of the San Diego, Calif., Rowing Club advanced Thursday to the finals of the Pan - American rowing trials. They won the three heats over the 2,000-metre Olympic course and moved into Saturday's finals which will determine the U.S. representatives at the Pan American Games in Winnipeg in August.

Canada Making Effort To Regain Proud Winter Sports Image

By BOB TRIBBEE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

There was a time when Canada, winter sports paradise, could claim international hockey fame just by making an appearance.

That era long has passed.

Not since 1961 has Canada, the unchallenged king of hockey, been able to boast a world championship and its last Olympic hockey win was in 1952.

The recent failures forced Canada into flashing a truly dismal record. The effort slowly is producing results as Canada enters its second century. And while trying to regain its standing legs in hockey Canada has managed to uphold its winter sports image by moving out on two other fronts — figure skating and skiing.

Until 1952, only an astounding 2-1 loss to Britain on the 1928 Winter Olympics marred Canada's Olympic hockey record. Then in 1956 the Russians beat, got into the picture, clinching the hockey title that year with a 5-0 victory over Kitchener - Waterloo Dutchmen.

Four years later the U.S. picked up where the Russians left off and upset Canada 2-1 to win the Canada's declusive win in 1964 left Canadians heartsick about their status as a world amateur hockey power.

The same trend was followed in world hockey tournaments, where Canada can strengthen its teams with professional players who win their amateurism wood, as amateurs. Overall, Canada has won 14 of 21 world titles. The most convincing came in 1958 when Trail Smoke Eaters played 25 games in a November - to - March flurry, won four and lost not one. In the night-game world tournament Duke Snider, Canada's all - time leading home run hitter, was signed game by checking forwards at the Trail blue line, gave up only one goal.

The 1961 Smoke Eaters were the last Canadian world hockey champion. Defeated over Czechoslovakia on a better goals-for-and-against record.

Outside hockey, Canada did little in winter sports until after the Second World War. And it was the figure skaters who extended our sphere of influence.

First and foremost was Barbara Ann Scott.

BA, who later had a long career as a professional, won both the world and European women's singles as an 18-year-old in 1947. The blonde, blue-eyed Ottawa girl came back in 1948 and, in the span of one month, successfully defended her world and European titles and added the Olympic crown. The well-off first Canadian to win an Olympic medal in figure skating.

Barbara Ann was loaded across the Dominion and became Canada's first sports sweetheart.

Canada again hit the skating jackpot in 1954 when Carole Rowden and Frances Dafoe of Toronto won the first of two consecutive world pairs titles.

The duo, who had just missed in 1953, lost the 1954 world and Olympic crowns in two tight battles against Giesy Schwartz and Kurt Oppelt of Austria, European judges' pars blasted the decision of the judges, believing the Canadians had won easily.

As surprising as the Norris-Rowden defeat that year was the sudden rise of two Toronto teen-agers. Bob Paul and Barbara Wagner finished fifth.

Paul and Miss Wagner began a four-year reign in 1957. It was climaxed in 1960 by an Olympic gold-medal performance at Squaw Valley, Calif., and their fourth world title at Vancouver.

The Toronto couple then turned professional, but ready to take over from them were the brother - sister team of Otto and Maria Jelinek, third in the 1960 Olympics and runners-up in the world meet that year.

There was no 1961 world championships when a plane crash at Brussels wiped out the 18 - man American team, but in 1962 the Jelineks won the seventh pairs crown in eight tries for Canada.

The first Canadian to capture the men's singles title was Donald Jackson of Gabows, Ont. In 1955 at 17, he was fourth. He was second the next year when he became the first skater to perform a triple salchow—three turns in the air. Jackson retired to turn professional, his place in 1963 was taken by Don McPherson of Stratford, Ont. He displaced Jackson's 1962 pattern by coming from fourth place after the compulsory figures to win the world title with an outstanding free-skating effort.

Petra Burka, a Toronto schoolgirl, was from the same mould as Jackson and McPherson. A strong free skating job, in which she became the first women to perform the triple salchow in competition, put her third in both the world and Olympic events in 1964.

She reached her amateur career with a world title in 1965 and become Canada's newest sports sweetheart. But Petra's reign was brief. In 1966 she slipped to third in the world meet and that year turned professional.

In skiing, Canada's fame dates back only to the mid-1950s and has been strictly a feminine affair. Lucile Wheeler of St. Jovite, Que., Ann Heggtveit of Ottawa and Nancy Greene of Rossland, B.C.

Lucile was Canada's first international skiing champion, winning a bronze medal in the 1956 Olympic downhill and the next year taking the world downhill title.

That done, the daughter of a Laurentian resort owner retired. She said Anne was groomed with a gold medal," she said, "and when I decided I wanted a gold medal, too."

Nancy Canadians believe she will get it.

Last season she was the inaugural World Cup for downhill skiers and prevented France from sweeping the team and individual awards in both men's and women. But it was how Nancy did it that was so sensational.

She missed a portion of the World Cup races when she retired to win the 1960 Olympic downhill championship.

A broken leg suffered while skiing in 1965 had upset her career.

But until 1960 did she return to the golden path and when the Squaw Valley Olympics rolled around, the Ottawa girl was the prime world medalist.

Her Olympic performance also was enough to win for her the world slalom and combined Alpine titles.

Miss Greene, then 18, was a member of the 1960 Canadian Olympic team and finished 33rd in the slalom event won by Miss Heggtveit.

"It was, my first international race and I remember how at the gate when the team bowled their eyes out when they placed our national anthem over their Anne was presented with a gold medal," she said. "And even when I decided I wanted a gold medal, too."

Her Olympic performance also was enough to win for her the world slalom and combined Alpine titles.

Miss Greene, then 18, was a member of the 1960 Canadian Olympic team and finished 33rd in the slalom event won by Miss Heggtveit.

"It was, my first international race and I remember how at the gate when the team bowled their eyes out when they placed our national anthem over their Anne was presented with a gold medal," she said. "And even when I decided I wanted a gold medal, too."

Nancy Canadians believe she will get it.

Last season she was the inaugural World Cup for downhill skiers and prevented France from sweeping the team and individual awards in both men's and women. But it was how Nancy did it that was so sensational.

She missed a portion of the World Cup races when she re-

OSHAWA (CP) — The Ontario Lacrosse Association Junior A All-Stars Thursday added the 13-game winning streak of Canadian champion Oshawa Green Gaels with a 13-10 victory.

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Toronto Maple Leafs and first-place Peterborough battled to an 18-18 overtime tie in Ontario Lacrosse Association Senior A action Thursday night.

PATERSON, N.J. (AP) — Rubin Hurrican Carter, 30, former middleweight contender who began his boxing career after a five-year prison term, was given two consecutive life sentences Thursday for a triple slaying in a tavern here. A third life sentence was made concurrent with the others. Carter and another man were convicted May 26 of shooting a bartender and two customers June 17, 1966.

Football Survey

Spearing, Goring Out

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)— The most widespread football survey of football statistics said Thursday that practices of spearing or goring must be eliminated from football.

The report said the practice of driving the head directly and with force into the body of an opposing player "is extremely dangerous to the ball carrier."

Frequently, however, it was the tackler who was the more seriously injured.

The football fatality survey was prepared by Dr. Carl A. Blyth of the University of North Carolina and David C. Arnold of the National Federation of State High School Athletic Associations in Chicago.

They pointed to the hazards of spearing after finding that most football fatalities since 1960 resulted from head and neck injuries, and last year 25 of 34 deaths resulted from such injuries. Deaths from indirect contact—such as head strokes or heart failure—doubled eight last year compared with 34 in 1965.

Other findings: About half the direct fatal injuries to the ball occur during regular defensive plays, and there are slightly more fatal injuries than offensive players; tacklers suffered about 32 per cent of the direct fatalities, ball carriers 14 per cent and blockers 10 per cent.

George Royal Eastbound

VANCOUVER (CP)—George Royal, most successful thoroughbred to come from a Western Canada breeder, is destined for an eastern breeding farm.

The six-year-old bay, owned by Bob Hale and Ernie Hammond, will be sent to Vaucluse Farms near Toronto where his stud fee will be $2,000.

The son of Dark Hawk and Polly Beshaw climaxed his career last year with wins in the San Juan Capistrano and Los Angeles, Calif., for $125,000 in March and the Canadian championship in Toronto last October for $50,000.

He was retired after the Washington International at Laurel, Md., in November and spent the first month of his Hall's Emerald Acres Farm in Aldergrove, B.C. He lived five of Hale's mares and five others, all purchased from Ontario. His fee then was $1,500.

Horsemen Plea Rejected

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario government Thursday refused a plea by the Jockey Club and provincial horsemen to reduce its 40-per-cent take from parimutuel betting.

Provincial Treasurer Charles MacNaughton turned down the proposal from the Jockey Club and the standard - bred and thoroughbred horsemen. The government reduce its tax as a means of allowing the purses for races to be increased.

Quarter Walks Out On Larks

MONTREAL (CP) — Dave Lewis, reported angry because he was not regarded by the Montreal Alouettes as starting staff as No. 1 quarterback, has walked out of the Eastern Football Conference club's training camp. Lewis, a highly-prized and versatile player from Stamford University, is expected show up for a Thursday afternoon workout with coach Clair Dalton. Absence without authorization would cost him $30 daily.

Hamilton Defeats Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — Hamilton Primos defeated Toronto Homes 9-3 Thursday before a crowd of 1,827 in a National Soccer League contest.

John Kerr opened the scoring for Hamilton with a sharp-angle shot after receiving a pass from Duncan Henry. The goal came at the three-minute mark of the first halfm Roma's Frank Rosati tied the score at 15 minutes of the second half on a scramble around the Hamilton net. Kerr scored for a second time at 30 minutes of the second half.

With The Trotters

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP)—Perfect Freight, a U.S. product, scored an upset victory in the $100,000 United Nations Trot at Yonkers Raceway Thursday night. The five - year - old colt took over in the stretch when sidedriver Iavello Rocquepine of France broke stride and finished fifth in the field of eight.

Perfect Freight was timed in 2:07 3-5 and paid $31.80, $12.80 and $8.40 after starting 14-1 on the board.

Fresh Yankee, owned by Steven Kent Farms of Sydney, N.S., was fourth.

SARATOGA, N.Y. (CP)—Two Canadian - owned trotters finished second and third to the U.S.-owned Keystone Pride at Saratoga Raceway Thursday night in the $17,380 battle of Saratoga Stakes, 4th event leading to the Hambletonian.

Marcel Hanover, owned by Hanover Farms Limited of Montreal, was beaten by 2¼ lengths by the winner, who was timed in 2:01 4-5. Halifax Hanover, owned by Armstrong Brothers Ltd. of Brantford, Ont., was third.

Leafs Miss Chance To Move Up

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Maple Leafs missed a chance Thursday night to move up in the standings.

But while the Leafs were shutout 3-0 by Syracuse Chiefs, Rochester Americans won its 10th consecutive game by beating Toledo Mud Hens 6-1. Rochester and Buffalo Bisons were rained out.

The night's activity left Toronto in third place back of Rochester and 1½ behind Richmond in the International League pennant race.

Veteran Jim Boulon, farmed out by New York Yankees recently, rifled home a single that sold combined for Syracuse to hold Toronto to four hits.

The Chiefs scored the winning run in the second inning when Ray Barker doubled and Bill Tuttle scored him with a single. Tom Shopay added a fifth-inning home run.

Home runs by Mike Lum and Bill Cox paced Richmond to its 10th straight victory.

Don Bosch's bases - loaded homer in the fifth inning was the only single Buffalo got over a runner, but it still was enough to give Jacksonville a win.

Bosch was called out for passing runner Jerry Kooaman and was credited with a three-run single.

Jack Damaska and Gary Kolb hit home runs for the Jets.

Pasarell Ousts Tutvin

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) A Canadian women's doubles team advanced to the second round of the All-England tennis championships here Thursday. Their victory came as the lone Canadian left in the men's singles was being knocked out of contention.

Faye Urban of Windsor, Ont., and Vicki Berner of Vancouver defeated Mary Martinez and Lyon Abbey of the United States 6-0, 5-7, 6-4.

Montreal's Frank Tutvin was eliminated by Charlie Pasarell, the Puerto Rican who earlier had defeated defending champion Manuel Santana of Spain and Bob Hewitt of South Africa.

Pasarell, unseeded at Wimbledon but fourth - ranked in the U.S., won 6-1, 6-3, 6-1, in 51 minutes.

All-Stars Stop Green Gaels

OSHAWA (CP)—The Ontario Lacrosse Association Junior A All-Stars Thursday ended the 13-game winning streak of Canadian champion Oshawa Green Gaels with a 13-10 victory.

Brian Thompson of Huntsville and Jim Grady of Hastings led the All-Stars with four goals each. Joe Hora and Barry Salovara of Toronto Township, Brian McCutcheon and Pat Suggatis of Toronto Marlboros scored two each. Kevin Ellis of Minden, Larry Leonard of Huntsville and Ken Henderson of Hastings added the other All-Star goals.

What Is A Country But Place to Stand?

ROUTE 67

BY HENRY HAGEN

MONTREAL — I'm sitting cross-legged on the hallway floor of a small University St. rooming house in Montreal. It's 4.30 a.m. After discussing religion with 7 bunch of kids until four, I'm in no mood for sleeping. Besides, Sandy, a roommate, is snoring, the sun's already up and I don't want to leave for Quebec city.

Meeting people and comparing ideas is an important goal of our trip. First we stayed with a friend of Peter's studying industrial art and found we were not meeting anyone and getting to Expo was a bad. So we moved in with Sandy.

Sandy, 18, is a 5'1" hippie from Greenwich Village. His plans to become a social worker, believes if "self-discovery" and has created definite ideas. Sample: "In St. Patrick's church in New York, they have a sign that reads 'You are requested to wear proper attire'. What the hell does that mean? A shirt and tie? ? ! . Sandy stopped us on a street corner and asked where we might get a room. We helped him find a place near McGill and decided to bunk with him.

Since then we've been up all hours of the night discussing everything from Vietnam to claim shoveler with lawyers from Paris, New York, Montreal, Trinidad and St. John. Interviews, discussions and our visits to Expo help fill up another goal — developing an appreciation of Canada.

Emphasis at the Canadian pavilions was on just how vast and Canadians are. There are scenes of packed food markets, modern housing developments, speed car races and gala theatrical performances. The Quebec theme song says it simply: "A place to stand . . . A place to grow . . . Out-of-sight-area-to!"

Isn't that basically what a country is? It doesn't hold out to materialism, but I have learned the importance of a homeland to a country. I was surprised when a pretty young Israeli girl told me that, despite the closely-defined idealism of Israel, it was modern Canada. "Spirit isn't everything if you're not living well," she said. "I'm going back where's much more opportunity than in Israel. What's a country anyway? All I want is to get married and raise a family and Canada's the best place."

Not only do Canadians have ample opportunity to earn a living, but also have plenty of challenges to capture the imagination. The Bell Telephone film on Canada (which leaves you not only spellbound but slightly cool) shows the vast and vibrant expanses between Victoria and St. John's. The Indians of Canada pavilion reminds one that not all Canadians are prosperous. Only 15 per cent of Canadian Indians have running water. The pavilion concludes that there can be no real friendship until Indians have equal opportunity.

Three American teenagers gave me more to appreciate about my country. They said that the draft is on the minds of every young American today. Regardless of their stand on the war, no one wants to die. Some of their friends are becoming teachers for no other reason than that it means draft deferment. It seems there are some good points to be in a country which can afford only quiet diplomacy.

This doesn't make us high

Time Trouble

BY SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Reading about those new supersonic planes that promise to scoot us across the Atlantic in an hour or so, I thought about my brief trip to Europe this spring, and the problem of "time" even at enhanced speeds.

My trip was part of Japan Air Lines' inaugural around-the-world service, although I went only as far as Rome, and returned. I have nothing but admiration for the airline — which is highly efficient and mainly courteous — but the experience of meals has not yet been licked.

Flights around the world will soon be ordinary, and will take only a few hours. Then what kind of "time" will the planes be on? When do they serve breakfast, when lunch, and when dinner? It is already confusing, but the confusion will be compounded at supersonic speeds.

Flying off from Rome at 7 in the morning, we were given cold crabmeat canapes and champagne for "breakfast" — because the passengers already on the plane, who had embarked in the Middle East, were ready for their late afternoon collation. But we, having left our hotel before breakfast, were perishing for eggs, toast and lots of hot coffee.

When we landed at London, we found the same mixup of meal - times, and were set to nibbling a Devonshire "high tea" when we desperately wanted lunch. And this was scarcely the airline's fault.

The problem of "space-time" is more than the trivial matter of meals. It is a matter of adjusting the whole delicate homeostatic balance of the body to speeds that are physiologically unsettling. Each of us has an "internal clock" within us that can be tampered with only so far before it rebels.

One arrives in Rome seven hours "later" than the interranged, which is even more

REMINDER TO MOTORISTS

IMPORTANT CHANGES IN THE ONTARIO HIGHWAY TRAFFIC ACT

MECHANICAL FITNESS OF USED CARS
A used motor vehicle must be certified as mechanically fit by any dealer who sells it for use on the highways. An unfit vehicle may only be sold after the plates have been removed and returned to the Department. The purchaser will receive a Bill of Sale.
After repairs, registration plates can be obtained for such a vehicle by submitting, to the Department, the Bill of Sale and a Certificate of Fitness signed by a certified motor mechanic. EFFECTIVE JULY 1, 1967.

RESTRICTIONS ON TOWING
It is illegal to drive a passenger car or station wagon with more than one vehicle in tow. EFFECTIVE JULY 1, 1967.

SPEED LIMITS IN CONSTRUCTION ZONES
New legislation now authorizes special speed zoning for marked construction sites. Motorists are required to obey posted speed limits. EFFECTIVE NOW.

REPORTING OF MEDICALLY UNFIT DRIVERS
It is the duty of every legally qualified medical practitioner to report to the Registrar the name, address and diagnosis of every person coming under his diagnosis, treatment, care or charge who is suffering from a condition that in the opinion of the medical practitioner is such as to make it dangerous for such person to operate a motor vehicle. EFFECTIVE NOW.

MOTORCYCLES REQUIRE TWO BRAKING SYSTEMS
Every motorcycle when being operated on a highway shall be equipped with at least two braking systems each with a separate means of application with one effective on the rear wheel. EFFECTIVE JULY 1, 1967.

AIRCRAFT ON HIGHWAYS
When an aircraft makes an emergency landing on a highway, the pilot must have it removed within a reasonable time.

When an aircraft is being driven or drawn along a highway, its movement must comply with the provisions of the Highway Traffic Act. EFFECTIVE JULY 1, 1967.

MUFFLERS
New requirements as to mufflers have been enacted, prohibiting the use of a muffler cut-out, straight exhaust, gutted muffler, hollywood muffler or other similar device upon a motor vehicle. EFFECTIVE JULY 1, 1967.

Sunday School Lesson

Carrying the Message

By CLARENCE W. CRANFORD

Let's take a trip—three trips, in fact — as we follow one of history's great missionaries on three historic journeys. Our trips will take us across the sparkling blue waters of the Mediterranean, through countries made beautiful by groves of olive trees and grape vine-yards stretching as far as the eye can see. Breathtaking mountain scenes will rise before our view, and beautiful landscapes will be dotted with flocks of sheep. We will see philosophers and fanatics, pagan worshippers and angry crowds. Lives will be changed before our eyes as we follow a man whose zeal for his faith has seldom been equalled, perhaps never surpassed in all history.

Our travel folder will be the book of Acts. The three journeys will be outlined as follows: 1st Journey — Acts 13:1-15:39; 2nd Journey — Acts 15:36-18:22; 3rd Journey to Rome —Acts 19:21-28:30.

The story begins with an astrology party held in Antioch in Syria (now Turkey). These people had discovered a new faith in the Messiah and they wanted to send it to others as it had been brought to them. The Holy Spirit were willing to give up their two chief leaders, and send them on their way.

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for July 2: "Church Reaches Out," Acts 13.

This was a most unselfish act on their part. After all, they were brand new Christians themselves. It was much they still needed to learn from their gifted leaders. If these two men were to be taken, would be thrown back on themselves. They couldn't pay a preacher to do their religious work for them. They would have to do it themselves.

But they had a tremendous vision. The world was their target. Faith was their bow. Paul and Barnabas were their arrows. Whoever dreamed that their act would make so much difference to the whole future of the Christian church and the western world? It would have been an easy for them to hop and Barnabas to themselves. But to their everlasting credit, they gave them up, and sent them on their way to carry the same message to others that Antioch had brought to them.

There is no doubt that churches today depend too much on their ordained clergy to do their work. "Let the pastor do it" is too often the attitude of the layman. What would happen if more churches said to their pastors and priests, "Our go and work among the unreached. We will back you up with our prayers and witness wherever we can"?

It was natural Cyprus should be their first stop. Barnabas was a native of this beautiful island in the eastern end of the Mediterranean. He would be going back to the people he knew, with significant that at this point, Paul ceased to be Saul. His brave name Saul, and began to be known as Paul. Some say that so, from this point on, Paul becomes the outstanding leader, Barnabas and Mark being cast in the shadow of his more gifted companion.

Their noteworthy things happened on this island. An outstanding official named Sergius Paulus became convinced, and became a believer in the new faith. Here also, Paul and Barnabas met opposition in the person of a sorcerer named Elymas Bar-Jesus. He was simply the first of a great host of people who would oppose Paul and his missionary zeal and would finally be instrumental in bringing about his final arrest.

From Cyprus, the men sailed north to Perga in Pamphylia. We would say they sailed back to the southern coast of Turkey. From Perga, they continued north to a city called Antioch in Pisidia. Paul spoke in the local synagogue, and attracted quite a hearing. His message is reported in some detail. God, the creator, had been preparing the Jewish people for a Saviour. He promised Jesus as the answer to that hope and called men to commit themselves, and to accept the forgiveness Christ came to bring.

While the response was hearty, Paul's preaching also stirred up great opposition. Paul and Barnabas closely had reached a watershed in work. From this point on, he would have to turn to Gentiles for a hearing.

The Antioch church will always remain opposition as it seeks to expand its mission. But when doors closer, other doors open up, and with the faith of Paul and Barnabas, Christians can find ways to carry their messages to the ends of the earth.

Three News Bodies Support Warren Report

NEW YORK (AP)—The Warren report and the critics who have come under the searching inquiry of three major news organizations will be tested in two weeks.

The Associated Press and the Columbia Broadcasting System examined in detail the report and its critics, and reached similar conclusions:

That despite shortcomings of the Warren report, nothing has been uncovered to refute its findings that Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone, and of no evidence to the contrary—in killing President John F. Kennedy.

The AP's findings were contained in a 20,000 - word report released last Sunday. The CBS inquiry' was broadcast this week in four one-hour shows, on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

In addition, the National Broadcasting Co. said in a one-hour program June 19 that the controversy case of District attorney Jim Garrison of New Orleans was based on testimony by a "key witness" who perjured her test and that Garrison's staff had threatened and offered inducements to potential witnesses. Garrison denied any threats or inducements.

Not long after the seven members of the Warren commission had toured their report Sept. 24, 1964, doubts began to overtake it.

Sports Program Well Advanced

PICTON (Staff) — Picton's re-creation committee is well under way with this summer season's plans for organized sports program. At a meeting held last night in Benson Park Hall a delegation from the Volunteer Fire Department met with representatives of the committee to discuss the possibility of a Dalhi area of Picton.

At the present time Wayne Ring, recreation director for the town, says great strides are being taken with the new park begun this year in the area of the sewage disposal plant in the centre of town. The new park called the "Dalhi Athletic Field" is built also near town dump area. "At first, said Mr. Ring, "we ran into a lot of heels from townspeople, but now they have seen the area and what we are doing many have changed their minds and are in full support."

Like Belleville's Zwick's Island the park is partially over an old dumping area — grass has been planted and the site now looks good. At the moment the recreation committee have one-and-one-half acres in use, and they are expecting to expand this to the full seven acres available, over the next five years.

So far the area has been fenced, swings, slides and a ball diamond are under way and park benches and a picnic area are also being planned.

"This will be," said Mr. Ring, "a year round athletic park making use of a natural hillside for a ski run and possibly an outdoor rink will be installed."

With the ball diamond at the new Dalhi park this will make the first official diamond for the town's recreation program. The old diamond at Queen Elizabeth School is still also being used, but Mr. Ring stressed that the committee needs three ball diamonds in the town to properly carry out the program for 30 teams which are operating.

Two projects the recreation committee have coming up to help finance and sponsor the new park are a Country and Western Jamboree at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute Sat. Aug. 12 and Wed. August 16 Benson Park will show a Penny Carnival in the afternoon followed by an evening open air dance and a carnival games night for adults. This will be held at Benson Park.

Also brought up at Wednesday night's meeting was a program for the children at the West end of town. Some 300 are expected to use the new Rotary Park this summer, however, the H. J. McFarland playground will be maintained again this year. Parents of some 50 or more children in this area are not in favor of having children cross the busy intersection of Lake and Main Streets, to get to Rotary Park. The East end recreation program was also discussed and a committee was set up to investigate the possibility of installing an official playground at the Fair Grounds. Children have been using this area from both the town and Fawcettville areas but nothing has been really organized such as swings, slides, etc. or an organized program.

"The sports program in general," said Mr. Ring, "is going well, with lots of registrations in both sports and Arts and Crafts activities, which are conducted at Benson Hall during the summer." Gymnastic classes have also been introduced this year, these being held at Camp Picton. Track and field activities are being conducted under both the Centennial Plan and the Junior Development Plan and at the end of the season a Trimeet with Belleville and Trenton Associations will be held. Plans are well under way for the summer training program. Park supervisors and swimming instructors are now preparing their list of registrations for the classes which will begin this coming week.

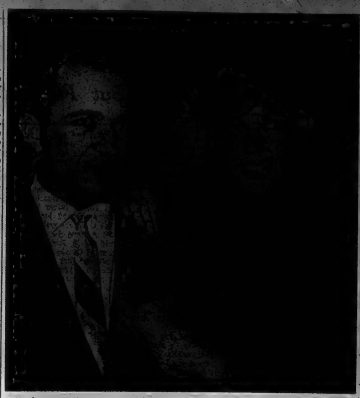
it started 90 years ago...



90 years ago this fall, Canada's first commercial telephones were installed in Ottawa. Canada's second Prime Minister, The Hon. Alexander Mackenzie (who was also Minister of Public Works) had one set installed in the Public Works Department; the other was at Rideau Hall, residence of the Earl of Dufferin, the Governor General. These phones were used for government business and for musical concerts to demonstrate the miracle of the telephone to guests at Rideau Hall'.

And from that beginning grew Bell Canada! Today, there is probably not a single person in Quebec or Ontario who does not, in one way or another, 'use' the services we provide:

Radio and TV programs are relayed through our microwave network; businesses communicate by voice or teletype, or transmit data through our facilities; so do newspapers and the government, police and fire departments; there are 4½ million Bell Canada phones in homes and offices, and thousands of public phones. Like Canada, we of Bell Canada have come a long way. And one more point: we're proud that nearly 95% of our shares are owned by Canadian residents.

Oil Shortage Threat Grows

NEW YORK (AP)—Western Europe faces a growing threat of an oil shortage in the wake of the troubled Middle East and tankers cannot use the Suez Canal.

The situation is not yet critical because Western Europe had a three-month supply of oil on hand or in transit when the war between Israel and the Arab nations broke out early this month.

An oil industry source here said the biggest problem is a tanker shortage.

With the Suez Canal closed by vessels sunk during the brief war, tankers have to make the much longer trip around the southern tip of Africa.

J. Cordell Moore, assistant interior secretary, estimated this week that oil shipments to Europe from the Middle East are running less than 20 per cent of normal.

Britain is likely to feel the pinch more sharply than other European countries because the Arab nations have banned shipments to it.

The Rural Scene

PICTON — The Junior Farmers' of Prince Edward County would like to remind the rural people in the county that they can still obtain Centennial Farm signs. The stipulation is that the farm must have been in the direct family for 100 years. The family name could have changed by a daughter taking married and the couple buying her father's farm. The Junior Farmers are supplying the signs and installing them for $3.00 each. Interested farmers should contact Harold Corfield, R.R. 1, Belleville, phone Belleville 962-3367 as soon as possible.

FRIDAY

● That magnificent mystery, "The List of Adrian Messenger" is slated on channel 2 at 8:00. Part of the fun in this movie is guessing who is who under the disguises. It stars George C. Scott and playing in cameo roles under the disguises are Frank Sinatra and Tony Curtis.

● Once again, for the hundredth time, "Elmer Gantry" is presented for your watching pleasure. Still, despite the plot of this movie, it has decent stars in it, namely Burt Lancaster and Jean Simmons.

One Voluptuous Pose After Another Story of Jane Mansfield's Career

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—She had virtually shoved away on the place that was jumbling stars and press to the premiere of a Howard Hughes movie in Silver Springs, Fla.

The movie Underwater, was highly forgettable; she was not. She stripped to a red bikini, and the flashbulbs began exploding.

She was a creature of the Misty, and she was seen mostly in newspapers and magazines. The hoodles of the photographs varied—in the bathtub, at a movie premiere, in a divorce court. Always the pose was the same: Eyes wide, lips moist and open, chest forward.

Her second husband, muscleman Mickey Hargitay, tiked to reporters Thursday before leaving for New Orleans, where Jayne had been killed in an auto crash.

"Nobody really understood her," said Hargitay. "Nobody knew the real Jayne."

If there was a real Jayne Mansfield, she remained hidden from view as the more exploitable features of her makeup underwent repeated exposure—often quite literally.

The one was set on the Dunker water ballet. While the stars of the film, Jane Russell, posed sedately with Debbie Reynolds and other pretty girls, Jayne gave her all. She described her encounter with the photographers, writing in a paperback book titled Jayne Mansfield's Wild Wild World (complete with nude photos):

"I dived in and felt my bra break but I swam around under water and followed all their instructions. Then it happened. I guess it was bound to. For a moment I lost my bra. . . . It was a wonderful field day for the reporters and photographers."

Her career in important films waned, but not her appetite for publicity.

"I have always felt that publicity is as necessary to most careers as a ball to a tennis game," she wrote in her paperback autobiography, obviously with the aid of a ghost.

"It is the focal need of an actress.

"Some come by it easily and some never come by it. As for me, I work hard at it and it shows. . . . It is the golden gimmick."

To Your Good Health

Iron Should Be Given Only if Needed

Dear Dr. Molner: Our oldest girl is 11 and perhaps will be starting her menstrual cycle soon. My husband wants me to get iron tablets for her at this time. He believes she needs iron when her cycle begins.

I, in turn, think it is a natural body function and do not think she needs iron tablets. She is a normal, healthy child.

Does she need the tablets or not? — Mrs. J. G.

As you say, menstruation is a normal function, and a normal body does not need any special dosing or medication.

Only about an ounce is an ounce and a half of blood is lost in the average period. (It seems like more, of course.) This is not enough to disturb the iron content of the blood. Often, I do not think doctors do iron as a preventive measure.

Of course, if periods are excessively heavy or prolonged, and particularly if she shows any pallor of skin or membranes, that is another matter. It is time to have a physician check her blood for iron deficiency (hemoglobin determination). Even though to let the doctor judge on the basis of findings, whether medication is advisable.

I simply would not give iron to the youngster "just because." Give it only if there is proved need.

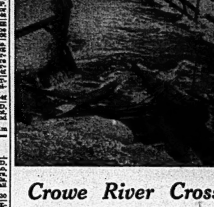
Dear Dr. Molner: I have been having migraine headaches all my life. I am 48. I just had a complete hysterectomy. Will I still get these headaches? Someone told me that with everything removed, I would not get them. — Mrs. W. D.

Habitual migraine quite often becomes less severe or less frequent at about 50 years, but this also occurs in women who do not have that surgery.

If the headaches persist (or for younger readers who are still having frequent migraine headaches) it is good to find that a great deal can be done to prevent or minimize migraines. There's a whole section on this special type of headache in my booklet, "How to Tame Headaches." It will be sent in return for 30 cents in coin and a self-addressed stamped envelope. Send your request to Dr. Molner, in care of the Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill.

Not much can be done about a migraine once it starts. The important thing is to take suitable medication and adopt other helpful measures before the headache strikes.

Dear Dr. Molner: You mentioned "histus hernia" and a university nurse corrected me and said it was "hiatal hernia."



I was in nursing school 61 years ago and learned nothing about this. Recently I hear much of it quite frequently. Wonder why nothing was in our books at that time. — M. M.

Perhaps 50 years ago it was more important to attack contagious diseases. Smallpox, typhoid, diphtheria were still common. Tuberculosis was more difficult to combat. (It is still far too prevalent even today.) The struggle was to prevent, if we could, the disease that cut people down in the prime of life.

Hiatal hernia is uncomfortable but seldom a matter of life and death. Thus, it wasn't as important as those other threats. Medicine, we've seen, has changed. We've learned to diagnose it, and we certainly know a lot more about treating it.

Your university nurse evidently didn't know that either. It is a term that is used, but it is also called diaphragmatic hernia and "epigastrocele" and "gastrocele." All mean the same thing.

To Mrs. T. E. M.: The type test is primarily for detection of cancers of the cervix and uterus. Although these cancers may, as in your case, have been removed, a pap smear a year or so is advisable. The reason is that a stump or bit of cervix tissue may remain, although not visible on direct examination, which would be a location for cancer development.

Crowe River Crossing Collapses

The Crowe River Bridge, seven miles north of Campbellford, collapsed on Tuesday morning. Bruce Thomson, driver of a gravel truck, said he felt the bridge dip as he crossed but he made it across safely. Traffic is being rerouted up river and it is expected that it will be some time before the bridge is repaired.

Khrushchev's Last Recorded Reminiscences to Be Aired

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — NBC-TV will air Nikita S. Khrushchev's recently recorded reminiscences July 11. Films, photos and tapes from private sources will cover his life in retirement. Tie talks about Stalin, Eisenhower, Kennedy, Mao Tse-tung and the Cuban missile crisis.

Elsewhere in television land ABC is filming a fall police series, N.Y.P.D., in New York. The first episode was written by former cab driver Edward Anhalt.

Sickliist: Georgia Macready returned to the Peyton Place cameras, recovered sooner than expected from lung congestion. Wilfrid Hyde-White added two weeks as crusty old Martin Peyton.

Barrie Station Gets Permission To Share Toronto TV Market

OTTAWA (CP) — Station CKVR-AM Barrie has received all but final government approval for its bid to blanket Metropolitan Toronto with a top-calibre television signal.

The Board of Broadcast Governors recommended approval Thursday for the station to move its transmitter 30 miles south from Barrie to the fringe of the city's northern boundary. Normal procedure is for the government to adopt the BBG's advice.

The transmitter switch would boost the potential Barrie audience to more than 2,000,000 viewers from about 200,000 at its present location. Rates quotations charge for advertising time go up when audiences are bigger.

For Toronto residents, a big chunk of CKVR-TV's programming, would be an exact duplicate of what they now receive on their own CBC station because Barrie is a CBC affiliate.

The BBG announcement stressed that permission for the Barrie move would not prejudice any future application for a new TV station in Toronto. It added that the board hopes to hear a formal proposal from the station. CFRB in Toronto has for such a station by next November if technical hurdles can be cleared.

CFRB has outlined its proposal to the board but cannot make a formal application until it has technical clearance. Its submission is based on a series of frequency switches for other stations which would open up Channel 13 for use in Toronto.

The switch would make available a television channel in the Quinte area.

The BBG has opened the way for applications on ultra-high frequencies but has had no takers so far. Current TV sets cannot receive UHF signals without installation of an adapting device.

After stating that the board still is open for new Toronto bids, on either VHF or UHF, the announcement said about Barrie's Channel 3:

"In the opinion of the board, the program service which should be provided on Channel 3 to the population of the metropolitan area of Toronto is re-listed to the availability of other services in this area by Canadian stations operating on VHF channels."

In consequence, it was advising the government that it wanted to hear the CFRB proposal in November if possible and advising Barrie that its licence to broadcast expires next March 31 and, therefore, any broadcasting legislation in the works now, it could be bound

Doug Jones Stops Kirkman

SEATTLE (AP) — Veteran Doug Jones opened a cut under young Boone Kirkman's eye in the first round Thursday night and went on to be awarded a technical knockout at the end of the seventh.

Jones caught the previously unbeaten Renton, Wash., heavyweight boxer with what appeared a short seemingly harmless right, but it was enough to open the cut.

By the seventh, Kirkman, 22, was stumbling after he experienced New Yorker with one eye shut. At the end of the round, referee Jimmy Ettore took a look and waved his hands.

BROWN SIGNS
CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — Cleveland Browns quarterback Frank Ryan has signed a three-year contract with the National Football League club, Browns General Art Modell announced Thursday. He will start his sixth season with the Browns in the fall.

One Hundred Gun Salute For Gala Expo Weekend

MONTREAL (CP)—A 100-gun salute will mark Canada's centennial day Saturday and launch the biggest weekend of the six-month world's fair.

The salute will be fired from the tip of Cite du Havre to inaugurate Dominion Day festivities at Expo 67 during a heavy weekend which will include a one-day visit by the Queen and Prince Philip and the United States Independence Day holiday July 4.

The Queen and Prince Philip will visit part of the world's fair Monday after sailing down the St. Lawrence River from Gaspe, Que., aboard the royal yacht Britannia.

About 1,500,000 visitors from the United States and Canada are expected to pour through the 1,000-acre site of the world's fair before the four-day weekend is over.

Security arrangements call for the cordoning off of a part of Notre Dame Island during the Queen's visit so that she and Prince Philip can see as much of the fair as possible in the crowded one-day schedule.

The part of Expo that will be visited by the royal party includes the British pavilion, the Canadian pavilion, where lunch will be served, and the pavilions of the provinces.

A group of 30 members of the Dutch parliament will visit Expo today and will be welcomed by Pierre Dupuy, the commissioner - general of the fair.

Today the Nationalist China pavilion will reopen for the first time since May 30 when fire destroyed the interior, including priceless art treasures.

Thursday was Madagascar's national day at Expo and Louis Rakotomalala, that country's ambassador to Canada and the United States, officiated at flag-raising ceremonies at Place des Nations.

Madagascar shares a pavilion with Rwanda and Dahomey at Africa Place, a small complex built by Expo for African nations in the world's fair.

St. Ola District News

ST. OLA — The Limerick Township School Area children and parents visited the Centennial Caravan June 23 at Bancroft.

The Ol-A craft club met on Wednesday evening at the cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Turnbull on Limerick Lake. Plans were completed for the antique display July 26 from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Byrne, Shawville, Quebec; Owen Clay and Jim Wood, Ottawa; Muriel McIntosh and Sandra Wood, Peterborough, were guests on the weekend of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Wood.

Rev. Carson Duquette and family arrived at their cottage Monday. Mrs. Duquette, Charles, William and Suzanne will remain for the summer. Mr. Duquette will have August as vacation month.

Darlene Johnson has returned home from the Sick Children's Hospital.

Bruce Longmuir, Napanee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Longmuir, is a patient in Kingston General Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Rosenm and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Marchand of Wooster, Ohio, have arrived to spend the summer at their cottage in Gull Lake.

Red Carpet Treatment Afforded Fair Guests

MONTREAL (CP) — The red carpet treatment for heads of state visiting the world's fair usually comes off like clockwork—but sometimes someone sends officials into a spin.

More than 30 heads of state or their representatives have been welcomed by the commissioner-general of the fair since Expo opened April 27.

But on occasions, such as Lionel Chevrier, commissioner-general for state visits to greet visiting heads of state at the airport or, if they are arriving from Ottawa by the Governor-General's special train, at Montreal's Central Station.

The schedule is tight and the special train which brings heads of state to Montreal from Ottawa always is on time, arriving at 5:45 p.m. EDT.

After a formal welcome at the specialty - decorated platform, the visiting party is taken to its suites on the 20th floor of the hotel and prepares for a reception and dinner at the hotel or the city hall 1¼ hours later.

But officials had their hands full when President Novotny of Czechoslovakia arrived one Saturday night at one section of the airport about 15 minutes before an airliner bringing Queen Juliana touched down at another part of the airport.

The Czech president arrived, was directed into a limousine and under police escort driven to the VIP lounge for a brief reception before heading for downtown Montreal.

The welcoming party then hurried to the other section of the airport, in time and in position to greet Queen Juliana and Prince Bernhard.

With the exchange of greetings, and the doof held open for the queen and prince to enter a limousine for another reception at the airport, the queen and prince strayed from the automobile and proceeded on foot toward the main airport building.

An RCMP officer got in his usual dress ahead of the party and another scarlet-uniformed mountie led the group on foot as a string of officials and their aides stretched across the tarmac.

The heads of state as a rule arrive in Montreal the night before their national days are to be celebrated at the fair.

Everywhere they travel, a 16-man motorcycle police escort leads their way—on arrival, during travel to Expo and on their departure.

They walk through the Hall d'Honneur at city hall and into the Mayor Jean Drapeau's office where they sign the Golden Book before attending a reception on the terrace and a dinner in the Council Chamber.

The federal government reserved the entire floor of the Queen Elizabeth Hotel for heads of state, their staff and security officers.

Sometimes, however, visiting heads of state wish to remain in Montreal and find that the premises must be vacated for new heads of state arriving.

Under such circumstances they are simply asked to move to other accommodation provided at the hotel.
